

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

THE LAWYERS REPORTS ANNOTATED

BOOK LXIV.

ALL CURRENT CASES OF GENERAL VALUE AND IMPORTANCE, WITH FULL ANNOTATION.

BURDETT A. RICH AND HENRY P.
FARNHAM, EDITORS.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE LAWYERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY.

1904.

122126

JUL 29 1942

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the Year nineteen hundred four, by THE LAWYERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.,
In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

TABLE

OF

CASES REPORTED

IN

LAWYERS' REPORTS, ANNOTATED, BOOK LXIV.

A. Abraham, Barclay v. (Iowa) 255  v. Oregon & C. R. Co. (Or.).. 391 Ætna L. Ins. Co., Smith v. (Mass.) 117 Algiers & G. R. Co., Muntz v. (La.).. 222 American Glucose Co., Harding v. (Ill.) 738 American Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bertram (Ind.) 935 American Publishers' Asso., Straus v. (N. Y.) 701 Anchoria-Leland Min. & Mill. Co., Jefferson Min. Co. v. (Colo.) 925 Ancient Order of Hibernians v. Sparrow (Mont.) 128 Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Palmore (Kan.) 90 Atkinson v. Woodmansee (Kan.).... 325 Atlanta v. Chattanooga Foundry & Pipe Works (C. C. A. 6th C.) 721 Austin & N. W. R. Co. v. Cluck (Tex.) 494	B. Baltimore University v. Colton (Md.) 108 Bancroft v. Union Embossing Co. (N. H.) 298 Bank, Home Sav., National Home Bldg. & L. Asso. v. (Ill.) 399  of California v. San Francisco City and County (Cal.).. 918  Third Nat., v. Steel (Mich.).. 119 Barclay v. Abraham (Iowa) 255 Barefoot, Western U. Teleg. Co. v. (Tex.) 491 Barnes, Louisville & E. Mail Co. v. (Ky.) 574 Baxter v. Deneen (Md.) 949 Bean, Kimmel v. (Kan.) 785 Bekkeland v. Lyons (Tex.) 474 Benson, Cross v. (Kan.) 500 64 L. R. A.	Bertram, American Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. (Ind.) 935 Biggs, State v. (N. C.) 139 Birket v. Elward (Kan.) 568 Blaker, Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. (Kan.) 81 Blodgett, Delory v. (Mass.) 114 Boardman v. Howard (Minn.) 648 Bontjes, Deaconess Home & Hospital v. (Ill.) 215 Bork v. United New Jersey R. & Canal Co. (N. J. Err. & App.).. 836 Box, Lanier v. (Tenn.) 458 Brumbly, Dale v. (Md.) 112 Busse v. Rogers (Wis.) 183 Byrd v. English (Ga.) 94	C. Capital City Dairy Co., Central Ohio Natural Gas & Fuel Co. v. (Ohio) 395 Castelberg, Salabes v. (Md.) 800 Central Ohio Natural Gas & Fuel Co. v. Capital City Dairy Co. (Ohio) 395 Chattanooga Foundry & Pipe Works, Atlanta v. (C. C. A. 6th C.) 721 Chicago G. W. R. Co., McAlpine v. (Kan.) 85 Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Webster (Ky.) 219 Clinton County v. Davis (Ind.) 780 Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. (Colo.) 209 Cluck, Austin & N. W. R. Co. v. (Tex.) 494 Coleman v. State (Miss.) 807 Collett, State v. (Ark.) 204 Collins v. Harrison (R. I.) 156 Colton, Baltimore University v. (Md.) 108 Columbia Ironworks v. National Lead Co. (C. C. A. 6th C.) 645 Connery v. Quincy, O. & K. C. R. Co. (Minn.) 624
---	---	--	---

Consolidated Electric Light Co., Twombly v. (Me.)	551
Continental F. Ins. Co. v. Whitaker (Tenn.)	451
Continental Tobacco Co., Whitwell v. (C. C. A. 8th C.)	689
Cook, Stone v. (Mo.)	287
Cooke v. Marshall (Pa.)	413
Cooper v. Montgomery County Bd. of Review (Ill.)	72
Courtemanche v. Supreme Court of I. O. of F. (Mich.)	668
Cowan v. Western U. Telcg. Co. (Iowa)	545
Cranby, Isle v. (Ill.)	513
Crookston Waterworks, Power & Light Co. v. Sprague (Minn.)	977
Cross v. Benson (Kan.)	560

D.

Dale v. Brumbly (Md.)	112
D'Arcy, Rowley v. (Mass.)	190
Davis, Clinton County v. (Ind.)	780
Deaconess Home & Hospital v. Bontjes (Ill.)	215
De Geofroy v. Merchants' Bridge Ter- minal R. Co. (Mo.)	959
Delano, Re (N. Y.)	279
Delory v. Blodgett (Mass.)	114
Deneen, Baxter v. (Md.)	949
Detroit, Y. & A. A. R. Co., Sullivan v. (Mich.)	673
Doe ex dem. Stewart v. Garrett (Ga.) ..	99

E.

Eli Min. & Land Co., Clipper Min. Co. v. (Colo.)	209
Elliott v. Jefferson (N. C.)	135
Elward, Birket v. (Kan.)	568
Engbretson v. Seiberling (Iowa)	75
English, Byrd v. (Ga.)	94
Evenson, State v. (Iowa)	77

F.

Fischer, St. Louis v. (Mo.)	679
Frankfort, Twyman v. (Ky.)	572
Froelicher v. Oswald Iron Works (La.) ..	228
Frostburg v. Wineland (Md.)	627

G.

Gallagher, Hedding v. (N. H.)	811
Kansas City-Leavenworth R. Co. v. (Kan.)	344
Garrett, Doe ex dem. Stewart v. (Ga.) ..	99
Gilbraith v. Stewart Transp. Co. (C. C. A. 7th C.)	193
Goodrich v. Mitchell (Kan.)	945
64 L. R. A.

H.

Haley v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.) ..	295
Hanson v. Krehbiel (Kan.)	790
Harding v. American Glucose Co. (Ill.) ..	738
Harlan, Stouffer v. (Kan.)	320
Harper, Illinois C. R. Co. v. (Miss.) ..	283
Harrison, Collins v. (R. I.)	156
Hazlehurst v. Mayes (Miss.)	805
Hebert v. Lake Charles Ice, Light & Waterworks Co. (La.)	101
Hedding v. Gallagher (N. H.)	811
Hendry v. North Hampton (N. H.) ..	70
Henslin v. Wheaton (Minn.)	126
Hoff v. Shockley (Iowa)	538
Hoffman, State ex rel. v. Justus (Minn.)	510
Holm, State ex rel. Lancaster County v. (Neb.)	131
Home Sav. Bank, National Home Bldg. & L. Asso. v. (Ill.)	399
Howard, Boardman v. (Minn.)	648
Nashville R. Co. v. (Tenn.) ..	437
Hudgins, Maryland Casualty Co. v. (Tex.)	349
Hulbert, People v. (Mich.)	265
Hyman, State v. (Md.)	637

I.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Harper (Miss.) ..	283
Insurance Co., Etna L., Smith v. (Mass.)	117
American Mut. L., v. Bertram (Ind.)	935
Continental F., v. Whitaker (Tenn.)	451
Phoenix, Mead v. (Kan.)	79
Isle v. Cranby (Ill.)	513

J.

Jefferson, Elliott v. (N. C.)	135
Jefferson Min. Co. v. Anchoria-Leland Min. & Mill. Co. (Colo.) ..	925
Justus, State ex rel. Hoffman v. (Minn.)	510

K.

Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Blaker (Kan.)	81
Kansas City-Leavenworth R. Co. v. Gal- lagher (Kan.)	344
Katz v. Walkinshaw (Cal.)	236
Kimmel v. Bean (Kan.)	785
Krehbiel, Hanson v. (Kan.)	790

L.

Lake Charles Ice, Light & Waterworks Co., Hebert v. (La.)	101
--	-----

Lancaster County, State ex rel., v. Holm (Neb.)	131
Lane v. Lane (Del.)	849
Lanier v. Box (Tenn.)	458
Lincoln, Winward v. (R. I.)	160
Longan v. Weltmer (Mo.)	969
Louisville & E. Mail Co. v. Barnes (Ky.)	574
L'Union St. Jean Baptiste v. Ostiguy (R. I.)	158
Lyons, Bekkeland v. (Tex.)	474

M.

McAlpine v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. (Kan.)	85
McCormick, People v. (Ill.)	775
McKelvey v. McKelvey (Tenn.)	991
Markley v. Snow (Pa.)	685
Marshall, Cooke v. (Pa.)	413
Martell v. White (Mass.)	260
Maryland Casualty Co. v. Hudgins (Tex.)	349
Maxwell House Co., Rains v. (Tenn.)	470
Mayes, Hazlehurst v. (Miss.)	805
Mead v. Phoenix Ins. Co. (Kan.)	79
Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co., De Geofroy v. (Mo.)	959
Metropolitan Street R. Co., Williams v. (Kan.)	794
Meyer v. Supreme Lodge, K. of P. (N. Y.)	839
Miller, Woodward v. (Ga.)	932
Mitchell, Goodrich v. (Kan.)	945
Mobile, Mobile Transp. Co. v. (Ala.)	333
Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile (Ala.)	333
Moloney, People ex rel., v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. (Ill.)	366
Montana Min. Co., St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. (C. C. A. 9th C.)	207
Montgomery County Bd. of Review, Cooper v. (Ill.)	72
Muntz v. Algiers & G. R. Co. (La.) ..	222
Murray v. Wilcox (Iowa)	534

N.

Naive, Pennsylvania R. Co. v. (Tenn.) ..	443
Nashville R. Co. v. Howard (Tenn.) ..	437
Nassau Trust Co., White v. (N. Y.) ..	275
National Home Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Home Sav. Bank (Ill.) ..	399
National Lead Co., Columbia Ironworks v. (C. C. A. 6th C.)	645
National Supply Co., St. Marys Mach. Co. v. (Ohio)	845
Neeley v. Southwestern Cotton Seed Oil Co. (Okla.)	145
Norfolk & W. R. Co., Wall v. (W. Va.) ..	501
North Hampton, Hendry v. (N. H.) ..	70
64 L. R. A.

O.

Opposition of Southern R. I. Plow Co. (La.)	823
Oregon & C. R. Co., Abraham v. (Or.) ..	391
Ostiguy, L'Union St. Jean Baptiste v. (R. I.)	158
Oswald Iron Works, Froelicher v. (La.)	228

P.

Palmore, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. (Kan.)	90
Parsons, Saylor v. (Iowa)	542
Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Naive (Tenn.) ..	443
People v. Hulbert (Mich.)	265
v. McCormick (Ill.)	775
People ex rel. Moloney v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. (Ill.)	366
Pettigrew v. Pettigrew (Pa.)	179
Phoenix Ins. Co., Mead v. (Kan.)	79
Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co., State ex rel. Sheets v. (Ohio) ..	405
Potter v. State (Ind.)	942
Price, Stewart v. (Kan.)	581
Pullman's Palace Car Co., People ex rel. Moloney v. (Ill.)	366

Q.

Quincy, O. & K. C. R. Co., Connery v. (Minn.)	624
---	-----

R.

Railroad Co., Austin & N. W., v. Cluck (Tex.)	494
Illinois C., v. Harper (Miss.) ..	283
Kansas City, Ft. S. & M., v. Blaker (Kan.)	81
Kansas City-Leavenworth, v. Gallagher (Kan.)	344
Oregon & C., Abraham v. (Or.) ..	391
Pennsylvania, v. Naive (Tenn.) ..	443
Quincy, O. & K. C., Connery v. (Minn.)	624
Railway Co., Algiers & G., Muntz v. (La.)	222
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Palmore (Kan.)	90
Chicago, G. W., McAlpine v. (Kan.)	85
Detroit, Y. & A. A., Sullivan v. (Mich.)	673
Merchants' Bridge Terminal, De Geofroy v. (Mo.)	959
Metropolitan Street, Williams v. (Kan.)	794
Nashville v. Howard (Tenn.) ..	437
Norfolk & W., Wall v. (W. Va.) ..	501
Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L., State ex rel. Sheets v. (Ohio) ..	405
Rains v. Maxwell House Co. (Tenn.) ..	470

Re Delano (N. Y.)	279
Willard (Cal.)	554
Rogers, Busse v. (Wis.)	183
Rowley v. D'Arcy (Mass.)	190
Ryno, State v. (Kan.)	303

S.

St. Louis v. Fischer (Mo.)	679
Wheat v. (Mo.)	292
St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. (C. C. A. 9th C.)	207
St. Louis Transit Co., Haley v. (Mo.)	295
St. Marys Mach. Co. v. National Sup- ply Co. (Ohio)	845
Salabes v. Castberg (Md.)	800
San Francisco City & County, Bank of California v. (Cal.)	918
Saylor v. Parsons (Iowa)	542
Seiberling, Engbretson v. (Iowa)	75
Sheets, State ex rel., v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. (Ohio)	405
Shockley, Hoff v. (Iowa)	538
Simmons v. Southern Traction Co. (Pa.)	205
Smith v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. (Mass.) ..	117
Snider v. Yates (Tenn.)	353
Snow, Markley v. (Pa.)	685
Southern R. I. Plow Co.'s Opposition (La.)	823
Southern Traction Co., Simmons v. (Pa.)	205
Southwestern Cotton Seed Oil Co., Neel- ey v. (Okla.)	145
Sparrow, Ancient Order of Hibernians v. (Mont.)	128
Sprague, Crookston Waterworks, Pow- er & Light Co. v. (Minn.) ..	977
State v. Biggs (N. C.)	139
Coleman v. (Miss.)	807
v. Collett (Ark.)	204
v. Evenson (Iowa)	77
v. Hyman (Md.)	637
Potter v. (Ind.)	942
v. Ryno (Kan.)	303
State ex rel. Lancaster County v. Holm (Neb.)	131
Hoffman v. Justus (Minn.) ..	510
Sheets v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. (Ohio)	405
Wellford v. Williams (Tenn.) ..	418
Steel, Third Nat. Bank v. (Mich.)	119
Stewart, Doe ex dem., v. Garrett (Ga.)	99
v. Price (Kan.)	581
Stewart Transp. Co., Gilbraith v. (C. C. A. 7th C.)	193
Stone v. Cook (Mo.)	287
Stouffer v. Harlan (Kan.)	320
Straus v. American Publishers' Asso. (N. Y.)	701
Succession of Welsh (La.)	823
Sullivan v. Detroit, Y. & A. A. R. Co. (Mich.)	673

Supreme Court of I. O. of F., Courte- manche v. (Mich.)	668
Supreme Lodge, K. of P., Meyer v. (N. Y.)	839

T.

Third Nat. Bank v. Steel (Mich.) ...	119
Twombly v. Consolidated Electric Light Co. (Me.)	551
Twyman v. Frankfort (Ky.)	572

U.

Ukiah City v. Ukiah Water & Improv. Co. (Cal.)	231
Ukiah Water & Improv. Co., Ukiah City v. (Cal.)	231
Union Embossing Co., Bancroft v. (N. H.)	298
United New Jersey R. & Canal Co., Bork v. (N. J. Err. & App.) ..	836

W.

Walkinshaw, Katz v. (Cal.)	236
Wall v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. (W. Va.)	501
Warren, Williams v. (N. H.)	33
Webster, Cincinnati Tobacco Ware- house Co. v. (Ky.)	219
Wellford, State ex rel., v. Williams (Tenn.)	418
Welsh's Succession (La.)	823
Weltmer, Longan v. (Mo.)	969
Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Barefoot (Tex.)	491
Cowan v. (Iowa)	545
Westminster, Westminster Water Co. v. (Md.)	630
Westminster Water Co. v. Westminster (Md.)	630
Wheat v. St. Louis (Mo.)	292
Wheaton, Henslin v. (Minn.)	126
Whitaker, Continental F. Ins. Co. v. (Tenn.)	451
White, Martell v. (Mass.)	260
v. Nassau Trust Co. (N. Y.) ..	275
Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. (C. C. A. 8th C.)	689
Wilcox, Murray v. (Iowa)	534
Willard, Re (Cal.)	554
Williams v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. (Kan.)	794
v. Warren (N. H.)	33
State ex rel. Wellford v. (Tenn.)	418
Wineland, Frostburg v. (Md.)	627
Winward v. Lincoln (R. I.)	160
Woodmansee, Atkinson v. (Kan.) ...	325
Woodward v. Miller (Ga.)	932

Y.

Yates, Snider v. (Tenn.)	353
--------------------------------	-----

CITATIONS

IN OPINIONS OF THE JUDGES CONTAINED IN THIS BOOK.

A.

Aaron v. Broiles, 64 Tex. 318, 53 Am. Rep. 764.....	573	Amory v. Meredith, 7 Allen, 397.....	864
Abbot v. American Hard Rubber Co. 33 Barb. 578.....	770	Amoskeag Mfg. Co. v. Head, 59 N. H. 332	813
Abbott v. Abbott, 67 Me. 304, 24 Am. Rep. 27.....	992	Anchor Electric Co. v. Hawkes, 171 Mass. 101, 41 L. R. A. 189, 68 Am. St. Rep. 408, 50 N. E. 509.....	300, 302
v. Johnstown, G. & K. Horae R. Co. 80 N. Y. 27, 36 Am. Rep. 572.....	225	Anderson v. Thornton, 8 Exch. 425.....	938
Abell Brokerage & Bond Co. v. Hurd, 85 Iowa, 559, 52 N. W. 488.....	601	v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.....	302, 695, 716, 718
Acton v. Blundell, 12 Mees. & W. 324, 13 L. J. Exch. N. S. 289...243, 246,	247	Andrews v. Emmot, 2 Bro. Ch. 297....	859, 868
Adams v. Palmer, 6 Gray, 338.....	732	v. Frye, 104 Mass. 234.....	774
Adams Exp. Co. v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 255, 41 L. ed. 707, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991.....	921	v. Lembeck, 46 Ohio St. 38, 15 Am. St. Rep. 547, 18 N. E. 483.....	536
v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 171, 41 L. ed. 900, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.....	921	Anent v. Lowenthal, 52 Kan. 706, 35 Pac. 804.....	797
v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305, 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604.....	921	Anthony v. Slaid, 11 Met. 290.....	99
Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.....	302	Archer v. Salinas City, 93 Cal. 43, 16 L. R. A. 145, 28 Pac. 839.....	88
Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 21.....	341	v. State, 106 Ind. 426, 7 N. E. 225	810
Ætna Ins. Co. v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 3 Dill. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 96... 83		Argentine Min. Co. v. Terrible Min. Co. 122 U. S. 478, 30 L. ed. 1140, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1356.....	928
Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Koons, 26 Kan. 215... 798		Arnold v. Foot, 12 Wend. 330.....	271, 274
Agawam Canal Co. v. Edwards, 36 Conn. 497.....	274	v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 115 Pa. 135, 2 Am. St. Rep. 542, 8 Atl. 213	285
Ajax Gold Min. Co. v. Hilkey, 31 Colo. 131, 62 L. R. A. 555, 72 Pac. 447.....	931	v. Waltz, 53 Iowa, 706, 36 Am. Rep. 248, 6 N. W. 40.....	567
Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Drummond, 73 Miss. 813, 20 So. 7.....	286	Arnot v. Pittston & E. Coal Co. 68 N. Y. 558, 23 Am. Rep. 190.....	694
Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Hill, 90 Ala. 71, 9 L. R. A. 442, 24 Am. St. Rep. 764, 8 So. 90.....	496	Arrington v. Cary, 5 Baxt. 609.....	446
Alberger v. Baltimore, 64 Md. 7, 20 Atl. 988.....	628	Ashbury R. Carriage & Iron Co. v. Riche, L. R. 7 H. L. 653.....	404
Albert v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 122 N. C. 92, 65 Am. St. Rep. 693, 30 S. E. 327.....	454	Ashland v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 105 Wis. 398, 30 N. W. 1101.....	88
Allen v. Codman, 139 Mass. 139, 29 N. E. 537.....	480	Ashmore v. Pennsylvania Steam Towing & Transp. Co. 28 N. J. L. 180.....	550
v. London & S. W. R. Co. L. R. 6 Q. B. 65, 40 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 55, 23 L. T. N. S. 612, 19 Week. Rep. 127, 11 Cox C. C. 621.....	687	Atchison v. Jones, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 259, 1 S. W. 406.....	221
v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 183 Pa. 174, 39 L. R. A. 535, 38 Atl. 709.....	448	Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Bales, 16 Kan. 252.....	84
v. Pioneer Press Co. 40 Minn. 117, 3 L. R. A. 532, 12 Am. St. Rep. 707, 41 N. W. 936.....	703	v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. ed. 291, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.....	815, 818
v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, 120 U. S. 20, 30 L. ed. 573, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460.....	448	v. Home Ins. Co. 59 Kan. 432, 53 Pac. 459.....	83
Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427....	695	v. Matthews, 58 Kan. 447, 49 Pac. 602, Aff'g 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609....	327
Alshbrook v. Hathaway, 3 Sneed, 454... 796		v. Moore, 29 Kan. 632.....	150
Alton Bay Campmeeting Asso. v. Alton, 69 N. H. 311, 45 Atl. 95.....	44	v. Stanford, 12 Kan. 354, 15 Am. Rep. 362.....	84
American Fife Co. v. Garrett, 110 U. S. 288, 28 L. ed. 149, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.....	570	v. Thul, 29 Kan. 466, 44 Am. Rep. 659.....	82, 496
American Loan & T. Co. v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 157 Ill. 641, 42 N. E. 153.....	376	Atkinson v. Newcastle & G. Waterworks Co. L. R. 2 Exch. Div. 441.....	234
American Mfg. Iron Storage Co. v. State Board, 56 N. J. L. 389, 29 Atl. 160.....	415	Atlantic City Waterworks Co. v. Atlantic City, 48 N. J. L. 378, 6 Atl. 24.....	634, 635
Amicable Soc. v. Bolland, 4 Bligh. N. R. 194, 2 Dow & C. 1.....	463, 465, 671	v. Read, 50 N. J. L. 665, 15 Atl. 10.....	635
Amman v. New Alexandria & P. Turnp. Road Co. 15 Am. Dec. 593.....	505	Atty. Gen. v. Colony Hatch Lunatic Asylum, L. R. 4 Ch. 146.....	271
		Atty. Gen. ex rel. Miner v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 162, 60 Am. Rep. 287, 26 N. W. 311.....	648
		Auditor v. Ballard, 9 Bush, 572, 15 Am. Rep. 728.....	783
		Aurora Case. See AURORA LODGE v. BULGER HILL & N. GULCH PLACER.
		Aurora Lodge v. Bulger Hill & N. Gulch Placer, 23 Land Dec. 95...211,	218
		Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132.....	643
		Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60, 15 Pac. 371.....	447
		Ayers v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 187 Ill. 42, 58 N. E. 318.....	779
		B.
		Backus v. Burke, 63 Minn. 272, 65 N. W. 459.....	323

Bailey v. Comings, 16 Nat. Bank. Reg. 382, Fed. Cas. No. 733..... 567 v. Master Plumbers, 103 Tenn. 99, 46 L. R. A. 561, 52 S. W. 853. 265 Baker v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, 100 N. Y. 31, 53 Am. Rep. 150, 2 N. E. 452..... 788 Baldwin, Ex parte, 69 Iowa, 502, 29 N. W. 428..... 810 v. Emerson, 16 R. I. 304, 27 Am. St. Rep. 741, 15 Atl. 83, 17 Atl. 913..... 536 v. Great Northern R. Co. 81 Minn. 247, 51 L. R. A. 640, 83 Am. St. Rep. 370, 83 N. W. 986.... 626 Bales v. Hunt, 77 Ind. 355..... 939 Ballentyne v. Wickersham, 75 Ala. 536.... 341 Baltimore v. Root, 63 Am. Dec. 696..... 784 Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 387, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921..... 150, 152 v. McCullough, 12 Gratt. 595..... 507 v. Sulphur Spring Independent School Dist. 96 Pa. 65, 42 Am. Rep. 529..... 106 Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Landrigan, 191 U. S. 461, 48 L. ed. 262, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137..... 347 Baltimore Base Ball Club & Exhibition Co. v. Pickett, 78 Md. 375, 22 L. R. A. 690, 44 Am. St. Rep. 304, 28 Atl. 279..... 447 Baltimore, C. & P. R. Co. v. Latrobe, 81 Md. 222, 31 Atl. 788..... 633 Bamberger v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 95 Tenn. 18, 28 L. R. A. 486, 49 Am. St. Rep. 909, 31 S. W. 163. 439 Bangs v. Hornick, 30 Fed. 97..... 179 Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 519, 10 L. ed. 274..... 797 Bank of Catskill v. Messenger, 9 Cow. 37. 579 Bank of Charleston v. Johnson, 105 Tenn. 521, 59 S. W. 131..... 570 Bank of Louisville v. Hill, 99 Tenn. 42, 41 S. W. 349..... 362, 363, 365 Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 1 Pet. 25, 7 L. ed. 37..... 446 Barbey's Appeal, 119 Pa. 413, 13 Atl. 451 773 Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 505, 8 L. ed. 477 88 Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030..... 210 Barker v. Midland R. Co. 18 C. B. 46, 25 L. J. C. P. N. S. 184..... 821 v. Southern R. Co. 125 N. C. 596, 74 Am. St. Rep. 658, 34 S. E. 701..... 137 Barnard v. Kellogg, 10 Wall. 383, 19 L. ed. 987..... 448 Barnes v. Smith, 169 Mass. 344, 34 N. E. 403..... 179 Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224..... 88, 343 v. Oyster Bay & H. S. B. Co. 67 N. Y. 301, 23 Am. Rep. 115..... 821 Barr v. Essex Trades Council, 53 N. J. Eq. 101, 30 Atl. 881..... 265 v. Kansas, 105 Mo. 550, 16 S. W. 483..... 294 Barry v. Merchants' Exch. Co. 1 Sandf. Ch. 280..... 416 Barson v. Mulligan, 66 App. Div. 486, 73 N. Y. Supp. 262..... 323 Barstow v. Union Consol. Silver Min. Co. 10 Nev. 386..... 799 Bartlett v. O'Connor (Cal.) 36 Pac. 513... 252 Bassett v. Salisbury Mfg. Co. 43 N. H. 589, 82 Am. Dec. 179..... 245, 258 Bastian v. Modern Woodmen, 166 Ill. 595, 46 N. E. 1090..... 763 Batthey v. Barker, 62 Kan. 517, 56 L. R. A. 33, 64 Pac. 79..... 566 Baum v. State, 157 Ind. 282, 55 L. R. A. 250, 61 N. E. 672..... 785 Bauserman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 647, 37 L. ed. 316, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466 799 Baxter v. Sherman, 73 Minn. 434, 72 Am. St. Rep. 631, 76 N. W. 211..... 448 v. Wilson, 95 N. C. 138..... 138 Bay v. Coddington, 5 Johns. Ch. 54, 9 Am. Dec. 288..... 570 Bayha v. Webster County, 18 Neb. 131, 24 N. W. 457..... 134 Bayless v. Travellers' Ins. Co. 14 Blatchf. 143 Fed. Cas. No. 1, 138..... 351 64 L. R. A.	Beach v. Sterling Iron & Zinc Co. 54 N. J. Eq. 63, 33 Atl. 286..... 271 Beadell v. Eastern Counties R. Co. 2 C. B. N. S. 509, 26 L. J. C. P. N. S. 250, 5 Week. Rep. 650..... 821 Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East. 208..... 274 Beall v. Smith, L. R. 9 Ch. 85, 43 L. J. Ch. N. S. 245, 29 L. T. N. S. 625, 22 Week. Rep. 121..... 520 Beals v. Cone, 27 Colo. 473, 83 Am. St. Rep. 92, 62 Pac. 948..... 210, 213 Bean v. People, 7 Colo. 201, 2 Pac. 909... 433 Beardsley v. Hartford, 50 Conn. 542, 47 Am. Rep. 877..... 249 Beck v. Kittingling Water Co. (Pa.) 11 Atl. 300..... 234 v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 63 N. J. L. 232, 76 Am. St. Rep. 211, 43 Atl. 908..... 411, 413 Becker v. Keokuk Waterworks, 79 Iowa, 419, 18 Am. St. Rep. 377, 44 N. W. 694..... 234 v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 110 Ky. 474, 53 L. R. A. 267, 96 Am. St. Rep. 459, 61 S. W. 997.... 544 Bedford v. Flowers, 11 Humph. 242..... 448 Beekman Street, Re, 4 Bradf. 503..... 181, 182 Bell v. Armstrong, 1 Addams, Eccl. Rep. 365..... 290 v. Pearcy, 33 N. C. (11 Fred. L.) 233 477 Bellefontaine & I. R. Co. v. Snyder, 18 Ohio St. 400, 98 Am. Dec. 175 441 Bellows v. Pennsylvania & N. Y. Canal & R. Co. 157 Pa. 51, 27 Atl. 685 206 Belt Electric Line Co. v. Allen, 102 Ky. 551, 80 Am. St. Rep. 374, 44 S. W. 89..... 93, 94 Benedict v. Montgomery, 7 Watts & S. 238, 42 Am. Dec. 230..... 289 Bennett v. Harkrader, 158 U. S. 441, 39 L. ed. 1046, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863..... 214 v. Western U. Tele. Co. 128 N. C. 103, 38 S. E. 294..... 549 Bennett Water Co. v. Millvale, 200 Pa. 613, 50 Atl. 155..... 633, 634 Benton v. Philadelphia, 198 Pa. 396, 48 Atl. 267..... 294 Berg v. Parsons, 156 N. Y. 109, 41 L. R. A. 391, 66 Am. St. Rep. 542, 50 N. E. 957..... 541 Berlin Match Works v. Perry, 71 Wis. 495, 5 Am. St. Rep. 236, 38 N. W. 82..... 302 Bernstein v. Sweeney, 1 Jones & S. 276... 472 Best v. Crall, 23 Kan. 482, 33 Am. Rep. 185..... 570 Billings v. People, 189 Ill. 472, 59 L. R. A. 807, 59 N. E. 798..... 779 Billingslea v. Smith, 77 Md. 519, 26 Atl. 1077..... 954 Bills v. Belknap, 36 Iowa, 583..... 629 Bingham, Re, 127 N. Y. 296, 27 N. E. 1055..... 566 Bingham's Appeal, 64 Pa. 345..... 865 Bird v. Cromwell, 1 Mo. 81, 13 Am. Dec. 470..... 447 Birket v. Elward (Kan.) 74 Pac. 1100... 789 Birmingham v. Kilrwan, 2 Sch. & Lef. 444 290 Birmingham, B. & T. Junction R. Co. v. White, 1 Q. B. 282, 4 Perry & D. 649, 2 Eng. Ry. & C. Cas. 863, 10 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 121, 5 Jur. 800..... 433 Blashop v. American Preservers' Co. 157 Ill. 284, 48 Am. St. Rep. 317, 41 N. E. 765..... 764, 771 v. Vose, 27 Conn. 1..... 536 Black v. Ballymena Twp. Ir. L. R. 17 Eq. 459..... 256 v. Columbia, 19 S. C. 412, 45 Am. Rep. 785..... 234 Blaco v. State, 58 Neb. 566, 78 N. W. 1056 134 Blagge v. Miles (1841) 1 Story, 426, Fed. Cas. No. 1479..... 862, 867 Blake v. Hawkins, 98 U. S. 315, 25 L. ed. 139..... 863 v. Stump, 73 Md. 160, 10 L. R. A. 103, 20 Atl. 788..... 447 Bliss v. Ball, 99 Mass. 597..... 629 v. Kennedy, 43 Ill. 68..... 275 Blood Bain Co. v. Cooper, 83 Ga. 457, 5 L. R. A. 612, 20 Am. St. Rep. 324, 10 S. E. 118..... 935 Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 391..... 243
---	--

- Bloss v. Plymale, 3 W. Va. 393, 100 Am. Dec. 752. 579
- Boardman v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 157. 799
- Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis, 54 Minn. 223, 21 L. R. A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119. 718
- v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Assn. 54 Minn. 223, 21 L. R. A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119. 284
- Bonifant v. Doniphan, 3 Kan. 35. 798
- Boody v. Watson, 64 N. H. 162, 9 Atl. 794 v. Watson, 63 N. H. 320. 49
- Booth v. Rome, W. & O. Terminal R. Co. 140 N. Y. 267, 24 L. R. A. 105, 37 Am. St. Rep. 552, 35 N. E. 582. 44
- Boston & A. R. Co. v. Brown, 177 Mass. 65, 52 L. R. A. 418, 58 N. E. 188. 279
- Boston & M. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 177 Mass. 230, 88 Am. St. Rep. 275, 58 N. E. 689. 820
- Boston & W. R. Corp. v. Dana, 1 Gray 97 Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989. 821
- Bostwick v. Bryant, 113 Ind. 448, 16 N. E. 378. 249
- Boswell v. Laird, 8 Cal. 469, 68 Am. Dec. 345. 643
- Boughton v. Boughton, 111 Mich. 27, 69 N. W. 94. 585
- Boutwell v. Marr, 71 Vt. 1, 43 L. R. A. 803, 76 Am. St. Rep. 746, 42 Atl. 607. 540
- Boyd v. Ketterling, 101 Pa. 185. 876
- Bowas v. Pioneer Tow Line Co. 2 Sawy. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 1,713. 284
- Bowen v. Brian, 119 Mich. 218, 75 Am. St. Rep. 387, 77 N. W. 942. 249
- v. Decker, 18 Fed. 751. 550
- v. Gaylord, 122 N. C. 816, 29 S. E. 340. 324
- v. Matheson, 14 Allen, 499. 449
- Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Intern. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689. 138
- Boyd v. Brazil Block Coal Co. 152 Ind. 543, 49 N. E. 797. 264
- v. Portland Electric Co. 40 Or. 126, 57 L. R. A. 619, 66 Pac. 576. 608
- v. Portland Electric Co. 37 Or. 567, 52 L. R. A. 511, 62 Pac. 378. 783
- Bradford v. Pickles (1895) A. C. 587. 104
- Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413, 8 Am. Rep. 656. 105
- v. Rodelsperger, 3 S. C. N. S. 226. 257
- v. Westcott (1807) 13 Ves. Jr. 445. 405
- Brady v. Daly, 175 U. S. 148, 44 L. ed. 109, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, 731, 732. 567
- v. Johnson, 75 Md. 445, 20 L. R. A. 737, 26 Atl. 49. 860
- Braham v. Burchell, 3 Addams Eccl. Rep. 243. 733
- Braslin v. Somerville Horse R. Co. 145 Mass. 64, 13 N. E. 65. 506
- Breckinridge v. Delaware L. & W. R. Co. (N. J. Eq.) 33 Atl. 800. 290
- Brenham v. Brenham Water Co. 67 Tex. 542, 4 S. W. 143. 225
- Bretherton v. Wood, 3 Brod. & B. 54, 6 J. B. Moore, 141, 9 Price, 408, 23 Revised Rep. 556. 394
- Brett v. Ebel, 29 App. Div. 256, 51 N. Y. Supp. 573. 634
- Brewster v. Shrader, 26 Misc. 480, 57 N. Y. Supp. 606. 550
- Brinkman v. Jones, 44 Wis. 498. 302
- Brinkmeyer v. Evansville, 29 Ind. 187. 570
- British America Assur. Co. v. Bradford, 60 Kan. 82, 55 Pac. 335. 322
- Britt v. Pitta, 111 Ala. 401, 20 So. 484. 234
- Britton v. Green Bay & Ft. H. Waterworks Co. 81 Wis. 48, 29 Am. St. Rep. 856, 51 N. W. 64. 827
- Brooklyn City & N. E. Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 14, 26 L. ed. 61. 650
- Brooks v. Staton, 79 Ky. 174. 234
- v. Sullivan, 129 N. C. 190, 39 S. E. 822. 571
- Brookville & M. Hydraulic Co. v. Butler, 91 Ind. 138, 46 Am. Rep. 590. 221
- 64 L. R. A. 570
- Brossman v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 113 Pa. 490, 57 Am. Rep. 479, 6 Atl. 226. 273
- Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 270, 23 L. ed. 898. 448
- Brown v. Best, 1 Wils. 174. 126
- v. Bragunier, 79 Md. 234, 29 Atl. 7 633
- v. Cambridge, 3 Allen, 474. 343
- v. Chenoworth, 51 Tex. 470. 269
- v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 54 Wis. 342, 41 Am. Rep. 51, 11 N. W. 356. 579
- v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (N. D.) 95 N. W. 153. 603
- v. Godfrey, 33 Vt. 120. 550
- v. Houston, 114 U. S. 822, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091. 496
- v. Howard, 1 Cal. 423. 784
- v. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. 115 Ga. 429, 57 L. R. A. 547, 90 Am. St. Rep. 126, 41 S. E. 553. 510
- v. McLeish, 71 Iowa, 381, 32 N. W. 385. 447
- v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 75 Hun, 355, 27 N. Y. Supp. 69. 694
- v. Reilly, 72 Md. 489, 20 Atl. 289. 541
- v. Riggan, 94 Ill. 590. 821
- v. Rounsavell, 78 Ill. 589. 954
- v. Russell, 166 Mass. 14, 32 L. R. A. 253, 65 Am. St. Rep. 357, 43 N. E. 1006. 518
- v. Thornton, 6 Ad. & Ell. 185. 697
- v. Winnissimmet Co. 11 Allen, 326. 948
- Browning v. Morris, 2 Cow. 790. 174
- v. Wabash Western R. Co. 124 Mo. 35, 24 S. W. 731. 385
- Bruce v. Baxter, 7 Lea. 477. 390
- Bruschke v. Der Nord Chicago Schuetzen Verein, 145 Ill. 433, 34 N. E. 417. 940
- Bryan v. Brasius (Ariz.) 31 Pac. 519. 769
- v. Brasius, 162 U. S. 415, 40 L. ed. 1022, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803. 322
- v. Kales, 162 U. S. 411, 40 L. ed. 1020, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802. 323
- Buck v. Collins, 57 Ga. 391, 21 Am. Rep. 236. 432
- Buesching v. St. Louis Gaslight Co. 73 Mo. 219, 39 Am. Rep. 503. 294
- Bulkeley v. Eckert, 3 Pa. St. 368, 45 Am. Dec. 650. 114
- Bullard v. Bell, 1 Mason, 243, Fed. Cas. No. 2, 121. 736
- v. Saratoga Victory Mfg. Co. 77 N. Y. 525. 271
- Bullock v. Beemiss, 1 A. K. Marsh. 433. 274
- Bunker Hill & S. Min. Concentrating Co. v. Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. 48 C. C. A. 605, 109 Fed. 538. 581
- Bunt v. Sierra Butte Gold Min. Co. 138 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 1081, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464. 928
- Burdick v. People, 149 Ill. 600, 24 L. R. A. 152, 41 Am. St. Rep. 329, 36 N. E. 948. 151
- Burgundia, The, 29 Fed. 464. 793
- Burkle v. Ellis, 4 How. Pr. 288. 441
- Burlington v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 56 N. J. Eq. 259, 38 Atl. 849. 550
- Burnet v. Crane, 56 N. J. L. 285, 44 Am. St. Rep. 395, 28 Atl. 591. 838
- Burnham v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 63 Me. 298, 18 Am. Rep. 220. 838
- Burns v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 66 Kan. 188, 71 Pac. 244. 285
- Burroughs v. Saterlee, 67 Iowa, 396, 56 Am. Rep. 350, 25 N. W. 808. 347
- Burt v. Myer, 71 Md. 467, 18 Atl. 796. 396
- v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 362, 47 L. ed. 216, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139. 954
- Burnett v. First Nat. Bank, 38 Mich. 630 788
- Bush v. Steinman, 1 Bos. & P. 404. 539
- Busick v. Van Ness, 44 N. J. Eq. 82, 12 Atl. 609. 540
- Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652. 126
- Butler v. East Tennessee & V. R. Co. 8 Lea. 32. 695
- Butterfield v. Forrester, 11 East, 60. 448

C.
Cady v. South Omaha Nat. Bank, 48 Neb. 756, 65 N. W. 906, 49 Neb. 125, 68 N. W. 358.....	788
Caldwell v. Alton, 33 Ill. 418, 75 Am. Dec. 282.....	374
v. Lawrence, 84 Ill. 161.....	602
Calhoun v. Williams, 32 Gratt. 18, 34 Am. Rep. 759.....	567
Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co. 27 Colo. 1, 50 L. R. A. 209, 83 Am. St. Rep. 17, 59 Pac. 607	211
California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258, 65 Am. Dec. 511.....	695
Callanan v. Gilman, 107 N. Y. 360, 1 Am. St. Rep. 831, 14 N. E. 264.....	540
Callaway v. McMillan, 11 Ilesk. 557.....	733
Calmes v. Ament, 1 A. K. Marsh. 459.....	581
Campbell v. Haverhill, 155 U. S. 610, 39 L. ed. 280, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217.....	731
Capek v. Kropik, 129 Ill. 509, 21 N. E. 836.....	567
Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 1, 8 Am. Rep. 287.....	264
Cargill v. Kountze Bros. 86 Tex. 386, 24 L. R. A. 183, 40 Am. St. Rep. 853, 22 S. W. 1015, 25 S. W. 13	499
Carlin v. Western Assur. Co. 57 Md. 515, 40 Am. Rep. 440.....	648
Carnes v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Assn. 106 Iowa, 281, 68 Am. St. Rep. 306, 76 N. W. 683.....	351
Carnig v. Carr, 167 Mass. 544, 35 L. R. A. 512, 57 Am. St. Rep. 488, 46 N. E. 117.....	679
Carpenter v. McDavitt, 53 Mo. App. 393.....	974
Carpenter's Estate, 170 Pa. 203, 29 L. R. A. 145, 50 Am. St. Rep. 765, 32 Atl. 637.....	470
Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738	736
Carroll v. East St. Louis, 67 Ill. 568, 16 Am. Rep. 632.....	402
Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. 484, 4 Am. Dec. 463.....	248
Carter v. Glass, 44 Mich. 154, 38 Am. Rep. 240, 6 N. W. 200.....	550
v. Howe Machine Co. 51 Md. 290, 34 Am. Rep. 311.....	687
v. Towne, 98 Mass. 567, 96 Am. Dec. 682, 103 Mass. 507.....	441
Carter White Lead Co. v. Kinlin, 47 Neb. 409, 66 N. W. 436.....	679
Cary v. Daniels, 8 Met. 477, 41 Am. Dec. 532.....	274
Cassidy v. Woodward, 77 Iowa, 357, 42 N. W. 319.....	600
Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54, 26 L. ed. 393.....	788
Central Ohio Natural Gas & Fuel Co. v. Capital City Dairy Co. 60 Ohio St. 96, 53 N. E. 711.....	412
Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766.....	921
Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Anderson, 58 Ga. 393.....	447
Central R. Co. v. Crosby, 74 Ga. 737, 58 Am. Rep. 463.....	544
Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.....	225
Chaddick v. Lindsay, 5 Okla. 616, 49 Pac. 940.....	155
Chamberlain v. New Hampshire F. Ins. Co. 55 N. H. 264.....	454
Chamberlin v. Murphy, 41 Vt. 110.....	579
Chandler v. Howland, 7 Gray. 350, 66 Am. Dec. 487.....	275
Chapman v. McIlwraith, 77 Mo. 38, 46 Am. Rep. 1.....	462
Charles v. Carter, 96 Tenn. 607, 36 S. W. 396.....	448
Charleston Ins. & T. Co. v. Neve, 2 Mc Mull. L. 257.....	462
Chase v. Silverstone, 62 Me. 175, 16 Am. Rep. 419.....	257
Chasemore v. Richards, 2 Hurlst. & N. 168.....	246
Cheney v. Boston & M. R. Co. 11 Met. 121, 45 Am. Dec. 190.....	286
Cherry v. Slade, 7 N. C. (3 Murph.) 82, 64 L. R. A.....	138
Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States, 53 C. C. A. 256, 115 Fed. 610.....	697
Chesley v. King, 74 Me. 164, 43 Am. Rep. 569.....	258
Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black, 418, 17 L. ed. 208.....	542
Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Logue, 158 Ill. 621, 42 N. E. 53.....	441
v. Randolph, 53 Ill. 510, 5 Am. Rep. 60.....	286
Chicago & P. R. Co. v. Munger, 78 Ill. 300	518
Chicago & R. I. R. Co. v. Whipple, 22 Ill. 105.....	225
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, 47 Neb. 549, 41 L. R. A. 481, 53 Am. St. Rep. 557, 66 N. W. 624.....	793
Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. v. People's Gaslight & Coke Co. 121 Ill. 530, 2 Am. St. Rep. 124, 13 N. E. 169.....	374
Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Crawford County, 48 Wis. 666, 5 N. W. 3	395
Chicago Mut. Life Indemnity Assn. v. Hunt, 127 Ill. 257, 2 L. R. A. 549, 20 N. E. 55.....	159
Chicago, P. & S. W. R. Co. v. Marselles, 84 Ill. 643.....	374
Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hinds, 56 Kan. 758, 44 Pac. 993.....	347
Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 139 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 97, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.....	814
Chipman v. Montgomery, 63 N. Y. 234.....	290
Choze v. Eureka, 78 Cal. 591, 4 L. R. A. 325, 12 Am. St. Rep. 113, 21 Pac. 364.....	233
Chouteaux v. Leech, 18 Pa. 224, 57 Am. Dec. 602.....	447
Christian v. Williams, 111 Mo. 429, 20 S. W. 96.....	537
Church v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 616.....	286
v. Howard City, 111 Mich. 298, 66 Am. St. Rep. 396, 69 N. W. 651	294
Ciere's Case, 6 Coke 176.....	861
Cincinnati v. White, 6 Pet. 431, 8 L. ed. 452.....	838
Citizens' Bank v. Graftin, 31 Md. 520, 1 Am. Rep. 66.....	447
City Bank v. Perkins, 29 N. Y. 554, 86 Am. Dec. 332.....	598
City Nat. Bank v. Jeffries, 73 Ala. 183.....	549
Cladlin v. Mayer, 41 La. Ann. 1048, 7 So. 139.....	826
Clairain v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 40 La. Ann. 182, 3 So. 625.....	104
Clark v. Dasso, 34 Mich. 88.....	629
v. Farrington, 11 Wis. 321.....	385
Clarke v. Bank of Mississippi, 10 Ark. 518, 52 Am. Dec. 248.....	799
Clawson v. Primrose, 4 Del. Ch. 643.....	867
Clayton v. Henderson, 103 Ky. 228, 44 L. R. A. 474, 44 S. W. 667.....	573
Cleaver v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assn. (1892) 1 Q. B. 147, 61 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 220, 40 Week. Rep. 230, 56 J. P. 180.....	465
Clemmer v. Drovers' Nat. Bank, 157 Ill. 206, 41 N. E. 728.....	788
Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 45 L. ed. 1183, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 845.....	172
Clifford v. Denver, S. P. & P. R. Co. 9 Colo. 333, 12 Pac. 219.....	157
Clinton v. Meyers, 46 N. Y. 511, 7 Am. Rep. 373.....	271
Clipper Min. Co., Re, 22 Land. Dec. 527.....	210
v. Searl, 29 Land Dec. 137.....	210
Cloney v. Kalamazoo, 124 Mich. 655, 83 N. W. 618.....	295
Coale v. Campbell, 58 Kan. 480, 49 Pac. 604.....	797
Cobb v. C. Everett Clark Co. 118 Ga. 483, 45 S. E. 305.....	935
Cochran v. Ward, 5 Ind. App. 89, 51 Am. St. Rep. 229, 29 N. E. 785, 31 N. E. 581.....	125
Cockburn v. Union Bank, 13 La. Ann. 289	434
Coffin v. Portland, 27 Fed. 412.....	89
Cohen v. Berlin & J. Envelope Co. 166 N. Y. 292, 59 N. E. 906.....	707
Cohn v. Kansas, 108 Mo. 387, 18 S. W. 873	294
v. Sadel, 71 N. H. 558, 53 Atl. 800	549
Cole v. Accident Ins. Co. 61 L. T. N. S. 227	351

Cole v. Lake Co. 54 N. H. 286.....	249	Cope Case. See COPE v. DISTRICT FAIR ASSO.
v. Bowen, 88 Mich. 219, 13 L. R. A. 848, 50 N. W. 138.....	819	Coquard v. National Linseed Oil Co. 171 Ill. 480, 49 N. E. 563, 787, 768
Colgrove v. Smith, 102 Cal. 220, 27 L. R. A. 590, 36 Pac. 411.....	542	Corbett v. Littlefield, 84 Mich. 30, 11 L. R. A. 95, 22 Am. St. Rep. 681, 47 N. W. 581.....	380, 508
Collins v. Chartiers Valley Gas Co. 131 Pa. 143, 6 L. R. A. 280, 17 Am. St. Rep. 791, 18 Atl. 1012.....	249, 256	Corby v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 150 Mo. 457, 52 S. W. 282.....	966
Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turck, 4 C. C. A. 313, 12 U. S. App. 85, 54 Fed. 262.....	931	Corcoran v. Milwaukee Gaslight Co. 81 Wis. 192, 51 N. W. 328.....	158
Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. v. Cummings, 8 Colo. App. 541, 46 Pac. 875.....	842	Cornell v. Irvine, 56 Neb. 657, 77 N. W. 114.....	135
Columbus & H. Coal & I. Co. v. Tucker, 48 Ohio St. 41, 12 L. R. A. 577, 29 Am. St. Rep. 528, 26 N. E. 630	271	Cote v. Murphy, 159 Pa. 420, 23 L. R. A. 135, 39 Am. St. Rep. 686, 28 Atl. 190.....	264
Columbus & N. Coal & I. Co. v. Tucker, 48 Ohio St. 41, 12 L. R. A. 577, 29 Am. St. Rep. 528, 26 N. E. 630.....	447, 448	Cotting v. De Sartiges, 17 R. I. 869, 16 L. R. A. 367, 24 Atl. 530.....	865
Columbus Water Co. v. Columbus, 48 Kan. 99, 15 L. R. A. 354, 28 Pac. 1067.....	634	Cottle v. Cole, 20 Iowa, 481.....	599, 600
Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 84.....	641	Cottrill v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 47 Wis. 634, 32 Am. Rep. 796, 3 N. W. 376.....	544
v. Drum, 58 Pa. 21.....	79	Coughlan v. Cambridge, 166 Mass. 268, 46 N. E. 218.....	116
v. Edison Electric Light & P. Co. 170 Pa. 231, 32 Atl. 419.....	49	Coventry Mut. Live Stock Ins. Asso. v. Evans, 102 Pa. 281.....	456
v. Equitable Beneficial Asso. 137 Pa. 412, 18 Atl. 1112.....	411	Cover v. Smith, 82 Md. 614, 34 Atl. 465.....	954
v. Erie & N. E. R. Co. 27 Pa. 351, 67 Am. Dec. 471.....	963	Covington v. Neftzger, 140 Ill. 608, 33 Am. St. Rep. 261, 30 N. E. 764.....	523
v. Grinstead, 111 Ky. 203, 56 L. R. A. 709, 63 S. W. 427.....	697	Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co. 100 U. S. 55, 25 L. ed. 547.....	398
v. Keystone Bridge Co. 156 Pa. 500, 27 Atl. 1.....	648	Cowle v. Seattle, 22 Wash. 659, 62 Pac. 121.....	205
v. Knowlton, 2 Mass. 534.....	248	Cox Needle Co. v. Gilford, 62 N. H. 503.....	43
v. Lowell Gaslight Co. 12 Allen, 75	648	Craft v. McCoughy, 79 Ill. 346, 22 Am. Rep. 171.....	764
v. McCloskey, 2 Rawle, 369.....	784	Crandall v. Woods, 8 Cal. 143.....	248
v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839.....	49	Cravens v. Rodgers, 101 Mo. 247, 14 S. W. 100.....	819
v. Parker, 2 Pick. 550.....	810	Crawford v. Longstreet, 43 N. J. L. 328.....	385, 388
v. Plaisted, 148 Mass. 375, 2 L. R. A. 142, 12 Am. St. Rep. 566, 19 N. E. 224.....	948	Croasdale v. Von Boyneburgk, 206 Pa. 15, 55 Atl. 770.....	687
v. Power, 7 Met. 596, 41 Am. Dec. 465.....	815	Crocker v. Carpenter, 98 Cal. 418, 33 Pac. 271.....	976
v. Smith, 10 Allen 455, 87 Am. Dec. 672.....	225	Cronin v. Gay, 20 Tex. 460.....	499
v. Standard Oil Co. 101 Pa. 119.....	799	Crocker v. Bragg, 10 Wend. 260, 25 Am. Dec. 555.....	271
v. Wetherbee, 105 Mass. 149.....	159	Cross v. Kitts, 69 Cal. 217, 58 Am. Rep. 558, 10 Pac. 409.....	251, 252
Com. ex rel. McCormick v. Keystone Electric Light, Heat, & P. Co. 193 Pa. 245, 44 Atl. 326.....	49	v. Knox, 32 Kan. 725, 5 Pac. 32.....	322
Sellers v. Phoenix Iron Co. 105 Pa. 111, 51 Am. Rep. 184.....	433, 434	v. St. Louis K. C. & N. R. Co. 77 Mo. loc. cit. 322.....	964
Concord & M. R. Co. v. Boston & M. R. Co. 68 N. H. 519, 39 Atl. 1073.....	815	Crossley v. Lightowler, L. R. 3 Eq. 279.....	271
Concord & P. R. Co. v. Forsaith, 59 N. H. 122, 47 Am. Rep. 181.....	817	Crowell v. Skipper, 6 Fla. 583.....	360
Conger v. Weaver, 6 Cal. 557, 65 Am. Dec. 528.....	254	Crowley v. Hyde, 116 Mass. 589.....	192
Conlon v. Lanphear, 37 Kan. 431, 15 Pac. 600.....	797	Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Cassey, 78 Miss. 668, 29 So. 762	806
Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. New York & N. H. R. Co. 25 Conn. 265, 65 Am. Dec. 571.....	83, 99	Cummings v. Union Blue Stone Co. 164 N. Y. 401, 52 L. B. A. 262, 79 Am. St. Rep. 655, 58 N. E. 525.....	707
v. Ryan, 8 Mo. App. 535.....	462	Currier v. Perley, 24 N. H. 223.....	248
Connolly v. Goodwin, 5 Cal. 221.....	249	Curtis, Re, 142 N. Y. 219, 36 N. E. 887.....	779
v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481.....	780	v. Aspinwall, 114 Mass. 187, 19 Am. Rep. 352.....	192
Consolidated Traction Co. v. Lambertson, 59 N. J. L. 297, 36 Atl. 100.....	848	v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9.....	385
Consolidated Wyoming Gold Min. Co. v. Champion Min. Co. 63 Fed. 540	209	Curtiss v. Martin, 20 Ill. 553.....	76
Continental Ins. Co. v. Munna, 120 Ind. 30, 5 L. R. A. 430, 22 N. E. 78	938
Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Volger, 89 Ind. 572, 46 Am. Rep. 185.....	938
Coch v. Coch, 5 Houst. (Del.) 540, 1 Am. St. Rep. 161.....	566
Cook v. Brannin, 87 Ky. 101, 7 S. W. 877	221
v. Carroll, Land & Cattle Co. 6 Tex. Civ. App. 326, 25 S. W. 1034.....	477
v. Tullis, 18 Wall. 332, 21 L. ed. 933	788
Cooke v. Cooper, 18 Or. 142, 7 L. R. A. 273, 17 Am. St. Rep. 709, 22 Pac. 945.....	322
Cooper v. Haines (1889) 70 Md. 282, 17 Atl. 70.....	864
v. Sanford, 4 Yerg. 452, 26 Am. Dec. 239.....	448
Cope v. District Fair Asso. 90 Ill. 489, 39 Am. Rep. 30.....	767
64 L. R. A.

D.

- Davis v. Getchell, 50 Me. 602, 79 Am. Dec. 636 note. 273
 v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 258, 41 Am. Rep. 221. 225, 404
 v. Panhandle Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 928. 788
 v. Shafer, 50 Fed. 764. 395
 v. Strobbridge, 44 Mich. 157, 6 N. W. 205. 676
 Davy v. Bangs, 174 Mass. 238, 54 N. E. 538. 173
 Dawkins v. Sappington, 26 Ind. 199. 783
 Dawson v. Beall, 68 Ga. 328. 76
 v. Coffman, 28 Ind. 223. 249
 Day v. Putnam Ins. Co. 16 Minn. 408, Gil. 365. 784
 v. Savadge, Hobart, 85. 784
 Deaderick v. Wilson, 8 Baxt. 108. 433, 434
 Dean v. Vaccaro, 2 Head, 488, 75 Am. Dec. 744. 448
 Deem v. Milliken, 53 Ohio St. 668, 44 N. E. 1134. 470
 v. Millikin, 6 Ohio C. C. 357, Aff'd in 53 Ohio St. 668, 44 N. E. 1134. 470
 Deems v. Baltimore, 80 Kan. 178, 26 L. R. A. 541, 45 Am. St. Rep. 339, 30 Atl. 648. 642
 Dellsie v. Bourrlague, 105 La. 77, 54 L. E. A. 429, 29 So. 731. 106
 Del Monte Min. & Mill. Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. 171 U. S. 55, 43 L. ed. 72, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895. 932
 Dempsey v. Dobson, 184 Pa. 588, 40 L. R. A. 550, 63 Am. St. Rep. 809, 39 Atl. 493. 447
 Den ex dem. Nowell v. Hoake (1830) 6 Bing. 475, 1 Dow & C. 437
 4 Bligh N. R. 3. 860
 Reed v. Shenck, 13 N. C. (2 Dev. L.) 415. 138
 Denby v. Willer, 59 Wis. 241, 18 N. W. 169
 Bennett v. Dennett, 43 N. H. 499. 248
 Denny v. Denny, 8 Allen, 311. 522
 Denton v. Noyes, 6 Johns. 206, 5 Am. Dec. 237. 344
 Denver Consul. Electric Co. v. Simpson, 21 Colo. 371, 31 L. R. A. 566, 41 Pac. 499. 105
 Detroit, Ft. W. & B. I. R. Co. v. Osborn, 189 U. S. 383, 47 L. ed. 860, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540. 642
 Devecmon v. Devecmon, 43 Md. 347. 902
 Dewald v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 44 Kan. 586, 24 Pac. 1101. 347
 Diamond Match Co. v. Roeber, 106 N. Y. 473, 60 Am. Rep. 464, 13 N. E. 418. 301
 Dickson v. Waldron, 135 Ind. 507, 24 L. R. A. 483, 41 Am. St. Rep. 440, 34 N. E. 506, 35 N. E. 1. 687
 Dierks v. Highway Comrs. 142 Ill. 197, 31 N. E. 496. 218
 Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co. v. People, 156 Ill. 448, 47 Am. St. Rep. 200, 41 N. E. 188. 771
 District of Columbia v. Armes, 107 U. S. 518, 27 L. ed. 618, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840. 439
 v. McElligott, 117 U. S. 621, 29 L. ed. 946, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889. 150
 Ditchett v. Spuyten Duyvil & P. M. R. Co. 67 N. Y. 425. 225
 Dixon v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 68 Fed. 630. 788
 Doane v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 165 Ill. 510, 36 L. R. A. 97, 56 Am. St. Rep. 266, 46 N. E. 520. 966
 Doe v. Waterloo Min. Co. 54 Fed. 935. 209
 Doe ex dem. Kennedy v. Bebee, 8 Ala. 914
 Hallett v. Bebee, 13 How. 25, 14 L. ed. 35. 342
 Pollard v. Greitt, 8 Ala. 941. 342
 Davis v. Vincent, 1 Houst. (Del.) 416. 866
 Dolan v. Van Demark, 85 Kan. 804, 10 Pac. 848. 571
 Donahoe v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 83 Mo. 560, 53 Am. Rep. 594. 544
 Donald v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 93 Iowa, 284, 33 L. R. A. 492, 61 N. W. 971. 412
 v. Hewitt, 33 Ala. 545, 73 Am. Dec. 431. 360
 Donaldson v. Carmichael, 102 Ga. 40, 29 S. E. 135. 379
 Dorchester County v. Meckins, 50 Md. 39
 Doremus v. Hennessy, 176 Ill. 608, 43 L. R. A. 797, 68 Am. St. Rep. 203, 52 N. E. 924, 54 N. E. 524. 264
 Dorrity v. Rapp, 72 N. Y. 307. 278
 Dotterer v. Bowe, 84 Ga. 769, 11 S. E. 896; and note (8 Md. 95). 784
 Dow, Re, 167 N. Y. 233, 52 L. R. A. 433, 88 Am. St. Rep. 509, 60 N. E. 439. 779
 Downer of Chesebrough, 36 Conn. 39, 4 Am. Rep. 28. 123
 Dows, Re, 167 N. Y. 227, 52 L. R. A. 433, 88 Am. St. Rep. 508, 60 N. E. 439, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213. 282
 Doyle v. Wiley, 15 Ill. 576. 754
 Draper v. Cowles, 27 Kan. 484. 571
 Driscoll v. Towle, 181 Mass. 416, 63 N. E. 922. 117
 D. R. Martin, The, 11 Blatchf. 235, Fed. Cas. No. 1,030. 821
 Droltwich Patent Salt Co. v. Curzon, L. R. 3 Exch. 35, 37 Exch. N. S. 2, 17 L. T. N. S. 180. 415
 Dryer v. Brown, 52 Hun, 321, 5 N. Y. Supp. 486. 313
 Dubach v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 89 Mo. 488, 1 S. W. 86. 964
 Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Richmond, 19 Wall. 584, 22 L. ed. 173. 508
 Dulaney v. Buffum, 173 Mo. 1, 73 S. W. 125. 579
 Dumont v. Kellogg, 29 Mich. 420, 18 Am. Rep. 162. 273, 274
 Dungan v. Read, 167 Pa. 393, 31 Atl. 639
 Dunlap v. Northwestern R. Co. 130 U. S. 649, 32 L. ed. 1058, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 647. 152
 Dunlop v. Patterson F. Ins. Co. 74 N. Y. 145, 30 Am. Rep. 283. 114
 Dunsamoor v. Furstenfeldt, 88 Cal. 522, 12 L. R. A. 508, 22 Am. St. Rep. 331, 26 Pac. 518. 114
 Durand v. Higgins, 67 Kan. 110, 72 Pac. 567. 566
 Durgin v. Smith (Mich.) 94 N. W. 1044. 675
 Durkee v. People, 155 Ill. 354, 46 Am. St. Rep. 840, 40 N. E. 628. 403
 Dwight Printing Co. v. Boston, 122 Mass. 583. 271

E.

- Eagle v. Smith, 4 Houst. (Del.) 293. 783
 Eagle Ins. Co. v. Ohio, 153 U. S. 446, 88 L. ed. 778, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868. 458
 Early v. Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 113 Mich. 58, 67 Am. St. Rep. 445, 71 N. W. 500. 351
 East v. Wood, 62 Ala. 313. 192
 East Alabama R. Co. v. Doe, 114 U. S. 340, 29 L. ed. 136, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869. 505
 East Birmingham Land Co. v. Dennis, 85 Ala. 565, 2 L. R. A. 836, 7 Am. St. Rep. 73, 5 So. 317. 448
 Eastern Exp. Co. v. Meserve, 60 N. H. 198
 Eastman v. Monastes, 32 Or. 291, 67 Am. St. Rep. 531, 51 Pac. 1095. 480
 East Saginaw City R. Co. v. Bohn, 27 Mich. 504. 440
 East Tennessee & G. R. Co. v. Nelson, 1 Coldw. 272. 448
 East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Kelly, 91 Tenn. 699, 17 L. R. A. 691, 30 Am. St. Rep. 902, 20 S. W. 312. 449
 Eaton v. Alger, 57 Barb. 179. 588, 590
 v. Fairbury Waterworks Co. 37 Neb. 546, 21 L. R. A. 653, 40 Am. St. Rep. 510, 56 N. W. 201. 234
 Eaves v. Gillespie, 1 Swan, 128. 362
 E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747. 706
 Eckert v. Long Island R. Co. 43 N. Y. 502, 3 Am. Rep. 721. 544

- Eckman v. Chicago, B. & Q. St. Co. 169
 Ill. 312, 38 L. R. A. 750, 48
 N. E. 496 405
 Eddy v. Simpson, 3 Cal. 253, 58 Am.
 Dec. 408 254
 Edington v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 13 Hun, 543 462
 v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 67 N. Y. 185
 842
 Edwards v. London & N. W. B. Co. L. R.
 5 C. P. 445, 39 L. J. C. P. N.
 8, 241, 22 L. T. N. S. 656, 18
 Week. Rep. 834 687
 v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145 842
 Egan v. Egan, 90 Cal. 15, 27 Pac. 22 559
 Egerer v. New York C. & H. R. Co. 130
 N. Y. 108, 14 L. R. A. 381, 29
 N. E. 95 963
 Ehrman v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 35 Ohio
 St. 324 898
 Eichengreen v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 96
 Tenn. 229, 31 L. R. A. 702, 54
 Am. St. Rep. 833, 34 S. W. 219
 687
 Eichenlaub v. St. Joseph, 113 Mo. 395,
 18 L. R. A. 590, 21 S. W. 8 683
 Eldemiller Ice Co. v. Guthrie, 42 Neb. 238,
 28 L. R. A. 581, 60 N. W. 717 274
 Ela v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 71 N. H. 1,
 51 Atl. 281 71
 Elderton v. Emmens, 4 C. B. 479, 16 L. J.
 C. P. N. S. 209, 11 Jur. 612
 677, 679
 Ellerbe v. Barney, 119 Mo. 632, 23 L. R.
 A. 435, 25 S. W. 384 159
 Ellerman v. Chicago Junction R. & Union
 Stockyards Co. 49 N. J. Eq.
 217, 23 Atl. 287 385
 Ellerson v. Westcott, 148 N. Y. 149, 42 N.
 E. 540 467
 Ellinger v. Thomas, 64 Kan. 180, 67 Pac.
 529 565, 566
 Elliot v. Fitchburg R. Co. 10 Cush. 181,
 57 Am. Dec. 85, notes 273
 Ellis v. De Garmo, 17 B. I. 715, 19 L. R.
 A. 561, 24 Atl. 579 536
 v. Esson, 50 Wis. 152, 36 Am. Rep.
 830, 6 N. W. 523 579
 Ely v. New Haven S. B. Co. 53 Barb. 207 449
 Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 352 269
 Emerson v. Townsend, 73 Md. 224, 20
 Atl. 984 975
 Emery v. Haven (1893), 67 N. H. 503,
 35 Atl. 940 864
 Emmerson v. Fay, 94 Va. 60, 26 S. E. 836
 541
 English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 116, 76 Am.
 Dec. 574 248
 Enos v. Snyder, 131 Cal. 68, 53 L. R. A.
 221, 82 Am. St. Rep. 330, 63
 Pac. 170 181
 Epting v. Jones, 47 Ga. 622 603
 Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements, 140
 U. S. 226, 35 L. ed. 497, 11
 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822 453
 v. Frommhold, 75 Ill. App. 43 174
 Erie v. Magill, 101 Pa. 616, 47 Am.
 Rep. 789 294
 Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago,
 107 U. S. 689, 27 L. ed. 447,
 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185 341
 Estill v. State, 38 Tex. Crim. Rep. 265,
 42 S. W. 305 477
 Evansville & C. R. Co. v. Hiatt, 17
 Ind. 102 544
 Everett v. Council Bluffs, 46 Iowa, 67 629
 Everman v. Hyman, 26 Ind. App. 165, 84
 Am. St. Rep. 284, 28 N. E.
 1022 788
 Ewing v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co.
 147 Pa. 40, 14 L. R. A. 666, 30
 Am. St. Rep. 709, 23 Atl. 340 549
 Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 791,
 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542 814, 820
- F.
- Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283,
 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct.
 Rep. 648 833
 Fairly v. Wappoo Mills, 44 S. C. 227, 29
 L. R. A. 215, 22 S. E. 108 447
 Fanny Rawlings Min. Co. v. Tribe, 29 Colo.
 302, 68 Pac. 284 213
 Farmer v. Myles, 106 La. 833, 30 So. 858 225
 Farmers' & D. Ins. Co. v. Curry, 18 Bush,
 312, 26 Am. Rep. 184 454
 64 L. R. A.
- Farmers' & M. Bank v. Champlain Transp.
 Co. 18 Vt. 131, 23 Vt. 186, 56
 Am. Dec. 68 446, 447
 v. Farwell, 7 C. C. A. 391, 19 U. S.
 App. 256, 58 Fed. 633 788
 Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dohney, 189 U.
 S. 301, 47 L. ed. 821, 23 Sup.
 Ct. Rep. 565 457
 Farmers' Bank v. Beaton, 7 Gill & J. 421,
 28 Am. Dec. 226 113
 Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Lake Street
 Elev. R. Co. 173 Ill. 439, 51
 N. E. 55 771
 Farrand v. Marshall, 19 Barb. 380 278
 Fatout v. School Comrs. 102, Ind. 223, 1
 N. E. 389 784
 Fauntleroy's Case, 4 Bligh, N. R. 194, 2
 Dow & C. 1 672
 Feder v. Field, 170 Ind. 386, 20 N. E. 129 941
 Felsee v. Parkinson, 4 Taunt. 640, 13 Rev.
 Rep. 710 938
 Ferguson v. Firmenich Mfg. Co. 77 Iowa,
 578, 14 Am. St. Rep. 319, 42
 N. W. 448 273
 v. Gooch, 94 Va. 1, 40 L. R. A. 234,
 26 S. E. 397 447
 Ferris v. Carson Water Co. 16 Nev. 44,
 40 Am. Rep. 485 234
 Fersner v. Bradley, 87 Md. 488, 40 Atl.
 58 803
 Fidelity Mut. Life Assn. v. Mettler, 185 U.
 S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup.
 Ct. Rep. 632 327, 457
 First M. E. Church v. Dixon, 178 Ill. 260,
 52 N. E. 887 402
 First Nat. Bank v. Ames, 39 Minn. 179,
 39 N. W. 308 536
 v. Hummel, 14 Colo. 259, 8 L. R. A.
 788, 20 Am. St. Rep. 257, 23
 Pac. 986 788
 v. Klug, 186 U. S. 202, 46 L. ed.
 1127, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899 647
 v. Ottawa, 43 Kan. 205, 23 Pac.
 485 784
 v. Valley State Bank, 60 Kan. 621,
 57 Pac. 510 790
 Fisher v. Hildreth, 117 Mass. 558 956
 v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 160
 Mass. 386, 39 Am. St. Rep.
 495, 35 N. E. 849 939
 Flak v. Westover, 4 S. D. 233, 46 Am. St.
 Rep. 780, 55 N. W. 961 537
 Fitch v. Seymour Water Co. 139 Ind. 214,
 47 Am. St. Rep. 258, 37 N.
 E. 982 234
 Fitzgerald v. Connecticut River Paper Co.
 155 Mass. 155, 31 Am. St. Rep.
 537, 29 N. E. 464 157
 v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co.
 200 Pa. 540, 86 Am. St. Rep.
 732, 50 Atl. 161 106
 Flagg v. Gilpin, 17 R. I. 10, 19 Atl.
 1084 177
 Flam v. Lee, 116 Iowa, 289, 93 Am. St.
 Rep. 242, 90 N. W. 70 549
 Flatley v. Phenix Ins. Co. 95 Wis. 618,
 70 N. W. 828 456
 Fletcher v. Philadelphia Traction Co. 190
 Pa. 117, 42 Atl. 527 206
 Fluker v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 81 Ga.
 461, 2 L. R. A. 843, 12 Am. St.
 Rep. 328, 8 S. E. 529 821
 Flynn v. Neosho, 114 Mo. 567, 21 S.
 W. 903 294
 Fobes Case, 121 N. Y. 505, 8 L. R. A. 453,
 24 N. E. 919 967
 Foley v. Mason, 6 Md. 51 447
 v. Royal Arcanum, 151 N. Y. 196,
 56 Am. St. Rep. 621, 45 N.
 E. 456 844
 Foos v. Scarr (1880) 55 Md. 301 864
 Forbell v. New York, 164 N. Y. 522, 51 L.
 R. A. 695, 79 Am. St. Rep.
 666, 58 N. E. 644 246, 258, 259
 Forbell Case. See FORBELL v. NEW YORK.
 Forbes v. Board of Education, 7 Kan.
 App. 452, 53 Pac. 533 88
 Ford v. Chicago Shippers' Assn. 155 Ill.
 166, 27 L. R. A. 298, 39 N.
 E. 651 766
 v. State, 85 Md. 465, 41 L. R. A.
 551, 60 Am. St. Rep. 337, 37
 Atl. 172 645
 Fordyce v. Nix, 58 Ark. 136, 23 S. W. 967
 550

- Fortier v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 439, 28 L. ed. 764, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234..... 398
- Foster v. Lookout Waterworks Co. 3 Lea, 42..... 234
- v. Swope, 41 Mo. App. 137..... 294
- Foster-Cherry Commission Co. v. Caskey, 66 Kan. 600, 72 Pac. 208..... 799
- Fowler v. Athens City Waterworks Co. 83 Ga. 219, 20 Am. St. Rep. 313, 9 S. E. 673..... 234
- Fox v. Gordon, 16 Phila. 185..... 181
- v. Windes, 127 Mo. loc. cit. 511, 48 Am. St. Rep. 648, 30 S. W. 325..... 291
- Francis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 58 Minn. 252, 25 L. R. A. 406, 49 Am. St. Rep. 507, 50 N. W. 1078... 550
- Francis Case. See FRANCIS v. WESTERN U. TELEG. CO.
- Franklyn v. Sprague, 121 U. S. 215, 30 L. ed. 936, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 951..... 398
- Franklin v. Durgree, 71 N. H. 186, 58 L. R. A. 112, 51 Atl. 911..... 818
- Franklin Co. v. Lewiston Inst. for Savings, 68 Me. 43, 28 Am. Rep. 9..... 403
- Frassi v. McDonald, 122 Cal. 400, 55 Pac. 139, 55 Pac. 772..... 541
- Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294..... 257
- Freary v. Cooke, 14 Mass. 488..... 447
- Frederick Electric Light & P. Co. v. Frederick City, 84 Md. 599, 36 L. R. A. 130, 36 Atl. 362..... 48
- Freel v. Market Street Cable R. Co. 97 Cal. 40, 31 Pac. 730..... 842
- Freeman v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 28 Minn. 444, 10 N. W. 594..... 225
- French v. Robb, 67 N. J. L. 260, 57 L. R. A. 956, 91 Am. St. Rep. 433, 51 Atl. 509..... 838
- Fresno Street R. Co. v. Southern P. R. Co. 135 Cal. 202, 67 Pac. 773..... 254
- Frie v. No. 4 Fidelity Bldg. & Sav. Union, 106 Ill. 128, 57 Am. St. Rep. 123, 46 N. E. 784..... 771
- Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93..... 398
- Frost v. Leighton, 2 American Historical Review, Jan. 1897..... 229
- Fulford v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 185 Pa. 329, 39 Atl. 1115..... 206
- Fulton v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 47 N. Y. S. R. 111, 19 N. Y. Supp. 660..... 938
- v. Moore, 25 Pa. 468..... 289
- G.
- Gale v. Kalamazoo, 23 Mich. 344, 9 Am. Rep. 80..... 636
- Gallagher v. State, 3 Minn. 270, Gil. 185..... 79
- Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Moore, 59 Tex. 64, 46 Am. Rep. 265..... 440
- Garaty v. DuBose, 5 S. C. N. S. 493..... 567
- Gardner v. Michigan C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 349, 37 L. ed. 1107, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140..... 152
- Garwood v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 83 N. Y. 400, 38 Am. Rep. 452..... 273
- Gaston v. Wright, 83 Tex. 286, 18 S. W. 576..... 350
- Gates v. Ryan, 37 Fed. 154..... 449
- Gaunt v. Harkness, 53 Kan. 405, 42 Am. St. Rep. 297, 36 Pac. 739..... 315
- Gehlen Bros. v. Knorr, 101 Iowa, 700, 36 L. R. A. 807, 63 Am. St. Rep. 418, 70 N. W. 757..... 273
- Germania Ins. Co. v. Rudwig, 80 Ky. 223..... 454
- German Ins. Co. v. Brown, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 601, 29 S. W. 313..... 456
- Geyser-Marion Gold Min. Co. v. Stark, 53 L. R. A. 684, 45 C. C. A. 467, 106 Fed. 558..... 447
- Gibbs v. McNeeley, 60 L. R. A. 152, 55 C. C. A. 70, 118 Fed. 120..... 697
- Giblan v. National Amalgamated Labourers' Union (1903) 2 K. B. 600..... 263
- Gibson v. Culver, 17 Wend. 305, 31 Am. Dec. 297..... 449
- Giffen v. Olathe, 44 Kan. 350, 24 Pac. 474..... 89
- Gile v. Libby, 36 Barb. 77..... 472, 473, 474
- Gillett v. Eaton, 6 Wis. 30..... 322, 324
- v. Johnson, 30 Conn. 180..... 273
- 64 L. R. A.
- Gillis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 61 Vt. 461, 4 L. R. A. 611, 15 Am. St. Rep. 917, 17 Atl. 736..... 550
- Gillman v. Deerfield, 15 Gray, 577..... 295
- Gilmore v. Driscoll, 122 Mass. 199, 23 Am. Dec. 312..... 273
- v. Lewis, 12 Ohio, 281..... 784
- Girard v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 53..... 343
- Godbout v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 79 Minn. 188, 47 L. R. A. 532, 81 N. W. 835..... 821
- Gooch v. McGee, 83 N. C. 59, 35 Am. Rep. 558..... 505
- Goodlett v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 122 U. S. 391, 30 L. ed. 1230, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1254..... 148
- Goodman v. Winter, 64 Ala. 410, 38 Am. Rep. 13..... 343
- Goodridge v. Rogers, 22 Pick. 495..... 732
- Goodtitle ex dem. Chester v. Alker, 1 Burr. 143, 1 Ld. Kenyon, 427..... 838
- Pollard v. Kibbe, 1 Ala. 403, 9 How. 471, 13 L. ed. 220, 342..... 343
- Goodwin v. Bodcaw Lumber Co. 109 Ia. 1050, 34 So. 74..... 227
- Gordon v. Baltimore, 5 Gill, 241..... 644
- v. Bodwell, 59 Kan. 51, 68 Am. St. Rep. 341, 51 Pac. 906..... 322
- v. Preston, 1 Watts, 385, 26 Am. Dec. 75..... 474
- Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 124 N. C. 328, 46 L. R. A. 513, 70 Am. St. Rep. 598, 32 S. E. 720..... 235
- Goshen Nat. Bank v. State, 141 N. Y. 379, 36 N. E. 316..... 790
- Gough v. Pratt, 9 Md. 526..... 956, 957, 958
- Gould v. Boston Duck Co. 13 Gray, 442..... 274
- v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 641, 52 Am. St. Rep. 201, 44 Pac. 319, 243, 252, 253..... 257
- Gowen v. Harley, 6 C. C. A. 190, 12 U. S. App. 754, 36 Fed. 973..... 158
- Gramlich v. Wurst, 86 Pa. 74, 27 Am. Rep. 684..... 545
- Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar, L. R. 6 Ch. 483..... 246
- Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 91 U. S. 454, 23 L. ed. 356..... 84
- Grant v. Bennett, 96 Ill. 513..... 773
- v. Raymond, 6 Pet. 218, 3 L. ed. 376..... 706
- Grattot v. Missouri P. R. Co. 116 Mo. 450, 16 L. R. A. 189, 21 S. W. 1094..... 348
- Grattan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 24 Hun, 43..... 842
- Graves v. Battle Creek, 95 Mich. 266, 19 L. R. A. 641, 35 Am. St. Rep. 561, 54 N. W. 757..... 496
- v. Shattuck, 35 N. H. 257, 69 Am. Dec. 536..... 629
- Green v. Hedenberg, 159 Ill. 489, 50 Am. St. Rep. 178, 42 N. E. 851..... 769
- v. Lister, 8 (ranch, 249, 3 L. ed. 552..... 249
- Greencastle v. Hazelett, 23 Ind. 189..... 257
- Greene, Re, 52 Fed. 104..... 695, 697
- v. Nunnemacher, 36 Wis. 50..... 271
- Greenleaf v. Francis, 18 Pick. 119..... 258
- Gregory v. Morris, 96 U. S. 619, 24 L. ed. 740..... 221
- v. Wendell, 40 Mich. 432..... 177
- Grethen v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 22 Fed. 609..... 441
- Grice, Re, 79 Fed. 627..... 695, 697
- Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603, 58 Am. Dec. 85..... 477, 478
- Griffiths v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 171 N. Y. 108, 63 N. E. 808..... 841, 844
- Griffiths Case. See GRIFFITHS v. METROPOLITAN STREET R. CO.
- Grissom v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 87 Tenn. 350, 3 L. R. A. 273, 10 Am. St. Rep. 669, 10 S. W. 774..... 446
- Grissold v. Webb, 16 R. I. 649, 7 L. R. A. 302, 19 Atl. 143..... 821
- Grizewood v. Blane, 11 C. B. 528..... 178
- Grocer's Bank v. Penfield, 69 N. Y. 502, 25 Am. Rep. 231..... 571
- Grossman v. Supreme Lodge, K. & L. of H. 25 N. Y. S. R. 843, 6 N. Y. Supp. 821..... 842
- Gudger v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 106 N. C. 481, 11 S. E. 515..... 395

Gue v. Tide Water Canal Co.	24 How.	257,
16 L. ed.	635		505
Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Butcher,	83 Tex.		497
309, 18 S. W. 583.
v. Ellis,	165 U. S.	150, 41 L. ed.	327
686, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep.	255.
v. Hayter,	93 Tex.	239, 47 L. R. A.
325, 77 Am. St. Rep.	856,	54	549
S. W. 944.
v. Norfleet,	78 Tex.	321, 14 S.	497
W. 703
Gulf Coast Ice & Mfg. Co. v. Bowers,	80		807
Miss. 581, 32 So. 114.
Gunther v. Lee,	45 Md.	60, 24 Am. Rep.	579
504
Gurney v. Minneapolis Union Elevator Co.	63 Minn.	70, 80 L. R. A. 534,	395
65 N. W. 136.
Guthrie v. Swan,	5 Okla.	779, 51 Pac.	454
562
H.
Hackett v. Hackett,	18 R. I.	155, 19 L. R.
A. 558, 49 Am. St. Rep.	762,		182
26 Atl. 42
Hagan v. Campbell,	8 Port. (Ala.)	25, 88	342
Am. Dec. 267.
Hague v. Wheeler,	157 Pa.	324, 22 L. R.	259
A. 141, 37 Am. St. Rep.	736, 27
Atl. 714
Halle v. Texas & P. R. Co.	23 L. R. A.	774,	549
9 C. C. A. 134, 23 U. S. App.
80, 60 Fed. 557.
Haldeman v. Bruckhart,	45 Pa.	514, 84	257
Am. Dec. 511
Hale v. McLea,	53 Cal.	578.	257
Hall v. Concordia F. Ins. Co.	90 Mich.		456
403, 51 N. W. 524.
v. De Cuir,	95 U. S.	485, 24 L. ed.	509
547
Halsey v. Stewart,	4 N. J. L.	367.	536
Hamblett v. Hamblett,	6 N. H.	333.	290
Hamilton v. Boston,	14 Allen,	475.	72
v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co.			413
116 Fed. 92
Hamilton Co. v. Massachusetts,	6 Wall.		921
632, 18 L. ed. 904.
Hanchett v. Blair,	41 C. C. A.	76, 100	799
Fed. 817
Hancock v. McAvoy,	151 Pa.	460, 18 L. R.	100
A. 781, 31 Am. St. Rep.	774,
25 Atl. 47
Hanson v. McCue,	42 Cal.	303, 10 Am.	256
Rep. 299.		243, 251, 252.
Hardcastle v. Maryland & D. R. Co.	32		112
Md. 35
Hardin v. Jordan,	140 U. S.	371, 35 L. ed.	343
428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep.	808.		72
Hardy v. Keene,	52 N. H.	370.
Harmon v. Donohoe,	153 Mo.	263, 54 S.	974
W. 453
Harrington v. Kansas City Cable R. Co.	80		678
Mo. App. 223.
Harris v. Harrison,	93 Cal.	676, 29 Pac.	249
325
v. State,	96 Tenn.	496, 34 S. W.	421
1017
v. Stevens,	31 Vt.	79, 73 Am. Dec.	815
337
v. White,	81 N. Y.	539	176
Harrison v. Collins,	86 Pa.	153, 27 Am.	541
Rep. 699
v. Sterry,	5 Cranch,	289, 3 L. ed.	508
104
Hart v. New Orleans & C. R. Co.	4 La.		225
Ann. 262
v. Western R. Corp.	13 Met.	99, 46	83
Am. Dec. 719
Hartfeld v. Roper,	21 Wend.	615, 34 Am.	439
Dec. 278
Hartford L. Ins. Co. v. Stalling (Tenn.)			452
72 S. W. 960.
Hartzall v. Still,	12 Pa.	248.	275
Harvey v. Merrill,	150 Mass.	1, 5 L. R.
A. 200, 15 Am. St. Rep.	159, 22
N. E. 49
v. Skipworth,	16 Gratt.	393.	176
Haskins v. Haskins,	9 Gray,	390.	273
Hassan v. Doe,	38 Me.	45.	784
Hasty v. Sears,	157 Mass.	123, 34 Am. St.
Rep. 267, 31 N. E. 759.			116
Hatch v. Douglass,	48 Conn.	116, 40 Am.	177
Rep. 154
v. Mann,	15 Wend.	44.	784
64 L. R. A.

Hatch v. Mutual L. Ins. Co.	120 Mass.	350,	671
Hathaway v. Davis,	33 Cal.	161.	130
Haupt's Appeal,	125 Pa.	211, 3 L. R. A.
536, 17 Atl. 436			275
Hauselt v. Harrison,	105 U. S.	401, 26 L.
ed. 1075			221
Havens v. Sackett,	15 N. Y.	365.	290
Hawkins v. Ross,	100 Ala.	463, 14 So.	343
278
Hayden v. Souger,	26 Am. Rep.	1, and note, pp. 5-10, 56 Ind.	42.		785
Haymaker v. Adams,	61 Mo. App.	581.	974
Haynes v. Doman (1899)	2 Ch. Div.	24.	302
v. Raleigh Gas Co.	114 N. C.	203,
26 L. R. A. 810, 41 Am. St.			104
Rep. 786, 19 S. E. 344.			599
Hays v. Hathorn,	74 N. Y.	486.
Hazeltine v. Case,	46 Wis.	391, 32 Am.	275
Rep. 715, 1 N. W. 66.
Hazelton Boller Co. v. Hazelton Tripod
Boller Co.	142 Ill.	494, 30 N.	771
E. 339
Heald v. Polk County,	46 Neb.	28, 64 N.	134
W. 376
Healey, Re.	53 Vt.	694, 38 Am. Rep.	536
v. Mutual Accl. Asso.	133 Ill.	556, 9
L. R. A. 371, 23 Am. St. Rep.			352
637, 25 N. E. 52.
Hedden v. Griffin,	136 Mass.	229, 49 Am.	939
Rep. 25
Hedding v. Gallagher,	69 N. H.	650, 76	816
Am. St. Rep. 204, 45 Atl. 96.
Heilbron v. Fowler Switch Canal Co.	75
Cal. 426, 7 Am. St. Rep.	183, 17		273
Pac. 535.			478
Heldt v. Webster,	60 Tex.	207.
Henderson v. Gibbs,	39 Kan.	680, 18 Pac.	571
926			322
Hennessy v. Farrell,	20 Wis.	42.
Henry Gaus & Sons Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis,
K. & N. W. R. Co.	113 Mo.	315,
18 L. R. A. 339, 35 Am. St.			963
Rep. 706, 20 S. W. 658.			432
Herbert v. Ashburner,	1 Wils.	297.
v. Wren,	7 Cranch,	370, 3 L. ed.	289
374
Hermany v. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso.	151		454
Pa. 17, 24 Atl. 1064.
Hernando v. Sawtell,	L. R. 27 Ch. Div.
284, 53 L. J. Ch. N. S. 865,
51 L. T. N. S. 117, 33 Week.			865
Rep. 252
Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive
Works,	93 U. S.	664, 23 L. ed.	508
1003
Hess v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co.	7 Pa.		93
Co. Ct. 565
Hetrich v. Deachler,	6 Pa.	32.	275
Hewlett v. George,	68 Miss.	703, 13 L. B.
A. 682, 9 So. 885.			991
Hexamer v. Webb,	101 N. Y.	377, 54 Am.	541
Rep. 703, 4 N. E. 755.			249
Heywood v. Shreve,	44 N. J. L.	96.
Hill v. Kimball,	76 Tex.	210, 76 L. R. A.	549
618, 13 S. W. 59.
v. Newman,	5 Cal.	446, 63 Am.	254
Dec. 140			550
v. Winsor,	118 Mass.	251.
Hilliard v. Richardson,	3 Gray,	349, 63	541
Am. Dec. 743.
Hinckley v. Aray,	27 Me.	362.	76
Hittinger v. Westford,	135 Mass.	258.	783
Hoagland v. Van Etten,	22 Neb.	681, 35
N. W. 869			585
Hobart v. Drogan,	10 Pet.	122, 9 L. ed.	198
368
Hobbs v. Brush Electric Co.	75 Mich.	550,	677
42 N. W. 965.
Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. Co.	124 U.
S. 698, 31 L. ed. 551, 8 Sup.			342, 343
Ct. Rep. 643.
Hodges v. Brett,	4 G. Greene,	345.	537
Hodgkinson v. Ennor,	4 Best & S.	229.	271
Hoffman, Re,	143 N. Y.	327, 38 N. E. 311.	779
v. Schoyer,	143 Ill.	598, 28 N. E.	754
823
Hoffman Case. See HOFFMAN v. SCHOVER.
Hogan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co.	164		454
Mass. 448, 41 N. E. 663.
v. Stopliet,	179 Ill.	150, 44 L. R. A.	784
809, 53 N. E. 604.			797
Hoggett v. Emerson,	8 Kan.	262.
Hoke v. Henderson,	15 N. C. (4 Dev. L.)		792
1, 25 Am. Dec.	677.

Holden v. Hardy, 189 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.	641, 642
v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 165 N. Y. 13, 58 N. E. 771.	844
Hollenbeck v. Missouri, P. R. Co. 141 Mo. 97, 38 S. W. 723, 41 S. W. 887.	974
Holley v. Missionary Society, 180 U. S. 284, 45 L. ed. 531, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395.	790
Hollingsworth v. Stone, 90 Ind. 244.	940
Hollister v. Shaw (1878) 46 Conn. 248.	864
Holloway v. Holloway, 86 Ga. 576, 11 L. R. A. 518, 22 Am. St. Rep. 484, 12 S. E. 943.	567
Holly v. Boston Gaslight Co. 8 Gray, 132, 69 Am. Dec. 233.	440
Holmberg v. Johnson, 45 Kan. 199, 25 Pac. 576.	315
Holt v. Rice, 54 N. H. loc. cit. 402, 20 Am. Rep. 188.	289
Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 33 L. ed. 1025, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593.	919, 921
v. Stone River Nat. Bank, 88 Tenn. 369, 12 S. W. 915.	452, 455
Hopkins v. O'Kane, 169 Pa. 478, 32 Atl. 421.	178
v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 592, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.	695, 696, 699
Horan v. Byrnes (N. H.), 62 L. R. A. 602, 54 Atl. 945.	818
Horne v. Hutchins, 72 N. H. 214, 55 Atl. 364.	299
Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.	919, 921
Hornthal v. Burwell, 109 N. C. 10, 13 L. R. A. 740, 28 Am. St. Rep. 556, 13 S. E. 721.	508
Hougan v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 35 Iowa, 558, 14 Am. Rep. 502.	256
Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213, 25 L. ed. 612.	154
Houghtaling v. Ball, 20 Mo. 563.	125
Howard v. Howard, 87 Ky. 616, 1 L. R. A. 610, 9 S. W. 411.	525
Howard County v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 130 Mo. 652, 32 S. W. 651.	968
Howell v. Leavitt, 95 N. Y. 617.	324
Howland v. Oakland Consol. Street R. Co. 110 Cal. 513, 42 Pac. 983.	976
Howmson v. Trenton Water Co. 119 Mo. 304, 23 L. R. A. 146, 41 Am. St. Rep. 654, 24 S. W. 784.	235
Hoyt v. American Exch. Bank, 1 Duer, 652.	433
Hubbard v. St. Louis & M. River R. Co. 173 Mo. 249, 72 S. W. 1073.	579
Huber v. Merkel, 117 Wis. 355, 62 L. R. A. 589, 94 N. W. 354, 256, 257.	258, 259
Huff v. Ford, 126 Mass. 24, 30 Am. Rep. 645.	117
Huffman v. San Joaquin County, 21 Cal. 426.	236
Hufford v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. 64 Mich. 631, 8 Am. St. Rep. 859, 31 N. W. 544.	285
Hughes v. Abston, 105 Tenn. 70, 58 S. W. 296.	362, 364
v. City Hall Bank, 61 Ohio St. 386, 55 N. E. 1001.	847
Hunt v. Jones, 12 R. I. 265, 34 Am. Rep. 635.	172
Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.	733
v. Emery, 74 Md. 70, 21 Atl. 495.	957
Hurd v. McClellan, 14 Colo. 213, 23 Pac. 792.	130
Hursen v. Gavin, 162 Ill. 377, 44 N. E. 735.	772
Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 546, 30 L. ed. 489, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313.	341
Huston v. Leach, 53 Cal. 262.	251
Hutchins v. Priestley Express Wagon & Sleigh Co. 61 Mich. 252, 28 N. W. 85.	294
Hutchinson v. Manhattan Co. 9 Misc. 343, 29 N. Y. Supp. 1103.	788
Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 258.	474
Hyde v. Baldwin, 17 Pick. 303.	289, 290
64 L. R. A.
I.
Illinois C. R. Co. v. Carter, 165 Ill. 570, 36 L. R. A. 527, 46 N. E. 374.	446, 447, 395
v. Wathen, 17 Ill. App. 582.	374
Illinois Conference Female College v. Cooper, 23 Ill. 148.	374
Illinois Health University v. People, 166 Ill. 171, 46 N. E. 737.	376
Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 271.	636
Imperial Gas Co. v. Clarke, 7 Bing. 95, 4 Moore & P. 727, 9 L. J. C. P. 28.	433
Indianapolis Union Co. v. Dohn, 153 Ind. 10, 45 L. R. A. 427, 74 Am. St. Rep. 274, 53 N. E. 937.	819
International & G. N. R. Co. v. Underwood, 64 Tex. 463.	497
Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 184 Ill. 438, 48 L. R. A. 568, 75 Am. St. Rep. 184, 56 N. E. 822.	264
Investment Securities Co. v. Berghold, 60 Kan. 813, 58 Pac. 469.	797
Iowa L. Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 187 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 204, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126.	457
Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & Smelting Co. 118 U. S. 196, 30 L. ed. 98, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1177.	932
Irvine v. Milbank, 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. 378.	579
Irwin v. Willmar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. ed. 225, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160.	177, 178, 448
J.
Jackson v. Mumford, 74 Tex. 104, 11 S. W. 1061.	477
v. Stanfield, 137 Ind. 592, 23 L. R. A. 588, 36 N. E. 345, 37 N. E. 14.	265
Jacob v. State, 3 Humph. 493.	464
Jacobus v. Congregation of Children of Israel, 107 Ga. 518, 73 Am. St. Rep. 141, 33 S. E. 853.	100
James v. Kansas, 83 Mo. 567.	969
Jameson v. Wallace, 167 Ill. 388, 59 Am. St. Rep. 802, 47 N. E. 762.	178
Jefferson County Sav. Bank v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 98 Tenn. 337, 39 S. W. 388.	446, 447
Jencks v. Coleman, 2 Sumn. 221 (Fed. Cas. No. 7,258).	819
Jenkins v. Kelren, 12 Gray, 330, 74 Am. Dec. 596.	785
Jestons v. Brooke, 2 Cowp. 793.	940
John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Assn. 175 N. Y. 1, 62 L. R. A. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578, 67 N. E. 136.	706, 713, 718, 719
John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 181 U. S. 73, 45 L. ed. 955, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535.	457
Johnson v. Culver, 116 Ind. 278, 19 N. E. 129.	942
v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 163 Pa. 127, 29 Atl. 854.	413
v. State, 47 Miss. 674.	809
Johnston v. Marinus, 18 Abb. N. C. 75.	181
Jolly v. Hawesville, 89 Ky. 279, 12 S. W. 813.	573
Jones v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 128 U. S. 443, 32 L. ed. 478, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118.	148, 152
v. Finch, 84 Va. 204, 4 S. E. 342.	478
v. Gibbons, 9 Ves. Jr. 407, 7 Revised Rep. 247.	462
v. Lloyd, L. R. 18 Eq. 265, 43 L. J. Ch. N. S. 826, 30 L. T. N. S. 487, 22 Week. Rep. 785.	520
v. New American File Co. 21 R. I. 125, 42 Atl. 509.	157
v. Pope, 1 Saund. 38.	736
v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 101 Tenn. 443, 47 S. W. 699.	451
Joseph v. First Nat. Bank, 17 Kan. 256.	315
J. Russell Mfg. Co. v. New Haven S. B. Co. 50 N. Y. 121.	449
Judges of Court of Appeals, 4 Call. (Va.) 135, 150.	832

K.

Kadish v. Garden City Equitable Loan & Bldg. Assn.	151 Ill. 531; 42 Am. St. Rep. 256, 38 N. E. 236	405
Kahnweiler v. Phoenix Ins. Co.	57 Fed. 502	456
Kalamazoo Hack & Bus Co. v. Sootsma	84 Mich. 194, 10 L. R. A. 819, 22 Am. St. Rep. 693, 47 N. W. 667	819
Kane v. New York Elev. R. Co.	125 N. Y. 175, 11 L. R. A. 640, 26 N. E. 278	967
v. Northern C. R. Co.	128 U. S. 91, 32 L. ed. 339, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16	152
Kane Case. See KANE v. NEW YORK ELEV. R. CO.
Kansas City v. Marsh Oil Co.	140 Mo. 458, 41 S. W. 943	681
Kansas City, F. & M. R. Co. v. Perry	65 Kan. 792, 70 Pac. 878	84
Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Riley	68 Miss. 765, 13 L. R. A. 38, 24 Am. St. Rep. 309, 9 So. 443	286
Kasten v. Interstate Casualty Co.	99 Wis. 73, 40 L. R. A. 651, 74 N. W. 534	351
Kates v. Atlanta Baggage & Cab Co.	107 Ga. 638, 46 L. R. A. 431, 34 S. E. 872	821
Kay v. Pennsylvania R. Co.	65 Pa. 276, 3 Am. Rep. 628	441
Keenan v. Cavanaugh	44 Vt. 268	550
Keeney & W. Mfg. Co. v. Union Mfg. Co.	39 Conn. 577	274
Kelm v. United States	177 U. S. 290, 44 ed. 774, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574	948
Kelley v. Silver Spring Bleaching & Dyeing Co.	12 R. I. 112, 34 Am. Rep. 615	157
Kelly v. Durham Traction Co.	132 N. C. 368, 43 S. E. 923	687
v. Natoma Water Co.	6 Cal. 108	254
Kelso v. Norton	65 Kan. 778, 93 Am. St. Rep. 308, 70 Pac. 896	322
Kemble v. Lull	3 McLean, 272, Fed. Cas. No. 7,683	394
Kenton Ins. Co. v. Downs	90 Ky. 236, 13 S. W. 882	456
Kidd v. Pearson	128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6	643
Kimball Carriage Co. v. Manchester	67 N. H. 483, 39 Atl. 334	44
King v. Allgood	7 T. R. 746, 4 Revised Rep. 574	432
v. Babb	3 T. R. 582	431
v. Dawes	1 W. Bl. 634	383
v. Hamill	97 Md. 103, 34 Atl. 625	629
v. Interstate Consol. Street R. Co.	23 R. I. 583, 51 Atl. 301	157
v. Lucas	10 East, 235, 10 Revised Rep. 283	432
v. Merchant Tailors' Co.	2 Barn. & Ad. 115, 9 L. J. K. B. 146	433
v. New York C. & H. R. Co.	66 N. Y. 181, 23 Am. Rep. 37	540
v. Shelley	3 T. R. 141, 1 Revised Rep. 673	432
v. Tower	4 Maule & S. 162, 16 Revised Rep. 423	432
Kinney v. Dodge	101 Ind. 673	940
Kirkman v. Phillips	7 Helsk. 222	733
Kitchen v. State	26 Tex. App. 165, 9 S. W. 461	477
Kling v. Fries	33 Mich. 275	124
Klix v. Nieman	68 Wis. 271, 60 Am. Rep. 854, 32 N. W. 223	188
Knappman Whiting Co. v. Middlesex Water Co.	64 N. J. L. 240, 49 L. R. A. 572, 45 Atl. 692	235
Knapp, Stout & Co. v. St. Louis, Transfer R. Co.	126 Mo. 35, 28 S. W. 627	963, 964, 966
Koons v. St. Louis & I. M. E. Co.	65 Mo. 592	440
Krapp v. Eldridge	33 Kan. 106, 5 Pac. 372	588, 604
Kretzschmar v. Meehan	74 Minn. 211, 77 N. W. 41	988
Krulevitz v. Eastern R. Co.	140 Mass. 573, 5 N. E. 300	687
64 L. R. A.

L.

Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co.	31 Mo. 187	963, 966
Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French	18 How. 404, 15 L. ed. 451	797
Lafond v. Deems	81 N. Y. 508	390
Lafr v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co.	104 N. Y. 258, 10 N. E. 528	965, 967
Lake View v. Le Bahn	120 Ill. 92, 9 N. E. 269	89
Lally v. Holland	1 Swan, 401	362, 363
Lamar Canal Co. v. Amity Land & Irrig. Co.	26 Colo. 370, 77 Am. St. Rep. 261, 58 Pac. 600	212
Lamm v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co.	45 Minn. 78, 10 L. R. A. 268, 47 N. W. 455	968
Lamont & Co. v. Nashville & C. R. Co.	9 Heisk. 66	447
Land Grant R. & Trust Co. v. Coffey County	6 Kan. 245	797
Landridge v. Levy	4 Mees. & W. 337	934
Lane v. National Bank	6 Kan. 74	797
v. Spokane Falls & N. R. Co.	21 Wash. 119, 46 L. R. A. 153, 75 Am. St. Rep. 821, 57 Pac. 367	496
Langdon v. New York	93 N. Y. 129	279, 342
Lannen v. Albany Gaslight Co.	46 Barb. 264, 44 N. Y. 459	441, 442
Larned v. Dubuque	86 Iowa, 166, 53 N. W. 105	78
Larson v. Aultman & T. Co.	86 Wis. 281, 39 Am. St. Rep. 893, 56 N. W. 915	709
v. Chase	47 Minn. 307, 14 L. R. A. 85, 28 Am. St. Rep. 370, 50 N. W. 238	181, 551
v. Fidelity Mut. Life Assn.	71 Minn. 101, 73 N. W. 711	687
Lasala v. Helbrook	4 Paige, 169, 25 Am. Dec. 524	278, 279
Lashmett v. Prall (Neb.)	98 N. W. 152	570
Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co.	9 C. C. A. 613, 15 U. S. App. 456, 61 Fed. 557, 157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733	928
Lawler v. Hartford Street R. Co.	72 Conn. 74, 43 Atl. 545	348
Lawrence v. Allen	7 How. 796, 12 L. ed. 918	648
v. Mutual L. Ins. Co.	5 Ill. App. 282	669
Lawton v. Steele	152 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 389, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501	144
Leavitt v. Bangor & A. R. Co.	59 Me. 509, 36 L. R. A. 382, 36 Atl. 998	541, 560
Lee v. His Creditors	2 La. Ann. 804
v. Simpson	134 U. S. 672, 33 L. ed. 1038, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631	863
Leeds v. Richmond	102 Ind. 372, 1 N. E. 711	550
Lees v. Colgan	120 Cal. 262, 40 L. R. A. 355, 52 Pac. 502	784
Lehman v. Clark	174 Ill. 279, 43 L. R. A. 648, 51 N. E. 222	159
v. Marshall	47 Ala. 362	448
v. Strassberger	2 Woods, 554, Fed. Cas. No. 8,216	177
Leinkauf v. Calman	110 N. Y. 50, 17 N. E. 359	462
Lempriere v. Vailly	5 Sim. 108	860
Le Prince v. Guillemot	1 Rich. Eq. 213	360
Leroux v. Brown	12 C. B. 801	125, 172
Leslie v. Grand Rapids	120 Mich. 28, 75 N. W. 885	71
Letherby v. Shaver	73 Mich. 500, 41 N. W. 677	536
Leuckhart v. Cooper	3 Bing. N. C. 99, 8 Scott, 521, 6 L. J. C. P. N. S. 131	448
Levinson, Re	108 Cal. 450, 41 Pac. 483, 42 Pac. 479	560
Leviston v. Swan	33 Cal. 480	559
Lewis v. Albertson	152 Ind. 693, 49 N. E. 34	783
v. Hamilton	26 Colo. 263, 58 Pac. 196	324
v. Terry	111 Cal. 39, 31 L. R. A. 220, 52 Am. St. Rep. 146, 43 Pac. 398	934
Lewiston Steam Mill Co. v. Androscoggin Water Power Co.	78 Me. 274, 4 Atl. 555	313

License Cases, 5 How. 583, 12 L. ed. 256..	642	M.
Light v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 105 Tenn. 480, 58 S. W. 851.....	453	McAden v. Jenkins, 64 N. C. 801.....	142
Liming v. Illinois C. R. Co. 81 Iowa, 246, 47 N. W. 66.....	544	McCallum v. Driggs, 35 Fla. 277, 17 So. 407.....	602
Lindsley v. Coats, 1 Ohio, 243.....	249	McCarthy v. Catholic Knights, 102 Tenn. 345, 52 S. W. 142.....	455
Line v. Nelson, 38 N. J. L. 358.....	579	Macauley Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L. R. A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1.....	718
Linnahan, Re, 72 Cal. 114, 13 Pac. 170.....	683	McClory v. Ricks, 11 N. D. 38, 88 N. W. 1042.....	324
Linn v. Sizsbee, 67 Ill. 75.....	302	McConnell v. Lemley, 48 La. Ann. 1438, 34 L. R. A. 600, 55 Am. St. Rep. 319, 20 So. 887.....	225
Linnahan v. Rollins, 137 Mass. 123, 50 Am. Rep. 287.....	116	v. Pedigo, 92 Ky. 465, 18 S. W. 15.....	820
v. Sampson, 126 Mass. 506, 30 Am. Rep. 692.....	544	McCormick v. Interstate Consol. Rapid Transit R. Co. 154 Mo. 191, 55 S. W. 252.....	289
Linney v. Thompson, 3 Kan. App. 718, 45 Pac. 456.....	605	v. St. Louis, 166 Mo. loc. cit. 345, 65 S. W. 1038.....	289
Littler v. Smiley, 9 Ind. 116.....	942	McCrillis v. Hawes, 38 Me. 568.....	579
Littleton v. Richardson, 32 N. H. 59.....	71	McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579.....	386
Locey Coal Mines v. Chicago, W. & V. Coal Co. 131 Ill. 9, 8 L. R. A. 598, 22 N. E. 503.....	388	McCulsky v. Klosterman, 20 Or. 108, 10 L. R. A. 785, 25 Pac. 366.....	447
Lockwood v. Wabash R. Co. 122 Mo. 86, 24 L. R. A. 516, 43 Am. St. Rep. 547, 26 S. W. 698.....	964	McDonald v. Bear River & A. Water & Min. Co. 13 Cal. 233.....	254
Loewer v. Sedalla, 77 Mo. 431.....	294	v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 1440, 17 S. 873.....	225
Logansport v. Shirk, 38 Ind. 563.....	89	v. Ross-Lewin, 20 Ill. 87.....	159
London & S. F. Bank v. Block, 117 Fed. 900.....	923	McDuffee v. Portland & R. R. Co. 52 N. H. 430, 13 Am. Rep. 72.....	816
London Assur. Co. v. Sainsbury, 3 Dougl. K. B. 245.....	83	McElroy v. Continental Ins. Co. 48 Kan. 209, 29 Pac. 478.....	81
Longworth v. Johnson, 66 Kan. 193, 71 Pac. 259.....	325	McEntee v. Bonacum (Neb.) 60 L. R. A. 440, 92 N. W. 633.....	181
Lord v. Goldberg, 81 Cal. 596, 15 Am. St. Rep. 82, 22 Pac. 1126.....	678	McGarry v. Loomis, 63 N. Y. 104, 20 Am. Rep. 510.....	442
Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585.....	243, 247, 252	McGee v. Baumgartner, 121 Mich. 287, 80 N. W. 21.....	793
Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. 44, loc. cit. 52, 19 L. ed. 65.....	297	McGlothier v. Provident Mut. Accd. Co. 32 C. C. A. 318, 60 U. S. App. 705, 89 Fed. 685.....	351
Louisville & C. Packet Co. v. Mulligan (Ky.) 77 S. W. 704.....	578	McGraw v. Marlon, 98 Ky. 673, 47 L. R. A. 593, 34 S. W. 18.....	573
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.....	509	McGuire v. Byrnes, 50 Hun, 203, 2 N. Y. Supp. 760.....	948
v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95.....	509	McKay v. Lasher, 121 N. Y. 477, 24 N. E. 711.....	313
v. Offutt, 99 Ky. 427, 59 Am. St. Rep. 467, 36 S. W. 181.....	678	McKee v. Manice, 11 Cush. 857.....	956
v. Wynn, 88 Tenn. 320, 14 S. W. 311.....	450	McLellan v. Young, 54 Ga. 399, 21 Am. Rep. 276.....	784
Louisville, C. & L. R. Co. v. Case, 9 Bush, 728.....	578	McLeod v. Bishop, 110 Ala. 640, 20 So. 130.....	343
Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Boney, 117 Ind. 501, 3 L. R. A. 435, 20 N. E. 432.....	506	McMasters v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 69 Pa. 374, 8 Am. Rep. 264.....	446
Louisville R. Co. v. Hartiege, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 152, 74 S. W. 742.....	94	McMillan v. Harris, 110 Ga. 72, 48 L. R. A. 345, 78 Am. St. Rep. 93, 35 S. E. 334.....	192
Louisville, St. L. & T. R. Co. v. Liebfried, 92 Ky. 407, 17 S. W. 870.....	839	McMilla v. Corn Belt Bank, 164 Ill. 427, 56 Am. St. Rep. 203, 45 N. E. 954.....	405
Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Com. 106 Ky. 165, 57 L. R. A. 83, 49 S. W. 1069.....	921	McMullen v. Dickinson Co. 63 Minn. 405, 65 N. W. 601.....	679
Louthan v. Hewes, 138 Cal. 116, 70 Pac. 1065.....	541	McNeeley, Ex parte, 36 W. Va. 84, 15 L. R. A. 226, 32 Am. St. Rep. 831, 14 S. E. 436.....	810
Love v. Blauw, 61 Kan. 496, 48 L. R. A. 257, 78 Am. St. Rep. 334, 59 Pac. 1059.....	566	Macomber v. Scott, 10 Kan. 335.....	315
v. Harvey, 114 Mass. 80.....	956	Macon & A. R. Co. v. Mayes, 49 Ga. 355, 15 Am. Rep. 678.....	225
Lovejoy v. Murray, 3 Wall. 17, 18 L. ed. 184.....	580	McPeck v. Western U. Tele. Co. 107 Iowa, 362, 43 L. R. A. 214, 70 Am. St. Rep. 205, 78 N. W. 63.....	550
Lovell v. Knight (1829) 3 Sim. 275, 1 L. J. Ch. N. S. 47.....	860	McPherson v. Weston, 64 Cal. 275, 80 Pac. 842.....	602
Lowe v. Howard County, 94 Ind. 553.....	784	McQuigan v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 129 N. Y. 50, 14 L. R. A. 466, 26 Am. St. Rep. 507, 29 N. E. 235.....	497
Lowenberg v. Greenebaum, 99 Cal. 162, 21 L. R. A. 399, 37 Am. St. Rep. 42, 33 Pac. 794.....	924	Madison Ave. Baptist Church v. Baptist Church, 73 N. Y. 82.....	322
Lowry v. Bourdieu, 2 Dougl. K. B. 468, 14 English Ruling Cases, 533.....	938	Madison, W. & M. Pl. Road Co. v. Water- town & P. Pl. Road Co. 5 Wis. 173.....	385
v. Plitt, 16 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 155.....	181	Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168.....	282
v. Tile, Mantel & Grate Asso. 98 Fed. 817, 106 Fed. 40.....	697	Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.....	282
Loyd v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 53 Mo. 515.....	496	Mahoney v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co. 63 Me. 68.....	225
Lybe's Appeal, 106 Pa. 626, 51 Am. Rep. 542.....	256
Lyde v. Eastern Bengal R. Co. 36 Beav. 10.....	390
Lyndon Mill Co. v. Lyndon Literary & Bib- lical Inst. 63 Vt. 581, 25 Am. St. Rep. 783, 22 Atl. 575.....	676
Lyon v. Logan, 68 Tex. 525, 2 Am. St. Rep. 511, 5 S. W. 72.....	350
Lyons v. Coc, 177 Mass. 382, 59 N. E. 59.....	174
64 L. R. A.

- Mahoney v. Dore, 155 Mass. 513, 30 N. E. 386 157
 Maine v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 109 Iowa, 260, 70 N. W. 630, 80 N. W. 315 412
 Maitland v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 40 Md. 540, 17 Am. Rep. 620 571
 Mall v. Lord, 39 N. Y. 381, 100 Am. Dec. 448 687
 Mallin v. Mallin, 2 Johns. Ch. 240 522
 Mallach v. Ridley, 43 Hun. 336 687
 Mallory v. Ferguson, 50 Kan. 685, 22 L. R. A. 99, 32 Pac. 410 134
 Maltby v. Chapman, 25 Md. 810 472, 473
 Manchester & L. R. Co. v. Concord R. Corp., 66 N. H. 100, 9 L. R. A. 689, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 319, 49 Am. St. Rep. 582, 20 Atl. 583 817
 Mann v. Second Nat. Bank, 30 Kan. 412, 1 Pac. 579 789
 Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60 329, 331, 333
 March v. Walker, 48 Tex. 372 479
 Marcus v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co. 68 N. Y. 625 462
 Marine Ins. Co. v. St. Louis I. M. & S. R. Co. 41 Fed. 643 83
 Market v. St. Louis, 56 Mo. 189 294
 Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523, 31 Am. Dec. 209 818, 819
 Marsh v. Chickering, 101 N. Y. 396, 5 N. E. 57 157
 Marshall v. Bullard, 114 Iowa. 462, 54 L. R. A. 862, 87 N. W. 427 76
 Martin v. Courtney, 87 Minn. 187, 91 N. W. 487 127
 v. Courtney, 75 Minn. 255, 77 N. W. 813 128
 v. Kansas National Bank, 66 Kan. 655, 72 Pac. 218 787
 v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 410, 10 L. ed. 1012 342
 Maryland Steel Co. v. Marney, 88 Md. 482, 42 L. R. A. 842, 71 Am. St. Rep. 441, 42 Atl. 60 544
 Mason v. Hill, 3 Barn. & Ad. 306, 5 Barn. & Ad. 1 269, 270, 274
 Matthews v. Chicopee Mfg. Co. 3 Robt. 712 579
 v. Missouri P. R. Co. 142 Mo. 645, 44 S. W. 802 974
 v. Tufts, 87 N. Y. 568 536
 Mattingly v. Grimes, 48 Md. 102 113
 Maus v. Broderick, 51 La. Ann. 1153, 25 So. 977 104
 Maxwell v. Collins, 8 Ind. 38 783
 May v. Sloan, 101 U. S. 231, 25 L. ed. 797 125
 Mayer v. Thompson-Hutchison Bldg. Co. 104 Ala. 611, 28 L. R. A. 433, 53 Am. St. Rep. 88, 16 So. 620 448
 Mays v. Jennings, 4 Humph. 106 448
 Meacham v. Galloway, 102 Tenn. 419, 46 L. R. A. 319, 73 Am. St. Rep. 886, 52 S. W. 859 474
 Meeker v. Breintnall (1884) 38 N. J. Eq. 345 864
 Megret, Re (1901) 1 Ch. 547, 70 L. J. Ch. N. S. 451, 84 L. T. N. S. 192 866
 Meibus v. Dodge, 38 Wis. 300, 20 Am. Rep. 6 189
 Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Holloway, 9 Baxt. 188 450
 Mendel v. Wheeling, 28 W. Va. 233, 57 Am. Rep. 065 234
 Mentzer v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 93 Iowa, 752, 28 L. R. A. 72, 57 Am. St. Rep. 294, 62 N. W. 1 548, 551
 Mentzer Case. See MENTZER v. WESTERN U. TELEG. CO.
 Merchants' Bank v. Curtiss, 37 Barb. 319 579
 Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co. v. Bloch Bros. 86 Tenn. 392, 6 Am. St. Rep. 847, 6 S. W. 881 450
 Merchants' Mfg. Co. v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 21 Blatchf. 109, 13 Fed. 358 799 Merrifield v. Lombard, 13 Allen, 16, 90 Am. Dec. 172 270
 v. Worcester, 110 Mass. 219, 14 Am. Rep. 592 272
 Merrill v. Claremont, 58 N. H. 468 71
 Merritt v. Brinkerhoff, 17 Johns. 306, 8 Am. Dec. 404 271, 275
 64 L. R. A.
- Mersey Docks v. Gibbs, L. R. 1, H. L. 93, 11 H. L. Cas. 686, 35 L. J. Exch. N. S. 225, 12 Jur. N. S. 571, 14 L. T. N. S. 677, 14 Week. Rep. 872 784
 Meskimen v. Day, 35 Kan. 46, 10 Pac. 14 325
 Messner v. Giddings, 65 Tex. 309 497
 Metallic Compression Casting Co. v. Fitchburg R. Co. 109 Mass. 277, 12 Am. Rep. 689 550
 Metcalf v. Nelson, 8 S. D. 87, 59 Am. St. Rep. 746, 65 N. W. 911 256
 Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. Bowser, 20 Ind. App. 557, 50 N. E. 86 940
 Meyers v. New York County Nat. Bank, 36 App. Div. 482, 55 N. Y. Supp. 504 789, 790
 Miami & M. Turnp. Co. v. Bally, 37 Ohio St. 104 496
 Michael v. Alestree, 2 Lev. 172 340
 Michigan C. R. Co. v. Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. 1 Ill. App. 399 507, 627
 Middlesex R. Co. v. Boston & C. R. Co. 115 Mass. 347 225 Miller v. Fidelity & C. Co. 97 Fed. 836 352
 v. Hogeboom, 56 Neb. 434, 76 N. W. 888 784
 v. State, 38 Ala. 604 343
 Miller's Appeal, 159 Pa. loc. cit. 575, 28 Atl. 441 280
 Mills v. Hoffman, 92 N. Y. 181 290
 v. Murry, 1 Neb. 327 585
 Milner v. Pensacola, 2 Woods, 632, Fed. Cas. No. 9,619 343
 Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Crawford County, 29 Wis. 116 395
 v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, loc. cit. 475, 24 L. ed. 256 297
 v. Milwaukee, 34 Wis. 271 295
 Minnesota Loan & T. Co. v. St. Anthony Falls Water-Power Co. 82 Minn. 505, 85 N. W. 520 988
 Minnesota Threshing Mfg. Co. v. Helper, 49 Minn. 395, 52 N. W. 33 600
 Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fagan, 72 Tex. 127, 2 L. R. A. 75, 13 Am. St. Rep. 776, 9 S. W. 749 448
 v. Johnson, 72 Tex. 95, 10 S. W. 325 497
 Mitchell v. Charleston Light & P. Co. 45 S. C. 146, 31 L. R. A. 577, 22 S. E. 787 105
 v. Huron Circuit Judge, 53 Mich. 541, 19 N. W. 176 536
 v. Raleigh Electric Co. 129 N. C. 166, 55 L. R. A. 398, 85 Am. St. Rep. 735, 39 S. E. 801 106
 v. Rochester R. Co. 151 N. Y. 107, 34 L. R. A. 781, 56 Am. St. Rep. 604, 45 N. E. 354 549
 Mobile v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 577, 33 Am. Dec. 325, 16 Pet. 240, 10 L. ed. 950 342, 343, 344
 v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. ed. 620, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398 343
 Mobile & K. C. R. Co. v. Owen, 121 Ala. 505, 25 So. 612 344
 Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598 262, 263, 264, 265
 Monroe County v. Wood, 39 Ind. 345 783
 Montana Min. Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. 42 C. C. A. 415, 102 Fed. 430 931
 Montana Union R. Co. v. Langlois, 9 Mont. 419, 8 L. R. A. 753, 18 Am. St. Rep. 745, 24 Pac. 209 819
 Monterey County v. McKee, 51 Cal. 255 130
 Monument Nat. Bank v. Globe Works, 101 Mass. 57, 3 Am. Rep. 322 404
 Moore, Re, 72 Cal. 335, 13 Pac. 880 560
 v. Parker, 13 S. C. 486 567
 v. Richmond, 85 Va. 545, 8 S. E. 387 294
 Moran v. Corliss Steam Engine Co. 21 R. I. 386, 45 L. R. A. 267, 43 Atl. 674 104
 v. Prather, 23 Wall. 492, 23 L. ed. 123 394
 More v. Bennett, 140 Ill. 69, 15 L. R. A. 361, 33 Am. St. Rep. 218, 29 N. E. 888 764
 Morgan v. Beaumont, 121 Mass. 7 956, 959
 v. King, 30 Barb. 16 248
 v. Sears, 159 Mass. 570, 35 N. E. 101 116

Morrell v. Ingle, 23 Kan. 32.....	797	New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 102, 9 L. ed. 648.....	641
v. Quarles, 35 Ala. 544.....	784	New York Bay Cemetery Co. v. Buckmaster, 49 N. J. L. 449, 9 Atl. 591.....	100
Morrill v. St. Anthony Falls Water-Power Co. 26 Minn. 222, 37 Am. Rep. 309, 2 N. W. 842.....	988	New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. Flynn, 74 Hun, 124, 26 N. Y. Supp. 859.....	821
Morris v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 94 Me. 423, 47 Atl. 926.....	178	v. Sheeley, 57 N. Y. S. R. 786, 27 N. Y. Supp. 185.....	821
Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co. 68 Pa. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 159.....	694	New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Winter, 143 U. S. 69, 36 L. ed. 78, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359.....	285
Morrison v. Erie R. Co. 56 N. Y. 302.....	441	New York L. Ins. Co. v. Flack, 3 Md. 341, 56 Am. Dec. 742.....	462
Mory v. Michael (1861) 18 Md. 227.....	864	v. Fletcher, 117 U. S. 519, 29 L. ed. 934, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.....	938
Moss v. Averell, 10 N. Y. 449.....	388	New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Bork, 23 R. I. 218, 49 Atl. 965.....	821
v. Rossie Lead Min. Co. 5 Hill, 187.....	388	v. Scovill, 71 Conn. 136, 42 L. R. A. 157, 71 Am. St. Rep. 159, 41 Atl. 246.....	821
Mott v. Cherryvale Water & Mfg. Co. 48 Kan. 12, 15 L. R. A. 375, 30 Am. St. Rep. 267, 28 Pac. 989.....	234	New York Rubber Co. v. Rothery, 132 N. Y. 293, 28 Am. St. Rep. 575, 30 N. E. 841.....	271
v. Danville Seminary, 129 Ill. 403, 21 N. E. 927.....	374	Nickerson v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. 46 Conn. 24, 33 Am. Rep. 1.....	234
Moulton v. Newburyport Water Co. 187 Mass. 163.....	273	Nordenfelt v. Maxim Nordenfelt Guns & Ammunition Co. (1894) A. C. 535.....	300
Mount v. Waite, 7 Johns. 434.....	955, 959	Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Old Dominion Baggage Co. 99 Va. 111, 50 L. R. A. 722, 37 S. E. 784.....	821
Mt. Rosa Min. Mill. & Land Co. v. Palmer, 26 Colo. 56, 50 L. R. A. 289, 77 Am. St. Rep. 245, 56 Pac. 176.....	211, 214	v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958.....	510
Mt. Rosa Case. See MT. ROSA MIN. MILL. & LAND CO. V. PALMER.		Norfolk County v. Cox, 98 Va. 270, 36 S. E. 380.....	570
Moyer v. Drummond, 32 S. C. 165, 7 L. R. A. 747, 17 Am. St. Rep. 850, 10 S. E. 952.....	567	Norris v. Haverhill, 65 N. H. 89, 18 Atl. 85.....	71
Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 625, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.....	642	v. Ile, 152 Ill. 190, 43 Am. St. Rep. 233, 38 N. E. 762.....
Mullen v. Sanborn, 25 L. R. A. 721.....	536, 537	North Chicago Rolling Mill Co. v. St. Louis Ore. & Steel Co. 152 U. S. 619, 38 L. ed. 573, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717.....	507
Mulligan v. New York & R. B. R. Co. 129 N. Y. 506, 14 L. R. A. 791, 26 Am. St. Rep. 539, 29 N. E. 952.....	687	Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 755, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590.....	152
Munns v. Dupont, 1 Am. Lead. Cas. (Hare & W.) 265.....	688	v. Peterson, 162 U. S. 353, 40 L. ed. 994, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 845, 148, 152 North Missouri R. Co. v. Akers, 4 Kan. 453, 96 Am. Dec. 183.....	798
Murchison v. Sergeant, 69 Ga. 207, 47 Am. Rep. 754.....	472, 474	North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Mahoney, 57 Pa. 187.....	441
Murdock v. Boston & A. R. Co. 137 Mass. 293, 50 Am. Rep. 307.....	285	Northside R. Co. v. Worthington, 88 Tex. 562, 53 Am. St. Rep. 778, 30 S. W. 1055.....	374
Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, 117 U. S. 591, 29 L. ed. 997, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877.....	462, 465, 468, 470, 671, 785	Northwestern Masonic Aid Assn. v. Jones, 154 Pa. 99, 35 Am. St. Rep. 810, 26 Atl. 253.....	411
N.		Norton v. Wiswall, 26 Barb. 618.....	225
Nagel v. Lindell R. Co. 167 Mo. 89, 66 S. W. 1090.....	968, 969	Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co. 4 El. & Bl. 397.....	389
Napa v. Howland, 87 Cal. 88, 25 Pac. 247.....	88	Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 984.....	83
Nash v. Russell, 5 Barb. 556.....	159	O.
Nashville & C. R. Co. v. David, 6 Helsk. 261, 19 Am. Rep. 594.....	447	Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239, 25 L. ed. 580.....	571
Nashville R. Co. v. Norman, 108 Tenp. 334, 67 S. W. 479.....	442	O'Brien v. La Crosse, 99 Wis. 421, 40 L. R. A. 831, 75 N. W. 81.....	94
National Bank v. Dakin, 54 Kan. 656, 45 Am. St. Rep. 299, 39 Pac. 180.....	570	O'Donnell v. Slack, 123 Cal. 285, 43 L. R. A. 388, 55 Pac. 906.....	181
v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 159.....	192	Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Stratton, 78 Ill. 88.....	440
National Enameling & Stamping Co. v. Haberman, 120 Fed. 415.....	300	Ohio Oil Co. v. State, 150 Ind. 698, 50 N. E. 1124, 177 U. S. 190, 44 L. ed. 729, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.....	259
Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. Jones, 59 Neb. 510, 81 N. W. 435.....	294, 295	O'Laughlin v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 3 McCrary, 543, 11 Fed. 280.....	81
Nellie v. Rogers Bros. Produce Co. 41 W. Va. 37, 23 S. E. 702.....	507	Old Colony R. Co. v. Tripp, 147 Mass. 85, 9 Am. St. Rep. 661, 17 N. E. 89.....	818, 820
Nelson v. Harrington, 72 Wis. 591, 1 L. R. A. 719, 7 Am. St. Rep. 900, 40 N. W. 228.....	550, 973	Old Colony R. Corp. v. Evans, 6 Gray, 25, 66 Am. Dec. 394.....	385
New England Exp. Co. v. Maine C. R. Co. 57 Me. 188, 2 Am. Rep. 31.....	820	Oleson v. Wilson, 20 Mont. 544, 68 Am. St. Rep. 639, 52 Pac. 372.....	130
New England F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 25 Ind. 541.....	385	Olive v. State, 86 Ala. 94, 4 L. R. A. 83, 5 So. 653.....	343
New England R. Co. v. Conroy, 175 U. S. 323, 44 L. ed. 181, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85.....	149, 152	v. Van Patten, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 630, 25 S. W. 428.....	265
Newman v. Tate, 1 Arnold, 244.....	499	Oliver v. La Valle, 36 Wis. 596.....	549
New Orleans v. Morris, 3 Woods, 115, Fed. Cas. No. 10,183.....	88	v. Nashville, 106 Tenn. 273, 61 S. W. 89.....	451
New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co. 18 C. C. A. 519, 30 U. S. App. 749, 72 Fed. 227.....	235	Opinion of the Justices, 145 Mass. 587, 13 N. E. 15.....	948
New Orleans F. & H. S. S. Co. v. Ocean Dry Dock Co. 28 La. Ann. 173, 26 Am. Rep. 90.....	403
New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252.....	641
New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. ed. 525, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.....	633, 634
New Windsor v. Stockdale, 95 Md. 215, 52 Atl. 596.....	629
64 L. R. A.

- Opinion of the Justices, 166 Mass. 595, 34 L. R. A. 58, 44 N. E. 627..... 949
7 Mass. 523..... 783
- Oppenheimer v. Levi, 96 Md. 296, 60 L. R. A. 729, 54 Atl. 74..... 274
- Oregon Iron Co. v. Trullinger, 3 Or. 1..... 274
- Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co., 130 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 837, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409..... 225
- Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281..... 457
- Orman v. Ryan Bros., 25 Colo. 383, 55 Pac. 168..... 212
- Orr v. Gilman, 167 N. Y. 227, 52 L. R. A. 433, 88 Am. St. Rep. 508, 60 N. E. 439, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213..... 282
- Osage City v. Larkin, 40 Kan. 206, 2 L. R. A. 56, 10 Am. St. Rep. 186, 19 Pac. 658..... 89
- Oswald v. Wolf, 129 Ill. 200, 21 N. E. 839 218
- Otis v. Pennsylvania Co., 71 Fed. 136..... 413
- Ottawa Glass Co. v. McCaleb, 81 Ill. 556..... 921
- Ottawa Northern Pl. Road Co. v. Murray, 15 Ill. 338..... 404
- Owens v. Owens, 100 N. C. 240, 6 S. S. 794..... 470
- P.
- Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 671, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210, 34 L. ed. 822..... 342
- Paducah v. Allen, 111 Ky. 361, 63 S. W. 981..... 573
- Paducah Lumber Co. v. Paducah Water Supply Co., 89 Ky. 340, 7 L. R. A. 77, 25 Am. St. Rep. 536, 12 S. W. 554, 13 S. W. 249..... 236
559
- Page, Re, 37 Cal. 238..... 990
- v. Millie Lacs Lumber Co., 53 Minn. 492, 55 N. W. 608..... 821
- Painter v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. 2 C. B. N. S. 702..... 252
- v. Pasadena Land & W. Co., 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539..... 285
- Palmer v. Charlotte, C. & A. E. Co., 3 S. C. N. S. 580, 16 Am. Rep. 750..... 542
- v. Lincoln, 5 Neb. 136, 25 Am. Rep. 470..... 274
- v. Mulligan, 3 Caines, 307, 2 Am. Dec. 270..... 687
- Palmeri v. Manhattan R. Co., 133 N. Y. 261, 16 L. R. A. 136, 28 Am. St. Rep. 632, 30 N. E. 1001..... 159
- Palmetto Lodge No. 5, I. O. O. F. v. Hubbard, 2 Strobh. L. 457, 49 Am. Dec. 604..... 940
- Parish v. Camplin, 139 Ind. 14, 37 N. E. 607..... 793
- Park v. Detroit Free Press Co., 72 Mich. 560, 1 L. R. A. 599, 16 Am. St. Rep. 544, 40 N. W. 731..... 793
- Park Case. See JOHN D. PARK & SONS CO. v. NATIONAL WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS' ASSO.
- Parke County v. O'Connor, 86 Ind. 531, 44 Am. Rep. 338..... 784
- Parker v. Enslow, 102 Ill. 279, 40 Am. Rep. 588..... 497
- v. Kelly, 61 Wis. 552, 21 N. W. 539 799
- v. Kett, 12 Mod. 469..... 859
- v. St. Paul, 47 Minn. 317, 50 N. W. 247..... 89
- Parks v. Alta California Teleg. Co., 13 Cal. 422, 73 Am. Dec. 589..... 550
- Parrot Silver & Copper Co. v. Heinze, 25 Mont. 139, 53 L. R. A. 491, 87 Am. St. Rep. 386, 64 Pac. 329..... 208
- Patch v. Covington, 17 B. Mon. 722, 66 Am. Dec. 168..... 234
- Patoka Twp. v. Hopkins, 131 Ind. 142, 31 Am. St. Rep. 417, 30 N. E. 896..... 942
- Patterson v. Crowther, 70 Md. 125, 16 Atl. 531..... 447
- v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 1115..... 706
- v. Townsend, 91 Iowa, 725, Appx. 59 N. W. 205..... 348
- Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co., 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275..... 152
- Pea v. Waggoner, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 19..... 737
- Peabody, People ex rel., v. Chicago Gas Trust Co., 130 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 497, 17 Am. St. Rep. 319, 22 N. E. 738..... 764
- Peak v. Elliott, 30 Kan. 156, 46 Am. Rep. 90, 1 Pac. 499..... 788
- Pearson v. Thomason, 15 Ala. 700, 50 Am. Dec. 159..... 76
- Peaslee, Re, 73 Hun. loc. cit. 114, 25 N. Y. Supp. 940..... 289
- Peck v. List, 23 W. Va. 388, 48 Am. Rep. 398..... 192
- v. Weeks, 34 Conn. 145..... 447
- Pell, Re, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L. R. A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789..... 283
822
- v. Ulmar, 18 N. Y. 139..... 271
- Pennell v. Duffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372, 23 L. J. Ch. N. S. 115, 18 Jur. 273, 1 Week. Rep. 499, 1 Eq. Rep. 579..... 788
- Pennington v. Brinsop Hall Coal Co. L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 769..... 271
- Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & T. Co., 38 L. R. A. 33, 19 C. C. A. 286, 37 U. S. App. 692, 72 Fed. 413..... 453
- Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565..... 506
- Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co., 13 How. 518, 14 L. ed. 249..... 989
- Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Sanderson, 94 Pa. 303, 39 Am. Rep. 785..... 447
- Pennsylvania Co. v. Dolan, 6 Ind. App. 109, 51 Am. St. Rep. 289, 32 N. E. 802..... 678
- v. Donovan, 116 Fed. 907, 60 C. C. A. 168, 124 Fed. 1018..... 822
- v. Langendorf, 48 Ohio St. 316, 13 L. R. A. 190, 29 Am. St. Rep. 553, 28 N. E. 172..... 544
- Pennsylvania Co. for Ins. on Lives & A. v. Bauerle, 143 Ill. 459, 33 N. E. 166..... 771
- People v. Ballard, 134 N. Y. 269, 17 L. R. A. 737, 32 N. E. 54..... 769
- v. Boylan, 25 Fed. 595..... 130
- v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 463, 17 N. E. 343..... 695
- v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 669..... 648
- v. Koerner, 154 N. Y. 355, 48 N. E. 730..... 845
- v. Murphy, 101 N. Y. 126, 54 Am. Rep. 661, 4 N. E. 326..... 842
- v. Silney, 137 N. Y. 570, 33 N. E. 150..... 842
- v. Stout, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 670..... 842
- People ex rel. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594..... 923
- Fitzgerald v. Boyd, 132 Ill. 60, 23 N. E. 342..... 383
- Loomis v. Canal Appraisers, 33 N. Y. 461..... 248
- Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co., 130 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 497, 17 Am. St. Rep. 319, 22 N. E. 798..... 374, 382, 402
- Henry v. Cornell, 47 Barb. 329..... 431
434
- Wetherbee v. Essex County, 70 N. Y. 228..... 793
- Field v. Northern P. R. Co., 18 Jones & S. 458..... 434
- Moloney v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 173 Ill. 125, 51 N. E. 864 402
- Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 643, 14 L. R. A. 708, 29 N. E. 808..... 48
- Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. v. Rice, 144 Ill. 232, 33 N. E. 951..... 497
- Perkins v. Clay, 54 N. H. 618..... 300
- Perrette v. Kansas City, 162 Mo. 238, 62 S. W. 448..... 974
- Perry v. Mount Hope Iron Co., 15 R. I. 380, 2 Am. St. Rep. 902, 5 Atl. 632..... 172
- v. Wheeler, 12 Bush. 541..... 677, 678
- Perry M. B. Stone Co. v. Wilson, 180 Ind. 435, 67 N. E. 183..... 783
- Person v. Grier, 66 N. Y. 124, 23 Am. Rep. 35..... 386
- Perth General Station Committee v. Ross (1897) A. C. 479, 66 L. J. P. C. N. S. 81, 77 L. T. N. S. 226 821

Peters v. Grim, 149 Pa. 163, 34 Am. St. Rep. 599, 24 Atl. 192.....	178
Petillon v. Hipple, 90 Ill. 420, 32 Am. Rep. 31.....	959
Pettigrew Mach. Co. v. Harmon, 45 Ark. 290.....	76
Pettingill v. Rideout, 6 N. H. 454, 25 Am. Dec. 473.....	249
Phifer v. Cox, 21 Ohio St. 248, 8 Am. Rep. 58.....	629
Philadelphia & S. R. Co. v. Lewis, 33 Pa. 33, 75 Am. Dec. 574.....	385
Phillips v. Barnett, L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 436.....	992
Phillips Exeter Academy v. Exeter, 58 N. H. 306, 42 Am. Rep. 589.....	44
Phippen v. Sticknev, 3 Met. 384.....	192
Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30, 27 L. ed. 65, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.....	148
Pierce v. Swan Point Cemetery, 10 R. I. 227, 14 Am. Rep. 667.....	181
v. State, 13 N. H. 223.....	248
Plicher v. New York L. Ins. Co. 33 La. Ann. 322.....	462
Pitts v. Lancaster Mills, 13 Met. 156.....	275
Pittsburg, A. & M. Pass. R. Co. v. Caldwell, 74 Pa. 421.....	440, 441
Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Cox, 55 Ohio St. 497, 35 L. R. A. 507, 45 N. E. 641.....	413
v. Moore, 152 Ind. 345, 44 L. R. A. 638, 53 N. E. 290.....	413
Pixley v. Butts, 2 Cow. 421.....	344
v. Clark, 35 N. Y. 520, 91 Am. Dec. 72.....	245
Plant v. Woods, 176 Mass. 492, 51 L. R. A. 339, 79 Am. St. Rep. 330, 57 N. E. 1011.....	262
Planters' Ins. Co. v. Sorrels, 1 Baxt. 352, 25 Am. Rep. 780.....	455
Planters' Oil Mill v. Monroe Waterworks & Light Co. 52 La. Ann. 1243, 27 So. 684.....	236
Plymton v. Hall, 55 Minn. 22, 21 L. R. A. 675, 56 N. W. 351.....	520-523
Police Comrs. v. Wagner, 93 Md. 191, 52 L. R. A. 776, 86 Am. St. Rep. 423, 48 Atl. 456.....	645
Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565.....	343
Pollman & Bros. Coal & Sprinkling Co. v. St. Louis, 145 Mo. 651, 47 S. W. 563.....	289
Pollock v. Louisville, 13 Bush. 221, 26 Am. Rep. 260.....	573
v. United States Mut. Acci. Assn. 102 Pa. 234, 48 Am. Rep. 204.....	351
Pond v. Williams, 1 Gray. 630.....	579
Pool v. Boston, 5 Cush. 219.....	784
Pope v. Hanke, 155 Ill. 617, 28 L. R. A. 568, 40 N. E. 839.....	771
Porter v. North Missouri R. Co. 33 Mo. 128.....	963, 968, 969
v. Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co. 76 Ill. 561.....	768
Potts v. Shreveport Belt R. Co. 110 La. 1, 34 So. 103.....	105, 106
Pouey v. Hordern (1900) 1 Ch. 492, 66 L. J. Ch. N. S. 231, 82 L. T. N. S. 51.....	865
Powell v. Sims, 5 W. Va. 4, 13 Am. Rep. 629.....	248
Powers, Re, 124 N. Y. 361, 26 N. E. 940.....	566
Prather v. Lexington, 13 B. Mon. 559, 56 Am. Dec. 585.....	573
Prentice v. Gelger, 74 N. Y. 341.....	271
Pressley v. Moblie & G. R. Co. 4 Woods, 569, 15 Fed. 199.....	687
Preston v. Jones, 9 Pa. 458.....	289
Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 134, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.....	125
Protection L. Ins. Co. Re, 9 Biss. 188, Fed. Cas. No. 11,444.....	159
Provident Mut. Relief Assn. v. Pelissier, 69 N. H. 606, 45 Atl. 562.....	159
Prudential Ins. Co. v. Hunn, 21 Ind. App. 525, 69 Am. St. Rep. 380, 52 N. E. 772.....	938
Purcell v. St. Paul City R. Co. 48 Minn. 134, 16 L. R. A. 203, 50 N. W. 1034.....	549
Purviance v. Purviance, 14 Ind. App. 269, 42 N. E. 364.....	942
Pyott v. Pyott, 101 Ill. 280, 61 N. E. 88.....	519
64 L. R. A.
Q
Quartlebaum v. State, 79 Ala. 1.....	341
Queen v. Owens, 2 El. & Bl. 86, 28 L. Q. J. B. N. S. 316, 5 Jur. N. S. 784, 7 Week. Rep. 566.....	784
Queen Ins. Co. v. Leslie, 47 Ohio St. 409, 9 L. R. A. 45, 24 N. E. 1072.....	453
Quincy v. Barber, 81 Ill. 300, 25 Am. Rep. 278.....	294
R
Radecke's Case, 49 Md. 229, 33 Am. Rep. 239.....	643
Railroad Co. v. Berks County, 6 Pa. 70.....	385
v. Lindamood, 109 Tenn. 411, 74 S. W. 113.....	439
Raleigh v. Cook, 60 Tex. 438.....	477, 478
Raleigh & S. Air-Line R. Co. v. Jenkins, 68 N. C. 505.....	142
Ramaley v. Leland, 43 N. Y. 539, 3 Am. Rep. 728.....	472
Ramsey v. Temple, 3 Lea. 253.....	736
Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1003, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322.....	148, 152
Rawden v. Shadwell, 1 Amb. 269.....	956, 958
Rawson v. Jones, 52 Ga. 458.....	461
Reagan v. Casey, 180 Mass. 374, 36 N. E. 58.....	117
Reaume v. Chambers, 22 Mo. 54.....	249
Red River Roller Mills v. Wright, 30 Minn. 249, 44 Am. Rep. 194, 15 N. W. 167.....	273, 990
Reese v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 123 Ind. 294, 7 L. R. A. 583, 24 N. E. 163.....	548
Reg. v. Mariquita Min. Co. 1 El. & El. 289, 28 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 87, 5 Jur. N. S. 725, 7 Week. Rep. 98.....	433
Reilly v. Franklin Ins. Co. 43 Wis. 449, 28 Am. Rep. 552.....	453
Renihan v. Dennin, 103 N. Y. 573, 57 Am. Rep. 770, 9 N. E. 320.....	842
v. Wright, 125 Ind. 536, 9 L. R. A. 514, 21 Am. St. Rep. 249, 25 N. E. 822.....	181
Rex v. Great Farlington, 9 Barn. & C. 541, 8 L. J. M. C. 1.....	431
v. Hostmen, 2 Strange, 1223.....	433
v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1335.....	785
Reynolds v. First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405, 28 L. ed. 733, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213.....	398
Rhelms v. Standard F. Ins. Co. 39 W. Va. 672, 20 S. E. 670.....	456
Rhodes v. Missouri Sav. & L. Co. 173 Ill. 621, 42 L. R. A. 93, 50 N. E. 998.....	772
Rice v. King Philip Mills, 144 Mass. 229, 59 Am. Rep. 80, 11 N. E. 101.....	553
v. London & N. W. American Mortg. Co. 70 Minn. 77, 72 N. W. 826.....	76
v. Savery, 22 Iowa. 470.....	600
Richards v. Marine Ins. Co. 3 Johns. 307.....	938
Richardson v. Buhl, 77 Mich. 632, 6 L. R. A. 457, 43 N. W. 1102.....	765
v. Danvers, 176 Mass. 413, 50 L. R. A. 127, 79 Am. St. Rep. 320, 57 N. E. 688.....	72
Richmond v. Long, 17 Gratt. 375, 94 Am. Dec. 461.....	573
v. Sitterding, 9 Va. Law Reg. 41, 43 S. E. 562.....	541
Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Childress, 82 Ga. 719, 3 L. R. A. 808, 14 Am. St. Rep. 189, 9 S. E. 602.....	496
v. Powers, 149 U. S. 43, 37 L. ed. 642, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748.....	152
Rickett v. Johnson, 8 Cal. 36.....	249
Riddlesbarger v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 7 Wall. 388, 19 L. ed. 257.....	81
Rigg v. Schweitzer, 170 Pa. 549, 33 Atl. 116.....	192
Riggs v. Palmer, 115 N. Y. 506, 5 L. R. A. 340, 12 Am. St. Rep. 819, 22 N. E. 188.....	470
v. State, 26 Miss. 54.....	463, 467, 469, 809
Ring v. Devlin, 68 Wis. 384, 32 N. W. 121.....	784
Ritter v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 169 U. S. 157, 42 L. ed. 699, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.....	671
Roach v. Haynes (1803) 8 Ves. Jr. 584.....	860

Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 657, 18 L. ed. 427	542	St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354	797
v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592	510	St. Cloud Water Power & Mill Co. v. Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. 43 Minn. 380, 45 N. W. 714	990
v. State, 8 Ohio St. 131	810	St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping, 11 H. L. Cas. 642	271
Roberts v. Ogdenburgh & L. C. R. Co. 29 Hun. 154	497	St. Louis v. Howard, 119 Mo. loc. cit. 46, 41 Am. St. Rep. 630, 24 S. W. 770	682, 683
Robertson v. Parks, 76 Md. 118, 24 Atl. 411	728	St. Louis & M. River R. Co. v. Kirkwood, 159 Mo. 239, 53 L. R. A. 300, 60 S. W. 110	682
v. Wabash R. Co. 152 Mo. 383, 53 S. W. 1082	974	St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Schumacher, 152 U. S. 77, 38 L. ed. 361, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 479	151
Robinson v. Mississquoi R. Co. 59 Vt. 426, 10 Atl. 522	394	St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co. 139 U. S. 223, 35 L. ed. 154, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554	83
v. Mollett, L. R. 7 H. L. 802, 44 L. J. C. P. N. S. 362	448	v. Grafton, 51 Ark. 504, 14 Am. St. Rep. 66, 11 S. W. 702	784
v. Pierce, 118 Ala. 273, 45 L. R. A. 66, 72 Am. St. Rep. 160, 24 So. 984	342	v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419	642
v. Southern P. Co. 28 L. R. A. 755	286	St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Minn. 351, 34 L. R. A. 184, 63 N. W. 267, 65 N. W. 649, 68 N. W. 458	88
Rochester, Re, 110 N. Y. 159, 17 N. E. 740	566	Salem v. Walker, 16 Ind. App. 687, 46 N. E. 90	294
Rockhold v. Canton Masonic Mut. Benev. Soc. 129 Ill. 440, 21 N. E. 794	374	Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. 23	416
Rockingham Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bosher, 39 Me. 253, 63 Am. Dec. 618, 83, 99	99	Salisbury v. Andrews, 19 Pick. 250	130
Roddy v. McGelrick, 49 Ala. 159	677, 679	Samuelian v. American Tool & Mach. Co. 168 Mass. 12, 46 N. E. 98	116
Rogers v. Benton, 30 Minn. 39, 12 Am. St. Rep. 613, 38 N. W. 765	322	Samuels v. Oliver, 130 Ill. 73, 22 N. E. 499	446, 447
v. Jones, J. Dowd, & R. 484, 27 Revised Rep. 529	432	San Bernardino County v. Davidson, 112 Cal. 503, 44 Pac. 659	135
v. Ludlow Mfg. Co. 144 Mass. 198, 59 Am. St. Rep. 68, 11 N. E. 77	553	Sanderson v. Pennsylvania Coal Co. 86 Pa. 401, 27 Am. Rep. 711	270
v. Marlott, 59 Neb. 759, 82 N. W. 21	178	Sands v. Manistee River Improv. Co. 123 U. S. 296, 31 L. ed. 152, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113	341
Rollings v. Evans, 23 S. C. 816	567	v. Southern R. Co. 108 Tenn. 2, 64 S. W. 478	448
Roman v. Mall, 42 Md. 513	954	Sanford v. Pawtucket Street R. Co. 19 R. I. 537, 33 L. R. A. 564, 35 Atl. 67	541
Romig v. Gillett, 187 U. S. 111, 47 L. ed. 97, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40	323	San Francisco v. Anderson, 103 Cal. 70, 42 Am. St. Rep. 98, 36 Pac. 1034	925
Ronan v. Bluhm, 173 Ill. 277, 50 N. E. 694	519	v. Brader, 50 Cal. 506	130
Roosevelt, Re, 143 N. Y. 25, 25 L. R. A. 695, 38 N. E. 281	779	v. Mackey, 21 Fed. 539	921, 922
Rosenheim v. American Ins. Co. 38 Mo. 230	976	San José Gas Co. v. January, 57 Cal. 614	923
Rosenplanter v. Roessie, 54 N. Y. 264	473	Saunders v. Williams, 5 N. H. 215	361
Ross v. Hixon, 26 Am. St. Rep. 155	480	Sawyer v. Taggart, 14 Bush. 727	175
Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co. L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 205	116	Saylor v. Simpson, 45 Ohio St. 141, 12 N. E. 181	847
Rousillon v. Rousillon, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 351	301	Schaetler v. Sandusky, 33 Ohio St. 246, 31 Am. Rep. 533	294
Royston v. McCulley (Tenn. Ch. App.) 52 L. R. A. 899, 59 S. W. 725	676	Schmidt v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 75 Iowa, 606, 39 N. W. 916	348
Ruckert v. Grand Ave. R. Co. 163 Mo. 260, 63 S. W. 814	968	v. Northern Life Assn., 112 Iowa, 41, 51 L. R. A. 141, 84 Am. St. Rep. 323, 83 N. W. 800	785
Ruddledin v. Smith, 36 Iowa, 669	76	School District No. 4 v. Gage, 39 Mich. 484, 33 Am. Rep. 421	784
Rude v. St. Louis, 93 Mo. 413, 6 S. W. 258	966	Schopp v. St. Louis, 117 Mo. 131, 20 L. R. A. 783, 22 S. W. 896	964
Rumpel v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. 22 L. R. A. 725, 4 Idaho, 13, 35 Pac. 700	447	Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481	648
Ruse v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 23 N. Y. 516	938	Schroeder, Re, 46 Cal. 304	559
Russell, Re, 51 Conn. 577, 50 Am. Rep. 35	784	v. Chicago, R. I. & F. R. Co. 47 Iowa, 375	496
v. De Grand, 15 Mass. 35	938	Schubert v. J. R. Clark Co. 49 Minn. 331, 15 L. R. A. 818, 32 Am. St. Rep. 559, 51 N. W. 1103	934
v. Devon County, 2 T. R. 673	498	Schulenburg & B. Lumber Co. v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 129 Mo. 455, 31 S. W. 796	966
v. Ely, 2 Black, 575, 17 L. ed. 258	322	Schwalm v. Holmes, 49 Cal. 665	605
Rust v. Essex, 182 Mass. 313, 65 N. E. 397	72	Scott v. Riley, 16 Phila. 106	181
Ruth v. St. Louis Transit Co. 98 Mo. App. 1, 71 S. W. 1055	687	v. School Dist. No. 9, 67 Vt. 150, 27 L. R. A. 588, 31 Atl. 145	448
Rutherford v. Wabash R. Co. 147 Mo. 447, 48 S. W. 921	84	Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 26 L. ed. 968	416
Ru Ton v. Everitt, 35 App. Div. 412, 54 N. Y. Supp. 866	300	Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406, 23 L. ed. 245	174
Ryan v. Fowler, 24 N. Y. 410, 82 Am. Dec. 316	157	Seaman, Re, 147 N. Y. 69, 41 N. E. 778	779
Rynalski v. Insurance Co. 96 Mich. 395, 55 N. W. 981	456	Searight v. Payne, 6 Lea, 283	388
S.		Searl Placer, Re, 11 Land Dec. 441	210
Saddler v. Lee, 66 Ga. 45, 42 Am. Rep. 62	257	Second Nat. Bank v. Western Nat. Bank, 51 Md. 128, 34 Am. Rep. 300	447
Safret v. Hartman, 50 N. C. (5 Jones L.) 185	138
Sahlben v. Bank of Lonoke, 90 Tenn. 221, 16 S. W. 373	446, 447
Saint v. Smith, 1 Coldw. 52	448
St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 360, 42 L. ed. 502, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157	342

Secor v. Secor, 18 Abb. N. C. 78 note.....	181	Smith v. Sedalla, 152 Mo. 283, 48 L. R. A. 711, 53 S. W. 907.....	969
Secrist v. Delaware County, 100 Ind. 59.....	784	v. Smith, 14 Gray, 532.....	289
Seeley v. Peters, 10 Ill. 130.....	249	v. Thackeran, L. R. 1 C. P. 564.....	279
Seeton v. Dunbarton, 72 N. H. 269, 56 Atl. 197.....	71	v. Wachob, 179 Pa. 260, 36 Atl. 221.....	571
Sellards v. Zomes, 5 Bush, 91.....	581	v. Whildin, 10 Pa. 39, 49 Am. Dec. 572.....	784
Bewall v. Wilmer, 132 Mass. 131.....	865	Smith ex dem. Iormer v. Parkhurst, 3 Atk. 135.....	139
Shatto v. Crocker, 87 Cal. 629, 25 Pac. 921.....	549	Smitha v. Gentry, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 171, 42 L. R. A. 302, 45 S. W. 515.....	784
Shaw v. Pratt, 22 Pick. 307.....	579	Snow v. Chandler, 10 N. H. 92, 34 Am. Dec. 140.....	580
v. Quincy Min. Co. 145 U. S. 444, 36 L. ed. 768, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.....	797	v. Parsons, 28 Vt. 459, 67 Am. Dec. 723.....	273
v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382, 97 Am. Dec. 107, 1 Am. Rep. 115.....	448	Snyder v. Snyder, 51 Md. 80.....	954
Sheehy v. Kansas City Cable R. Co. 94 Mo. 574, 4 Am. St. Rep. 396, 7 S. W. 579.....	966	v. Union Depot Co. 19 Ohio C. C. 368.....	821
Shelbyville R. Co. v. Louisville, C. & L. R. Co. 82 Ky. 541.....	815	v. Wheeling Electrical Co. 43 W. Va. 661, 39 L. R. A. 499, 64 Am. St. Rep. 922, 28 S. E. 104.....	733
Shell v. German Ins. Co. 60 Mo. App. 644.....	456	Society for Savings v. Colte, 6 Wall. 594, 18 L. ed. 897.....	921
Shellenberger v. Ransom, 41 Neb. 631, 25 L. R. A. 564, 59 N. W. 935.....	463	Solly v. Forbes, 2 Brod. & B. 38, 4 J. B. Moore, 448, 22 Revised Rep. 641.....	579
Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882, 86 N. W. 941.....	135	Souhegan Nall, Cotton, & Woollen Factory v. McCouthe, 7 N. H. 310.....	45
v. Missouri P. R. Co. 85 Mo. 629, 55 Am. Rep. 390.....	496	Soule, Re, v. Connolly, 54, 3 N. Y. Supp. 259.....	290
Sherbourne v. Yuba County, 21 Cal. 113, 81 Am. Dec. 151.....	578	Southampton v. Greaves, 8 T. R. 590, 5 Rev. Rep. 480.....	433
Sherlock v. Kansas City Belt R. Co. 142 Mo. 182, 64 Am. St. Rep. 551, 43 S. W. 829.....	966	South Bend v. Turner, 156 Ind. 418, 54 L. R. A. 398, 83 Am. St. Rep. 200, 60 N. E. 271.....	497
Sherman, Re, 153 N. Y. 1, 46 N. E. 1032.....	282	Southern California R. Co. v. Slauson, 128 Cal. 342, 94 Am. St. Rep. 58, 71 Pac. 352.....	254
v. Gundlach, 37 Minn. 118, 33 N. W. 549.....	536	Southern Exp. Co. v. Kaufman, 12 Helsk. 121.....	449
v. Inman S. S. Co. 26 Hun, 107.....	447	v. McVean, 20 Gratt. 264.....	550
v. Maine C. R. Co. 86 Me. 422, 30 Atl. 69.....	84	Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 578, 64 N. E. 564.....	919
Sherwood v. Hamilton, 37 U. C. Q. B. 410.....	71	Southern Indiana R. Co. v. Martin, 169 Ind. 280, 66 N. E. 886.....	783
Shipley v. State, 61 Ark. 219, 32 S. W. 489, 33 S. W. 107.....	205	Southern Ins. Co. v. Estes, 106 Tenn. 472, 52 L. R. A. 915, 82 Am. St. Rep. 392, 62 S. W. 149.....	458
Shiveley v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 381, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548, 341.....	342	Southern Ohio R. Co. v. Morey, 47 Ohio St. 207, 7 L. R. A. 701, 24 N. E. 269.....	542
Shore v. Atty. Gen. 9 Clark & F. 355, 11 Sim. 592, 7 Jur. 781.....	394	Southern P. Co. v. Seley, 152 U. S. 145, 38 L. ed. 391, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530.....	153
Sibley v. Smith, 46 Ark. 275, 55 Am. Rep. 584.....	496	Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 616, 19 L. R. A. 92, 80 Pac. 783.....	252
Sievers v. San Francisco, 115 Cal. 654, 56 Am. St. Rep. 153, 47 Pac. 687.....	234	Southern R. Co. v. Webb, 116 Ga. 157, 59 L. R. A. 109, 42 S. E. 395.....	97
Simpson v. Westminster Palace Hotel Co. 8 H. L. Cas. 712, 6 Jur. N. S. 985, 2 L. T. N. S. 707.....	390	Speck v. Pullman Car Co. 121 Ill. 33, 12 N. E. 213.....	518
Sindlinger v. Kansas, 126 Mo. 315, 26 L. R. A. 723, 28 S. W. 857.....	294	Spence v. McDonough, 77 Iowa, 462, 42 N. W. 371.....	278
Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745.....	151	Spencer v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 120 Mo. 154, 22 L. R. A. 668, 23 S. W. 129.....	966
Skiff v. Stoddard, 63 Conn. 198, 21 L. R. A. 102, 26 Atl. 881.....	446	v. Williams, 2 Vt. 209, 19 Am. Dec. 711.....	579
Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.....	264	Sperb v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 187 N. Y. 155, 20 L. R. A. 752, 32 N. E. 1050.....	968
Sloan v. Herrick, 49 Vt. 328.....	579	Spies v. Rosenstock, 87 Md. 17, 89 Atl. 268.....	957
Sloane, Re, 154 N. Y. 109, 47 N. E. 978.....	779	Springfield v. Harris, 4 Allen, 494, 81 Am. Dec. 715.....	273
v. Southern California R. Co. 111 Cal. 668, 32 L. R. A. 193, 44 Pac. 320.....	549	Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Keeseville, 148 N. Y. 46, 30 L. R. A. 660, 51 Am. St. Rep. 667, 42 N. E. 405.....	235
Small v. Minneapolis Electro-Matrix Co. 45 Minn. 264, 47 N. W. 797.....	769	Spring Valley Waterworks v. Barber, 90 Cal. 36, 21 L. R. A. 416, 33 Pac. 735.....	923
Smalley v. Greene, 62 Iowa, 241, 35 Am. Rep. 267, 8 N. W. 78.....	695	v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69, 919, 921.....	923
Smart v. Basley, 5 J. J. Marsh. 215.....	289	Stack v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 177 Mass. 155, 52 L. R. A. 328, 83 Am. St. Rep. 269, 58 N. E. 686.....	500
Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Intern. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564.....	695	Stacy v. State Bank, 5 Ill. 91.....	784
v. Benick, 87 Md. 610, 42 L. R. A. 277, 41 Atl. 56.....	541	Stadler v. First Nat. Bank, 22 Mont. 203, 74 Am. St. Rep. 586, 56 Pac. 114.....	130
v. Brooklyn, 18 App. Div. 340, 46 N. Y. Supp. 141, 245, 246, 247, 260.....	259	Stahl v. Lowe, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 210, 38 S. W. 862.....	221
v. Brooklyn, 160 N. Y. 357, 45 L. R. A. 664, 34 N. E. 787.....	271	Stanley v. Bircher, 78 Mo. 245.....	550
v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 107 Iowa, 620, 78 N. W. 238.....	788
v. Ege, 52 Pa. 421.....	478
v. Guild, 34 Me. 443.....	289
v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co. 98 Mo. 24, 11 S. W. 259.....	964
v. Munch, 65 Minn. 256, 68 N. W. 19.....	687
v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 149 Pa. 249, 24 Atl. 304.....	821
v. Rochester, 92 N. Y. 463, 44 Am. Rep. 393.....	275
64 L. R. A.

Stanley v. Pence, 160 Ind. 636, 66 N. E. 51, 67 N. E. 441.....	942	State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Leldtke, 12 Neb. 111, 10 N. W. 103.....	133
Staples v. Canton, 89 Mo. 592.....	294	Henry v. McArthur, 5 Kan. 280.....	325
v. Schmid, 18 R. I. 224, 19 L. R. A. 824, 26 Atl. 193.....	687	Stewart v. Marks, 6 Lea. 12.....	422
Stark v. Lancaster, 57 N. H. 88.....	71	Atty. Gen. v. Mead, 71 Mo. 272.....	682
Starke v. Wilson, 65 Ala. 576.....	566	Cowden v. Miller, 66 Minn. 90, 68 N. W. 732.....	948
Surr v. Child, 20 Wend. 159.....	248	Beedle v. Schoonover, 135 Ind. 526, 21 L. R. A. 767, 35 N. E. 119.....	785
State v. Bartlett, 170 Mo. 658, 59 L. R. A. 756, 71 S. W. 148.....	79	Lancaster County v. Silver, 9 Neb. 85, 2 N. W. 215.....	134
v. Billings, 55 Minn. 467, 57 N. W. 206, 43 Am. St. Rep. 524.....	793	Miller v. Sovereign, 17 Neb. 175, 22 N. W. 853.....	134
v. Brannon, 6 Kan. App. 765, 50 Pac. 986.....	810	Boach v. Sutton, 3 Mo. App. 388.....	681
v. Broadbelt, 89 Md. 565, 45 L. R. A. 433, 73 Am. St. Rep. 201, 43 Atl. 771.....	642, 683	Godard v. Topeka Water Co. 61 Kan. 547, 60 Pac. 337.....	797
v. Burwell, 34 Kan. 312, 8 Pac. 470, 311 v. Call, 121 N. C. 646, 28 S. E. 517.....	141	Cheaney v. Wallicha, 16 Neb. 110, 20 N. W. 27.....	133
v. Chisnault, 55 Kan. 326, 40 Pac. 662.....	810	State, Read, Prosecutor, v. Atlantic City, 49 N. J. L. 559, 9 Atl. 759.....	635
v. Concord R. Co. 59 N. H. 85.....	817	New Jersey R. & Transp. Co. Prosecu- tors, v. Hancock, 35 N. J. L. 537.....	385
v. Countryman, 57 Kan. 815, 48 Pac. 137.....	312	Camden & A. R. & Transp. Co. Prosecutors, v. Mansfield, 23 N. J. L. 513, 57 Am. Dec. 409.....	888
v. Dorsey, 118 Ind. 167, 10 Am. St. Rep. 111, 20 N. E. 777.....	944	State Council, C. K. v. Board of Review, 198 Ill. 441, 64 N. E. 1104.....	74
v. Fisher, 8 Kan. 208.....	312	State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663.....	921
v. Garbroski, 111 Iowa. 496, 56 L. R. A. 570, 82 Am. St. Rep. 524, 82 N. W. 959.....	948	Stearns v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 112 Mich. 653, 71 N. W. 148, 678.....	679
v. Gardner, 58 Ohio St. 599, 41 L. R. A. 689, 65 Am. St. Rep. 785, 51 N. E. 136.....	144	Steele v. German Ins. Co. 93 Mich. 81, 18 L. R. A. 85, 53 N. W. 514.....	456
v. Goering, 106 Iowa, 636, 77 N. W. 327.....	79	Steinway, Re, 159 N. Y. 250, 45 L. R. A. 461, 53 N. E. 1103.....	433
v. Goff, 20 Ark. 290.....	205	Stephens v. Board of Education, 79 N. Y. 183, 35 Am. Rep. 511.....	789
v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285.....	695	Stephenson v. Duncan, 73 Wis. 404, 9 Am. St. Rep. 806, 41 N. W. 337.....	157
v. Jones, 38 La. Ann. 792.....	809	Stevenot v. Eastern R. Co. 61 Minn. 104, 28 L. R. A. 600, 63 N. W. 256.....	626
v. King, 104 Iowa, 727, 74 N. W. 691.....	79	Stewart, Re, 131 N. Y. 274, 14 L. R. A. 836, 30 N. E. 184.....	779
v. Laverack, 34 N. J. L. 201.....	838	v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 17 Minn. 372, Gil. 348.....	769
v. McKnight, 131 N. C. 723, 59 L. R. A. 187, 42 S. E. 580.....	141	v. Parsons, 24 Wis. 242.....	473
v. Miller, 11 Lea. 620.....	466	v. Schall, 65 Md. 259, 57 Am. Rep. 327, 4 Atl. 399.....	954
v. Minneapolis Mill Co. 26 Minn. 229, 2 N. W. 889.....	988	v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187, 25 L. ed. 116.....	477
v. National Accl. Soc. 103 Wis. 208, 79 N. W. 220.....	799	Stiles v. Curtis, 4 Day. 328.....	838
v. Obert, 53 Kan. 107, 36 Pac. 64.....	134	Stillson v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 67 Mo. 871.....	440
v. Pauley, 12 Wis. 538.....	810	Stillwater Water Co. v. Farmer, 89 Minn. 58, 60 L. R. A. 875, 93 N. W. 907.....	258, 260
v. Pendergrass, 106 N. C. 667, 10 S. E. 1002.....	144	Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 20 L. ed. 491.....	727
v. Pettit, 74 Minn. 376, 77 N. W. 225.....	511	Stoever v. Whitman, 6 Minn. 420.....	249
v. Rollins, 8 N. H. 560.....	248	Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 816, 25 L. ed. 1079.....	641
v. Shedrol, 75 Vt. 277, 63 L. R. A. 179, 98 Am. St. Rep. 825, 54 Atl. 1081.....	948	Storrs v. Utica, 17 N. Y. 104, 72 Am. Dec. 437.....	542
v. Shields, 110 La. 547, 34 So. 673, v. Smith, 57 Kan. 674, 47 Pac. 541.....	827	Story v. New York Elev. R. Co. 90 N. Y. 122, 43 Am. Rep. 146.....	966
v. Steele, 106 N. C. 766, 8 L. R. A. 516, 19 Am. St. Rep. 573, 11 S. E. 478.....	819	Story Case. See STORY v. New York Elev. R. Co.
v. Stegman, 62 Kan. 476, 63 Pac. 746.....	315	Stoughton v. State, 13 Smedes & M. 255.....	809
v. Stewart, 59 Vt. 273, 59 Am. Rep. 710, 9 Atl. 559.....	265	Stoutenberg v. Hulsman, 93 Iowa, 213, 61 N. W. 917.....	76
v. Terreo, 56 Kan. 126, 42 Pac. 354.....	312	Stowers v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 68 Miss. 562, 12 L. R. A. 864, 24 Am. St. Rep. 290, 9 So. 356.....	806
v. Williford, 91 N. C. 529.....	810	Strobel v. Kerr Salt Co. 164 N. Y. 303, 51 L. R. A. 687, 79 Am. St. Rep. 643, 58 N. E. 142.....	271
v. Wright, 134 Mo. 417, 35 S. W. 1145.....	976	Strom v. Montana C. R. Co. 81 Minn. 346, 84 N. W. 46.....	626
v. Yandle, 166 Mo. 589, 68 S. W. 532.....	976	Strudgeon v. Sand Beach, 107 Mich. 496, 65 N. W. 618.....	93
v. Young, 153 Mo. 445, 55 S. W. 82, v. Zimmerman, 47 Kan. 242, 27 Pac. 989.....	976	Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289.....	798
State ex rel. Milwaukee Street R. Co. v. Anderson, 90 Wis. 550, 63 N. W. 746.....	919	Stutz v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 73 Wis. 147, 9 Am. St. Rep. 769, 40 N. W. 653.....	549
Townsend v. Boughner, 55 N. J. L. 381, 26 Atl. 808.....	948	Stutzbach v. Coler, 168 N. Y. 416, 61 N. E. 697.....	948
Anaconda Copper Min. Co. v. Dis- trict Court, 25 Mont. 504, 65 Pac. 1020.....	209	Suggs v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 71 Tex. 579, 1 L. R. A. 847, 9 S. W. 676.....	81
Rosenfeld v. Einstein, 46 N. J. L. 479.....	434	Sullivan v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 143 U. S. 431, 36 L. ed. 214, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.....	213
Holt County v. Hazelet, 41 Neb. 257, 59 N. W. 891.....	134	Summers v. Klugus, 14 Bush. 449.....	222
Poe v. Jones, 51 Ohio St. 492, 37 N. E. 945.....	921	Summitt v. State, 8 Lea. 413, 41 Am. Rep. 637.....	821
Frontier County v. Kelly, 30 Neb. 574, 46 N. W. 714.....	134

Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mattingly, 77 Tex. 162, 13 S. W. 1016.....	456
Supreme Commandery, K. of G. R. v. Ainsworth, 71 Ala. 436, 46 Am. Rep. 332.....	671
Supreme Lodge K. of H. v. Metcalf, 15 Ind. App. 135, 43 N. E. 893.....	940
Surber v. State, 99 Ind. 71.....	944
Sury v. Pigot, Popham, 169.....	269
Sutherland v. Mead, 80 App. Div. 103, 80 N. Y. Supp. 504.....	570
v. Olcott, 95 N. Y. 93.....	415, 416
Sutor v. Wood, 76 Tex. 407, 13 S. W. 321.....	477, 478
Sutphen v. North Hampstead, 80 Hun, 409, 30 N. Y. Supp. 128.....	71
Sweeley, Re, 12 Misc. 174, 33 N. Y. Supp. 369.....	948
Swenson v. Lexington, 69 Mo. loc. cit. 166.....	964
Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439, 9 Am. Rep. 276.....	245, 258
Swift v. Ellsworth, 10 Ind. 205, 71 Am. Dec. 316.....	585
v. Railway Pass. & F. C. Mut. Aid & Ben. Asso. 96 Ill. 309.....	462
v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 1, 10 L. ed. 865.....	570
Switzer v. Wellington, 40 Kan. 250, 10 Am. St. Rep. 196.....	784
Syme v. Badger, 92 N. C. 706.....	289

T.

Taber v. Royal Ins. Co. 124 Ala. 681, 26 So. 252.....	456
Taggart v. Tevanny, 1 Ind. App. 339, 27 N. E. 511.....	942
Tainter v. Worcester, 123 Mass. 311, 25 Am. Rep. 90.....	234
Tallman v. Ely, 6 Wis. 244.....	322, 324
Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Cline, 37 Fla. 586, 33 L. R. A. 376, 53 Am. St. Rep. 262, 20 So. 780.....	257
Tasker v. Farmingdale, 91 Me. 521, 40 Atl. 544.....	295
Tate v. Greensboro, 114 N. C. 392, 24 L. R. A. 671, 19 S. E. 767.....	807
v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 64 Mo. 149.....	963, 966
Tate Case. See TATE V. MISSOURI, K. & T. R. Co.
Taylor v. Castle, 42 Cal. 367.....	447
v. Owensboro, 98 Ky. 271, 56 Am. St. Rep. 361, 32 S. W. 948.....	573
v. Welch, 6 Or. 199.....	257
Temmick v. Owings, 70 Md. 251, 16 Atl. 719.....	644
Territory v. Hicks, 6 N. M. 596, 30 Pac. 872.....	809
Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 665, 42 L. ed. 1188, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.....	153
v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 829, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.....	152
v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 353, 41 L. ed. 186, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104.....	347
v. Marshall, 136 U. S. 393, 34 L. ed. 385, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 846.....	678
Texas & St. L. R. Co. v. Robards, 60 Tex. 546, 48 Am. Rep. 268.....	388
Thacker v. Hardy, L. R. 4 Q. B. Div. 685.....	175, 176
Theobald v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. 66 Miss. 279, 4 L. R. A. 735, 14 Am. St. Rep. 564, 6 So. 230.....	806
Third Nat. Bank v. Stillwater Gas Co. 36 Minn. 75, 30 N. W. 440.....	788
Thomas v. Simmons, 103 Ind. 538, 2 N. E. 203, 3 N. E. 381.....	942
v. Watson, Taney, 297, Fed. Cas. No. 13,913.....	956, 958
v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950.....	225, 403
Thompson v. Androscooggin River Improv. Co. 54 N. H. 545.....	244
v. Beacon Valley Rubber Co. 56 Conn. 493, 16 Atl. 557.....	447
v. Dotterer, 105 La. 37, 29 So. 483.....	225
v. Emery, 27 N. H. 269.....	462
v. Lack, 3 C. B. 540, 16 L. J. C. P. N. S. 75.....	579
v. Western U. Tele. Co. 10 Tex. Civ. App. 120, 30 S. W. 250.....	493
Thompson's Case, 122 Mass. 428, 23 Am. Rep. 370.....	536
64 L. R. A.

Thornton v. American Writing Mach. Co. 83 Ga. 288, 20 Am. St. Rep. 320, 9 S. E. 679.....	537, 394
v. Trammell, 39 Ga. 202.....
Thorp v. Bateman, 37 Mich. 68, 26 Am. Rep. 497.....	676
Thurston v. Hancock, 12 Mass. 223, 7 Am. Dec. 57.....	278
Tillotson v. Smith, 32 N. H. 95, 64 Am. Dec. 355.....	274
Timm v. Bear, 29 Wis. 254.....	274
Tloga R. Co. v. Blossburg & C. R. Co. 20 Wall. 137, 22 L. ed. 331.....	798
Tisdale v. Munroe, 3 Yerg. 320.....	737
Tobin v. Portland, S. & P. R. Co. 59 Me. 183, 8 Am. Rep. 415.....	817
Tolchester Beach Improv. Co. v. Steinmeier, 72 Md. 313, 8 L. R. A. 846, 20 Atl. 188.....	687
Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Grable, 88 Ill. 441.....	440
Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195.....	192
Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Fricke, 99 Wis. 367, 41 L. R. A. 557, 74 N. W. 372, 78 N. W. 407.....	799
Travis v. Standard Life and Accident Ins. Co. 80 Mich. 288, 49 N. W. 140.....	687
Trepagnier v. Rose, 18 App. Div. 393, 46 N. Y. Supp. 397.....	131
Trevett v. Prison Asso. 98 Va. 332, 50 L. R. A. 564, 81 Am. St. Rep. 727, 36 S. E. 373.....	272
Trustees of Schools v. Union District, 88 Ill. 100.....	383
Tubbs v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. 84 Mich. 646, 48 N. W. 296.....	456
Tuffree v. State Center, 57 Iowa, 538, 11 N. W. 1.....	294, 295
Tuite v. Stevens, 98 Mass. 805.....	192
Tullock v. Butts, 2 Cow. 421.....	344
v. Cunningham, 1 Cow. 256.....	344
Turcott v. Yaxoo & M. Valley R. Co. 101 Tenn. 102, 40 L. R. A. 768, 70 Am. St. Rep. 661, 45 S. W. 1067.....	799
Turner v. Huff, 46 Ark. 222, 55 Am. Rep. 580.....	446, 447
v. State, 28 Miss. 686.....	809
Turner Case. See WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. V. TURNER.
Turney v. Wilson, 7 Yerg. 342, 27 Am. Dec. 515.....	448
Turquand v. Strand Union, 8 Dowd. 201.....	499
Twiss v. Baldwin, 9 Conn. 291.....	274
Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,312.....	269, 271, 273, 274
Tyler Min. Co. v. Sweeney, 4 C. C. A. 329, 7 U. S. App. 463, 54 Fed. 284.....	928

U.

Ublricht v. Eufaula Water Co. 86 Ala. 587, 4 L. R. A. 572, 11 Am. St. Rep. 72, 6 So. 78.....	275
Underwriters' Wrecking Co. v. The Katie, 3 Woods, 186, Fed. Cas. No. 14,342.....	360, 365
Union Bank v. Jacobs, 6 Humph. 525.....
Union Ins. Co. v. American F. Ins. Co. 107 Cal. 327, 28 L. R. A. 692, 48 Am. St. Rep. 140, 40 Pac. 431.....	447
Union Mill. & Min. Co. v. Danberg, 2 Sawy. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 14,370.....	273
Union Nat. Bank v. Hunt, 76 Mo. 439.....	434
v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188.....	398
Union P. R. Co. v. Botsford, 141 U. S. 250, 35 L. ed. 734, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000.....	497, 498, 499, 501
v. Daniels, 152 U. S. 684, 38 L. ed. 597, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756.....	152
Union Petroleum Co. v. Bilven Petroleum Co. 72 Pa. 173.....	100
Union Stock Yards Nat. Bank v. Gillespie, 137 U. S. 411, 34 L. ed. 724, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118.....	788
United Society of Shakers v. Underwood, 11 Bush. 272, 21 Am. Rep. 214.....	581
United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 271.....	302, 694, 722, 723
v. Coal Dealers' Asso. 85 Fed. 252.....	694, 696

- United States v. Jellico Mountain Coal & Coke Co. 12 L. R. A. 753, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 626, 46 Fed. 432, 694, 696
 v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25, 694, 695, 696, 699
 v. McCarthy, 21 Blatchf. 469, 18 Fed. 89, 249
 v. Northern Securities Co. 120 Fed. 721, 725, 694-696
 v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 623, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073, 282
 v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540, 302, 694-696, 759-764
 United States Chemical Co. v. Provident Chemical Co. 64 Fed. 946, 695
 United States Cordage Co. v. William Wall's Son's Rope Co. 90 Hun, 429, 35 N. Y. Supp. 978, 300
 United States Trust Co. v. Lee, 73 Ill. 142, 24 Am. Rep. 236, 376, 402
 Urton v. Price, 57 Cal. 270, 579
- V.
- Van Alen v. American Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 1, 788
 Van Buskirk v. Van Buskirk, 148 Ill. 9, 35 N. E. 353, 518
 Vanderbilt, Re, 50 App. Div. 246, 63 N. Y. Supp. 1079, 163 N. Y. 597, 57 N. E. 1127, 282
 Vanderhurst v. Tholcke, 113 Cal. 147, 35 L. R. A. 267, 45 Pac. 266, 807
 Van Duyne v. Thayer, 14 Wend. 233, 322
 v. Van Duyne, 14 N. J. Eq. 49, 289, 290
 Van Dyck v. Hewitt, 1 East. 96, 5 Revised Rep. 516, 938
 Vangindertaelen v. Phenix Ins. Co. 82 Wis. 112, 33 Am. St. Rep. 29, 51 N. W. 1122, 456
 Van Hoesen v. Coventry, 10 Barb. 518, 274
 Van Horn v. Van Horn, 52 N. J. L. 286, 10 L. R. A. 184, 20 Atl. 485, 728
 Vanhorne v. Des Moines, 63 Iowa, 447, 50 Am. Rep. 750, 19 N. W. 203, 234
 Van Ness v. Packard, 2 Pet. 144, 7 L. ed. 374, 248
 Van Winter v. Henry County, 61 Iowa, 685, 17 N. W. 94, 542
 Veazie v. Williams, 8 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 1018, 192
 Vermont C. R. Co. v. Burlington, 28 Vt. 193, 387
 Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 633
 Vilmont v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 64 Iowa, 514, 17 N. W. 31, 21 N. W. 9, 600
 Vineland Irrig. Dist. v. Agusa Irrig. Co. 126 Cal. 494, 46 L. R. A. 820, 58 Pac. 1057, 252
 Virginia Midland R. Co. v. Washington, 86 Va. 629, 7 L. R. A. 344, 10 S. E. 927, 225
 Vischer v. Yates, 11 Johns. 23, 955, 959
- W.
- Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454, 27 L. ed. 605, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 932, 152
 Wade v. Jones, 20 Mo. 75, 61 Am. Dec. 584, 567
 Wadsworth v. Tillotson, 15 Conn. 366, 39 Am. Dec. 391, 273, 274
 Wagner v. Bissell, 3 Iowa, 496, 249
 v. Hildebrand, 187 Pa. 136, 41 Atl. 34, 178
 Wahle v. Reinbach, 76 Ill. 322, 218
 Waite v. Frank, 14 S. D. 626, 86 N. W. 645, 178
 v. North Eastern R. Co. El. Bl. & El. 719, 440, 441
 Walker v. Brown, 28 Ill. 378, 81 Am. Dec. 287, 676
 v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555, 262
 v. Mauro, 18 Mo. 564, 595
 v. Hildesville, 96 N. C. loc. cit. 385, 294
 2 S. E. 74
 Wall v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. 32 Fed. 273, 453
 Wall v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 52 W. Va. 485, 94 Am. St. Rep. 948, 44 S. E. 294, 627
 Wallace v. Lawyer, 54 Ind. 501, 23 Am. Rep. 681, 784
 v. Lincoln Sav. Bank, 89 Tenn. 631, 24 Am. St. Rep. 625, 15 S. W. 448, 736
 Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 9, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77, 633, 634
 Waller v. Northern Assur. Co. 64 Iowa, 101, 19 N. W. 865, 938, 939
 Walrath v. Champion Min. Co. 171 U. S. 293, 43 L. ed. 170, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809, 930, 931
 Walsh v. Dwight, 40 App. Div. 513, 58 N. Y. Supp. 91, 695, 697
 v. Hill, 38 Cal. 481, 139
 Walworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 356, 32 L. ed. 712, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340, 508
 Wanek v. Winona, 78 Minn. 98, 46 L. R. A. 448, 70 Am. St. Rep. 354, 80 N. W. 851, 496
 Wannell v. Kem, 57 Mo. 478, 434
 Ward v. New England Fibre Co. 154 Mass. 419, 28 N. E. 299, 116
 v. Vosburgh, 31 Fed. 12, 177
 Warden v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 94 Ala. 277, 14 L. R. A. 551, 10 So. 276, 447
 Warner v. Grace, 14 Minn. 487, 611, 364, 784
 Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Brown, 17 Wall. 445, 21 L. ed. 675, 225
 Washington & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 135 U. S. 554, 34 L. ed. 235, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1049, 149, 151, 152
 Wason v. Colburn, 99 Mass. 342, 462
 Water Supply & Storage Co. v. Larimer & W. Irrig. Co. 24 Colo. 322, 46 L. R. A. 322, 51 Pac. 496, 212
 Watertown Thermometer Co. v. Pool, 51 Hun, 157, 4 N. Y. Supp. 861, 300
 Watkins v. Kaolin Mfg. Co. 131 N. C. 536, 60 L. R. A. 617, 42 S. E. 983, 549
 Watson v. Dilts, 116 Iowa, 249, 57 L. R. A. 559, 93 Am. St. Rep. 239, 89 N. W. 1068, 549
 v. Keystone Ironworks Co. (Kan.) 14 Pac. 269, 325
 v. Needham, 161 Mass. 404, 24 L. R. A. 287, 37 N. E. 204, 236
 Watt's Appeal, 78 Pa. 370, 389
 Weare v. Deering, 60 N. H. 56, 813
 Webb v. Demopolis, 95 Ala. 126, 21 L. R. A. 82, 13 So. 289, 342, 343
 Webber v. Townley, 43 Mich. 538, 38 Am. Rep. 213, 5 N. W. 971, 433
 Webster v. Buss, 61 N. H. 40, 60 Am. Rep. 317, 300
 Wedgbury v. Cassell, 164 Ill. 622, 45 N. E. 978, 74
 Weeks v. Patten, 18 Me. 42, 36 Am. Dec. 696, 290
 Weitz v. Mound City R. Co. 58 Mo. App. 39, 842
 Welch v. Phelps & B. Wind Mill Co. 89 Tex. 653, 36 S. W. 71, 695
 Weld v. Walker, 130 Mass. 422, 39 Am. Rep. 463, 181
 Welsh v. Cutler, 44 N. H. 561, 938
 Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Church, 57 L. R. A. 905, 90 N. W. 878, 549
 v. Crocker, 135 Ala. 492, 59 L. R. A. 308, 33 So. 45, 549
 v. Fisher, 107 Ky. 513, 54 S. W. 830, 549
 v. Giffin, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 306, 65 S. W. 661, 549
 v. Hendricks, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 413, 68 S. W. 720, 493
 v. Jackson, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 273, 46 S. W. 270, 493
 v. Pearce, 95 Tex. 578, 68 S. W. 771, 493
 v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 806, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126, 509
 v. Rich, 19 Kan. 517, 27 Am. Rep. 159, 395
 v. State, 82 Md. 293, 31 L. R. A. 572, 51 Am. St. Rep. 464, 33 Atl. 703, 104
 v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067, 509
 v. Turner, 94 Tex. 304, 60 S. W. 432, 493
- 4 L. R. A.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Van Cleave, 107 Ky. 464, 92 Am. St. Rep. 366, 54 S. W. 827.....	549	Wilson v. Ridgely, 46 Md. 235.....	113
v. Young, 77 Tex. 245, 19 Am. St. Rep. 751, 13 S. W. 985.....	493	v. Simmons, 89 Me. 242, 36 S. E. 380.....	807
Westmoreland v. Preferred Accd. Ins. Co. 75 Fed. 244.....	351	Wilson Sewing Machine Co. v. Wilson, 23 Blatchf. 51, 22 Fed. 803, 51 Conn. 595.....	536
Whaler v. Ahl, 29 Pa. 98.....	274	Winchester v. Stebbins, 16 Gray, 52.....	462
Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721.....	245, 256, 257	Winney v. Sandwich Mfg. Co. 86 Iowa, 608, 18 L. R. A. 524, 53 N. W. 421.....	799
v. Chrisman, 24 Pa. 298, 64 Am. Dec. 657.....	272	Winter v. Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 524, 61 Am. Dec. 878.....	629
Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 659, 8 L. ed. 1080.....	248	Womack v. Circle, 32 Gratt. 347.....	478
Wheeler v. Bowles, 163 Mo. 308, 63 S. W. 675.....	974	Wood v. Bolyston Nat. Bank, 129 Mass. 358, 37 Am. Rep. 366.....	789
v. Cincinnati, 19 Ohio St. 19, 2 Am. Rep. 368.....	234	v. Independent School District, 44 Iowa, 27.....	542
Wheelock v. Jacobs, 67 Am. St. Rep. 665.....	257	v. Railroad, 45 Minn. 778.....	968
Whirley v. Whitman, 1 Head, 610.....	439	v. Sutcliffe, 16 Jur. 75, 18 Eng. L. & Eq. Rep. 217.....	270
White v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 4 Dill. 177, Fed. Cas. No. 17,545.....	453	v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748.....	270
v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick. 181.....	956	v. Whitehead Bros. Co. 165 N. Y. 545, 59 N. E. 357.....	300
v. Milwaukee City R. Co. 61 Wis. 536, 50 Am. Rep. 154, 21 N. W. 524.....	496	Woodman v. Metropolitan R. Co. 149 Mass. 335, 4 L. R. A. 213, 14 Am. St. Rep. 427, 21 N. E. 482.....	542
v. Parkin, 12 East, 578.....	736	v. Pitman, 79 Me. 456, 1 Am. St. Rep. 342, 10 Atl. 321.....	464
v. Providence Sav. Life Assur. Soc. 163 Mass. 108, 27 L. R. A. 398, 39 N. E. 771.....	454	Woodward v. Aborn, 35 Me. 271, 58 Am. Dec. 609.....	106
Whitfield v. Westbrook, 40 Miss. 317.....	478	v. Alston, 12 Helsk. 581.....	732
Whitley v. Foy, 59 N. C. 34, 78 Am. Dec. 236.....	788	Wortman, Re, 22 Abb. N. C. 187, 2 N. Y. Supp. 324.....	948
Wiggin v. St. Louis, 135 Mo. 558, 37 S. W. 528.....	294, 542	Wright v. Big Rapids Door & Blind Mfg. Co. 124 Mich. 91, 50 L. R. A. 495, 82 N. W. 829.....	541
v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 398, 9 Pac. 646.....	559	v. Fansler, 90 Ind. 494.....	478
Wiggins v. Muscuplaube Land & Water Co. 113 Cal. 182, 32 L. R. A. 667, 54 Am. St. Rep. 337, 45 Pac. 160.....	249	v. Howard, 1 Sim. & Stu. 190.....	260
Willig v. Miami County, 54 Kan. 605, 38 Pac. 787.....	88	Wunderle v. Wunderle, 144 Ill. 40, 19 L. R. A. 84, 33 N. E. 195.....	772
Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 9, 31 L. ed. 632, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.....	341	Wyandotte County v. First Presby. Church, 30 Kan. 620, 1 Pac. 109.....	88
Willard v. Holmes, 142 N. Y. 492, 37 N. E. 480.....	480	Wyant v. Central Teleph. Co. 123 Mich. 51, 47 L. R. A. 497, 81 Am. St. Rep. 155, 81 N. W. 928.....	807
Williams v. Citizens' Enterprise Co. 153 Ind. 496, 55 N. E. 425.....	783	Wyman v. Penobscot & K. R. Co. 46 Me. 162.....	225
v. Corson, 2 Tenn. Ch. 269.....	462	Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. 293, 82 Am. Dec. 506.....	181, 182
v. Johnson (21 L. R. A. 848, note, 112 N. C. 424, 34 Am. St. Rep. 513, 17 S. E. 496).....	344
v. Morland, 2 Barn. & C. 913.....	274
v. New York, 105 N. Y. 433, 11 N. E. 829.....	342
v. Norwood, 2 Yerg. 336.....	478
v. Williams, L. R. 20 Ch. Div. 659.....	181
Willis v. Perry, 92 Iowa, 297, 26 L. R. A. 124, 60 N. W. 727.....	256, 273
Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412.....	989
Wilson v. Donaldson, 117 Ind. 356, 3 L. R. A. 266, 10 Am. St. Rep. 48, 20 N. E. 250.....	536, 537
v. Knott, 3 Humph. 475.....	448

Y.

Yahn v. Ottumwa, 60 Iowa, 433, 15 N. W. 257.....	294
Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984.....	629
York & M. Line R. Co. v. Winans, 17 How. 30, 15 L. ed. 27.....	225
Young v. Glendinning, 194 Pa. 550, 45 Atl. 364.....	177
v. Hudson, 99 Mo. 102, 12 S. W. 632.....	601

Z.

Zabriskie v. Cleveland, C. & C. R. Co. 23 How. 381, 16 L. ed. 488.....	404
--	-----

STATUTES AND CONSTITUTIONS, CITED, CONSTRUED, ETC.

England.

Statutes.

21 James I. chap. 16. Limitation of actions.....	736
29 Car. II. chap. 3, § 25. Marital rights of husband.....	469
9 Anne, chap. 14. Gambling contracts.....	955
22 Geo. II. chap. 83. Guardians of the poor.....	431
1 Vict. chap. 26, § 27. Devise of real estate.....	862
64 L. R. A.

United States.

Constitution.

Art. 1, §§ 9, 10. Prohibiting bills of attainder.....	466
Art. 6. Supreme law of the land.....	326
Amend. 14, § 1. Equal protection of the laws.....	141, 326, 457, 643, 680, 924, 948, 962

Statutes.

1890, July 2, chap. 647. Anti-trust act.....	302
	692, 716, 725

Art. 5, §§ 2, 5, 8. Ineligibility for office..	947
Art. 15, § 1. Election or appointment of officers	947
Art. 15, § 6. Protection of rights of women	564
Art. 15, § 9. Homestead exemption.....	564

Statutes.

1886, p. 211, chap. 180. Veterans' preference law.....	946
1897, p. 182, chap. 91. Time of commencing action.....	81
1901, p. 359, chap. 186. Veterans' preference law.....	946
1901, p. 439, chap. 249. Libel.....	791
Chap. 576. Libel.....	791

General Statutes, 1901.

§ 2023. Assault with intent to kill.....	311
§ 2027. Punishment for bodily harm.....	311
§ 4446, subd. 7. Time of commencing action	81
§ 4449. Statute of limitations.....	797
§ 4451. New action.....	81
§ 4454. Party in interest.....	584
§§ 5121, 5125. Mechanics' liens.....	326
§ 5871. Sale or lease of railroad.....	800
§ 7342, § 13. Construing "person".....	797
§ 7937. Who may make will.....	566

Civil Code.

§ 21. Limitation of action.....	798
§ 26. Party in interest.....	584
§ 28. Parties to civil action.....	584
§ 64. Service of summons.....	798

Kentucky.Constitution.

§ 241. Damages for wrongful death.....	574
--	-----

Statutes, 1903.

§ 6. Damages for wrongful death.....	574
--------------------------------------	-----

Louisiana.Civil Code.

Arts. 666, 667. Obligations of proprietors	104
Art. 670. Obligations to keep buildings in repair	104
Art. 2317. Responsibility for damages...	225
Art. 2679. Leases	225

Maryland.Statutes.

1872, chap. 294, p. 481. Duty of treasurer to pay taxes.....	114
1876, chap. 88, p. 136. Tax levy for water supply.....	632
1882, chap. 295, p. 451. Levying water tax	633
1894, chap. 302. Workshops and factories	639
1894, chap. 310, p. 435. Prohibiting possession of lottery slips	645
1896, chap. 467. Workshops and factories	639
1898, chap. 275, p. 819. Affidavit as to interest	804
1898, chap. 313, p. 885. Tax on mortgages	804
1900, chap. 489. Extension of charter of water company.....	635
1902, chap. 26, p. 33. Affidavit as to interest	804
1902, chap. 101, p. 121. Addition to Code regulating work-shops	639
1902, chap. 102, p. 124. Validation of mortgages	804

Code of Public Local Laws.

Art. 7, §§ 238-247. Levying water tax..	633
Art. 10, § 49. Duty of treasurer to pay taxes	114

Code of Public General Laws.

Art. 21, §§ 44, 45. Recording of chattel mortgage	802
Art. 27. Crimes and punishments.....	639
Art. 27, § 127. Loss of money at gaming table	955
Art. 27, § 128. Gaming table.....	955
Art. 27, § 130. Construction of statute...	955
64 L. R. A.

Art. 27, §§ 149cc—149hh. Regulating work-shops and factories	639
Art. 81, 146a. Tax on mortgages.....	804
Art. 81, § 146D. Affidavit as to interest	804
Art. 93, § 217. Appraisalment of jewelry..	802

Massachusetts.Public Laws.

1890, chap. 437. Wagering contracts....	173
Public Statutes, 1881.
Chap. 52, § 18. Injury from defective way	72
Chap. 157, §§ 46-50. Assignment.....	192

Michigan.Compiled Laws, 1897.

Chap. 91, § 1. Municipal liability for injuries	71
Chap. 188, §§ 7037-7073. Incorporation of manufacturing companies	647
Vol. 3, § 9516. Contracts for sale of goods	124
Vol. 3, § 9518. Representations as to credit of another.....	123

Minnesota.Constitution.

Art. 4, §§ 33, 34. Prohibiting special or class legislation....	511
---	-----

Statutes.

1887, chap. 10, § 2. Common carriers....	626
1903, chap. 362, p. 652. Prohibiting sales of merchandise on Sunday	511

General Statutes, 1894.

Chap. 32, tit. 1. Rights of riparian owners	988
§ 2385. Rivers public highways for logs	988
§ 2386. Dams to have sluiceway.....	988
§ 5200. Jurisdiction of foreign corporation	628
§ 5211. Attachment of property.....	626
§ 6513. Regulating Sunday labor.....	511
§ 6517. Public sales on Sunday.....	511

Penal Code.

§ 223. Public sales on Sunday.....	511
------------------------------------	-----

Mississippi.Poindester's Code.

Chap. 56, p. 314. Trial for murder....	809
Revised Code, 1892.

§§ 1334, 1335. Jurisdiction of crime....	809
§ 1356. Indictment for offense.....	809
§ 2947. Power of municipality over highway	806
§ 2964. Power of municipality to light streets	806

Missouri.Constitution.

Art. 2, § 4. Object of constitutional government	680
Art. 2, § 21. Compensation for property taken	962
Art. 2, § 30. Due process of law.....	680
Art. 9, §§ 20-25. St. Louis	681

Revised Statutes, 1889.

§ 2543. Railroad on street.....	964
Revised Statutes, 1899.

§ 1035. Railroad on street.....	964
§ 4273, cl. 4. Limitation of action.....	969
§§ 6116, 6117. Damages.....	968

Montana.Statutes.

1866, Dec. 3, chap. 12, p. 62. Attachment.	131
1869, Jan. 15, p. 64. Attachment.....	131

Code of Civil Procedure.

- § 890, 891. Contract for direct payment of money 129

Nebraska.Compiled Statutes, 1903.

- Chap. 43, § 45. Allowance of attorney's fee 457

New Hampshire.Bill of Rights.

- Art. 12. Rights of members of community 43

Constitution.

- Art. 5. Powers of general court 43

Statutes.

- Ed. 1792, pp. 341, 343, 347. Exemption from taxation 44
Ed. 1797, p. 400. Exemption from taxation 44
1810, June 18. Exemption from taxation. 1890, chap. 2361, p. 2262. Encouraging manufactures 45
1869, chap. 124, p. 370. Exemption from taxation 46
1871, July 7, chap. 25, p. 529. Exemption from taxation 46
1881, chaps. 235, 237, 241, pp. 605-6, 610. Electricity 47
1887, chaps. 237, 243, 247, 287, 292, pp. 595, 601, 605. Electricity 47
1887, chap. 261, p. 619. Electricity 47
1893, chap. 59, p. 47. Liability for defective highway 71
1897, chap. 93, p. 89. Use of bicycles on highway 72
1897, chap. 61, p. 51. Use of bicycles on highway 72
1897, chap. 208, p. 207. Exemption of electric-light plant from taxation 48

General Statutes, 1867.

- Chap. 49, § 9. Exemption from taxation.. 45

Public Statutes, 1901.

- Chap. 55, § 11. Exempting manufacturing establishments from taxation 42
Chap. 157, § 10. Interchange of business between railroads .. 815
Chap. 159, § 1. Duty of railroad to provide crossings 818
Chap. 160, §§ 1-3. Railroad accommodations 816

New Jersey.Statutes.

- 1850, P. L. p. 194. Grant of fee to purchasers of cemetery lots 100

New York.Statutes.

- 1863, chap. 254, § 4. Duty of pier owner to dredge adjoining slip 278
1873, chap. 702. Right to fill in land 278
1884, chap. 491. Right to fill in land 278
1896, chap. 547, p. 577. Real-property law 282
1896, chap. 908, pp. 868-881. Tax law 281
1897, chap. 284, p. 150, § 220. Taxable transfers 281
1897, chap. 383, p. 310. Prevention of monopolies 713
1899, chap. 690, p. 1514. Prevention of monopolies 71

Revised Statutes.

- P. 1596, § 16. Liability of town for defective highway ... 71

Code.

- § 111. Actions; party in interest 586
64 L. R. A.

Code of Civil Procedure.

- § 635. Issuance of attachment 131
§ 649. Manner of levying attachment... 131
§ 834. Prohibiting physician from disclosing information ... 841
§ 836. Disclosing information 843

North Carolina.Constitution.

- Art. 1, § 7. Prohibiting exclusive privileges 141
Art. 1, § 31. Prohibiting monopolies and perpetuities 141

Statutes.

- 1715, chaps. 21, 31. Statute of limitations 737
1858-59, chap. 258, p. 356. State medical society 141
1885, chap. 117, p. 180. License to practise medicine 141
1903, chap. 697, p. 1074. Practice of medicine and surgery.. 142

Code.

- § 3122. Practice of medicine and surgery. 142
§ 3124. Examination of applicant to practise medicine 141

Ohio.Revised Statutes.

- §§ 3184-3187. Liens 847
§ 3206a. Lien of laborer 847
§ 3239. Powers of corporations 397
§§ 3630a, 3631-23. Life insurance 412
§ 5430. Exemptions to heads of families.. 847
§ 6355. Preferred claims 848
§ 6760, cl. 3. Quo warranto 408
§ 6761, cl. 4. Quo warranto 408

Pennsylvania.Statutes.

- 1862 April 5 (P. L. 419). Chartiers Cemetery Company 414
1885, June 23 (P. L. 134). Insurance... 453

Tennessee.Constitution.

- Art. 1, § 12. Forfeiture of estate 465

Statutes.

- 1870-71, chap. 17, § 1. Notice to consignee 448
1875, chap. 89. Marital rights of husband 469
1877, chap. 79. Marital rights of husband 469
1879, chap. 11. Municipal corporations... 422
1879, chap. 145, p. 185. Provision of safe for use of hotel guests 471
1887, chap. 178, p. 303. Life and casualty companies 453
1893, chap. 6. Life and casualty companies 453
1895, chap. 160, p. 332. Insurance 452
1895, chap. 220, p. 443. Fire insurance... 453
1901, p. 248, chap. 141. Insurance 452

Code, 1858.

- § 41. Repeal of statutes 466
§§ 3567 et seq. Mandamus 421

Shannon's Code.

- § 3306. Insurance 452
§ 3515. Public holidays 449
§ 3503. Safe for use of hotel guests 471
§ 3597. Notice to consignee 448
§§ 4237, 4238. Marital rights of husband.. 469
§ 4466-4483. Statute of limitations 733
§ 6851. Reversal of judgment 451

Watkin's Digest, 1902.

- Pp. 19, 20, § 6. Powers of mayor 436
P. 22, §§ 1, 2. Powers of mayor 436
P. 170, art. 5. Powers of mayor 436

Texas.		West Virginia.
Bill of Rights.		Constitution.
Art. 1, § 9. Unreasonable searches and seizures	499	Art. 11, § 8. Rolling stock liable to execution	506
Constitution.		Wisconsin.
Art. 5, § 8. Jurisdiction and powers of district courts	497	Revised Statutes, 1898.
Revised Statutes, 1895.		Revised Statutes, 1898.
Art. 1451. Repealing "right of view"	499	§ 1839. Damages caused by defective highway	190
Art. 3258. Common law in force	497
64 L. R. A.

LAWYERS' REPORTS

ANNOTATED.

NEW HAMPSHIRE SUPREME COURT.

WILLIAMS et al.

v.

Selectmen of WARREN et al.

(.....N. H.....)

1. An establishment for the collection and distribution of electricity for the purpose of power and light is not for manufacturing purposes within the meaning of a statute permitting towns to exempt manufacturing establishments from taxation.
2. An exemption from taxation of a plant established to saw and dress lumber, and to collect and distribute electricity for power and light, is not effectual as to the portion devoted to the manufacture of lumber when it fails because of illegality

NOTE.—Taxation of manufacturing corporations in the United States.

- I. Scope of note, 33.
 - II. Definitions.
 - a. General, 34.
 1. Lexicographical, 34.
 2. Judicial, 34.
 - b. Principles, 36.
 - c. Examples, 37.
 - III. Evolution of manufactured products.
 - a. In general, 41.
 - b. Nature's bounty, 41.
 - c. Initial operations, 42.
 - d. Development, 45.
 - e. Manufacturing through contractors, 46.
 - f. Assembling ready-made parts, 48.
 - g. Finished works, 50.
 - IV. Organization.
 - a. In general, 52.
 - b. Domestic and foreign corporations, 53.
 - V. Operation.
 - a. In general, 54.
 - b. Manufacturing and its incidents, 55.
 - c. Incidental manufacturing, 55
 - d. Associated enterprises.
 1. Production of raw materials, 55.
 2. Trade and commerce, 56.
 3. Miscellaneous, 57.
 - VI. Special industries, 58.
 - a. Light and power companies.
 1. Gas, 58.
 2. Electricity, 59.
 - b. Printing and publishing, 62.
 - c. Purveying, 64.
 - d. Collecting and distributing ice, 66.
 - VII. Interpretations of laws, 66.
 - VIII. Conclusion, 68.
- 44 L. R. A.

as to the electrical apparatus, where there is nothing to show that the exemption would have been voted upon that portion had it been known that the remainder was not subject to exemption.

(November 3, 1903.)

CASE transferred by the Superior Court for Grafton County for the opinion of the Supreme Court upon a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the assessment of certain property for taxation. Petition granted.

The town passed in legal manner the following resolution: "The establishment—that said establishment shall include a saw-

In WILLIAMS v. WARREN the supreme court of New Hampshire has answered in the negative the question whether or not the generating and furnishing of electrical light, heat, and power is manufacturing. It has thus aligned itself with the court of appeals of Maryland, and against the court of appeals of New York. The writer of this note believes the weight of judicial opinion upon this question to be on its affirmative side. The authorities pro and con with as much of the reasoning upon which their conclusions rest as the limits of such a commentary as this permit, are collated and outlined, infra, VI. a, 2.

I. Scope of note.

This note is confined to cases decided in the United States involving the liability to taxation of corporations engaged in gainful productive industries not exclusively mining, agricultural, or commercial, or operations simply incidental to either pursuit, but really or supposedly entitled to be classed as manufacturers. It does not deal with questions relating to the taxation of manufacturing corporations which affect them merely in common with other corporations or individual taxpayers, but with such, only, as affect them because they are, or are asserted to be, manufacturers. Cases that but exemplify the elementary principles that all corporate grants are to be strictly construed, and that corporations have no powers not explicitly granted or necessarily implied, such as whether or not a manufacturing corporation may mine, farm, or trade, and, if it does one or another, whether it loses character, have not been taken in, except where the main controversy was concerning a tax, or by way of illustrating some obscure point.

The power of the legislature to treat manufacturing corporations as a class apart in en-mill and dressing mill—for manufacturing lumber and wood, and furnishing steam and electric power and light and distributing the same, proposed to be erected and put in operation in the village of Warren by William R. Park, and the capital to be used by him in operating the same, not exceeding $30,000, shall be exempted from taxation for the period of ten years: Provided, that said Park shall invest and expend not less than $3,000 upon and in his said proposed establishment in the village of Warren; and Provided, further, that said Park shall give in to the town of Warren all personal property not hereby exempted, on the 1st day of each April, for the purpose of taxation in said Warren."

Park, in reliance upon the vote, erected acting revenue laws is assumed throughout without discussion. For decisions holding that manufacturing corporations may be classified separately for taxation or exemption therefrom, the reader is referred to the note in this series on Constitutional equality in the United States in relation to corporate taxation, to Bacon v. State Tax Comrs. 60 L. R. A. 321.

The reader should consult the note on What constitutes manufacture, appended to Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 14 L. R. A. 107.

II. Definitions.

a. General.

The investigator in this field encounters, at the very outset of his inquiries, great difficulty in determining what sense is to be attached to the words, "manufacture," "manufacturing," and "manufactured" when they occur in tax laws and decisions interpreting and applying them. It will be, therefore, helpful to begin the discussion by collating the dictionary and judicial definitions, and the principles that control a choice of meaning, with illustrative examples of their application.

1. Lexicographical.

In Webster the noun "manufacture" is defined to be (1) the operation of making wares or any products by hand, by machinery, or by other agency; and (2) anything made from raw materials by the hand, by machinery, or by art. And the verb, as (1) to make wares or other products by hand, by machinery, or by other agency; and (2) to work, as raw or partly wrought materials, into suitable forms for use. Worcester defines "manufacture" as an artificer, and "manufacture" as the process of making anything by art, or of reducing materials into a form fit for use, by hand or by machinery; while to manufacture, according to him, is to form by workmanship, by hand or machine; to make by art and labor. The Century Dictionary elaborates a little. That authority defines the noun "manufacture" as the operation of making goods or wares of any kind; the production of articles for use from raw or prepared materials by giving to these materials new forms, qualities, properties, or combinations, whether by hand labor or by machinery: Used more especially of production in a large way by machinery, or by many hands working co-operatively; and the verb as (1) to make or an establishment for sawing and dressing lumber and wood with sufficient apparatus for furnishing steam and electric power and light, but made no effort to put the latter portion of the plant into operation. This proceeding was brought to compel the taxation of the property devoted to the purposes of the lumber mill.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Smith & Smith and Batchelor & Mitchell, for plaintiffs:

The same necessity for a consideration exists for the purpose of a contract exempting property from taxation that would exist if it were a contract between private parties.

Grand Lodge, F. & A. M. v. New Orleans, 166 U. S. 143, 41 L. ed. 951, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep.

fabricate, as anything for use,—especially in considerable quantities or numbers, or by the aid of many hands or of machinery; work materials into the form of,—as to manufacture cloth, pottery, or hardware; to manufacture clothing, boots, and shoes, or cigars. Burrill says, manufacturing is the process of making a thing by art; Abbott, that a manufactured article is whatever is made by human labor, either directly or through the instrumentality of machinery. Anderson and Black each adopt the definition of manufacture given in Carlin v. Western Assur. Co. 57 Md. 515, 40 Am. Rep. 440.

2. Judicial.

The courts have frequently essayed the task of framing a general definition of one or the other of the words. The most successful of these efforts follow.

"Manufacture" means to make anything by hand or artificial device. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Fulgham, 91 Ala. 555, 8 So. 808.

"Manufacture" is transformation,—the fashioning of raw materials into a change of form for use. Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6.

To manufacture is to change and modify natural substances so that they become articles of value and use. Re Capital Pub. Co. 8 MacArth. 405, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 319.

The maker by mechanical labor of a useful thing is usually entitled to be called a manufacturer. People ex rel. L. E. Waterman Co. v. Morgan, 48 App. Div. 395, 63 N. Y. Supp. 76.

Manufacturing in the modern sense is making an article, either by hand or machinery, into a new form capable of being, and designed to be, used in ordinary life. Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. 785, 12 L. ed. 914.

That he who saws wood, and he who simply grinds corn, ordinarily is styled respectively a wood-sawyer or a miller, rather than a manufacturer of wood, or of corn meal, is because those terms definitely express the exact character of the business referred to; but when great quantities of salable articles are produced, even by a single operation of a simple machine, such production is properly characterized as manufacturing. Schrieffer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481.

Change of name and manipulation do not

523; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Gaines, 97 U. S. 697, 24 L. ed. 1091.

The people of Warren never voted to exempt Park unless and until he should build an establishment which should furnish electric power and light and distribute the same. It is no excuse for Park, for not doing it, that the selectmen told him he need not do it.

Wadleigh v. Sutton, 6 N. H. 15, 23 Am. Dec. 704; School District v. Carr, 63 N. H. 201.

Selectmen have no general authority to bind their town.

Andover v. Grafton, 7 N. H. 298.

Exemptions from taxation are regarded as in derogation of the common right, and are not to be extended beyond the express terms necessarily constitute manufacturing. Frazee v. Moffitt, 20 Blatchf. 267, 18 Fed. 584.

The mere appropriation of an article which is furnished by nature is not manufacturing. Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839.

Manufacturing is making, and to make in the mechanical sense does not signify to create out of nothing, for that surpasses all human power. It does not often mean the production of a new article out of materials entirely raw. It generally consists in giving new shapes, new qualities, or new combinations to matter which has already gone through some artificial process. Norris Bros. v. Com. 27 Pa. 494.

This definition is repeated in New Orleans v. Le Blanc, 34 La. Ann. 596, where it is added: A shoemaker is none the less a manufacturer because he does not also tan the leather; the tanner is none the less a manufacturer because he does not breed and raise the bullocks from which the raw hides are taken. The tanner makes leather to sell, but does not buy hides to sell again. He produces the article leather, and depends for his profit upon the labor which he bestows upon the raw material.

The legal meaning of the term "manufacturer" as defined by the Louisiana decisions is, one engaged in working raw materials into wares suitable for use; in giving new shapes, new qualities, new combinations, to matter which has already gone through some artificial process; and in preparing original substances for use in different forms; one making to sell and standing between the original producer and the dealer or first consumer, and depending for profit on the labor bestowed on the raw material. State v. Dupré, 42 La. Ann. 561, 7 So. 727.

When any article having a distinct name in the trade and commerce of the country is produced by machinery, or by a chemical process, from any material or materials having different commercial names from such article, the operation by which it is produced may generally be called manufacture. Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481.

The primary meaning of the word "manufacture" is something made by hand, as distinguished from a natural growth; but, as machinery has largely supplanted this primitive method, the word is now ordinarily used to denote an article upon the material of which labor has been expended to make the finished product. Ordinarily the article so manufactured 64 L. R. A.

of the language used, and are to be construed strictissimi juris; and the same rule should be applied to a vote of this town.

Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Thomas, 132 U. S. 174, 33 L. ed. 302, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Leves Comrs. 132 U. S. 190, 33 L. ed. 308, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74.

On motion for rehearing.

A mere change in the words of a revision will not be deemed a change in the law, unless it appears that such was the intention.

Crowell v. Clough, 23 N. H. 207; Woodward v. Peabody, 39 N. H. 189.

An electric-light plant would not be included within the meaning of the words "manufacturing establishments," as contained in the statute.

takes a different form, or at least subserves a different purpose, from the original materials, and usually it is given a different name. Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States, 171 U. S. 210, 43 L. ed. 139, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

While from its derivation the primary meaning of the word "manufacture" is making with the hand, this definition is too narrow for its present use. Its meaning has expanded as workmanship and art have advanced, so that now nearly all artificial products of human industry, nearly all such materials as have acquired changed conditions or new and specific combinations, whether from the direct action of the human hand, from chemical processes devised and directed by human skill, or by the employment of machinery,—which, after all, is but a higher form of the simple implements with which the human hand fashioned its creations in ruder ages,—are now commonly designated as "manufactured." Carlin v. Western Assur. Co. 57 Md. 515, 40 Am. Rep. 440.

A manufactory, or a factory, is a building of which the main or principal design or use is to be a place for producing articles as products of labor. There is no difficulty in understanding what is meant when we speak of a factory or manufactory. It is something more than a place where things are made. Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Brock, 57 Pa. 74.

What is the definition of a forge or furnace for the manufacture of iron?—asks the court in Rogers v. Danforth, 9 N. J. Eq. 289, for, it continues, if there is a definition comprehended and understood alike by scientific men and by mechanics acquainted with the business referred to, such definition ought to control the court in its construction of this covenant. What is such a forge or furnace? An establishment or mechanical contrivance by which iron is made or manufactured from the ore. A large manufactory or makes malleable iron direct from the ore. A blast furnace makes cast iron direct from the ore. From what is iron manufactured? It is manufactured from the ore. By a blacksmith's forge iron is not manufactured. But by it from iron itself machines or instruments of use are manufactured. It is not the intention of defendants to erect any forge for the manufacture of iron. Their intention is, not to make iron, but to use iron, when made, to be worked up into different materials.

The words "works, mines, manufactory," used in a preferential wages law, have a definite

Opinion of the Justices, 58 N. H. 623; Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839; Com. v. Edison Electric Light Co. 145 Pa. 131, 27 Am. St. Rep. 683, 22 Atl. 841, 845, 846; Com. v. Brush Electric Light Co. 145 Pa. 147, 22 Atl. 844; Com. ex rel. McCormick v. Keystone Electric Light, Heat, & P. Co. 193 Pa. 245, 44 Atl. 326; Frederick Electric Light & P. Co. v. Frederick City, 84 Md. 599, 36 L. R. A. 130, 36 Atl. 362.

Messrs. Burleigh & Adams, for defendants:

Regardless of the question of constitutionality, exemptions made by vote of a town, and acted upon in good faith by the party exempted, within the plain terms of the law, come within the protection of legsignification well understood in their general and popular acceptance. Ex vi termini the branches of business intended to be described by them are in a sense complete and independent and of a fixed and permanent character, as opposed to a temporary employment merely incidental to a particular branch of business. Pardee's Appeal, 100 Pa. 408.

b. Principles.

The words "manufacturing corporation," in a tax exemption statute, must be interpreted according to the common understanding. People v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. 92 N. Y. 487.

The definitions of the terms "manufacturing corporations" and "manufacture," derived from some decisions and statutes called to our attention, said, in substance, the New York court of appeals, in one case, are of little service in construing the language of this act (referring to the law imposing a state franchise or business tax upon corporations, and exempting from its payment manufacturing companies wholly engaged in manufacturing within the state). These terms must be construed in view of the general purposes of the acts in which they are used, and the general phraseology found in connection with them. To give effect to the legislative intention, their ordinary meaning may be enlarged or restricted. People v. Horn Silver Min. Co. 105 N. Y. 76, 11 N. E. 155, Affirmed in 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

The word "manufacture" is used in its ordinary sense in the Louisiana Constitution in the provision respecting tax exemptions. Patterson v. New Orleans, 47 La. Ann. 275, 16 So. 815.

The term "manufacturer," under the national bankrupt act, has a legal meaning, and this legal meaning must be governed by legal rules. It is true that everyone who manufactures is not to be embraced within the legal phrase. Re Kenyon, 1 Utah, 47, 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 238.

Words in a statute are to be taken in their ordinary and familiar signification, and regard is to be had to their general and popular use. Courts will presume that they were used to express their meaning in common usage. This rule of interpretation determines the judicial construction to be placed upon the word "manufacturer" in the bankrupt law; and there can be no doubt but that it was there used in the 64 L. R. A.

islative contracts, the binding obligation of which is inviolable under the Federal Constitution.

Brewster v. Hough, 10 N. H. 138; Opinion of the Justices, 58 N. H. 623; Cox Needle Co. v. Gilford, 62 N. H. 503; Boody v. Watson, 63 N. H. 320, 64 N. H. 162, 9 Atl. 794; State v. United States & C. Exp. Co. 60 N. H. 260; Franklin Needle Co. v. Franklin, 65 N. H. 177, 18 Atl. 318; Franklin Falls Pulp Co. v. Franklin, 66 N. H. 274, 20 Atl. 333; Kimball Carriage Co. v. Manchester, 67 N. H. 483, 39 Atl. 334; Opinion of the Justices, 70 N. H. 643, 50 Atl. 329; Dow v. Northern R. Co. 67 N. H. 1, 36 Atl. 510.

When an express promise of exemption from taxation for a term not exceeding ten years has induced the promisee to make an limited sense in which it is commonly understood. Re Capital Pub. Co. 3 MacArth. 408, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 319.

If the question whether a corporation engaged in the business of furnishing electricity for lighting public and private places, or for power, is a manufacturing company depended upon the dictionary meanings of the words, or the technical language of science in describing electricity as a power or agent in nature, it would be difficult, and perhaps impossible, to show that the process which an electric light and power company calls manufacturing produces anything that in a certain sense and in some form did not exist before; but that is true of most, if not all, manufacturing operations, and the application of labor and skill to materials that exist in nature to give them a new quality or characteristic and adapt them to new uses is called manufacturing. These considerations are, however, not conclusive in determining the scope and meaning of the term "manufacturing corporations," used in a statute of exemption from taxation; the true inquiry is, whether a corporation organized as, and carrying on the business of, an electric light company would not be considered in common language as engaged in some manufacturing process, though all that is said by experts and others about electricity as a natural element or force be granted. People ex rel. Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 14 L. R. A. 708, 20 N. E. 808.

Beard, J., of the Tennessee supreme court, in dissenting from its conclusion that logs are manufactured articles, quotes the dictionary definitions of the word "manufacture," and then says: All these definitions imply that by a combination of skill and labor the raw or crude material has taken on a new form convenient for use. I think the popular acceptance of the term is the same as that of the lexicographers, and that a layman of ordinary intelligence in the use of words would be surprised to find that one which he had long applied to articles the output of skilled workmanship also embraces sawlogs in whosever hands they chanced to be. Upon examination it will be found that the courts have applied to the term the same meaning as have both the lexicographers and the plain people. Benedict v. Davidson County (Tenn.) 67 S. W. 806.

The technical or scientific meaning of words does not always control in the construction of investment which the promisors desired him to make, he cannot be defrauded by repudiation of the promise.

Opinion of the Justices, 58 N. H. 624; State v. United States & C. Exp. Co. 60 N. H. 219; Boody v. Watson, 63 N. H. 320.

By legislative action property may be exempted from taxation on the sanctity of contracts under the United States Constitution, when there is a consideration.

Cooley, Taxn. 53; New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164, 3 L. ed. 303; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. ed. 401; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 17 L. ed. 173; Pacific R. Co. v. Maguire, 20 Wall. 36, 22 L. ed. 282; Wilmingon & W. R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall. 266, 20 L. ed. 569; Home of the Friendless v. Rouse, 8 Wall. 430, 19 L. ed. 495; Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. 133, 11 L. ed. 529; Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 14 L. ed. 977; McGee v. Mathis, 4 Wall. 143, 18 L. ed. 314; Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. 244, 21 L. ed. 326.

Tax exemption contracts cannot be invalidated by a judicial change in the construction of the Constitution or statutory law of a state.

Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 432, 14 L. ed. 1003; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 85; Pease v. Peck, 18 How. 595, 15 L. ed. 518; Gelpoke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. ed. 520; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. 294, 18 L. ed. 38.

statutes. The cardinal rule is, the words in common use are to be taken in their ordinary signification. In the ordinary and general use of the word "manufacturer" the publishing of a newspaper does not come within the popular meaning of the term. State, Evening Journal Assn., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 47 N. J. L. 36, 52 Am. Rep. 107, note.

The words and terms of a constitutional article, like those of a law, are to be understood in their most usual signification; and, in order to ascertain the true meaning of a statute, the reason and spirit of it should be considered, and also the cause which superinduced its enactment. This is the accepted canon of construction of statutes, and equally so of the Constitution. We are not to consider, said the Louisiana supreme court in stating and applying that principle to a case in hand, the terms employed in an article of the Constitution from a scientific point of view, as we do not regard it to have been the intention of the framers of the amendment that they should be so considered and construed. We do not understand that illuminating gas is generally understood to be a chemical, and it is for that reason, presumably, that plaintiff resorted to scientific information upon the subject. Shreveport Gas, Electric Light & P. Co. v. Caddo Parish, 47 La. Ann. 65, 16 So. 650.

Nevertheless, should be heeded the warning of Sharswood, Ch. J., of Pennsylvania, when he says: The moment we depart from the plain words of a statute according to their ordinary grammatical meaning in a hunt for some intention founded on the general policy of the law we find ourselves involved in a "sea of troubles." Difficulties and contradictions meet us at every turn. Dane's Appeal, 62 Pa. 417.

c. Examples.

One who, on a considerable scale, works up lumber solely from trees grown on his own land is a manufacturer. His case is unlike that of a farmer making cheese or cider. Re Chandler, 1 Low. Dec. 478, Fed. Cas. No. 2,591.

Logs at a sawmill, awaiting conversion into lumber, are manufactured articles. Benedict v. Davidson County (Tenn.) 67 S. W. 806.

But the work of cutting logs on woodland, and running them into booms, is not manufacturing. Pardee's Appeal, 100 Pa. 408.

Rattan from which the outer rind or enamel has been cut by machinery for chair cane, leaving a cylindrical core, is not manufactured; but, when such core is further cut into an oval, a square, or flat section form, it is manufactured. Foppes v. Magone, 40 Fed. 570.

India rubber resulting simply from the changed color, consistency, and bulk, and the hardening of the milky fluid, drawn from the caoutchouc tree by exposure to air, heat, and evaporation, although in a certain sense manufactured, is to be regarded as an unmanufactured natural product when it is left in form and shape so as to be solely available as raw material for manufacturing something else. Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. 785, 12 L. ed. 914.

But when it is made to take a particular shape, as by successively dipping a cast into the juice or sap of the india rubber tree and forming thereon a rubber shoe useful at once to wear without further labor or change, a manufactured article is produced, and the process of producing it is manufacturing, notwithstanding the article thus made is the same in substance, quality, and condition, and equally available in every respect for manufacturing something else, as is the shapeless mass of raw material. Ibid.

A corporation which makes and sells sewer pipe and drain tiles, in which the ingredients are clay dug from its own lands, water pumped from a river, and salt bought in the open market, and whose products at producers' prices are worth tenfold the value of these materials, is a manufacturer, and not a merchant. Iowa Pipe & Tile Co.'s Appeal, 101 Iowa, 170, 70 N. W. 115.

Conceding that the compounding of an asphalt mixture for use as a street pavement is manufacturing, it cannot be admitted that the preparation of the street to receive it, and the spreading upon it of the plastic pavement, are in any sense manufacturing within the meaning of the New York tax law. People ex rel. Syracuse Improv. Co. v. Morgan, 59 App. Div. 302, 69 N. Y. Supp. 263.

Making coke from coal is manufacturing. Com. v. Juniata Coke Co. 157 Pa. 507, 22 L. R. A. 232, 27 Atl. 373.

Smelting and reducing metal-bearing ores is manufacturing. Re Tecopa Min. & Smelting Co. 110 Fed. 120, 3 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 841, Disapproving obiter dictum to the contrary in Re Rollins Gold & S. Min. Co. 102 Fed. 982.

By smelting the form of ore is changed, useless matter is eliminated, and the product given another name. The product is both useful

On motion for rehearing.

An establishment designed for furnishing and distributing electric power and light is a "manufacturing establishment" within the meaning of the statute.

19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 922-926; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 345-351.

The following are plainly deducible as the distinguishing and essential elements of manufacturing: First, human agency, involving superintendence, skill, and labor, one or more of them, in every case; second, the employment of certain processes or devices, mechanical, chemical, or otherwise, or the artificial manipulation or combination of natural forces, in a way to produce a commodity for commercial use, as distinguished from the free gifts of nature, or things in their natural state, such as sunshine, air, water, fruits, vegetables, animals, natural oils and gases, wood, timber, coal, minerals, metals, ice found on ponds, etc.

An erroneous or imperfect conception of just what manufacturing is, has led to conflicting opinions by different judges in their distinctions between natural resources and artificial products. That there is a logical, well-defined, divisional line between them, however, and that such line, when found, determines whether the given commodity is a manufacture or a thing in its natural state, has long been recognized by the judiciary.

The liberation of natural gas or oil from the earth, and its transportation to market, are held not to be manufacturing, but the

and more valuable; and, while the ore taken from the mine is unchanged in substance, and even in form, save by breaking, remains ore still, when smelted it is no longer ore in form, and is altered in substance by taking away some of its component parts, and, as this is effected by human hands and machinery, it comes clearly within the popular definition of manufacturing. Ibid.

The white mineral powder, resembling pulverized alum, chemically considered hydrate of alumina, and called refined bauxite, differing from crude bauxite only in the fact that it has gone through a process that has mechanically removed impurities of iron and silica, and which, like crude bauxite, is used for the purpose of making alum and aluminous products, and which has undergone no chemical change, is a dutiable manufactured article, and not to be classed as the bauxite of a tariff free list. Re Irwin, 62 Fed. 150.

A corporation whose capital is invested exclusively in blast furnaces, rolling and steel mills, the equipment thereof, and sundry appurtenant buildings, and which makes pig iron, railroad iron, steel beams, channels, bars, plates, etc., for structural purposes, is a manufacturing corporation engaged in manufacture only. Com. v. Pottsville, Iron & Steel Co. 157 Pa. 500, 22 L. R. A. 228, 27 Atl. 371.

According to the common comprehension, and the ordinary use, of language, the refining at a United States assay office of base bullion into standard silver is not a manufacture, nor is the assay office a manufacturing establishment. People v. Horn Silver Min. Co. 105 N. Y. 76, 11 N. E. 155, Affirmed in 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

Bending the edges of discs of copper does not make a manufactured article. United States v. Potts, 5 Cranch, 284, 3 L. ed. 102.

The builder of locomotives is a manufacturer. Norris Bros. v. Com. 27 Pa. 494.

So, too, is the builder of boats. Norton Naval Constr. & Ship Building Co. v. State Board, 53 N. J. L. 564, 22 Atl. 352.

So, too, is one making, selling, and setting up in permanent place, steel bridges, roofs, viaducts, turntables, and similar structures and machinery. Com. v. Keystone Bridge Co. 156 Pa. 500, 27 Atl. 1; Com. v. Pittsburgh Bridge Co. 156 Pa. 507, 27 Atl. 4.

But one who constructs and uses dry and wet docks for building, raising, repairing, and coppering vessels, and who builds, raises, repairs, coppers, and improves ships, is not a manufacturer. People v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. 92 N. Y. 487.

Making fish lines, packing, and other hempen articles is manufacturing textile fabrics. New Orleans v. Arthurs, 36 La. Ann. 98.

Ropes and twines are textile fabrics. Waterbury v. Atlas Steam Cordage Co. 42 La. Ann. 723, 7 So. 783; Hernsheim v. Atlas Steam Cordage Co. 42 La. Ann. 726, 7 So. 784.

But coats and trousers are not. Cohn v. Parker, 41 La. Ann. 894, 6 So. 718.

A book-binder and blank-book maker is a manufacturer. Seeley v. Gwillim, 40 Conn. 106.

A corporation whose authorized and principal business is printing, publishing, and selling books is a manufacturer. People ex rel. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73.

A corporation engaged in the business of printing and publishing books, and general job printing, is a manufacturing company. Press Printing Co. v. State Board, 51 N. J. L. 75, 16 Atl. 173.

A bond and coupon register in book form with spaced pages, etc., is a manufactured article. Munson v. New York, 13 Blatchf. 237, 3 Fed. 338.

A corporation organized for the purpose of, and engaged in, making blank books and stationery, printing, and lithographing, and in selling the products of such work, is a manufacturing corporation doing manufacturing. Com. v. Wm. Mann Co. 150 Pa. 64, 24 Atl. 601.

So, too, is a corporation that prints and publishes for sale books and periodicals, and makes stationery, and binds blank books to sell. Com. v. J. B. Lippincott Co. 156 Pa. 513, 27 Atl. 10.

But the making of billheads, blank books, notes, order blanks, and other printed forms used in commercial business, and the cutting and folding for the purpose into required sizes of paper bought ready for use, are not manufacturing stationery or paper. Patterson v. New Orleans, 47 La. Ann. 275, 16 So. 815; Earle v. New Orleans, 47 La. Ann. 277, 16 So. 816.

The business of editing, printing, publishing, and vending a daily newspaper is manufacturing. State v. Dupré, 42 La. Ann. 561, 7 So. 727.

In Re Kenyon, 1 Utah, 47, 6 Nat. Bankr. Res. 238, the court was unanimous in thinking the collecting and distribution of a natural product.

Emerson v. Com. 108 Pa. 111.

While the making of artificial illuminating gas has been held to be such manufacturing business.

Covington Gaslight Co. v. Covington, 84 Ky. 94; Consolidated Gas Co. v. Baltimore, 62 Md. 588, 50 Am. Rep. 237; Nassau Gaslight Co. v. Brooklyn, 89 N. Y. 409.

Ordinarily a butcher who merely slaughters animals and sells the meat dressed therefrom would not be carrying on a manufacturing business; but where one purchases and slaughters swine, and uses certain processes and combinations of other materials whereby the carcasses are converted into bacon, lard, and cured meats for commercial use, he is taxable as a manufacturer.

Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 691, 52 Am. Rep. 103; People ex rel. New England Dressed Meat & Wool Co. v. Roberts, 20 App. Div. 521, 47 N. Y. Supp. 123.

The cutting, storing, and selling of ice from a natural pond are generally held not to be a manufacturing business.

Byers v. Franklin Coal Co. 106 Mass. 131; Hittinger v. Westfall, 135 Mass. 262; People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 99 N. Y. 183, 1 N. E. 689.

But the artificial production of ice by mechanical or chemical process is a manufacturing business.

Atty. Gen. ex rel. Miner v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 164, 60 Am. Rep. 287, 26 N. W. 311.

business of printing and publishing a daily newspaper, manufacturing; but it was not necessary so to decide in that case.

Two different courts in other jurisdictions have decided exactly the reverse, viz.: That the printing and publishing of a daily newspaper are not manufacturing. Re Capital Pub. Co. 3 MacArth. 405, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 319; State, Evening Journal Asso., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 47 N. J. L. 36, 52 Am. Rep. 107, note; Press Printing Co. v. State Board, 51 N. J. L. 75, 16 Atl. 173.

The opportunity which came to the New York court of appeals to decide this question was not embraced. People ex rel. Jewelers' Circular Pub. Co. v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 1, 49 N. E. 248.

Making paper boxes is not manufacturing paper. Washburn v. New Orleans, 48 La. Ann. 226, 9 So. 37.

Brewing malt liquors is manufacturing. Com. v. Germania Brewing Co. 145 Pa. 83, 22 Atl. 240; Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. v. Hagerty, 8 Ohio C. C. 330; National Brewing Co. v. Ahlgren, 63 Ill. App. 475; Keeley Brewing Co. v. Emrick, 64 Ill. App. 247; Welsh v. Ferd Helm Brewing Co. 47 Mo. App. 608.

So is distilling spirituous liquors. Kurth v. State, 86 Tenn. 134, 5 S. W. 593.

But rectifying distilled spirits is not. Com. v. Glithnan, 64 Pa. 103.

The drawing from oil wells of crude petroleum is not manufacturing; but a corporation producing from crude petroleum refined oil and other commercial products manufactures. Com. v. National Oil Co. 157 Pa. 516, 27 Atl. 374.

A corporation formed to refine oil, coal, and other minerals, and prepare them for use, is strictly a manufacturing corporation. Hawes v. Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Co. 101 Mass. 385.

The Louisiana supreme court did at one time hold that refining raw sugar and crude molasses was not manufacturing (State v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 51 La. Ann. 562, 25 So. 447, affirmed in 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43); but it has since candidly confessed itself in error, and overruled its former decision, in a very elaborate opinion, with such an abundance of cited authority as practically to demonstrate the total incorrectness of this view (108 La. 603, 32 So. 965).

A roaster of coffee, mixer of spices, and blender of teas is not a manufacturer. People ex rel. Union Pacific Tea Co. v. Roberts, 145 N. Y. 375, 40 N. E. 7.
64 L. R. A.

Neither is one who, by a secret process, selects, roasts, and by peculiar methods cools, green coffee to produce known brands of valued flavors. New Orleans v. New Orleans Coffee Co. 46 La. Ann. 86, 14 So. 502.

One who buys wet, muddy, and damaged cotton, and dries, cleans, picks, and prepares it for sale, is not a manufacturer of cotton. State v. Hemard, 23 La. Ann. 263.

A washing and ironing concern is not a manufacturing plant and business as defined by statute, lexicon, or judicial utterance. Com. v. Keystone Laundry Co. 203 Pa. 289, 52 Atl. 326.

But a corporation formed to bleach, callender, print, dye, and finish silk, cotton, and linen goods, whose actual business is bleaching goods after they come from the mills, is a manufacturing corporation. Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing & Bleaching Co. 15 Gray, 216.

The making of corn into meal is manufacturing. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Fulgham, 91 Ala. 555, 8 So. 803.

A steam flour mill is a manufactory. Carlin v. Western Assur. Co. 57 Md. 515, 40 Am. Rep. 440.

Millers of rice are manufacturers, and rice flour is a manufactured article; but rice millers are not manufacturers of flour, nor is rice flour a manufacture of flour. State ex rel. Ernst v. State & City Board, 36 La. Ann. 347; New Orleans v. Ernst, 35 La. Ann. 746; Martin v. Thibaut, 37 La. Ann. 21.

An ice-cream maker is not a manufacturer. New Orleans v. Mannessier, 32 La. Ann. 1075. Neither is a baker of bread. State v. Eckendorff, 46 La. Ann. 131, 14 So. 518.

But a corporation making out of flour, not bread, but biscuits, crackers, Italian, fancy, and soup pastes is a manufacturer. State v. American Biscuit Mfg. Co. 47 La. Ann. 160, 16 So. 750.

Making and bottling soda-water, seltzer, vi- chy, and other carbonated beverages is not manufacturing chemicals. Crescent City Seltz & Mineral Water Co. v. New Orleans, 48 La. Ann. 768, 19 So. 943.

It was held in Jackson v. State, 15 Ohio, 652, that the business of purchasing and slaughtering hogs and packing pork for transportation and sale was not manufacturing; but that decision was afterwards overruled in Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 691, 52 Am. Rep. 103, in which it was decided that such business, coupled with Nearly all artificial products of human industry, nearly all such materials as have acquired changed conditions or new specific combinations, whether from the direct action of the human hand, from chemical processes devised and directed by human skill, or by the employment of machinery are now commonly designated as manufactured.

Carlin v. Western Assur. Co. 57 Md. 526, 40 Am. Rep. 440; Allen v. Smith, 173 U. S. 399, 43 L. ed. 744, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Emerson v. Com. 108 Pa. 111; Murphy v. Arson, 96 U. S. 131, 24 L. ed. 773; Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 694, 52 Am. Rep. 103; Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. 100 Mass. 183; Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. 785, 12 L. ed. 914.

The product of an electric power and light the production of lard, and the curing and encasing of hams and bacon, was true manufacturing.

However, refrigerated mutton, rendered tallow, pulled wool, and raw hides are not manufactures. People ex rel. New England Dressed Meat & Wool Co. v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 408, 41 L. R. A. 228, 50 N. E. 53.

But it is otherwise as to fertilizers made from the offal of slaughtered animals. Ibid.

Salt, said the court in Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481, is manufactured by the simple process of boiling or solar evaporation of brine. The statement seems to be justified by the decisions. East Saginaw Salt Mfg. Co. v. East Saginaw, 13 Wall. 376, 20 L. ed. 611; Central Ohio Salt Co. v. Guthrie, 35 Ohio St. 686; Salt Co. v. Wilkinson, 8 Blatchf. 30, Fed. Cas. No. 12,269.

Hay is not a manufactured article; neither is hay making manufacturing. Frassee v. Moffitt, 20 Blatchf. 267, 18 Fed. 584.

Neither in a popular, nor in a legal, sense is there any such use of the term "manufacturing company" as would include the functions of an aqueduct company, or describe the distribution of pure water as a branch of manufacture. Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. 100 Mass. 183.

Bones pulverized or ground to small irregular fragments, called bone dust, are manufactures of bone, and taxable as such under the internal revenue laws. Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481.

Bones crushed and screened are also manufactures of bone. Re Gardner, 72 Fed. 494.

But wool purposely torn to bits is not manufactured. United States v. Patton, 46 Fed. 461.

Firewood is not a manufactured article. Correlo v. Lynch, 65 Cal. 273, 3 Pac. 889.

But kindling wood is, when cut up by machinery in large quantities, dried, and bound in bundles. People ex rel. Standard Wood Co. v. Roberts, 20 App. Div. 514, 47 N. Y. Supp. 122; Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481.

And so are elephants' tusks merely sawed into pieces of different sizes, when the operation requires discriminating skill to separate varying grades of ivory adapted to divers uses. Re Gerdaun, 54 Fed. 143.

The cutting into blocks, and the storing, preserving, and distributing to consumers, of ice plant is "electrical energy," a commodity of commerce artificially made by a complicated mechanical process, which can be as accurately measured as a gallon of molasses, as readily distributed on wires as gas or oil is in pipes, and as easily stored and transported in jars as kerosene is in barrels. It is a manufactured article, and not a gift or product of nature.

People ex rel. Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 14 L. R. A. 708, 29 N. E. 808; People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 669; Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 117, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839; Com. v. Edison Electric Light & P. Co. 170 Pa. 231, 32 Atl. 419; Com. ex rel. McCormick v. Keystone Electric Light, Heat & P. Co. 193 Pa. 245, 44

naturally formed upon natural bodies of water is not manufacturing; but the making of artificial ice is. People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 669; Hittinger v. Westford, 185 Mass. 258; Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839.

He is not inappropriately termed a manufacturer who produces artificial ice by the method of evaporation and expansion, said Dickman, J., in Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 691, 52 Am. Rep. 103.

In Atty. Gen. ex rel. Miner v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157, 60 Am. Rep. 287, 26 N. W. 311, a majority of the court was of the opinion that even the cutting into cakes, scraping, housing, preserving, and distributing on a large scale, by the aid of machinery and many workmen, of natural ice formed on natural waters was manufacturing.

The liberation from the earth of natural gas or oil is not manufacture. Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839.

A corporation to supply natural gas for fuel is not a manufacturing corporation. Emerson v. Com. 108 Pa. 111.

Producing artificial illuminating gas from coal distillation or water decomposition and hydro-carbon vapors is manufacturing. Nassau Gaslight Co. v. Brooklyn, 89 N. Y. 409.

It is, indeed, generally admitted that the ordinary gaslight company, making and supplying artificial gas, is a manufacturing company. Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. 100 Mass. 183; West Chester Gas Co. v. Chester County, 30 Pa. 232; Coatesville Gas Co. v. Chester County, 97 Pa. 476; Williams v. Rees, 9 Biss. 405, 2 Fed. 882; Ottawa Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Downey, 127 Ill. 201, 20 N. E. 20; Sterling Gas Co. v. Higby, 134 Ill. 557, 25 N. E. 660; Covington Gaslight Co. v. Covington, 84 Ky. 94; Com. v. Allegheny Gas Co. 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 93; West Manayunk Gaslight Co. v. Philadelphia, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 52.

But artificial illuminating gas is not a chemical so as to win tax exemption as such. Shreveport Gas, Electric Light & P. Co. v. Caddo Parish, 47 La. Ann. 65, 16 So. 650.

The generating and transmitting of electricity for illumination, heat, and power are manufacturing. People ex rel. Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 14 L. R. A. 708, 29 N. E. 808; People ex rel. Edison Electric Il-

Atl. 326; Edison United Mfg. Co. v. Farmington Electric Light & P. Co. 82 Me. 464, 19 Atl. 859; Opinion of the Justices, 150 Mass. 597, 8 L. R. A. 487, 24 N. E. 1084; Lamborn v. Bell, 18 Colo. 346, 20 L. R. A. 241, 32 Pac. 989; Beggs v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 96 Ala. 295, 38 Am. St. Rep. 94, 11 So. 381.

When a company has invested a part of its capital stock in property not used for manufacturing purposes an apportionment may be made.

Com. v. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. 151 Pa. 276, 24 Atl. 1111, 1113; Com. v. Wm. Mann Co. 150 Pa. 64, 24 Atl. 601.

The manufacturer does not forfeit his claim to exemption, where the property is used principally in the manufacture of exempt articles, although it may be incidentally employed in the manufacture of other articles, intimately connected with the principal business.

State ex rel. Frederick v. Board of Assessors, 41 La. Ann. 534, 6 So. 337; Smith v. Board of Assessors, 44 La. Ann. 91, 10 So. 387; Com. v. Juniata Coke Co. 157 Pa. 507, 22 L. R. A. 232, 27 Atl. 373; Com. v. Savage Fire Brick Co. 157 Pa. 512, 27 Atl. 374; Com. v. East Bangor Consol. Slate Co. 162 Pa. 599, 29 Atl. 706; Com. v. Lackawanna Iron & Coal Co. 129 Pa. 360, 18 Atl. 133, 1120; Com. v. Mahoning Rolling Mill Co. 129 Pa. 360, 18 Atl. 135; Robinson v. Green, 3 Met. 159; Mavor v. Pyne, 3 Bing. 285; Perkins v. Hart, 11 Wheat. 237, 6 L. ed. 463; Withers v. Reynolds, 2 Barn. & Ad.

Illuminating Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 684, 29 N. E. 812; People ex rel. Edison Electric Light Co. v. Campbell, 88 Hun. 527, 34 N. Y. Supp. 711; Re Consolidated Electric Storage Co. (N. J. Eq.) 26 Atl. 983; Beggs v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 96 Ala. 295, 38 Am. St. Rep. 94, 11 So. 381; Opinion of the Justices, 150 Mass. 592, 8 L. R. A. 487, 24 N. E. 1084; Edison United Mfg. Co. v. Farmington Electric Light & P. Co. 82 Me. 464, 19 Atl. 859; Mauldin v. Greenville, 33 S. C. 1, 8 L. R. A. 291, 11 S. E. 434.

But, although it is manufacturing, it does not follow that electric light and power companies are included under a general designation of manufacturing companies in tax exemption laws. Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839; Com. v. Edison Electric Light & P. Co. 170 Pa. 231, 32 Atl. 419; Frederick Electric Light & P. Co. v. Frederick City, 84 Md. 599, 36 L. R. A. 130, 36 Atl. 362.

Still, when it is a question of reorganization after sale on foreclosure of the franchise of such a company, a general statute authorizing manufacturing companies to be reorganized by the purchasers is sufficient to warrant a legal reorganization of an electric light company. Com. ex rel. McCormick v. Keystone Electric Light, Heat, & P. Co. 193 Pa. 245, 44 Atl. 326.

However, a corporation chartered to supply electric light, heat, and power for public and private use is not organized for purely manufacturing purposes. Evanston Electric Illuminating Co. v. Kochersperger, 175 Ill. 26, 51 N. E. 719.

The reader will find in the opinion in State v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 108 La. 603, 32 So. 965, in which the Louisiana supreme court reversed itself upon the question of sugar refining being manufacturing, a longer list of citations, of decisions, and legislative, judicial, scientific, and popular utterances by way of definition and illustration of what constitutes manufacturing processes, than can be found in any other reported case.

III. Evolution of manufactured products.

a. In general.

The work of the manufacturer begins as soon as that of the miner, the woodsman, the farmer, and the planter ends. Coal mined, and stone quarried, from the earth, needing only breaking into sizes suitable for use; oil pumped and gas caught escaping through the soil, and held in tanks for distribution by measure; trees felled in the forest, and cane cut in the brake, and hauled to mills; grain reaped and grass mowed in the field and meadow and stored in barns; and water from lakes and rivers, impounded in reservoirs,—are plainly not manufactured. When, however, ore is reduced, and its metal separated from the dross; when oil is refined; the tree lopped of its branches and cut into logs; the grain threshed and the grass dried,—processes of manufacturing have begun. How much further, if at all, must these processes proceed to produce manufactured articles? A very troublesome question. And when the first operation ends,—when a natural product has undergone an initial change,—when metal has been freed from dross, oil from impurities, grain from chaff, and stone and wood have been cut into regular forms, it is just as puzzling to determine how far the next operations must be carried to result in a new manufacture. It is not surprising that in their attempts to answer these questions satisfactorily courts have been confused and inconsistent. As their decisions are examined their conclusions are often found in conflict, sometimes in exactly parallel circumstances, and even occasionally in the same jurisdiction.

b. Nature's bounty.

It has been seen that the mere appropriation of a gift of nature is not manufacturing. The cases are substantially agreed that a natural product is not manufactured, even when human labor has to be applied to fit it for use, if its substance, general condition, and quality remain the same as before.

A corporation organized to mine coal, and engaged in coal mining as its sole business, is not within a statute relating to manufacturing corporations, and making the officers thereof liable for their debts. Byers v. Franklin Coal Co. 106 Mass. 131.

Mining is not a manufacturing, trading, or mercantile pursuit within the meaning of the national bankrupt act. Re Elk Park Min. & Mill Co. 101 Fed. 422.

A mining company, notwithstanding it does some smelting and ore reducing, is not engaged principally in manufacturing within the terms of that act. Re Rollins Gold & S. Min. Co. 102 Fed. 982.

882; Sickels v. Pattison, 14 Wend. 257, 28 Am. Dec. 527; McKnight v. Dunlop, 4 Barb. 36; Snook v. Fries, 19 Barb. 313; Carleton v. Woods, 28 N. H. 290; East Kingston v. Toule, 48 N. H. 57, 2 Am. Rep. 174, 97 Am. Dec. 575; Boston, C. & M. R. Co. v. State, 60 N. H. 87; Dow v. Northern R. Co. 67 N. H. 1, 36 Atl. 510; Smith v. Burley, 9 N. H. 423; Opinion of the Justices, 4 N. H. 565; Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray, 1, 61 Am. Dec. 381; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa, 165, 63 Am. Dec. 487; State v. Jackson, 69 N. H. 511, 43 Atl. 749; Leavitt v. Lovering, 64 N. H. 607, 1 L. R. A. 58, 15 Atl. 414; Opinion of the Justices, 45 N. H. 590.

Chase, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The statute under which the town acted

A corporation to supply natural gas as fuel to be converted into heat by consumers is not a manufacturing corporation; nor does a statute authorizing the formation of manufacturing corporations afford any authority for incorporating a natural gas supply company. Emerson v. Com. 108 Pa. 111.

The mere appropriation of an article which is furnished by nature is not manufacture. Thus, the liberation of natural gas or oil from the earth is not manufacture; but the production of illuminating gas artificially is. The collection, storage, preparation for market, and transportation of ice naturally congealed is not manufacture; but the making of ice by artificial means is. Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839.

A gaslight company is a manufacturing corporation. Illuminating gas is an artificial product, not a bounty of nature merely liberated from coal. The process of making it is by a destructive distillation of coal. Nassau Gaslight Co. v. Brooklyn, 89 N. Y. 409.

Hay is the same article it was when stalks of grass rooted in the earth; the substance of dried grass is still grass. The facts that in making hay the grass is cut, scattered by a tedder to enable it to dry, raked up and piled in cocks over night to sweat, opened out to dry again, and put in barns to remain a month before it is in a condition to press and bale; and that by this process the starch and gluten in cut grass is converted into sugar,—does not make hay a manufactured article, as sugar is from maple sap or cane juice or salt from the evaporation of brine. Frazee v. Moffitt, 20 Blatchf. 207, 18 Fed. 584.

An aqueduct company manufactures nothing. Nothing is put into the article it supplies to change its natural condition. The whole operation of the waterworks is designed merely to keep foreign substances from mingling with the water. Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. 100 Mass. 183.

The cutting of ice produced by the agencies of nature on the surface of a pond into pieces of a size convenient to handle, and storing the pieces in a building, cannot, in any proper sense, be called a manufacture. The material is in no way changed, or adapted to any new or different use; it still remains ice, to be used simply as ice; it is no more a manufacture than in making the exemption to Park reads as follows: "Towns may by vote exempt from taxation for a term not exceeding ten years any manufacturing establishment proposed to be erected or put in operation therein, and the capital to be used in operating the same, unless such establishment has been previously exempted from taxation by some town." Pub. Stat. 1901, chap. 55, § 11. The establishment contemplated by the town's vote was to be equipped for furnishing steam and electric power and light, and distributing the same, as well as for manufacturing lumber and wood. It was a single establishment, designed for two independent purposes. While it is possible that a boundary line might be discovered separating the portions of the building and machinery used for one purpose from the portions used for the other, and that the capiputting the water of the pond into casks for transportation and use would be a manufacture. It is like the harvesting of hay or grain or other agricultural crops, and the analogy is so strong and obvious that the "ice crop," the "ice harvest," and "harvesting ice," are terms in common use. Hittinger v. Westford, 135 Mass. 258.

A company incorporated to harvest and collect ice from natural bodies of water, to store, preserve, and carry it to market, and to sell it, and whose performances correspond with its license, is not a manufacturing company, neither does it carry on manufacture. Its dealing is with ice as an existing article, not the manufacture or production of ice by combination of materials, or the application of forces, or otherwise. It collects, stores, and preserves that which natural causes created, and which other natural causes would destroy and waste. It seeks only to hold these last in check. Similar operations would apply to water, fruit, sand, gravel, coal, and other natural productions. Water might be improved by filtration; fruit by judicious pruning of tree or vine, or protection by glass; sand and gravel by screening; cobble stones by selection; and coal by breaking; and each by various processes stored until the season of demand, when, having been "collected, stored, preserved, and prepared for sale" the natural articles, and no other, would be put upon the market. People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 669.

A majority of the judges of the Michigan supreme court were, however, of the opposite opinion in the case of Atty. Gen. ex rel. Miner v. Lorman, 50 Mich. 157, 60 Am. Rep. 287, 26 N. W. 311.

Whether, said the New York supreme court, in passing upon the claim of an electric light company to exemption from a state tax upon the ground that it was a manufacturing corporation, an electric light company is a manufacturing company seems to depend upon the question whether electricity is manufactured, or is already in existence and simply collected or gathered and utilized. The processes adopted by the reiator are stated in the case, and we have differing opinions of learned experts laid before us. As a scientific question, it would seem to be still in the debatable stage. Something also seems to depend upon the definition tal might be appropriated in definite shares to the several purposes, it is not possible to ascertain whether the vote would have been adopted if it had not provided that both kinds of business should be carried on at the establishment. Some of the voters may have been induced to favor the scheme by the promise of an electric light and power plant, and would have voted against it in the absence of such promise. Others may have voted for it because they were more particularly interested in having a lumber mill established in the town, and were willing to subsidize an electric plant, in addition to the mill, to secure their wish. See Cow Needle Co. v. Gilford, 62 N. H. 503. The provision for having a light and power plant is a material part of the vote, and cannot be separated from the other provisions and treated as void, leaving the latter in force. The action of the town covered both subjects indiscriminately, and must stand or fall as a whole. It therefore is a fundamental question in the case whether an establishment designed for furnishing and distributing such power and lights is a "manufacturing establishment," within the meaning of the statute. In attempting to answer the question, it must be borne in mind that the policy of the state requires the taxation of property, as a general rule. "Every member of the community has a right to be protected by it in the enjoyment of his life, liberty, and property. He is, therefore, bound to contribute his share in the expense of such protection, and to yield his personal service when necessary, or an equivalent." Bill of Rights, art. 12; Const. art. 5. "It of terms. Following our impressions, however crudely formed they may be, we conclude that electricity exists in a state of nature, and that the relator collects or gathers it and does not manufacture it. We refrain from any exposition of the premises upon which this conclusion is based; if it is sound the relator is not a manufacturing corporation, and therefore not within the exemption of the statute. People ex rel. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. v. Wemple, 61 Hun, 53, 15 N. Y. Supp. 711.

But the New York court of appeals deemed the conclusion unsound, and reversed the judgment. 129 N. Y. 664, 29 N. E. 812.

To say, said that tribunal in deciding the case followed as authority for such reversal, that electricity exists in a state of nature, and that the relator collects or gathers it, does not fully or accurately express the process by means of which it is enabled to sell and deliver something useful and valuable to its customers. People ex rel. Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 14 L. R. A. 708, 29 N. E. 808.

And the supreme court of Alabama, in deciding whether or not electric light companies were manufacturing corporations so as to be authorized to consolidate under the laws of that state, said, after quoting the dictionary definitions of manufacture: According to these definitions we are constrained to consider and declare an electric light company a manufacturing corporation to all intents and purposes. It is no answer to say that electricity exists in a state of nature, and that an electric light corporation collects or gathers it. This does not fully or exactly express the process by which such corporations are able to make, sell, and deliver something useful and valuable. The electricity of nature is of a very different quality from that produced by machinery. Beggs v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 96 Ala. 295, 38 Am. St. Rep. 94, 11 So. 381.

c. Initial operations.

Notwithstanding bones broken into small fragments by grinding and pulverizing, or crushing and screening, are manufactured enough to be taxable under the United States revenue laws (Schriever v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481; Re Gardner, 72 Fed. 494), wool intentionally torn to fragments and commercially called waste, but not true waste, which consists of refuse or broken particles thrown off in the process of manufacture, merely resembling real waste, is not a manufacture of wool so as to be subject to a tariff duty (United States v. Patton, 46 Fed. 461).

A corporation which employs a secret unpatented process for so selecting green coffee that by careful, cleanly roasting and a peculiar mode of cooling produces, without the use of chemicals, brands of coffee of distinct, recognizable, and valued flavors is not a manufacturer, and hence not entitled to the exemption from license taxes accorded by the Louisiana Constitution to manufacturers. New Orleans v. New Orleans Coffee Co. 46 La. Ann. 86, 14 So. 502.

And a corporation which purchases spices and baking powders in bulk, and puts them up into packages for sale; which takes tea in the state in which it is imported, and mixes various kinds together to produce a certain brand; and which buys coffee in the raw beans, roasts it, grinds it, and, in some instances, blends different grades or kinds in combination,—is not a manufacturing corporation, and therefore not exempt from taxation as such. People ex rel. Union Pacific Tea Co. v. Roberts, 145 N. Y. 375, 40 N. E. 7, Affirming 82 Hun, 352, 31 N. Y. Supp. 243.

But a refiner of sugar and molasses, who purchases the crude or raw sugar and syrup and puts it through a refining process which improves its quality and appearance and enhances its value, is a manufacturer within the immunity of a constitutional provision exempting manufacturers as a class from license and occupation taxes. The product is not the same as the raw material, which is disagreeable to see, taste, and smell, and which in process of refinement must undergo dissolution and recrystallization. State v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 108 La. 603, 32 So. 965, Overruling the prior contrary decision in State v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 51 La. Ann. 562, 25 So. 447, Affirmed in 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.

Shells whose surfaces have been ground, cleaned, polished, and etched with acids are not manufactures of shells dutiable under the tariff act, but unmanufactured and free. Hartman v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. ed. 1012, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240; Hartman v. Winters, 121 U. S. 616, 30 L. ed. 1015, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1244.

These decisions were founded on the fol-will never be assumed that the government intended to release any part of the property entitled to its protection from the burden incident to such protection, and it is the duty of those who assert that claim to show it in language which can admit of no other conclusion; and, where doubt arises as to the meaning of the language used which it is claimed confers the exemption, it will be construed most strongly against those who maintain the exemption." Phillips Exeter Academy v. Exeter, 58 N. H. 306, 307, 42 Am. Rep. 589; Boody v. Watson, 63 N. H. 320, 321; Kimball Carriage Co. v. Manchester, 67 N. H. 483, 484, 39 Atl. 334; Alton Bay Campmeeting Asso. v. Alton, 69 N. H. 311, 312, 45 Atl. 95. The burden is upon Park to clearly show that the legislature intended by the statute to authorize the exemption from taxation of an establishment like his. "Any manufacturing establishment" is a phrase that may have a broad meaning, but was it used in the statute in its broadest sense? The earliest statutes specified the manufactures that were to have the benefit of exemption. Mills, etc., used for the manufacture of linseed oil (Laws, ed. 1792, p. 341), for slitting, rolling, or plating iron (Id. p. 343), for the manufacture of sail cloth or duck (Id. p. 347), and for the manufacture of malt and malt liquors (Laws, ed. 1797, p. 400), were exempted in the first decade after the adoption of the present Constitution. By the act of June 18, 1819, the buildings, machinery, and capital of the Souhegan Nail, Cotton, & Woolen Factory, not exceeding in value $30,000, were exempted for a term of ten years.

lowing reasoning: They are still shells. They have not been manufactured into a new and different article, having a distinctive name, character, or use from that of a shell. The application of labor, either by hand or by mechanism, does not make an article necessarily a manufactured article within the meaning of that term as used in the tariff laws. Washing and scouring wool do not make the resulting wool a manufacture of wool. Cleaning and ginning cotton do not make the resulting cotton a manufacture of cotton. Ibid.

Animal charcoal or bone-black, produced as wood is carbonized to make vegetable charcoal, by burning or exposing to the action of fire bones, is taxable as a manufacture of bone under the United States revenue laws. Schriefer v. Wood, 5 B'tchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481.

The production of coke from coal is a process of manufacture. Com. v. Juniata Coke Co. 157 Pa. 507, 22 L. R. A. 232, 27 Atl. 373.

Smelting, a process by which ore is put into an incombustible receptacle with coke and at times a flux in alternate layers, fired, melted, and run off free from slag into pigs of bullion, which are sorted according to their kinds, but still need further refining, is manufacturing. Re Tecopa Min. & Smelting Co. 110 Fed. 120, 3 N. B. N. Rep. 841.

There is in this case a sharp criticism of the prior one of Re Rollins Gold & S. Min. Co. 102 Fed. 982, which expressed the contrary opinion, — an opinion characterized as an obiter dictum, unsupported by either reason or authority.

Even the breaking up of ore by mechanical means, such, for instance, as producing from crude bauxite the fine, white, refined bauxite or hydrate of alumina, by driving out or eliminating the impurities, such as iron, silica, and titanate acid, but without effecting any chemical change, and resulting in a substance only used for the same purposes, is manufacturing. Re Irwin, 62 Fed. 150.

One who works up lumber on a considerable scale is a manufacturer, and the fact that he makes use only of trees grown upon his own land is not material. His case is unlike that of the farmer making cheese or cider, because, first such products are not usually made on a large scale, and, second making them is merely incidental to cultivating the farm; but in the lumber business the land may almost be said to be an incident to the timber which forms its chief value, and of which the manufacture furnishes the main source of profit independent of any cultivation or other use of the soil. Re Chandler, 1 Low Dec. 478, Fed. Cas. No. 2,591.

A sawmill is not within a constitutional provision exempting from taxation the capital and machinery employed in manufacturing furniture and other articles of wood. Jones v. Raines, 35 La. Ann. 996; Martin v. New Orleans, 38 La. Ann. 397, 58 Am. Rep. 194.

And mere planks, joists, and sills designed to be fitted into particular structures are not embraced by the phrase "articles of wood" in such a constitutional provision. Carpenter v. Bruslé, 45 La. Ann. 456, 12 So. 483; White Castle Lumber & S. Co. v. Browne, 45 La. Ann. 454, 12 So. 485; Rosedale Cypress Lumber & S. Co. v. Bruslé, 45 La. Ann. 459, 12 So. 484; Plaquemine Lumber & Improv. Co. v. Browne, 45 La. Ann. 459, 12 So. 485.

Nevertheless the work of a sawmill is manufacturing; so that, under a constitutional exemption of all manufacturers from license taxation except certain non-inclusive ones, a sawmiller cannot be subjected to a license tax. State ex rel. Browne v. A. W. Wilbert's Sons Lumber & S. Co. 51 La. Ann. 1223, 26 So. 106.

But logs upon the yard in the hands of the sawyer, and lumber rough and smooth just cut by him from logs all grown on the soil of the state, are exempt from taxation in virtue of a constitutional provision that no article manufactured of the produce of the state shall be taxed otherwise than to pay inspection fees. Benedict v. Davidson County (Tenn.) 67 S. W. 806. Beard, J., in this case, while "barely conceding" that the majority might be right in holding that lumber sawed from logs which were the produce of the state fell within the exempt class, altogether dissented from the decision that the logs themselves, though in the hands of the sawyer to be cut up forthwith, could in any proper sense be called "articles manufactured for use," and thus be exempt.

Fire wood is not a manufactured article within the meaning of the California Civil Code having reference to the warranty by sale that manufactured articles are reasonably fit for the purpose for which they are bought. Correlo v. Lynch, 65 Cal. 273, 3 Pac. 889.

But slabs of wood, kiln dried, sawed, and chopped by machinery into small pieces, and the pieces bound together in bundles to sell

Souhegan Nail, Cotton, & Woolen Factory v. McConike, 7 N. H. 310. The preamble of the first act states the reason of its adoption as follows: "Whereas the manufacturing of oil from flaxseed, within this state, will furnish employment for poor persons, have a happy influence on the balance of trade, and greatly contribute to the wealth of the good subjects of this state: Therefore, to encourage the same, Be it enacted," etc. The prevention of a drain of money from the state to foreign countries is given as the reason for the enactment of other statutes. The object of them all was to promote the increase, industry, and prosperity of the inhabitants of the state. A careful examination has not brought to notice any statute upon the subject passed between 1819 and 1860. In the latter year an act was passed

"to Encourage Manufactures," by which the machinery and capital used for the manufacture of "fabrics of cotton or wool, or of both cotton and wool," might, with the assent of the town, be exempted from taxation for the term of ten years after the passage of the act; the town's assent to have "the force of a contract, and be binding for the full term above specified." Laws 1860, chap. 2361, § 1, p. 2262. By the General Statutes enacted in 1867, the term of the exemption was made a period not exceeding ten years, to be fixed by the town granting the exemption. In other respects the statute continued the same in substance, although its form was changed. Gen. Stat. 1867, chap. 49, § 9. It seems that prior to 1871, exemption was sought for other industries, aside from cotton and woolen manufacture for kindlings, are manufactured, and the production of them is manufacturing, so as to exempt from taxation a corporation exclusively engaged in making and selling them. People ex rel. Standard Wood Co. v. Roberts, 20 App. Div. 514, 47 N. Y. Supp. 122. The article produced by the relator, said the court, is a commercial article known and recognized by a specific and distinctive name; a product of capital and labor, different in form and condition from the material out of which it is made. It is obvious that neither the tree from which the wood comes, nor the slabs of wood, could be used in their original form as kindling wood, and that the relator has, by the use of machinery, skill, capital, and labor, produced a new article different in form, quickly inflammable, with a distinctive name, fitted for sale, use, and consumption, which, within the definitions, constitutes a manufactured article, and the business of producing it that of manufacturing. Ibid.

And in Schrieffer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 12,481, to sustain the bone-dust ruling, the court said: The splitting of large quantities of wooden blocks into kindling wood by machinery adapted to that special purpose is manufacturing kindlings.

Under a tariff act classifying rattans and reeds, manufactured but not made up into completed articles, as dutiable at a certain rate, and rattans and reeds unmanufactured as free, rattan from which the outer rind or enamel has been cut by machinery for chair cane so as to leave a core of round section commercially known as a reed is unmanufactured and free; but when such cylindrical core is further cut into forms of oval, square, or flat section it is to be deemed manufactured and dutiable. Foppes v. Magone, 40 Fed. 570.

And when a tariff act fixing duties upon articles of wood and wooden wares scheduled in one class "manufactures not specially enumerated and provided for" and in another, wood "rough-hewn or sawed only," gun blocks, made from planks sawed to the proper thickness and passed under a planing machine and afterwards cut to a design penciled on the planed surfaces, are in the first class. United States v. Windmuller, 42 Fed. 292.

d. Development.

In some instances, and for some purposes, a 44 L. R. A.

manufactured article may be the product of one kind of process performed on what is found in a natural state, and in some another kind. Thus, the juice of the maple or the cane is in some views manufactured when it is made into molasses or syrup, and in others when again made into sugar or spirit from molasses. And so the juice from the grape is in one sense manufactured when converted into wine, and in another when made into brandy. And so is-lye from ashes when boiled down to potash, or pearl ash, manufactured into them. The juice or sap of the India rubber tree while liquid or in its milky state, whether then called caoutchouc or some other name, is still a natural substance and in its natural form, and in one sense and to a certain extent its being hardened and changed in color, no less than consistency and bulk, by fire and evaporation, whatever new form it may be then turned into, is a manufacture. It is as much so as butter or cheese is a manufacture from animal milk, or tar from turpentine, and rosin from tar. Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. 785, 12 L. ed. 914.

Raw materials may be, and often are, subjected to successive processes of manufacture, each one of which is complete in itself, but several of which may be required to make the final product. Thus, logs are first manufactured into boards, planks, joists, scantlings, etc., then by entirely different processes are fashioned into boxes, furniture, doors, window-sashes, trimmings, and the thousand and one articles manufactured wholly or in part of wood. The steel spring of a watch is made ultimately from iron ore, but, by a large number of processes or transformations, each successive step in which is a distinct process of manufacture and for which the article so manufactured receives a different name. Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States, 171 U. S. 210, 43 L. ed. 139, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

Discs of copper turned up at the edges and called raised bottoms, in distinction from oblong or square plane plates of the same metal called sheets or flat bottoms, are exempt from custom duties as unmanufactured raw copper. United States v. Potts, 5 Cranch, 284, 3 L. ed. 102.

Lumber sawed from logs and cut into suitable shapes and sizes, put up in bundles, and called "shooks," from which boxes are made that require nothing but nailing together to complete, tures. In 1869 Littleton was specially authorized to exempt an establishment for the manufacture of hoes, forks, shovels, or scythes. Laws 1869, chap. 124, § 1, p. 370. Authority for the exemption of establishments generally engaged in such manufactures and the manufacture of fabrics from other materials was granted by the act of July 7, 1871. The subjects of exemption were described in the act as establishments for the manufacture of "fabrics of cotton, wool, wood, iron, or any other material." Laws 1871, chap. 25, § 1, p. 529. Upon the compilation and revision of the statutes in 1891, the phrase "any manufacturing establishment" was substituted for "any establishment . . . for the manufacture of fabrics of cotton, wool, wood, iron, or any other material," but without an intention of changing the law. Com'r's Rep. Pub. Stat. chap. 55, § 11. "Manufacturing," then, in the present statute, is used in the sense of working materials into a fabric or structure for use,—as, for example, cotton into cloth, iron into tools, wood into carriages, etc. This is the ordinary meaning of the word, and, independently of the light thrown upon it by the history of the statute, would be regarded as the meaning which the legislature attached to it. The question then resolves itself into this: Whether the collection and distribution of electricity for purposes of power and light are manufacturing, within this sense of the word? Machinery and manual labor are required in the process, but this fact alone does not bring it within the meaning of the word. The product of the machinery and labor must be a fabric of are within the constitutional term "articles of wood," in a section exempting from taxation the capital and machinery employed in the manufacture of furniture and other articles of wood. Washburn v. New Orleans, 43 La. Ann. 228, 9 So. 37.

But property devoted to the manufacture of cabins and planks,—articles not ready, without further labor, for immediate use,—is not exempt by virtue of such constitutional provision. Carre v. New Orleans, 41 La. Ann. 996, 6 So. 353.

The phrase "articles of wood," in that provision of the Louisiana Constitution, includes shingles, laths, posts, cross-ties, mouldings, sashes, doors, blinds, boxes, pickets, palings, bannisters, planed, tongued, and grooved lumber, dressed weather-boards, dressed flooring, car-sidings and roofings cut to length, and casings capable of instant use without change of form or condition. Carpenter v. Bruslé, 45 La. Ann. 456, 12 So. 483; White Castle Lumber & S. Co. v. Browne, 45 La. Ann. 454, 12 So. 485; Rose-dale Cypress Lumber & S. Co. v. Bruslé, 45 La. Ann. 459, 12 So. 484; Plaquemine Lumber & Improv. Co. v. Browne, 45 La. Ann. 459, 12 So. 485; Martin v. New Orleans, 38 La. Ann. 307, 58 Am. Rep. 194.

Staves for pipes, hogsheds, and other casks are not within the designation "timber and lumber of all kinds, round, hewn, and sawed, unmanufactured in whole or in part," so as to be entitled to admission free of duty under a reciprocity treaty providing for the free admission of such timber and lumber. United States v. Hathaway, 4 Wall. 404, 18 L. ed. 395.

In Simpson v. Davis, 20 Blatchf. 413, Benedict, J., expressed the opinion that the cap of a newel post, often manufactured as a distinct article by itself, but never used except in connection with other parts, which, combined, go to form a complete newel post (itself merely part of a stair rail), is within the statute authorizing a patent for any new and original design for a manufacture; but he did not find it necessary to so decide.

A corporation engaged solely in making and inserting boiler linings, composed of lead, brick, and cement, for digesters of wood pulp, under a patent, is exempt from taxation as a manufacturing corporation employing all its capital in manufacturing and selling the products thereof. People ex rel. Non-Antem Sulphite Digester Co. v. Knight, 67 App. Div. 365, 73 N. Y. Supp. 743.

64 L. R. A.

In Louisiana the capital and machinery employed in manufacturing leather or shoes are constitutionally exempt from taxation; but shoe uppers are not to be classed as either, and their manufacture confers no immunity. Ricks v. Board of Assessors, 43 La. Ann. 1075, 10 So. 202.

Coal consumed by a manufacturer of sewer pipe and drain tiles for the purpose of burning them after they have been fashioned from clay, water, and salt is not material entering into the combination or manufacture, and therefore is not to be included in estimating the value of the product for the purposes of taxation. Iowa Pipe & Tile Co.'s Appeal, 101 Iowa, 170, 70 N. W. 115.

Neither is labor employed in the making. Ibid.

e. Manufacturing through contractors.

Whether or not the familiar maxim, Qui facit per alium, facit per se, applies to a manufacturing corporation, the courts are not agreed. The New York court of appeals holds that it does not, the New Jersey supreme court, that it does. That the reader may be enabled to decide which opinion is most logically supported, the reasoning upon which each is grounded follows in juxtaposition.

In deciding against the claim of a foreign mining corporation doing business in New York to be exempt from a tax therein, the court of appeals in that state, speaking through Earl, J., in 1887, reasoned thus: The business of the defendant in Utah consisted in mining ore and manufacturing it into base bullion. The bullion was then shipped to Chicago, where it had a refinery in which the lead was smelted and the base bullion separated from the silver. The bullion thus refined was then shipped to the city of New York, where it was delivered to the United States Assay Office and still further refined into standard silver bars, for doing which defendant paid 2 per cent of the silver. It did not have or carry on within this state any refining or manufacturing establishment, and its claim to be a manufacturing corporation carrying on manufacture within this state is based solely upon the fact that it delivered its bullion to the assay office to be further refined for a compensation to be paid by it. Upon these facts, the referee found that it was not engaged structure made from materials of some kind. It has not yet been discovered what electricity is. Sir Oliver Lodge, an eminent English scientist, said in a lecture delivered in 1880: "We cannot assert that it is a form of matter, neither can we deny it. On the other hand, we certainly cannot assert that it is a form of energy, and I should be disposed to deny it. It may be that electricity is an entity per se, just as matter is an entity per se." In a lecture delivered the present year he seems to give assent to the theory that it is matter in a fourth state, consisting of something very much smaller than atoms,—“ultra-atomic corpuscles,”—which revolve about each other within atoms at tremendous speed. The knowledge of electricity thus far acquired certainly does not warrant one to speak of it as a manufacture.

In common speech, an electric light and power plant is not spoken of as a manufacturing establishment. In enumerating the manufacturing industries of a town, the electric plant would not ordinarily be included. It is true that the collection of electricity is sometimes spoken of as manufacturing it; but in such cases other words are usually added, as generating, producing, supplying,—showing a consciousness that “manufacturing” does not correctly express the idea. Laws 1881, chaps. 235, 237, 241, pp. 605, 606, 610; Laws 1887, chaps. 237, 243, 247, 287, 292, pp. 595, 601, 605. The charter of the Franklin Gas & Electric Light Company probably describes the process more nearly correctly by the words “produce, collect, and store.” Laws 1887, chap. 261, § 3, p. 619. There is direct evidence that the legislature in manufacture within this state, and we are of the same opinion. As its name implies, it is a mining corporation, and was organized primarily for that purpose, and all its other business was incidental, connected with and related to that. But even if it could in any proper sense, according to the common understanding of the phrase used in this statute, be deemed a manufacturing corporation in Utah, yet it cannot with any propriety be said that it carried on manufacture within this state. According to common comprehension and the ordinary use of language, the process of refining this bullion at the assay office was not a manufacture, and the assay office was not a manufacturing establishment. But whether it was or not the defendant which employed the assay office to refine the bullion for a compensation was not itself engaged in the manufacture. It was no more a manufacturer than a farmer is who takes his grain to the grist-mill to be ground into flour for a part of the grain or a money consideration, or who takes his wool to a cloth manufacturer to be made into cloth for a compensation, and then to be returned to him. A railroad company may manufacture all its cars and engines, and yet it cannot be properly classified as a manufacturing company. People v. Horn Silver Min. Co. 105 N. Y. 76, 11 N. E. 155, Affirmed in 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

It is plain that, so far as this reasoning is concerned, it is inconclusive upon the particular point with which this subdivision is concerned. Its learned author intends to lay down three propositions, viz.: (1) That a mining company which smelts and reduces its own ores and refines its metals is not a manufacturing corporation; (2) that refining base bullion into standard silver in an assay office, is not manufacturing; (3) that, if it is manufacturing, the employing of an independent agent to do it upon shares is not a carrying on of manufacture by the principal. Any one of these propositions, if sound, is fatal to a claim of exemption by virtue of a statute which grants it only to manufacturing corporations, and to them alone that carry on manufacturing within the state. Peckham, J., dissented from the decision in the case, but his opinion was not reported and Rappallo, J., did not vote.

A few years later the supreme court, third degree 64 L. R. A.

partment, in the same state, expressed the opinion that a corporation engaged in printing and publishing books for sale carries on a manufacturing business none the less because it employs contractors to perform portions of its work. People ex rel. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73. In that case the court said, in substance: Although the relator contracted with other parties to do the printing, binding, and other portions of the work on the books it published, yet much of the work necessary to produce and manufacture such books was done by the relator or its employees. We think the evidence shows that the books published by the relator were in fact manufactured by it; and hence incline to believe that, if it appeared that the printing, publishing, and selling of books was the only business of the relator, it would not be liable for the tax.

The New York court of appeals, soon afterwards, being called upon to say whether or not a corporation which published a weekly trade newspaper was exempt from the same tax as a manufacturing company engaged in carrying on manufacture in the state, chose to avoid deciding that a newspaper publisher was or was not a manufacturer, and held, instead, that the particular publisher coram was not carrying on manufacturing because all the mechanical operations were performed by independent contractors; and therefore that it was not entitled to the exemption it claimed. The court in thus concluding did not make an extended argument. It was content to say, briefly: Upon the assumption that the printing of a newspaper is manufacturing within the meaning of the statute, the relator would still be entitled to no relief. It does not own or operate any plant for the printing of its paper. The type is set and the paper printed by third persons at a price agreed upon, and no part of the work is done by the relator further than to have a foreman, who overlooks and watches the work as it progresses in the hands of the contractor. This does not constitute the relator a manufacturer. People ex rel. Jewelers' Circular Pub. Co. v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 1, 49 N. E. 248.

The decision is in conflict with one made by the New Jersey supreme court about five years earlier. There was no substantial difference in the statutes of the two states. The New Jersey law exempted manufacturing companies carry-did not intend by this statute to authorize the exemption from taxation of electric-light plants. By an act approved March 25, 1897, a vote of the town of Franconia, "exempting from taxation an electric-light plant, to be established in said town," was made legal and valid. Laws 1897, chap. 208, p. 207. Of course, this vote would have been unnecessary if it had been understood that the general statute authorized the town to grant the exemption. If it be said that doubts existed whether the general statute authorized the vote, and the special statute was passed to remove them, the evidence, in that view, is scarcely less effective in establishing the proposition that the general statute does not authorize such exemption, for, by the well-established principle of law above mentioned, the doubts should be construed most strongly against the exemption.

A similar question has arisen in other jurisdictions, but the decisions are conflicting. In a recent Maryland case it was held that an electric light company does not carry on a "manufacturing industry," within the meaning of a city ordinance exempting from municipal taxation "the machinery and manufacturing apparatus of all manufacturing industries" located in the city. Frederick Electric Light & P. Co. v. Frederick City, 84 Md. 599, 36 L. R. A. 130, 36 Atl. 362. In New York it was held that such a company was a "manufacturing corporation," within the meaning of a statute exempting manufacturing corporations from taxation. People ex rel. Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 14 L. R. A. 708, 29 N. E. 808. See also Com. v.

ing on business in that state, and the New York statute manufacturing companies wholly engaged in carrying on manufacturing within that state.

The New Jersey tribunal decided that the fact that a domestic phonograph manufacturing company contracts with another corporation having works in New Jersey, giving it the exclusive right to manufacture in perpetuity the phonograph, the various devices and apparatus used in connection therewith, and the supplies therefor, for which it owns the patents, taking in turn practically the entire factory output at a stipulated price 20 per cent above the cost of manufacture inclusive of labor, material, and general expense, with 5 per cent allowance for wear and tear,—does not make it any the less a manufacturing company carrying on business in the state of New Jersey, nor deprive it of the exemption given such companies by the proviso in the statute exempting them from taxes laid upon corporations in general. State ex rel. North American Phonograph Co. v. State Board, 54 N. J. L. 430, 24 Atl. 507.

The New Jersey court reasoned in this wise: It thus appears, it said after stating the facts, that all the goods manufactured and sold by the prosecutor are prepared in this state, and that they do not manufacture phonographs elsewhere. The work is not done by themselves directly, but by a manufacturing agency. It is certain that the phonographs which they are incorporated to make are made by their procurement in this state, and that they take them when manufactured and pay all the expenses of materials, labor, and other charges under the contract. The contention on the part of the state assessors is that by this arrangement the Edison Phonograph Company is the manufacturer, and the North American Phonograph Company is the purchaser, of the manufactured products at a stipulated price. But the position of the parties . . . is not that of maker and buyer, but of principal and agent, and, whether the agency is conducted by an individual or by an aggregation of individuals called a corporation, is immaterial. The great value of the plant is the patent right to make the phonograph; without this the manufacture could not lawfully be carried on. This is the property of the prosecutor, and without it the materials and labor used in its construction would be of little value. The prosecutor can 64 L. R. A.

hardly be said, therefore, to be the purchaser of this phonograph in which they have the peculiar property right which forbids its sale to any other person. In effect the prosecutor controls the manufacture of those phonographs, and the Edison company is but the instrument by which they are made. The plant of this company is pro hac vice its plant, and it is thereby located and carries on business within this state. Ibid.

2. Assembling ready-made parts.

A manufacturing corporation of another state cannot bring its products to New York, and, by putting the several parts together and adjusting them to each, or by performing upon the articles some slight operations, although these involve labor that is necessary before the articles can be used or exposed for sale, and thereby entitle itself to exemption from taxation upon the ground that it is carrying on manufacturing within that state. People ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co. v. Wemple, 133 N. Y. 323, 31 N. E. 238.

A foreign corporation engaged in its home state in manufacturing wire and wire ropes, which it ships from its factory in coils to a place of business in New York, and there performs such necessary acts as are required to fit the wire and ropes for market, such as making loops and attaching hooks to the cables for use as switching rods and for various other ends, is not engaged in carrying on manufacturing in the latter state so as to be free from taxation on that account. People ex rel. John A. Roebling's Sons' Co. v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 582, 34 N. E. 386.

Especially is this the case when such a corporation has power by its charter, outside of its home state only to have an office for the sale of its manufactures and for the transaction of other business connected therewith, and to buy and sell materials, make contracts, and transact incidental business. Ibid.

Boxes, simply nailed together and the parts trimmed to fit, in the United States, out of shooks of Canadian lumber cut into the required lengths, widths, and sizes in Canada, are not entitled, upon exportation from the United States, to any drawback for duties paid on the shooks when imported from Canada, in virtue of the provisions of § 3019, Rev. Stat. U. S. (p. 1990, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901), allowing such a draw-

Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839; Com. v. Edison Electric Light & P. Co. 170 Pa. 231, 32 Atl. 419; Com. ex rel. McCormick v. Keystone Electric Light, Heat, & P. Co. 193 Pa. 245, 44 Atl. 326.

The real question is, What was the intention expressed by the language of the legislature in this case? In view of the ordinary meaning of the terms used in the statute, the policy of the state, and the evidence furnished by the history of the legislation on the subject, and the action of the legislature in the Franconia Case, it does not clearly appear, to say the least, that the legislature intended to authorize the exemption of property of this kind. As the exemption of the electric plant is so connected with the exemption of the other property mentioned in the vote that it cannot be separated and treated independently, the entire vote must fail, and be regarded as unauthorized and void. This conclusion renders it unnecessary to consider the question of the constitutional power of the legislature to authorize towns to exempt property from taxation, and the other questions argued in the briefs. The petition should be granted so far as it relates to property situated in Warren. Boody v. Watson, 64 N. H. 162, 9 Atl. 794.

Case discharged.

Parsons, Ch. J., did not sit. The others concurred.

Rehearing denied.

back on all articles exported, wholly manufactured in the United States, from duty paid on imported materials. Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States, 171 U. S. 210, 43 L. ed. 139, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

The court reasoned thus: The material of which each manufacture is formed is not necessarily the original raw material,—in this case the tree or log,—but the product of a prior manufacture; the finished product of one manufacture thus becoming the material of the next in rank. This case, then, resolves itself into the question whether the materials out of which these boxes were constructed were the boards manufactured in Canada or the shooks imported into the United States. While the planing and cutting of the boards in Canada into the requisite lengths and shapes for the sides, ends, tops, and bottoms of the boxes was doubtless a partial manufacture, it was not a complete one, since the boards so cut are not adaptable as material for other and different objects of manufacture, but were designed and appropriate only for a particular purpose, i. e., for the manufacture of boxes of a prescribed size, and were useless for any other purpose. It is not always easy to determine the difference between a complete and a partial manufacture, but generally an article which can only be used for a particular purpose, in which the process of manufacture stops short of the completed article, can only be said to be partially manufactured, and the mere assembling and nailing together of parts complete in themselves and destined for a particular purpose are not a complete and separate manufacture. Thus, chairs are made of bottoms, backs, legs, and rounds, each one of these parts being made separately and in large quantities. If imported in this condition from abroad, and the parts were assembled and glued or screwed together here, we think it entirely clear that such chairs would not be wholly manufactured in the United States. And the same thing may be said of the staves, heads, and hoops which constitute a barrel. Generally, although not universally, a complete manufacture is either the ultimate product of prior successive manufactures, such as a watch spring or a penknife, or an intermediate product which may be used for different purposes, such as pig iron, iron bars, lumber, or cloth; while a partial manufacture is merely a stage in the development of the material toward an ultimate and predestined product, such as the different parts of a watch which need only to be put together to make the finished article. If the wheels, chain, springs, dial, hands, and case of a watch were all imported from abroad and merely put together in this country, we do not think it could be said that the watch was wholly manufactured in the United States. The same remarks we think may be made with reference to the shooks in this case, which were practically worthless except for being put together for a box of a definite size. Ibid.

Employing coopers who make barrels, hogsheads, etc., from rough logs and splits, and who carry on a general cooperage business, are exempt from an occupation license tax by virtue of a constitutional provision declaring that there shall be exempt from taxation and license for a stated period the capital, machinery, and other property employed in the manufacture of furniture and other articles of wood. New Orleans v. Le Blanc, 34 La. Ann. 598.

But such a constitutional provision does not entitle one who makes finished barrels by machinery from staves, headings, and hoops imported from other states in a practically finished condition ready to be put together to any exemption. Brooklyn Cooperage Co. v. New Orleans, 47 La. Ann. 1314, 17 So. 804.

The record in this case showed that the prepared material for making the barrels was imported from the north and west. It consisted of staves, hoops, and headings. The staves were dressed and jointed ready for use. The hoops and headings were shaped. The work done upon these materials consisted in drying them and setting them up by hand in the form of barrels, then by machine shaping each barrel, followed by a heating process, and then driving on the hoops by a trussing machine. Each barrel then went to a machine to get the croze and chimb ready, and finally workmen set the hoops, finished the barrel, and turned it into the warehouse. The case raises the question, said the court, whether processes of this kind, which put into shape the parts of a barrel ready to set up from staves, heads, and hoops already cut, shaped, and prepared, is to be deemed the manufacture of articles of wood in the sense of the Constitution. Undoubtedly the plaintiffs' machinery serves the purpose of setting up the prepared staves already bent for the purpose, inserting the heads, and putting on the hoops that come with the staves; but the component parts of the barrel are supplied and at hand, and whether the barrel is set up by manual labor or machinery, the processes cannot, we think, be considered as the manufacture of an article of wood in the ordinary or legal sense of the word. The heating of the prepared staves, the putting in of the prepared heads, the driving of the hoops, are all necessary to the completion of the barrel, but not one nor all of these processes constitute in any ordinary significance the manufacture of the article; nor does the additional fact that the barrel is held by machinery to receive the heads or hoops furnish, in our view, any support to the claim that the plaintiff is a manufacturer. Ibid.

This decision was followed without independent reasoning in Chickasaw Coopersage Co. v. Police Jury, 48 La. Ann. 523, 19 So. 478, where in the facts were much the same. In the later case instead of sugar and rice barrels there were produced oil, molasses, and whiskey casks hooped with iron. These required the straight iron strips furnished for hoops to be flared and fitted, the staves to be chamfered and grooved, and the complete cask to be planed smooth in a lathe and to have a bung-hole bored in it. This made about 12 per cent of the work of making the cask, and this the court thought was not a substantial part of the whole manufacture.

The courts of Louisiana hold that the constitutional exemption is only allowed when the manufacturing is done in the state. Taylor Bros. Iron Works v. New Orleans, 44 La. Ann. 555, 11 So. 3.

But what is manufacturing? asks the supreme court of Pennsylvania in the course of deciding upon the claim of a firm of locomotive builders to immunity from a tax from which manufacturers were exempt, where the claimants purchased, ready forged, the tires of the driving wheels. And it answers its question by saying: A cunning worker in metals is the maker of the wares he fashions, though he did not dig the ore from the earth or carry it through every subsequent stage of refinement. A shoemaker is none the less a manufacturer of shoes because he does not also tan the leather. A bureau is made by the cabinet maker although it consists in part of locks, knobs, and screws bought ready made from a dealer in hardware. Norris Bros. v. Com. 27 Pa. 494.

The same line of reasoning is adopted by the New York supreme court, third department, in deciding that a domestic corporation organized to make and vend a patented fountain pen, which purchased and did not make the constituent parts thereof, but shaped, moulded, fitted, and assembled them with great skill and dexterity into complete useful writing instruments, was exempt from taxation as a manufacturing corporation carrying on manufacturing within that state. People ex rel. L. E. Waterman Co. v. Morgan, 48 App. Div. 395, 63 N. Y. Supp. 76.

Whoever creates a useful thing by mechanical labor, said the court in that case, is entitled usually to be called a manufacturer. The fact that he purchases rather than makes some of the parts does not destroy that character. A boiler maker is a manufacturer although he purchases the boiler plates rolled into form, and purchases, also, the tubes and rivets. So with the cabinet maker who buys the wood he uses in polished form or carved, and buys the cloth, hair, and leather he uses. No manufacturer of the finished product in this age works up the raw material. That is done by specialists all along the line. The practical manufacturer assembles the material he needs from all quarters in its must finished condition, and does the rest himself. Then, descending from generalities to the case in hand, the court continued, substantially: The corporation was organized solely to manufacture and sell a patent fountain pen, and actually confined itself to that business. Its pen differed in construction from that of other makers in the adjustment of the pen and feed, and this difference was the thing patented and the chief factor in producing a serviceable writing implement. The fitting and adjustment were the work the corporation did to create an integral fountain pen which in its completed entirety exceeded fourfold the value of its parts. The partly made holders are brought to the factory and none is sold or used until finished. (Gold pens are made outside in independent establishments according to specifications and under instruction and supervision. The holders are moulded and shaped to fit the pens, and the pens are treated to remove the set from their nibs and fit the holders. Skilled workmen are needed for both processes. In fitting the pens to the holders each is shaped more or less by hand. Every holder is fitted by mechanical means with a feed bar, warmed and shaped over a flame so that holder, feed, and pen are so exactly adjusted each to the others as to have the ink flow freely in use by capillary attraction, and so nicely as to pass scrutiny under the microscope. If in heating, the feed gets too hot, or not hot enough, it will not retain its form. The completed pen is turned and polished in a lathe, and sometimes ornamented by a gold band attached and chased at the same time. All this, the court held, was true manufacturing, and not simply the putting together of parts manufactured by others. Skilled labor was requisite after the parts were assembled to make them useful. The one feature of a serviceable fountain pen had yet to be created. The capillary feed duct must be formed by a skillful combination, or the pen is useless. Without the corporation's work a fountain pen is not produced,—a marketable article does not exist. The fact that the rubber-rolled into the form of a manufactured pen and the gold pens made by specialists are purchased does not make the producer of the completed pen the less a manufacturer. Ibid.

A corporation engaged in mixing dry colors with oil and turpentine, etc., to make ready mixed paints, 50 per cent of which are made from pigments of its own production, the proportions of the various ingredients being a trade secret, and the mixing being done by machinery, after which the compound is put through a grinding process, the final product being applied to uses for which its constituents are not separately available, is a manufacturer carrying on manufacture. People ex rel. F. W. Devoe & C. T. Reynolds Co. v. Roberts, 51 App. Div. 77, 64 N. Y. Supp. 494.

g. Finished works.

Shoes made wholly of India rubber, by dipping moulds or lasts into the milky liquid that flows on tapping the rubber tree and drying it over the fire, repeating the process from time to time until by successive layers a proper thickness is obtained, when they are ready to wear without addition or essential change, are to be classified as shoes manufactured of India rubber, and dutiable when imported, rather than as India rubber in bottles, sheets, or otherwise unmanufactured and free, notwithstanding they are in substance and condition the same as shapeless masses of crude rubber, and may be used for the same purposes. Lawrence v. Ailen, 7 How. 785, 12 L. ed. 914.

The term "articles of wood," in that clause of the Louisiana Constitution which exempts from taxation and license capital, machinery, and property employed in manufacturing furniture and other articles of wood, embraces those wooden things fashioned from lumber complete and ready for immediate, convenient, and general use, without further work or addition, and not cut lumber designed to take its place in a particular structure. Carpenter v. Bruslé, 45 La. Ann. 456, 12 So. 483; White Castle Lumber & S. Co. v. Browne, 45 La. Ann. 454, 12 So. 485; Rosedale Cypress Lumber & S. Co. v. Bruslé, 45 La. Ann. 459, 12 So. 484; Plaquemine Lumber & Improv. Co. v. Browne, 45 La. Ann. 459, 12 So. 485.

The making of paper boxes is not the manufacturing of paper, so as to bring capital and machinery devoted to producing them within a constitutional exemption of such as is employed in manufacturing paper. Washburn v. New Orleans, 43 La. Ann. 226, 9 So. 37.

Neither are the cutting and making of coats and trousers from cloth already woven by others a manufacturing of textile fabrics within the meaning of such a constitutional provision. Cohn v. Parker, 41 La. Ann. 894, 6 So. 718.

But the making of fish lines, ropes, packing, and other hempen articles is manufacturing textile fabrics because they have to be woven. New Orleans v. Arthurs, 36 La. Ann. 98; Waterbury v. Atlas Steam Cordage Co. 42 La. Ann. 723, 7 So. 783; Hernsheim v. Atlas Steam Cordage Co. 42 La. Ann. 726, 7 So. 784.

A corporation making and selling sewer pipe and drain tiles formed of clay, salt, and water subjected to fire, 90 per cent of whose value is outside of the ingredients, is taxable as a manufacturer, and not as a merchant or dealer, under the Iowa statutes. Iowa Pipe & Tile Co.'s Appeal, 101 Iowa, 170, 70 N. W. 115.

A corporation organized to buy, sell, lease, and operate mines and mining claims and smelting reduction and refining works; to conduct in all its branches a general mining, milling, and smelting business, including the purchasing and vending of mineral ores and bullion; to buy and sell goods, wares, merchandise, and miners' supplies and stores; to build and operate roads, tramways, and transportation routes; and to acquire, hold, and dispose of, when no longer useful, real and personal property necessary to its business; and which conducts its financial affairs and correspondence in a foreign state, whether it brings base bullion to be finally refined into standard silver bars,—is not in such state a manufacturing corporation engaged in manufacturing, within an exemption given in its tax laws. Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403, Affirming 105 N. Y. 76, 11 N. E. 155.

A statute taxing all dealers in American goods, wares, and merchandise, and all persons concerned in the manufacture of the same who keep a store for the sale thereof, except mechanics who keep a store or warehouse at their own shops or manufactories for the purpose of vending their own manufactures exclusively, does not include locomotive builders who sell their output at their own mills. Norris Bros. v. Com. 27 Pa. 494.

A corporation incorporated for and actually engaged in, boat, yacht, and ship building of a peculiar construction with double bottoms to prevent sinking by collision, under letters patent, is a manufacturing company engaged in manufacturing. Norton Naval Constr. & Ship-Building Co. v. State Board, 53 N. J. L. 564, 22 Atl. 352.
64 L. R. A.

But the term "manufacturing corporation" cannot be considered as comprehending the business of constructing, using, and providing one or more dry docks, or wet docks, or other conveniences and structures for building, raising, repairing, and coppering vessels and steamers, if the words are interpreted (as they must be) according to the common understanding of such language. People v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. 92 N. Y. 487.

The court did not resort to extended argument in reaching this conclusion. The substance of its reasoning was that the main purpose of the corporation was to build, raise, repair, and copper vessels, and its chief work was improving them after they were constructed, not constructing them; taking all it did together or separately its work did not fall within the definition of manufacturing. The constructing, using, and providing of docks was, it was said, no more manufacturing than was building warehouses, elevators for warehousemen, or erecting residences. Ibid.

And yet a corporation which from raw or unfinished iron, steel, or lumber fashions, assembles, and joins all the completed parts of a bridge, viaduct, or turntable, is none the less a manufacturer because it afterwards sets them up in permanent place ready for actual use. Such a corporation actually engaged in making and selling iron and steel bridges, building roofs, viaducts, turntables, and other articles and machinery composed wholly or partly of wood, iron, steel, or other material, which buys from others in the rough, unfinished state the lumber, iron, steel, and other metals it needs, and finishes, shapes, designs, and fashions them suitable for use at its own shops, sometimes selling the finished material, and at others framing, assembling, and uniting it, and then with it erecting bridges, roofs, and other structures or machinery, is a manufacturing corporation exclusively carrying on manufacture, and as such exempt, in Pennsylvania, from capital-stock taxation. Com. v. Keystone Bridge Co. 156 Pa. 500, 27 Atl. 1; Com. v. Pittsburgh Bridge Co. 156 Pa. 507, 27 Atl. 4.

A corporation which manufactures an asphalt pavement compound is, so far as the preparation of that material is concerned, a manufacturer; but when, in addition it prepares streets and highways to receive it, and applies it thereto to form a roadbed, the latter process is not manufacturing; and hence, such corporation cannot be deemed a manufacturing corporation wholly engaged in carrying on manufacture, so as to be exempt from the New York state franchise tax. People ex rel. Syracuse Improv. Co. v. Morgan, 50 App. Div. 302, 69 N. Y. Supp. 263.

But a domestic corporation producing by a secret process an asphaltic composition for floors, sidewalks, and streets, employing in its production a plant for heating to a high degree the materials it uses, is a manufacturing corporation, and is entitled to the exemptions allowed to manufacturing corporations to the extent of the capital employed in the state of New York in manufacturing, and in the sale of the products of manufacturing. People ex rel.

Eastern Bermudez Asphalt Paving Co. v. Morgan, 61 App. Div. 373, 70 N. Y. Supp. 516.

IV. Organisation.

a. In general.

Gaslight companies are manufacturing companies although they are not organized under the so-called general manufacturing act in the state of New York. As manufacturing companies they are subject to the same taxation, and entitled to the same exemptions, as other manufacturing corporations. Nassau Gaslight Co. v. Brooklyn, 89 N. Y. 409.

The exceptions which include manufacturing corporations, contained in the New York statute (Laws 1880, chap. 542), for taxing corporations generally at a specified rate upon their capital stock according to declared dividends, are not confined to those organized under the general manufacturing act of 1848, but embrace all manufacturing companies under whatsoever statute organized. Ibid.

The fact that an electric light company was incorporated under the act for the formation of gas companies, instead of the general manufacturing act, is not material upon the question whether or not it is a manufacturing company. People ex rel. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 664, 29 N. E. 812.

Whether or not a given corporation is a manufacturing corporation, and, therefore, when carrying on business in New Jersey, exempt from the capital-stock tax by virtue of the excepting proviso in the act imposing it upon corporations generally, is to be determined, not by the certificate of its incorporation and the statement it contains of the objects for which the company is organized, but by the actual business to which the capital is applied. State, Evening Journal Assn., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 47 N. J. L. 36, 52 Am. Rep. 107, note.

The business in which the corporate capital is invested and used, and not the purposes for which the corporation was formed as avowed in its certificate of incorporation, determines its liability to or exemption from taxation in New Jersey. Press Printing Co. v. State Board, 51 N. J. L. 75, 16 Atl. 173.

To determine whether a corporation is within the proviso excepting from the operation of the New Jersey tax law manufacturing or mining companies carrying on business in that state, reference must be had to its actual business; because the business in which its capital is invested, and not the objects for which it was formed, is the controlling and decisive circumstance. Norton Naval Constr. & Ship Building Co. v. State Board, 53 N. J. L. 564, 22 Atl. 352.

Although the charter of a corporation authorizes it to carry on manufacturing, building, and transportation, yet, if it is actually engaged in manufacturing solely, it is entitled to the tax exemption accorded to manufacturing companies carrying on business in New Jersey. Re Consolidated Electric Storage Co. (N. J. Eq.) 26 Atl. 983.

A corporation empowered by its charter to dig iron ore, build and operate furnaces, forges, factories, and rolling mills, and to manufacture machinery and other works of iron and steel, which does not exercise all its powers, but invests its entire capital in manufacturing, and does nothing else, is altogether exempt from taxation under the Pennsylvania tax laws exempting corporations exclusively manufacturing. 64 L. R. A.

Com. v. Pottsville Iron & Steel Co. 157 Pa. 500, 22 L. R. A. 228, 27 Atl. 371.

A manufacturing corporation exempt as such from taxation, both by a provision in its charter and by statute because it carries on business in the state, does not lose the benefit of its immunity when, without any change in its character, attributes, or purposes, its rights and powers are extended by law to widen the scope of its operations by condemning additional lands, raising dams, etc. State v. Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures, 43 N. J. Eq. 410, 5 Atl. 724.

A corporation which actually only rents out premises to others manufacturing on their own account, furnishing steam power for the tenants' use, although it calls itself a manufacturing company, and in its certificate declares its purpose to be manufacturing steam and supplying it to the building it owns, is merely a landlord supplying tenants with power in order the more readily to rent its buildings; and is not a manufacturer or producer of anything; and has no claim to be exempt from taxation as a manufacturing corporation. Com. v. Arrott Mills Co. 145 Pa. 69, 22 Atl. 243.

A corporation formed, as expressed in its articles of association, "for the purpose of putting up, packing, and manufacturing for market, river and lake ice, and distributing and selling the same," is legally incorporated in Michigan under a general statute authorizing the organization of corporations for manufacturing purposes, irrespective of whether or not the business it actually carries on afterwards is legally a manufacturing business or not. The articles of association are conclusive as to the purpose of incorporation, and it is not necessary in them to set forth in extenso the means or methods of the manufacturing it is purposed to do; and it is not for the court to say that in the stated case manufacturing is impossible. Atty. Gen. ex rel. Miner v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157, 60 Am. Rep. 287, 26 N. W. 311.

A statute authorizing the formation of corporations for manufacturing, agricultural, mining, or mechanical purposes warrants incorporation to manufacture lumber, flour, and meal. Cross v. Pinckneyville Mill Co. 17 Ill. 54.

Inasmuch as the Pennsylvania laws do not authorize incorporation to buy, sell, and deal as a merchant, the inclusion of such a purpose in the charter of a manufacturing corporation is nugatory, and confers no powers. Such a charter must be treated as if the null purpose were absent from it altogether, and the corporation formed exclusively to manufacture. Com. v. Thackara Mfg. Co. 156 Pa. 510, 27 Atl. 13; Com. v. J. B. Lippincott Co. 156 Pa. 513, 27 Atl. 10.

Probably, for like reasons, the opinion was expressed in Wagner v. Corcoran, 2 Pa. Dist. R. 440, that a corporation for the manufacture and sale of all kinds of lumber, and the purchase and sale of mills, lands, standing timber, logs, and lumber for the purposes of such business was a manufacturing corporation authorized by the general manufacturing incorporation law; but the case was decided upon another point.

In an action in Michigan, brought by a bank upon a promissory note made in a corporate name against the individual incorporators, the bank contended that the supposed corporation had no legal existence because the Michigan statute only authorized the formation of corporations for mining and manufacturing purposes, and this company was not formed either to mine or to manufacture. The objects of incorporation set forth in the articles were "the cutting, rafting, and manufacturing of timber," and the actual operations of the company were, getting out long round timber. It felled trees, lopped off the branches, cut off the tops at a point where the trunk was a foot in diameter, hauled the logs to a river, floated them down stream, and rafted them. The court did not decide whether or not the maker of the note was legally incorporated, but held that the bank had so dealt with it as a de facto corporation that it could not recover of the individual incorporators. Marston, J., who dissented from the decision, was of the opinion that the operations of the company were not manufacturing, and that no legal incorporation could be had to carry them on. Taking up the argument that a manufacture is literally anything made by the human hand, and includes every step by which raw material is advanced toward fitness for human use, he concurs in the proposition that any attempt to distinguish between what is and what is not a manufactured article based upon a change in the form in one case, or because in another an article finished for a particular use has been produced, would rest on no sound principle, and would be incorrect. But, he says, if it be held that the word "manufacturing," as used in the statute, takes a strictly literal sense,—"includes every step by which the raw material is advanced toward fitness for human use,"—a great deal would be included that the legislature neither intended nor contemplated. Under such a construction, separate corporations might be formed to manufacture round timber, logs, telegraph poles, or cord wood; wheat and oats by cradling, cutting, or reaping standing grain; or cutting, husking, and shelling corn. Indeed, in getting out cord wood several different corporations might be formed, one to fell the timber, another to cut it into suitable lengths, another to split it,—each a distinct step by which raw material is advanced towards fitness for human use. And it might just as appropriately be said that lopping off branches from a felled tree was manufacturing brush as to hold such successive steps manufacturing within the meaning of the statute. He invokes the principle that the true sense in which words are used in a statute is to be ascertained, not by following out their literal signification to absurd results, and thus giving them a meaning the legislature evidently never designed or expected, but by giving them when untechnical their ordinary and popular significance. Merchants' & Mfrs. Bank v. Stone, 38 Mich. 779.

A corporation organized for the purpose of bleaching, calendering, printing, dyeing, and finishing textile fabrics, whose actual business is bleaching goods after they come from the mills, must, in Massachusetts, be classed with manufacturing corporations whose stockholders are liable for the corporate debts. Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing & Bleaching Co. 15 Gray, 216.

The purpose for which a corporation is organized must be ascertained from its charter. Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co. v. People, 161 Ill. 101, 43 N. E. 779; Evanston Electric Illuminating Co. v. Kochersperger, 175 Ill. 28, 51 N. E. 719.

Thus, under the Minnesota constitutional provision that each shareholder in every corporation, excepting those organized for the purpose of carrying on any kind of manufacturing or mechanical business, shall be liable to the amount of his stock for the corporate debts, the purpose stated in the articles of incorporation is controlling, and to fall within the exception the corporation must be organized to manufacture exclusively. If it has other powers not necessarily incidental to manufacturing, such, for instance, as to buy and sell for gain the wares of other manufacturers, even though it does not in fact exercise such powers, the stockholders are liable. Arthur v. Willius, 44 Minn. 409, 43 N. W. 851; Densmore v. Shepard, 46 Minn. 54, 48 N. W. 528, 681; First Nat. Bank v. Winona Plow Co. 58 Minn. 167, 59 N. W. 997; St. Paul Barrel Co. v. Minneapolis Distilling Co. 62 Minn. 448, 64 N. W. 1143; Anderson v. Anderson Iron Co. 65 Minn. 281, 33 L. R. A. 510, 68 N. W. 49; Holland v. Duluth Iron Min. & Development Co. 65 Minn. 324, 60 Am. St. Rep. 480, 68 N. W. 50.

And even if a corporation is organized under the manufacturing act avowedly as a manufacturing corporation, yet, if its primary purpose is that of merchandising, its stockholders will still be liable for its debts. Mohr v. Minnesota Elevator Co. 40 Minn. 343, 41 N. W. 1074.

b. Domestic and foreign corporations.

A foreign corporation actually engaged in manufacturing in New York is exempt from taxation upon its capital stock employed in that state the same as a domestic corporation of the same character; the exemption in each case applying only when the corporation is wholly engaged in carrying on manufacture within the state. People ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co. v. Wemple, 133 N. Y. 323, 31 N. E. 238; People ex rel. John A. Roebbing's Sons' Co. v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 582, 34 N. E. 386.

The exemption from taxation accorded to manufacturing corporations in New York applies without distinction to both domestic and foreign corporations, and in either case to such alone as are engaged in carrying on manufacture in the state. People ex rel. Blackinton Co. v. Roberts, 4 App. Div. 368, 38 N. Y. Supp. 872, Affirmed in 151 N. Y. 652, 46 N. E. 1150.

Foreign corporations organized for manufacturing, and actually exclusively engaged in manufacturing, in Pennsylvania, are exempt from capital-stock taxation the same as are domestic corporations in that state. Com. v. American Car & Foundry Co. 203 Pa. 302, 52 Atl. 326; Com. v. Olcott, 203 Pa. 310, 52 Atl. 326; Com. v. National Tube Works Co. 203 Pa. 310, 52 Atl. 326; Com. v. Niles-Bement-Pond Co. 203 Pa. 311, 52 Atl. 326; Com. v. American Steel & Wire Co. 203 Pa. 311, 52 Atl. 326; Com. v. Carbon Steel Co. 203 Pa. 312, 52 Atl. 326; Com. v. Ashley & B. Co. 203 Pa. 312, 52 Atl. 326; Com. v. Danville Bessemer Co. 203 Pa. 313, 52 Atl. 326.

The capital stock of a domestic manufacturing corporation is exempt from taxation in Pennsylvania because it is invested and actually exclusively employed in manufacturing within the state, notwithstanding it is owned in its entirety by a foreign corporation. Com. v. American Cement Co. 203 Pa. 298, 52 Atl. 330; Com. v. Lorain Steel Co. 203 Pa. 300, 52 Atl. 330.

But a foreign corporation engaged in obtaining or preparing mineral oil, holding oil lands, and doing business in Pennsylvania, is taxable there by virtue of statutes applying generally to corporations, both foreign and domestic, doing business in the state, notwithstanding statutes exempting manufacturing and mining companies, as oil producing companies are not in the exempt classes. Com. v. Central Petroleum Co. 1 Pearson (Pa.) 373.

V. Operation.

a. In general.

When an exemption from taxation depends upon a proviso in a statute, which, but for such proviso, would reach the claimant of immunity thereunder, the burden rests upon such claimant to bring itself within the terms of the proviso. Edison United Phonograph Co. v. State Board, 57 N. J. L. 520, 31 Atl. 1019.

Thus, when an exemption from a particular tax is granted by a proviso in the statute imposing it to manufacturing corporations having half their capital stock invested in manufacturing carried on within the state, a manufacturing corporation claiming to be exempt from such tax has the burden of establishing the facts necessary to bring it within the exempting proviso. State, Electric Storage Battery Co., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 60 N. J. L. 66, 36 Atl. 1090, Affirmed in 61 N. J. L. 289, 41 Atl. 1117.

To entitle a corporation to exemption from the New York franchise or business tax as a manufacturing corporation it must not only be such a company, but it must, as well, be engaged in carrying on manufacturing within that state. People v. Horn Silver Min. Co. 105 N. Y. 76, 11 N. E. 155, Affirmed in 143 U. S. 305, 36 L. ed. 164, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; People ex rel. John A. Roebling's Sons' Co. v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 582, 34 N. E. 386; People ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co. v. Wemple, 133 N. Y. 323, 31 N. E. 238; People ex rel. Blackinton Co. v. Roberts, 4 App. Div. 388, 38 N. Y. Supp. 872, Affirmed in 151 N. Y. 652, 46 N. E. 1150.

For a corporation to be exempt from taxation in New Jersey as a manufacturing corporation carrying on business in that state, it is necessary that it should there do its principal work,—should establish its factory within the state, and bring there its raw materials and convert them into wares. It is not enough that it maintains an office, holds business meetings, makes some purchases and sales, and transports goods within the state while maintaining and operating all its factories and carrying on the bulk of its business beyond its boundaries. American Glucose Co. v. State, 43 N. J. Eq. 280, 5 Atl. 803.

A domestic manufacturing corporation having an office and procuring much of the material used by it within the state of New Jersey, but manufacturing in another state its special product into which these materials enter, is not entitled to the exemption from capital-stock taxation accorded only to manufacturing companies carrying on business within the state. Standard Underground Cable Co. v. Atty. Gen. 46 N. J. Eq. 270, 19 Am. St. Rep. 394, 19 Atl. 733, Affirming (N. J. Eq.) 18 Atl. 581.

A domestic manufacturing company which has its factories and does all its manufacturing in a foreign state, but which in its home state has its general offices, keeps its bank account, makes its sales, controls and manages all its business, is not exempt in the state of its origin from a state franchise tax laid by a statute which excepts from its application corporations wholly engaged in carrying on manufacturing within such state. People ex rel. Blackinton Co. v. Roberts, 4 App. Div. 388, 38 N. Y. Supp. 872, Affirmed in 151 N. Y. 652, 46 N. E. 1150. 64 L. R. A.

It is only when articles of the kinds mentioned in the Louisiana constitutional provision for the exemption of capital and machinery employed in manufacturing are made within the state that the exemption attaches. Smith v. Board of Assessors, 44 La. Ann. 91, 10 So. 387; Taylor Bros. Iron Works Co. v. New Orleans, 44 La. Ann. 554, 11 So. 3.

To entitle a manufacturing corporation to the benefit of a constitutional exemption from taxation of capital and machinery employed in certain classes of manufacture, it must be shown, affirmatively, that the property claimed to be free is thus actually employed; it is not sufficient that it belongs to a corporation in one of the exempt classes. Ivens & Son Mach. Co. v. Parker, 42 La. Ann. 1103, 8 So. 399.

Such a constitutional exemption of property employed in manufacturing does not extend to premises rented out for manufacturing purposes. To earn the exemption the owner must "employ" his property in manufacturing, not simply let others employ it. State ex rel. Ward v. Board of Assessors, 46 La. Ann. 859, 15 So. 384.

To entitle a manufacturing corporation to an exemption from a tax imposed by a statute which excepts from its operation manufacturing companies carrying on business in the state, it is essential that it be actually located and manufacturing under its charter within the state. Until it actually locates its business and begins work, although preparing in good faith so to do, and engaged in needful preliminaries, it is taxable. Norton Naval Constr. & Ship Building Co. v. State Board, 53 N. J. L. 564, 22 Atl. 352.

And it will cease to be exempt when it permanently stops manufacturing. State, Edison Phonograph Co., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 55 N. J. L. 55, 25 Atl. 329.

After the closing of a factory and formal abandonment of manufacturing in it, a constitutional exemption from taxation ceases; but if that takes place during a taxing year it is error to assess it for the entire year. Electric Traction Co. v. New Orleans, 45 La. Ann. 1475, 14 So. 231.

The temporary suspension of a manufacturing business while the factory is maintained and the property and machinery are dedicated to manufacture within the terms of a constitutional exemption clause does not deprive it of the immunity from taxation. Waterbury v. Atlas Steam Cordage Co. 42 La. Ann. 723, 7 So. 783; Hernsheim v. Atlas Steam Cordage Co. 42 La. Ann. 726, 7 So. 784.

But a leasing of such factory and business for the express purpose of discontinuing manufacturing so as to repress competition and reduce the supply of the product is subversive of the object for which such exemption was granted, and renders the property and machinery formerly employed liable to taxation. Ibid.

The exemption from taxation on account of capital employed, accorded by statute to a corporation, even a foreign one, wholly engaged in manufacturing within the state, does not depend upon the percentage of its total manufacturing carried on in New York, nor upon the magnitude of its manufacturing operations. If it is wholly engaged in manufacturing at all, to however small an extent within the meaning of the exempting statute, it is entitled to immunity. People ex rel. Seth Thomas Clock Co. v. Wemple, 133 N. Y. 323, 31 N. E. 238.

When a statute for the taxation of corporations generally excepts from its application such manufacturing corporations only as have half of their outstanding capital stock invested in manufacturing carried on within the state, a manufacturing corporation capitalised at $1,000,000, of which 99 per cent has been invested in patent rights; that has only about $8,500 worth of tools, besides the necessary rights to manufacture, invested in the works of an independent contractor within the state; and has business relations and manufacturer's rights throughout the world,—does not, by proof of these naked facts, show itself within the exception of the statute, and so fails to establish a right to exemption from a tax imposed in virtue thereof. Edison United Phonograph Co. v. State Board, 57 N. J. L. 520, 31 Atl. 1019.

And when it is made to appear that a domestic manufacturing company carries on manufacturing both within and without the state; that its plant in the state is worth from 20 to 40 per cent less than the one without; that at the plant without the state there are employed ten times as many men as there are at work at the one within the state; and that its entire manufacturing is carried on under home and foreign letters patent, for the purchase of which most of its capital stock was issued,—such corporation does not come within the exemption proviso of the tax statute applicable to manufacturing corporations with 50 per cent of their capital stock invested in manufacturing in the state upon the hypothesis that the patents appertain, alone, to the factory within the state because it is there that the raw material is made to be transferred for finishing and assembling to the outside works, since the corporation is not a mere licensee using patents under a local shop right. State, Electric Storage Battery Co., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 60 N. J. L. 66, 36 Atl. 1090, Affirmed in 61 N. J. L. 289, 41 Atl. 1117.

A foundry engaged in making railings, posts, bridges, etc., and in casting iron, brass, and other metals, is not, without proof that its output was used in machinery or agricultural implements, exempt under the Louisiana Constitution freeing from taxation capital, machinery, and property employed in the manufacture of machinery and agricultural implements. Benedict v. New Orleans, 44 La. Ann. 793, 11 So. 41.

b. Manufacturing and its incidents.

Whatever is purely and necessarily incidental to a manufacturing enterprise, a manufacturing corporation may do without in any wise impairing its rights or curtailing its privileges as a manufacturing company. It may, for instance, rent, furnish, and maintain an office for the transaction of its business, and the capital invested therein is just as much exempt as if it were invested in a factory and its machinery. People ex rel. Standard Wood Co. v. Roberts, 20 App. Div. 514, 47 N. Y. Supp. 122.

And the power to manufacture implies the power to sell the manufactured product. People ex rel. Tiffany & Co. v. Campbell, 144 N. Y. 168, 38 N. E. 990; People ex rel. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73; Re Consolidated Electric Storage Co. (N. J. Eq.) 26 Atl. 983; Com. v. Thackara Mfg. Co. 156 Pa. 510, 27 Atl. 13; Com. v. J. B. Lippincott Co. 156 Pa. 513, 27 Atl. 10.

A corporate power to do work upon glass containers, by implication, the power to buy glass to work upon, and to sell the glass when it is worked. Hawkes Glass Beveling & Silvering Co. v. Bohn Mfg. Co. 40 Ill. App. 649.

A distinction between the manufacturing of electricity and the supplying of it when the question is one of taxation or of tax exemption of a corporation doing both is without force. The power to supply includes the power to manufacture electricity. Southern Electric Light & P. Co. v. Philadelphia, 191 Pa. 170, 43 Atl. 123.

And a brewing company with power to manufacture and sell lager beer and other fermented and malt liquors has incidental power to rent a saloon to sell at retail the beer it brews. Welsh v. Ferd Helm Brewing Co. 47 Mo. App. 608; National Brewing Co. v. Ahlgren, 63 Ill. App. 475; Keeley Brewing Co. v. Emrick, 64 Ill. App. 247.

A brass and sheet-iron worker manufacturing steam trains for sugar making, shake pans, evaporators, clarifiers, juice tanks, breeching, fire bricks, steam and water pipes, all used in machinery for preparing an agricultural product, to wit, sugar, of the state of Louisiana, is not to be denied his tax exemption conferred by the Constitution of that state, because, as an incident to his main business, he also manufactures turpentine stills, distillery and brewery apparatus, to which such exemption does not extend. State ex rel. Fredericks v. Board of Assessors, 41 La. Ann. 534, 6 So. 337.

c. Incidental manufacturing.

Merely doing some manufacturing as an incident to another and wholly distinct business will not confer upon a corporation any of the rights, or obtain for it any privilege, peculiar to manufacturers.

A company incorporated for the purpose of cleansing, bleaching, and smoothing textile fabrics by machinery, and whose principal business is washing and ironing, in spite of the fact that it makes the soaps, detergents, and dyes it uses, is not within a statute exempting from taxation the capital stock of manufacturing corporations invested in carrying on manufacturing. Com. v. Keystone Laundry Co. 203 Pa. 289, 52 Atl. 326.

And yet the stockholders of a corporation organized to bleach, print, dye, callender, and finish woven goods, whose actual business is only bleaching, are liable for the corporate debts in virtue of a statute that applies exclusively to manufacturing corporations. Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing & Bleaching Co. 15 Gray, 216.

While fertilizers made from the offal of slaughtered animals may well be regarded as manufactured, yet, when the making of them is only incidental to the killing and preserving of meat, the pulling of wool, and the saving of raw-hides for market, their preparation does not entitle a corporation that makes them to exemption from taxation as a manufacturer. People ex rel. New England Dressed Meat & Wool Co. v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 408, 41 L. R. A. 228, 50 N. E. 53.

The dust brushed off in polishing rice grains, sold as rice flour, is a by-product of rice milling, and its incidental production does not make rice millers manufacturers of flour. State ex rel. Ernst v. State & City Board, 36 La. Ann. 347; Martin v. Thibaut, 37 La. Ann. 21.

d. Associated enterprises.

1. Production of raw materials.

A manufacturing company does not cease to be such because it seeks to supply its raw materials by production instead of purchase. It may subject so much of its capital as it thus employs to taxation, but it does not lose its own identity. Com. v. Pottsville Iron & Steel Co. 157 Pa. 500, 22 L. R. A. 228, 27 Atl. 371.

The mining of coal has no necessary connection with the manufacture of coke. The Pennsylvania legislature has conferred exemption from taxation upon manufacturing companies, and denied it to mining companies. Manufacturing corporations must purchase their supplies. It may be convenient for them to produce their raw materials, and if they may not do so, the cost of the manufactured article may be enhanced. The statutory exemption cannot be extended so as to cover operations outside of the legitimate processes of manufacturing. Nevertheless, a corporation organized to manufacture, and engaged in manufacturing coke as its principal business, which for economic reasons mines the coal out of which its coke is manufactured, and which has a charter power to mine coal as well as manufacture coke, is still a manufacturing company carrying on manufacture, and, to the extent of its investment in the manufacturing branch or department of its business, is exempt from taxation, but taxable upon the other branch of its operations. Com. v. Juniata Coke Co. 157 Pa. 507, 22 L. R. A. 232, 27 Atl. 373.

This is true also of a corporation manufacturing fire brick, tiles, and other articles of fire clay, that digs or quarries from its own lands the clay it works. Com. v. Savage Fire Brick Co. 157 Pa. 512, 27 Atl. 374.

It is equally true of an oil manufacturing company which draws its raw material from its own oil wells, instead of purchasing it from others. Com. v. National Oil Co. 157 Pa. 516, 27 Atl. 374.

And it is also true of a slate company manufacturing various articles of commerce out of slate from its own quarries, quarried by itself. Com. v. East Bangor Consol. Slate Co. 162 Pa. 599, 29 Atl. 708.

But if the exemption depends upon whether the corporation is exclusively organized for manufacturing purposes only, a corporation that has lawful charter power to do other things will be subject to taxation. Com. v. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. 151 Pa. 265, 24 Atl. 1107, 1111; Com. v. Coplay Iron Co. 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 295, 1 Pa. Dist. R. 353; Com. v. Thomas Iron Co. 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 654.

A corporation with a fourfold character, organized for and engaged in coal mining, quarrying, mining iron ore, and manufacturing articles of iron, but whose principal business is manufacturing, is exempt under a statute abolishing taxes on manufacturing corporations and repealing laws for the collection thereof; but upon only so much of its invested capital as properly and solely belongs to its manufacturing business, notwithstanding the products of its mines and quarries are chiefly consumed in its manufacturing operations. Com. v. Lackawanna Iron & Coal Co. 129 Pa. 346, 359, 18 Atl. 133, 1120.

A corporation organized to execute a contract to remove and dispose of the garbage and refuse of a city, and to manufacture therefrom chemicals, oils, soaps, candles, and similar articles; and which operates a plant including vats wherein the dead animals, kitchen refuse, and offal gathered from the streets are placed, and subjected to heat to drive off moisture and gases and extract grease and oil, leaving a residuum fit, and actually used, for a fertilizer,—is a manufacturer of chemicals and fertilizers, and as such entitled to exemption from taxation of its capital, machinery, and property employed therein, notwithstanding it gathers its raw material in virtue of its city contract, and evolves by-products of merchantable value, which, if they were the sole or principal product of its plant, would leave it taxable. Southern Chemical & F. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 48 La. Ann. 1473, 21 So. 31.

A corporation that has leased, and is operating with a few men, a mine, and near it, with four or five times as many hands, smelting works, from which most of its gains are made, incidentally running a store and boarding house for its employees, is engaged principally in manufacturing, within the meaning of the national bankrupt act. Re Tecopa Min. & Smelting Co. 110 Fed. 120, 3 N. B. N. Rep. 841.

2. Trade and commerce.

Manufacturers constitute a separate class from merchants and traders. Com. v. Campbell, 33 Pa. 380; Com. v. Wm. Mann Co. 150 Pa. 64, 24 Atl. 601; Com. v. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. 151 Pa. 276, 24 Atl. 1111, 1113; Com. v. Thackara Mfg. Co. 156 Pa. 510, 27 Atl. 13; Com. v. J. B. Lippincott Co. 156 Pa. 513, 27 Atl. 10; Iowa Pipe & Tile Co.'s appeal, 101 Iowa, 170, 70 N. W. 115; State ex rel. Davis & S. Lumber Co. v. Fors, 107 Wis. 420, 51 L. R. A. 917, 83 N. W. 706.

A corporation organized for mining and manufacturing lime, and barrels to hold it, has no power or authority to engage in merchandising. Chewacla Lime Works v. Dismukes, 87 Ala. 344, 5 L. R. A. 100, 6 So. 122.

The power to buy and sell,—to purchase in order to sell,—habitually as a business, thus becoming a merchant or trader, is no necessary incident to a manufacturing business. Com. v. Thackara Mfg. Co. 156 Pa. 510, 27 Atl. 13; Com. v. J. B. Lippincott Co. 156 Pa. 513, 27 Atl. 10; People ex rel. Tiffany & Co. v. Campbell, 144 N. Y. 166, 38 N. E. 990; People ex rel. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73; People ex rel. F. W. Devoe & C. T. Reynolds Co. v. Roberts, 51 App. Div. 77, 64 N. Y. Supp. 494.

A corporation engaged in manufacturing oil-cloths, which, at a distance from its factory, conducts a store where it deals in that class of goods, selling not only its own, but others' products, is not, merely because incorporated under the manufacturing act, exempt from taxation as a merchant so far as it carries on a mercantile business, when the only exceptions to those liable for the tax, made by the tax law, are mechanics and manufacturers selling their own products, and not keeping a store or warehouse or selling goods made by others to a greater extent than $1,000. Com. v. Thomas Potter Sons & Co. 159 Pa. 583, 28 Atl. 492.

A domestic corporation formed to manufacture, buy, sell, and deal in lamps, gas, and electric fixtures, is organized exclusively for manufacturing purposes, because the attempted reservation of power to buy, sell, and deal is void. Therefore, when such a corporation actually carries on manufacturing within the state it is exempt from capital-stock taxation to the extent that it has invested in manufacturing, and is taxable upon the remainder in Pennsylvania.

Com. v. Thackara Mfg. Co. 156 Pa. 510, 27 Atl. 13.

The same is true of a book and periodical printing and publishing, and stationery and blank-book manufacturing, corporation that likewise attempted to reserve power to deal in maps, books, periodicals, stationery, and similar articles made by others. Com. v. J. B. Lipincott Co. 156 Pa. 513, 27 Atl. 10.

A New York corporation organized under the general manufacturing act to manufacture and sell gold and silver ware and other articles of ornament and use, and limited by its charter to the exercise of such powers, and by statute to such others, as are necessary and incidental to them, 80 per cent of whose capital is employed in the exercise of its corporate power to manufacture and sell its manufactured wares; but which, ultra vires, employs a part of its capital in buying and selling goods of the same character as its own, made by others to complete its lines of stock and meet the demands of its customers for articles it cannot profitably make,—is conclusively presumed to be “wholly engaged in manufacturing within the state of New York,” and entitled to tax exemption in virtue of the so-phrased laws thereof; but the extent of its exemption is limited to the amount of capital actually employed in exercising its chartered powers. It is taxable upon its ultra vires business. People ex rel. Tiffany & Co. v. Campbell, 144 N. Y. 166, 38 N. E. 990, Reversing 80 Hun, 95, 30 N. Y. Supp. 70.

This decision in effect overruled Re Tiffany & Co. 80 Hun, 486, 30 N. Y. Supp. 494, wherein the supreme court third department, at the instance of the attorney general, set aside an assessment of this corporation to the end that the comptroller might increase it according to the entire capital, upon the ground that it was not wholly employed in manufacture.

A foreign corporation chartered for manufacturing purposes only, and engaged therein in the state of New York, is exempt, also, to the extent of its capital invested in manufacturing, notwithstanding ultra vires it deals in similar products and articles incidental to the trade, which it does not manufacture. People ex rel. F. W. Devoe & C. T. Reynolds Co. v. Roberts, 51 App. Div. 77, 64 N. Y. Supp. 494.

But when a New York corporation not only has power, by its charter, to manufacture, so that it would be exempt as a manufacturing corporation if it had no other powers, but has also the chartered power to trade in articles similar to those it manufactures, but made by others; and it does actually exercise all its chartered powers and carry on both manufacturing and trading,—it is not exempt from taxation, because it is not wholly engaged in carrying on manufacture. People ex rel. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73.

The principle of that decision was the same as that applied in People ex rel. Western Electric Co. v. Campbell, 145 N. Y. 587, 40 N. E. 239, and People ex rel. Edison Electric Light Co. v. Campbell, 88 Hun, 530, 34 N. Y. Supp. 713, Reversed on another ground in 148 N. Y. 759, 43 N. E. 177. (Vide VI. a, 2, infra.)

Manufacturing corporations carrying on manufacturing in New York are taxable under a statute of that state imposing upon domestic and foreign corporations alike taxes measured by capital stock employed within the state, except when such corporations are wholly engaged in carrying on manufacturing within the state, if they are engaged in outside trade, even though their outside operations are solely either foreign or interstate commerce. People ex rel. William J. Matheson & Co. v. Roberts, 158 N. Y. 162, 52 N. E. 1102; People ex rel. American Soda Fountain Co. v. Roberts, 158 N. Y. 168, 58 N. E. 1104.

That a part of the capital stock of a manufacturing corporation is employed in disposing of the manufactured product does not exclude it, in estimating the amount of capital stock invested in manufacturing in the state, under a statute exempting from a given tax such a corporation when it has half of its capital stock invested in manufacturing within the state. Re Consolidated Electric Storage Co. (N. J. Eq.) 26 Atl. 983.

3. Miscellaneous.

A corporation formed to manufacture, trade in, buy, sell, lease, and otherwise acquire, hold, and dispose of phonographs, graphophones, and instruments of any other kind or description, made, used, or intended for recording and reproducing sounds, and any and all supplies, appliances, materials, and articles used or required presently or in futuro in the manufacture, use, or operation of phonographs, etc., is a manufacturing corporation. State ex rel. North American Phonograph Co. v. State Board, 54 N. J. L. 430, 24 Atl. 507.

For two New York cases, vis.: People ex rel. Western Electric Co. v. Campbell, 145 N. Y. 587, 40 N. E. 239, and People ex rel. Edison Electric Light Co. v. Campbell, 88 Hun, 530, 34 N. Y. Supp. 713, Reversed in 148 N. Y. 759, 43 N. E. 177, here in point,—see VI. a, 2, infra.

In Pennsylvania a domestic corporation, otherwise within the terms of a statute thereof exempting from taxation the capital stock of corporations organized exclusively for manufacturing purposes and actually carrying on manufacture within the state, does not lose its exemption by investing in property not used for manufacturing purposes, except, of course, to the extent that it is represented by such property. Com. v. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. 151 Pa. 276, 24 Atl. 1111, 1113.

An investment of part of the capital of a manufacturing corporation in houses and lots for its workmen is not an investment for manufacturing purposes; nor are such houses and lots any necessary part of the manufacturing plant. Ibid.; West Chester Gas Co. v. Chester County, 30 Pa. 232; Com. v. Mahoning Rolling Mill Co. 129 Pa. 360, 18 Atl. 135.

The same is true of an investment in a house rented out to a tenant. Schuylkill County v. Citizens' Gas Co. 148 Pa. 162, 23 Atl. 1055.

A Pennsylvania corporation exempt as a manufacturing company is not taxable upon real estate used by it exclusively as a business office, even when located in a city distant from its works; but it is taxable on dwellings that it owns and rents near its works, to its workmen. Com. v. Salt Mfg. Co. 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 97.

A statute imposing a capital-stock tax upon corporations, with a proviso that it shall not apply to so much of the capital stock of corporations organized for manufacturing as is invested and actually exclusively employed in manufacturing within the state; but that such corporations shall pay such tax upon so much, if any, of their capital stock as may be invested in any property or business not strictly incident or appurtenant to manufacturing,—carries no exemption to railroad bonds owned by a manufacturing corporation, notwithstanding a statute that subjects such bonds to taxation makes the railroad which issued them state agent to collect the tax thereon, and the railroad has agreed with its bondholders to bear itself the burden of such tax, and has reported such agreement to the state. Com. v. Jarecki Mfg. Co. 204 Pa. 36, 53 Atl. 517.

A corporation formed to distill, redistill, and rectify high-wines, alcohol, and spirits; to feed and deal in cattle and other live stock; and to malt and deal in malt,—is not organized for purely manufacturing purposes, and, therefore, is not within the exception of a statute for assessing domestic corporations upon their capital stock by a state board, except corporations organized for purely manufacturing purposes, which are left to be assessed by local assessors upon their property in like manner as are individual property owners. Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co. v. People, 161 Ill. 101, 43 N. E. 779.

In New York corporations for laying asphalt pavements, although they manufacture the asphalt mixture used for the purpose, are not exclusively manufacturing corporations; and when a statute imposes a tax upon all corporations except those "wholly engaged in carrying on manufacture within the state," they are taxable; but, after the statute has been amended so as to exempt manufacturing corporations "to the extent, only, of the capital actually employed in this state in manufacturing, and in the sale of the product of such manufacturing," then they become entitled to exemption to the extent in which their capital is employed in making the asphalt mixture used for pavement. People ex rel. Syracuse Improv. Co. v. Morgan, 50 App. Div. 302, 69 N. Y. Supp. 263; People ex rel. Eastern Bermudez Asphalt Paving Co. v. Morgan, 61 App. Div. 873, 70 N. Y. Supp. 516.

VI. Special industries.

There are certain business enterprises, plainly productive industries, and certainly not mining nor agricultural, and which cannot properly be classed under the head of commerce, that the courts have been unable to agree in styling manufacturing. These are those which produce and vend light, heat, and power, books and newspapers, and foods fitted for human consumption, and which gather, preserve, and sell ice naturally congealed.

a. Light and power companies.

1. Gas.

A corporation organized for manufacturing and supplying illuminating gas, and actually engaged therein, is a manufacturing corporation. Gas extracted from the richer cannel coals, being unfitted for use because of imperfect combustion, is ordinarily mingled in definite proportions with non-illuminating gas from poorer coals to dilute and carry it. The resulting compound, which differs widely from each of its constituents, must still undergo further modifications before it is fit to use for light. Condensation and washing rid it of some impurities, and a chemical process of others. It is measured on delivery to consumers; it requires mechanical devices and operating skill to adapt it to use. A gas company, therefore, is within the express exception of a statute imposing upon corporations generally a tax at a specified rate upon their capital stock graded according to dividends, and excepting from its operation manufacturing corporations carrying on manufacture in the state; and, by consequence, is subject to assessment and taxation under other statutes for taxing property. Nassau Gaslight Co. v. Brooklyn, 89 N. Y. 409.

A corporation organized to supply gas to the people of a given city, and to dispose of the by-products, actually engaged in making illuminating gas by distillation of bituminous coal and decomposition of steam enriched by hydro-carbon vapors, is organized exclusively for manufacturing purposes, and actually carrying on manufacture within the state, within the meaning of the Pennsylvania tax exemption laws. Com. v. Allegheny Gas Co. 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 93.

A gas company is strictly a manufacturing corporation, within both the letter and the spirit of a tax law discriminating in the method of assessing corporate personal property, when it consists of machinery employed in a branch of manufacture. Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. 100 Mass. 183.

But the impounding and supplying of natural gas for fuel, etc., are not manufacturing. Emerson v. Com. 108 Pa. 111; Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839.

Authority, said the court in West Manayunk Gaslight Co. v. Philadelphia, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 52, is massed in solid phalanx in favor of the exemption of the real estate of a gas company necessary for the conduct of its business. The cases of West Chester Gas Co. v. Chester County, 30 Pa. 232; Coatesville Gas Co. v. Chester County, 97 Pa. 476, and Schuylkill County v. Citizens' Gas Co. 148 Pa. 162, 23 Atl. 1055, settle the question beyond controversy.

Under the Massachusetts taxing system, whereby the personal property of corporations is subjected to taxation by assessing the shares of their stockholders, except that machinery, when employed in any branch of manufacture, is to be taxed where it is situated or employed; and in assessing the stockholders of a manufacturing corporation the value of the corporate real estate and machinery is to be deducted from the value of the shares,—the mains, pipes, and meters of a gas company in the streets and at places of consumption are to be classed as machinery employed in manufacture. Com. v. Lowell Gaslight Co. 12 Allen, 75.

The rule is otherwise in Kentucky. A section in a municipal charter providing that raw material held by manufacturers for the purpose of being manufactured in the city, and machinery in factories, shall be exempt from taxation, does not free lamp-posts in streets, meters at points of consumption, and pipes and mains belonging to a gas company for conveying illuminating gas from the works to consumers; because the means of conveying gas through the streets and measuring it on delivery are for the purpose of furnishing, and not of manufacturing, it. Covington Gaslight Co. v. Covington, 84 Ky. 94.

The capital and machinery employed in making illuminating gas are not exempt from taxation in virtue of a constitutional provision freeing such as are employed in manufacturing chemicals, because illuminating gas is not a chemical. Shreveport Gas, Electric Light & P. Co. v. Caddo Parish, 47 La. Ann. 65, 16 So. 650.

But while it is generally agreed that making artificial illuminating gas is manufacturing, and that artificial gas companies are manufacturing companies, they may be, and frequently are, in tax legislation denied the exemptions given to other manufacturing corporations. Williams v. Rees, 9 Biss. 405, 2 Fed. 882; Com. v. Germania Brewing Co. 145 Pa. 83, 22 Atl. 240.

Although a gas company is a manufacturing company, in Illinois, it is not included in the general class of corporations organized for purely manufacturing purposes, assessable only by local assessors, within the exception of a statute providing for the assessment of the capital stock of domestic corporations by a state board; because in such statute, afterwards, gas companies are named among the corporations that are required to furnish the state board with sworn statements of their capital stock for the purpose of assessment and taxation. Ottawa Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Downey, 127 Ill. 201, 20 N. E. 20; Sterling Gas Co. v. Higby, 134 Ill. 557, 25 N. E. 660.

2. Electricity.

There has been less harmony among the decisions respecting the status of electric light and power companies under statutes relating to taxation and exemption, and especially favorable to manufacturing enterprises. The weight of authority, notwithstanding the decision in the principal case (latest in point), classifies them with manufacturers in general, and holds them entitled to the privileges and immunities of manufacturing corporations, unless these are expressly denied them by direct and explicit designation in pertinent legislation.

A New York corporation organized under an act for the formation of corporations for manufacturing purposes, and engaged in the business of producing electricity and supplying it to customers for the purpose of public and private illumination, is a manufacturing corporation. As such it was not subject in that state to taxation upon its corporate franchise under a statute providing for such a tax upon corporations generally, with certain exceptions, among which were manufacturing corporations carrying on manufacture within the state. But it became so taxable upon the amendment of such statute, taking out of the exception electric light companies by name; and all this notwithstanding, before the amendment, the state officials uniformly insisted that electric light companies never were within the statutory exception. People ex rel. Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 120 N. Y. 543, 14 L. R. A. 708, 29 N. E. 808.

And this also was the case with a domestic electric light company organized, not under the general manufacturing act, but under a statute authorizing the formation of gaslight companies. People ex rel. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 664, 29 N. E. 812.

The business, it was said in reasoning out the conclusion in the first of these two cases, renders it necessary to invest large capital in a plant, which may be, appropriately enough, called a factory; to purchase and consume vast stores of coal to make steam and furnish power to operate machinery; and to have and operate a complicated system of machinery, boilers, engines, dynamos, shafting, belting, and other things common in manufacturing establishments; and then, by means of wires, cables, and lamps, streets and private houses are electrically lighted for compensation. The electricity or electric current that produces this result cannot properly be said to be the free gift of nature gathered from air or clouds. It is the product of capital and labor, and in this respect not distinguishable from the results of ordinary manufacturing operations. In the common understanding the thing that brings about the results that yield the corporate income is generated or produced from power applied to machinery by a process wholly artificial.

Passing by the refinements of scientific discussion as to the nature of electricity, it would seem to be common sense to hold that a corporation that does all this is in every just sense of the term a manufacturing corporation. People ex rel. Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 14 L. R. A. 708, 29 N. E. 808.

And in the same state the supreme court, third department, following this decision, held that a corporation which owns and operates electric light and power plants, and manufactures and distributes by conductors from a central station electricity to its customers, and also makes contracts with licensees to construct, operate, and sell complete central station plants for the same purpose, is a manufacturing corporation, and as such exempt from taxation. People ex rel. Edison Electric Light Co. v. Campbell, 88 Hun, 527, 34 N. Y. Supp. 711.

But when a foreign electric light company doing business in New York is empowered by its charter to manufacture, buy, sell, lease, or otherwise procure, own, and dispose of electric and electric telegraph and telephone instruments and apparatus of all kinds, and all parts of the same, and to acquire by purchase patent and other rights and franchises, and to acquire and dispose of capital stock in other corporations, with its main office and factory in its home state, and conducts in New York an extensive manufacturing and general business according to its chartered powers, it is subject to taxation in that state, because, having and exercising such broad powers beyond manufacturing, it is not classed among manufacturing corporations wholly engaged in carrying on manufacture within the state,—the only class that is exempt. People ex rel. Western Electric Co. v. Campbell, 145 N. Y. 587, 40 N. E. 239.

For the same reason, a domestic corporation whose main business is owning and leasing patents relating to lighting, heating, and supplying motive power by electricity, which patents are operated under by other corporations in which it holds stock, is not exempt from taxation. People ex rel. Edison Electric Light Co. v. Campbell, 88 Hun, 530, 34 N. Y. Supp. 713, Reversed in 148 N. Y. 759, 43 N. E. 177, but upon another point, the stated proposition having been approved.

Electric light and power companies are manufacturing companies within the Alabama Code of 1886, § 1565, authorizing the consolidation of any two or more mining, quarrying, or manufacturing corporations. Beggs v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 96 Ala. 295, 38 Am. St. Rep. 94, 11 So. 381. This conclusion was reached by a line of reasoning identical with that followed by the New York court of appeals in the case first cited in this subdivision, and of which an outline has been given.

The supreme court of Colorado upheld the right of an individual to condemn a right of way across private lands for a ditch to convey water to furnish power to operate an electric-light plant, under a provision in the state Constitution that forbids private property to be taken for private use without the owner's consent, except for private ways of necessity, and for reservoirs, drains, dunes, or ditches for agricultural, mining, milling, domestic, or sanitary purposes.

It was contended that the term "milling," the one by virtue of which the right to condemn existed, if at all, for the purpose avowed, was restricted in meaning to milling ore or grain; but the court thought the word "should be given its modern acception, and held as synonymous with the word 'manufacturing,' if not of broader signification and including that term." After citing several definitions of the meanings of manufacture and manufacturing, the court continued: "We cite the foregoing at length, as it upholds our view of the meaning to be given to the words 'manufacturing purposes' and also shows that the purpose of the appellee is within the ordinary meaning of those terms." Lamborn v. Bell, 18 Colo. 346, 20 L. R. A. 241, 32 Pac. 989.

The judiciary of South Carolina, Massachusetts, and Maine have respectively, under different circumstances, made use of language implying that they took for granted that an electric light company was a manufacturer. In passing upon the right of a municipality in South Carolina to own and operate an electric-light plant, the supreme court in that state used the following language: "The city has the express power to own property, and it also has the implied right to light the city. Do these powers necessarily imply the right to make the city the owner of the plant and a manufacturer of electricity?" Mauldin v. Greenville, 33 S. C. 1, 8 L. R. A. 291, 11 S. E. 434.

The justices of the Massachusetts supreme court, in furnishing the legislature of that commonwealth an opinion concerning the constitutionality of proposed legislation authorizing municipal ownership of works to make and distribute gas and electricity for public and private illumination, repeatedly use expressions indicating their belief that generating and supplying electricity are manufacturing. They speak of "works for the manufacture and distribution of gas and electricity." They say: "The fundamental question is whether the manufacture and distribution of gas or electricity . . . is a public service;" and: "It is practically impossible for every individual to manufacture gas or electricity for himself;" and again: "If the legislature is of opinion that the common convenience and welfare . . . will be promoted by conferring . . . the power of manufacturing and distributing gas or electricity;" and, finally: "We have confined our opinion to the questions asked, which . . . relate to the manufacture and distribution of gas or electricity solely for the purpose of furnishing light." Opinion of the Justices, 150 Mass. 592, 8 L. R. A. 487, 24 N. E. 1084.

While the supreme court of Maine, in disposing of a case that presented the single question whether an electric light and power company belonged to the class of corporations subject to the state insolvency laws, which laws applied to all domestic corporations carrying on manufacturing or other private business, but not to those engaged in a business involving public duties or obligations, among which were corporations supplying cities and towns with gas and water, and other corporations of like character, held the electric light company was just like a gas company. "Each," it said, "supplies a town with artificial light. Each manufactures its power." Edison United Mfg. Co. v. Farmington Electric Light & P. Co. 82 Me. 464, 19 Atl. 859.

In Pennsylvania, in the first great contest over the question, the supreme court affirmed the judgment of the common pleas, denying to an electric light and power company an exemption from taxation to which manufacturing corporations in that state were entitled. The court below did so upon the ground that such corporations were not manufacturers. We have not been referred to, nor have we been able to find, it said, any definition of the term "manufacture" or "manufacturing" that does not limit them to the production of material substances. And in every case in which the question, what was a manufacture, or who was a manufacturer, arose, and it was held that either term applied, it was assumed that the articles produced must be material substances. Whatever electricity may be, it is manifestly and admittedly not a material substance. Whatever electric light companies do, they do not, in generating or evolving electricity, make changes or modifications by art or industry in the form or substance of material articles. They do not make wares of any kind, nor reduce raw materials to a form fit for use. When all has been heard that can be said upon the subject there is nothing to lead to the belief that electricity is a material substance, nor is it claimed by anyone so to be; therefore, its production, generation, or evolution, does not come within the authoritative lexicographic, scientific, or legal definitions of the term "manufacture" or "manufacturing;" hence we cannot say that defendant manufactures electricity. But the supreme court did not agree with this reasoning. The company, said that tribunal, in substance, sells the electricity it makes or "brings into being" as a commodity. It provides lamps or appliances for the use of its customers, by means of which the light is produced; it sells them the electricity, measures it as it is delivered, and is paid according to the quantity furnished. Whatever electricity may be, it seems to be absolutely within the power and under the control of the company that brings it into being. It is secured, stored, poured out, or liberated at will. Its manifestations are both seen and felt. It may be too early to say just what it is. The scientists whose views the learned judge adopted may be right or wrong. We have no need to decide that question. Laws are written ordinarily in the language of the people, and not in that of science; and, if this case depended on the question on which it turned in the court below, we should be led to a different conclusion, and hold that this company was a manufacturing company. Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839.

Nevertheless, the supreme court affirmed the judgment, because it held that, even if an electric light company was a manufacturing corporation, it was not within the apposite statute, because it was not the kind of a manufacturing corporation that the Pennsylvania legislature had in mind and intended to include when it enacted, in 1885, the law abolishing capital-stock taxes upon manufacturing corporations, and repealing, so far as manufacturing corporations were concerned, all laws for their collection. The abolition and repeal applied, according to the view of the court, only to such kinds of manufacturing corporations as had been known and legislated about during the previous half century. And electric light companies were not among these. Ibid.

This decision was followed and adopted in Com. v. Edison Electric Light Co. 145 Pa. 131, 27 Am. St. Rep. 683, 22 Atl. 841, 845, 846; Com. v. Brush Electric Light Co. 145 Pa. 147, 22 Atl. 844; Com. v. Edison Electric Light & P. Co. 170 Pa. 231, 32 Atl. 419.

Judge Simonton, whose judgment was approved while his reasoning was condemned, was naturally resentful, and took the opportunity which came to him in Com. v. American Car & Foundry Co. (judgment affirmed, per curiam, on opinion of the court below in 203 Pa. 302, 52 Atl. 326) to strike back. If the question in this case, he said, in substance, were whether an electric light, heat, and power company were exempt from the tax on capital stock, we would, of course, unhesitatingly follow the precedent of the Northern Electric Light & Power Case, and decide that it was not. But the electric light cases are not authority for cases involving the question of the right of other companies to the exemption. These are to be decided by determining the proper construction of the acts taxing the capital stock of corporations, and, if the language of the acts is clear and unambiguous, the court is in duty bound to enforce them according to their obvious meaning, and is not at liberty to enlarge or limit their scope by any ideas it may have of what should be the policy of the legislature. This has been so often said that it is commonplace, but as it seems to have been overlooked in the discussion of the electric-light cases we refer to a few of the utterances of the courts on this subject. Then, after quoting remarks in point by Field, J., in Hadden v. The Collector, 5 Wall. 111, 18 L. ed. 519; Thompson, J., in Bradbury v. Wagenhorst, 54 Pa. 180; Sharswood, J., in Dame's Appeal, 62 Pa. 417; Marshall, Ch. J., in The Paulina v. United States, 7 Cranch, 52, 3 L. ed. 266; Chase, J., in Priestman v. United States, 4 Dall. 28, 1 L. ed. 727; and Sedgwick on the Construction of Statutory and Constitutional Law (p. 205),—he adds: Citations of utterances to the same effect from judges both in this country and in England might be multiplied indefinitely, but these we think are sufficient to make clear the principle upon which the case is to be decided.

The question was subsequently raised in Pennsylvania, whether the purchasers of the rights and franchises of an electric light company at a sheriff's sale were authorized to reorganize the company,—a question the answer to which depended upon whether such a company was a manufacturing corporation within the meaning of the authorizing act. The court below, upon the authority of Com. v. Northern Electric Light & P. Co. 145 Pa. 105, 14 L. R. A. 107, 22 Atl. 839, and Com. v. Edison Electric Light & P. Co. 170 Pa. 231, 32 Atl. 419, just cited, held that it was not, and so could not be reorganized; but this decision the supreme court of Pennsylvania reversed. Its argument was, in substance, as follows: The ground on which the decision is said to rest, vis., the definition of manufacturing companies adopted by the legislature, will not bear the test of the act of 1874 in the light of later decisions, or of the legislative interpretations of the earlier act by more recent ones which are in pari materia. It supported this statement by citing various laws enacted between 1874 and 1895, providing for the incorporation of companies for the manufacture of gas or supply of light or heat to the public by any other means; for the supply of light, heat, or power by electricity; authorizing corporations so formed to erect and maintain buildings, etc., for manufacturing gas, heat, or light from coal or other materials; authorizing boroughs to manufacture electricity; and making it unlawful to connect or disconnect electrical conductors belonging to any company engaged in the manufacture and supply of electrical currents for light, heat, or power. And it cited its decision in Southern Electric Light & P. Co. v. Philadelphia, 191 Pa. 170, 43 Atl. 123, that there is no distinction between manufacturing and supplying electricity; that power to supply it includes the power to manufacture it. And yet at the same time it earnestly protested that what it was saying was not intended to affect the decisions it was cutting the ground from under, and that they were properly decided. But it did say that the reason assigned for those decisions was unsatisfactory, and, carried to its logical conclusion as the court below had done in the instant case, it lead to a wrong result. Electric light companies are manufacturing companies, and embraced with other manufacturing corporations so as to permit purchasers of their franchises at a sheriff's sale to reorganize them; but they are not exempt from capital-stock taxation because not within the policy of the legislature in passing the exempting act, and not intended to share in its benefits. Com. ex rel. McCormick v. Keystone Electric Light, Heat & P. Co. 193 Pa. 245, 44 Atl. 326.

But they are exempt from taxation upon their real estate and other property essential to the conduct of their business. Southern Electric Light & P. Co. v. Philadelphia, 191 Pa. 170, 43 Atl. 123; Brush Electric Light Co. v. Philadelphia, 8 Pa. Dist. R. 231; Lancaster v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 8 Pa. Co. Ct. 631.

The circumstance that a part of the property of such a corporation is reserved for use for its manufacturing purposes only in emergencies or to meet unusual demands does not change its character as property used or intended to be used for its essential objects. Southern Electric Light & P. Co. v. Philadelphia, 191 Pa. 170, 43 Atl. 123.

A municipal ordinance providing that the machinery and manufacturing apparatus of all manufacturing industries established within the corporate limits within two years after it was ordained and actually employed in the business of manufacturing in the city shall be exempt from taxation for five years; passed pursuant to legislative authority to exempt from taxation for municipal purposes manufacturing property, mechanical tools, implements, machinery, apparatus, or engines actually used in manufacturing within the city whenever the municipal authorities deem it expedient to encourage the growth and development of manufactures and manufacturing industries; and when the legislation of the state respecting the formation of corporations distinguishes electric light companies from those carrying on any kind of manufacturing, ship-building, mechanical, industrial, or chemical business,—does not embrace a local electric light and power company. Frederick Electric Light & P. Co. v. Frederick City, 84 Md. 599, 36 L. R. A. 130, 36 Atl. 362.

In thus deciding, the court, after stating that the question in the case was whether the production and supplying of electric light are a manufacturing industry within the meaning of the ordinance, said, in substance: In determining this question we do not deem it necessary to attempt a scientific discussion of what electricity is. Nor do we think we can gather much assistance from encyclopædias, dictionaries, or other books endeavoring to define it. Whether an electric light company can properly be said to "manufacture" electricity, or whether it simply brings into action that which is already made, we need not determine. The purpose of the law is "for the encouragement of the growth and development of manufacturing industries" in the city. The exemption embraces "the machinery and manufacturing apparatus of all manufacturing industries." Now, would the term "manufacturing industries" strike the mind of the average man, when used in the above connection, as including an electric-light plant? We mean by the average man, one of fair and ordinary intelligence, such as a legislature or a town council might be composed of; but not one who looks at everything from a technical or scientific standpoint. In speaking of the manufacturing industries of a city we would not ordinarily include an electric-light plant if it had one. In advertising a town as a desirable place for manufactures the fact that it was lighted with electricity might be mentioned, just as good roads, pure water, healthy climate, or other attractions might be; but, if a list of its manufactures were to include the electric-light plant, it would be looked upon as an effort to enlarge the number beyond what the facts justified. If a company proposed to manufacture armatures, lamps, or other electrical appliances, one would think of it as a manufacturing industry, but not as an ordinary electric plant for furnishing electricity. But even if an electric-light plant is conceded to be in a certain sense a manufacturing industry, it is not necessarily such an one as the ordinance meant. Can it be contended that, if the owner of one of the hotels has an electric plant to light his own property, it is exempt from taxation because it is a manufacturing industry? The fact that appellant lights houses by electricity for compensation cannot give it more right to exemption, if as much, than one who uses it only for his own purposes, and the one would be a manufacturing industry as well as the other. (This argument the court itself promptly demolished by immediately saying: Companies furnishing artificial gas have been held to be manufacturing companies, but would the plant of a person who makes his own gas be exempt as a manufacturing industry under this ordinance?) It seems to us clear that the ordinance does not have such a broad meaning. Ibid.

An additional reason for holding that the ordinance did not apply was found in its declared purpose of fostering the growth and development of manufacturing industries in the city; and it was said that this purpose could in no wise be subserved by exempting a local electric-light plant, because that could not be brought to locate there from another place; it must come there or not exist at all; it has no liberty of choice, and, anyway, it does not employ much labor or admit of any great growth or development. Ibid.

Granting, too, that the Maryland statutes providing for the formation of corporations are broad enough to authorize the organization of electric light companies as "carrying on a kind of manufacture," the case is not affected, because such statutes are to be liberally construed, while exemption laws, on the other hand, are to be construed most strictly. Ibid. The opinion of the dissenting judge, if one was written, is not reported.

A corporation formed to furnish light, heat, and power for public and private uses, although it generates the electricity it supplies, is not within the exception of a statute for assessing domestic corporations upon their capital stock by a state board, except corporations organized for purely manufacturing purposes, which are assessable by local assessors the same as individual taxpayers. Evanston Electric Illuminating Co. v. Kochersperger, 175 Ill. 26, 51 N. E. 719.
64 L. R. A.

This decision was grounded upon the proposition that an organization to "furnish" was not an organization to "manufacture." It is not necessary in this case, said the court, to consider whether a company formed for the purpose of generating or collecting electricity, or producing electric light by a current of electricity and furnishing such light or heat or power for public and private use, could be regarded as a corporation purely for manufacturing purposes. Appellant was not organized for that purpose, but, under its charter might furnish light, heat, and power procured from another without engaging in the business of generating the electricity at all. Ibid.

b. Printing and publishing.

The courts differ widely upon the question whether printing and publishing are a manufacturing business, or, rather, whether the printing and publishing of a newspaper are manufacturing. In the main they agree that general job printing, and printing and publishing books, are manufacturing.

A corporation formed according to its certificate of organization to carry on the business of printing and publishing, in a named city, a daily newspaper, and to do general jobbing, printing, and publishing; but whose entire capital is employed in publishing the newspaper (the decisive consideration),—is not in a legal sense a manufacturer. State, Evening Journal Assn., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 47 N. J. L. 36, 52 Am. St. Rep. 107, note.

But a corporation formed to conduct and prosecute the business of book printing, job printing, engraving, electrotyping, and lithographing, and actually engaged in such business, whose output consists of pamphlets, textbooks, and all descriptions of printed matter, including chromos and illuminated cards made to order, is a manufacturing corporation engaged in manufacturing. Ibid.

In so far as the publishers of a daily newspaper carry on also a job-printing office wherein they make, to sell, blank books, cards, bill heads, posters, show bills, and other printed matter, they are clearly manufacturers within the meaning of the national bankrupt act; and, although it is unnecessary in this case so to decide, the court is of the opinion that the printing and publishing of the newspaper are equally manufacturing; that a newspaper is as much the result of manufacture as are books, or cards, or billheads; and that there is no legal distinction between the two lines of production. Re Kenyon, 1 Utah, 47, 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 238.

In so far as one is engaged in the business of printing and selling blank books, cards, billheads, notes, posters, show bills, and other printed matter, he is undoubtedly a manufacturer within the purview of the national bankrupt act; but, notwithstanding the contrary opinion expressed by the court in the last-cited case, the printer and publisher of a newspaper is certainly not. Re Capital Pub. Co. 3 Mac-Arth. 405, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 319.

No definition of the word "manufacturer," said the court in that case, has ever included the publisher of a newspaper, and the common understanding of mankind excludes it. The newspaper does not come within the popular meaning of the term "manufacture," unless, indeed, when its contents are slenderly endowed with truth, or when its articles appear to be made out of whole cloth. It gives employment to printing presses, types, and editors; and yet in the whole history of newspapers from the close of the 17th century this word "manufacture" has never been applied to them or appropriated by them in the entire range of English literature. No author has ever so used it, and it is never so applied by any statute or by any authority, except by way of opinion in the solitary case from Utah. Ibid.

This passage is, in substance, quoted in the New Jersey case just cited, and, in connection with it, the court remarked: We agree with the reasoning and the conclusion that the publisher of a newspaper is not in a legal sense a manufacturer. State, Evening Journal Assn., Prosecutor, v. State Board, 47 N. J. L. 36, 52 Am. Rep. 107, note.

A corporation carrying on the business, in New Jersey, of printing and publishing a newspaper (which is not manufacturing), and of printing and publishing books, and general job printing (which is manufacturing), is subject to a tax under the New Jersey tax law applying to corporations in general, but excepting from its operation manufacturing companies carrying on business in the state, in proportion to the investment of its capital stock in the newspaper department of its business, and is exempt in proportion to the remainder. Press Printing Co. v. State Board, 51 N. J. L. 75, 16 Atl. 173.

In Louisiana the printing and publishing of a newspaper are manufacturing. Under a statute imposing license taxes upon several designated kinds of business and "all other business not herein provided for;" and a constitutional provision exempting from license taxation manufacturers other than those of distilled liquors, tobacco, cigars, and cotton-seed oil,—the business of editing, printing, and publishing a daily newspaper is not subject to any tax, because it is manufacturing within the constitutional exemption clause. The court, by Fenner, J., deliberately chose to rest its decision upon the question whether the business was or was not manufacturing, rather than upon the question whether or not it was within the license tax law, unnamed, but embraced by the phrase, "all other business not herein provided for." State v. Dupré, 42 La. Ann. 561, 7 So. 727.

The conclusion was thus reasoned out: Defendants use valuable machinery and implements. Besides clerical and editorial, they employ mechanical, laborers,—type setters, engineers, pressmen, and their assistants; buy and use paper, ink, glue, etc. By machinery and mechanical labor they convert this raw material into a new and distinct article fit for use and in commercial demand, called a newspaper, which they sell directly to dealers and consumers. From a mechanical point of view this presents all the essentials of manufacture under every definition of the word. It also comes clearly within the reason and motive of the constitutional exemption which was to encourage enterprises furnishing employment to home labor in making things the people require. But, because the value of a newspaper comes not from the raw material or the mechanical labor expended upon it, and because it is a medium for conveying ideas and information impressed upon it by the purely intellectual labor of editors, reporters, correspondents, and advertisers, it was concluded below that a newspaper is a product of the mind rather than of manual labor, and therefore not a manufactured article. This is plausible, but not sound. Such a view would deny the exemption to a book publisher or manufacturer of books; yet the Constitution expressly exempts manufacturers of stationery, a term covering blank books, account books, etc.; and it is difficult to conceive any reason or principle that denies to manufacturers of printed books an exemption expressly given to makers of blank and account books, when the former employ more elaborate machinery and more varied and extensive manual labor. Then the argument stands thus: If the maker of blank books and account books is a manufacturer under the express terms of the Constitution, the maker of printed books, employing similar processes with more machinery and labor, is also a manufacturer; and, if the publisher of books is a manufacturer, all the reasons on which the denial of the same status to a newspaper publisher rests absolutely fail. The fallacy of the contrary view has other illustrations. Who would deny that an establishment to make, with the aid of machinery and skilled workmen, optical instruments, such as telescopes and microscopes, would be exempt as a manufactory? Yet manifestly the value of such instruments is not derived from the brass, glass, and other component materials, nor from the mechanical labor expended thereon, but from the scientific skill and knowledge which, by adaptation and arrangement, convey to the eye visions of remote stars and minute atoms. Or, take the homelier and strictly analogous case of the manufacturer of artistic wall paper, who puts upon raw materials designs of grace and beauty invented and drawn by skilled artists. All manufacturers combine more or less mental and mechanical labor products, and in many articles produced the intellectual element confers the greatest and peculiar value. Such is a newspaper. And, since the making of newspapers is a business: since a newspaper is a new and distinct article of commerce; since machinery and manual labor, with physical raw materials, are essential and important factors in making it, constituting the larger part of the cost of producing it,—we can see no sound reason why such a business does not fall, even if newspaper publishing is not manufacturing according to the common usage of the term, within the letter and spirit of the constitutional exemption as that of a manufacturer. Ibid.

Two members of the court refused to concur in this reasoning. Poché, J., concurred in the result because he could find no provision in the revenue act to justify a license tax upon the business of printing and publishing a newspaper, but he would not assent to the proposition that such business was manufacturing in any sense of the word. Bermudez, Ch. J., dissented toto. The argument of the chief justice in dissent is very forcible, but lack of further space forbids outlining it here.

The New York court of appeals did not express an opinion upon the question when the opportunity to do so came to it. People ex rel. Jewelers' Circular Pub. Co. v. Roberts, 153 N. Y. 1, 49 N. E. 248.

The printing and publishing for sale of books and periodicals, and the making of stationery, the making and binding of blank books, for the same purpose, is manufacturing, and a corporation organized for, and engaged in, that business is a manufacturing corporation. Com. v. J. B. Lippincott Co. 156 Pa. 513, 27 Atl. 10.

A corporation exclusively organized to and actually engaged in the manufacture of blank books and stationery, printing and lithographing, and selling its manufactured wares; but which has found it profitable, incidentally, to buy and sell some goods made by others,—is exempt from capital-stock taxation to the extent that it is engaged in manufacturing operations. Com. v. Wm. Mann Co. 150 Pa. 64, 24 Atl. 601.

Binding books and making blank books are manufacturing. Seeley v. Gwillim, 40 Conn. 106.

A bond and coupon register in the form of a book, with a page or pages spaced for each bond, and its coupons or any series of coupon bonds with the spaces numbered and designated to show what bonds and coupons they are for while any of them are outstanding, and for receiving them for safe keeping as vouchers when any of them are taken up and paid, is patentable as a new and useful article of manufacture. Munson v. New York, 18 Blatchf. 237, 3 Fed. 338.

Although a New York corporation whose authorized and principal business is printing and publishing books is a manufacturing corporation, and as such would be exempt from the franchise tax in said state if solely engaged in that business; yet, when its charter gives it, in addition, power to buy, sell, and deal in stationery and other articles, and to do any and all business appertaining to and connected with printing and book selling; and it does actually trade in foreign-made books of other publishers,—it loses such exemption, because it is not wholly engaged in carrying on manufacturing within the state. People ex rel. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73.

While it is true that the printer and publisher of a newspaper is a manufacturer, and therefore exempt from license taxation in Louisiana because the Constitution exempts from such tax all manufacturers except certain named ones not inclusive, yet the capital, machinery, and property employed in printing and publishing a newspaper is taxable because the Constitution only exempts from such taxation certain classes of manufacturing not including newspaper publishing, unless the business is embraced by the terms "stationery, ink, and paper," which are not sufficiently broad. Nicholson v. Parker, 44 La. Ann. 76, 10 So. 403.

Neither does the constitutional provision exempting from taxation the capital, machinery, and property employed in manufacturing stationery, ink, and paper extend immunity to a printing establishment employed in making bill-heads, blank books, order blanks, and other commercial forms, for which the paper is bought ready to use and cut and folded into the required sizes. Patterson v. New Orleans, 47 La. Ann. 276, 16 So. 815; Earle v. New Orleans, 47 La. Ann. 277, 16 So. 816.

This conclusion was reasoned out substantially as follows: The Constitution uses the word "manufacture" in its ordinary sense. Its natural import is to produce an article and in its common application refers to changing the raw material into some new and useful form. The Constitution itself illustrates the significance of the word intended by the exemption. The 64 L. R. A.

exemptions extend to cotton mills, manufacturing of textiles, leather, furniture, and agricultural implements. Some of these deal with the article already changed from the raw material; others deal with the raw material; but all contemplate the production of an article not a mere addition or mode of use of an article already manufactured. The paper on which are printed bill-heads is manufactured to serve the purposes denoted by the printed headings made by the printing press. All recognize that the mill that brings the paper into existence by applying machinery to the proper material is a manufactory. None using language in its usual acceptation applies the word to the printer, on the paper, of simply the forms which express the uses to be made of it. To sustain the asserted exemption would make it depend, not on the manufacture, but on the use made of the article after it is manufactured. Stationery embraces ink, pens, writing paper, envelopes, and similar articles used in an office. Those who produce these articles are manufacturers embraced in the constitutional exemption. But we cannot extend that exemption to those who merely print on the paper bill-headings or similar forms that otherwise would be written by the pen. Nor do we think the mere folding or cutting the paper in the shapes required for letter or bill heads, or commercial books, constitutes the manufacture of anything. Ibid.

The reader will observe how much these two decisions run counter to those in the cases ubi supra in this subdivision.

c. Purveying.

In an early case in Ohio the court was "not prepared to say" that one engaged in the business of purchasing and slaughtering hogs, and packing pork for transportation and sale, was a manufacturer within the meaning of the tax laws of that state. Jackson v. State, 15 Ohio, 652.

But that decision was afterwards overruled by the supreme court of Ohio in Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 691, 52 Am. Rep. 103. In overruling it the court said: The facts in that case appear to be very meagerly reported. We are, however, satisfied that, if the facts had been the same as in the case at bar,—if there had been in the year 1846 the same perfection in the art of packing and curing meats which has since been reached and now exists,—Jackson would have been held to be a manufacturer, and not a merchant.

The later case decided that the business of buying and slaughtering hogs and packing pork, in the operation of which the carcasses are subjected to certain processes and combined with other materials engaging skill, labor, and capital, and resulting in the production of lard and cured meats of added value, to be disposed of for profit; which employs a large number of hands, and is conducted in several departments each headed by an able and experienced foreman; which, in rendering lard, curing sides and shoulders, curing and encasing hams and bacon, and packing pork, makes use of raw materials of various kinds, such as salt, saleratus, saltpetre, sugar, molasses, flour, chrome yellow, linseed oil, canvas, wood, paper, tierces, barrels, and kegs, various tools, implements, and mechanical devices; and wherein are requisite several months for the curing process, a week or longer for the smoking and finally a wrapping and dipping of each article in a preservative covering against air and insects; all conducted in one building under one management,—is essentially manufacturing, and is therefore taxable as manufacturing, and not as merchandising. Ibid.

Assuming that a foreign corporation which slaughters animals and prepares and preserves the carcasses for food, which treats the fat so as to convert it into oleo and stearine, and makes the scraps, blood, and entrails into a fertilizer, and sells the meat, hides, and horns, is a manufacturing corporation, its maintaining in the state of New York sales houses for meat elsewhere prepared for market; its doing in that state but one quarter of its slaughtering; its operating there of factories for oleo and stearine, a curing establishment, an ice plant, and refrigerators, and various kinds of machinery,—do not make it wholly engaged in carrying on manufacture in the state of New York, and, hence, do not entitle it to an exemption from taxation given in that state, for that reason, to manufacturing corporations. People ex rel. Schwarzschild & S. Co. v. Roberts, 11 App. Div. 449, 42 N. Y. Supp. 817, Affirmed in 158 N. Y. 690, 50 N. E. 1121, but on the authority of the case next below.

The purchasing of sheep and lambs, slaughtering them, chilling the carcasses to a point where decomposition is arrested, and shipping them in refrigerator cars to market; the pulling of wool from the hides and selling it; the selling of pelts; converting the offal, blood, etc., into fertilizers; rendering the fat into tallow; and producing some other by-products,—are not manufacturing; nor is a corporation, so engaged, and wholly so within the state of New York, entitled to any exemption from taxation in that state. People ex rel. New England Dressed Meat & Wool Co. v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 408, 41 L. R. A. 228, 50 N. E. 53, Reversing 20 App. Div. 521, 47 N. Y. Supp. 123.

A maker of ice cream, notwithstanding he has an extensive establishment, operates considerable machinery, employs several hands, and makes use of different materials, is not a manufacturer so as to fall within a statute prohibiting municipal corporations from levying a tax on persons engaged in selling articles of their own manufacture, manufactured within the state. New Orleans v. Mannessier, 32 La. Ann. 1075.

We cannot, said the court, in thus deciding, assent to the proposition that a person making and selling ice cream is a manufacturer in the sense of the law, or in any other sense of the word. The attempt to magnify a confectionery which is defendant's business into a manufacture must fail. We are told that anyone seeing the steam engine, complicated apparatus, and large force needed to produce defendant's goods would at once conclude that he is a manufacturer. With as much force it might be said that anyone visiting the mammoth kitchen of a great hotel would at once magnify the cooks and pastrymen into manufacturers. Defendant's position is absolutely untenable. Ibid.

Very dogmatic, to be sure, but, is it sound?

A baker making and selling his own bread exclusively is not a manufacturer of bread so as to be exempt from the payment of a license tax, although bread is made from flour prepared by kneading dough, containing water, yeast, and salt in due proportions, and requiring considerable skill and experience properly to bake it. State v. Eckendorf, 46 La. Ann. 131, 14 So. 518. The court could not distinguish between bread making and making ice cream, and, without independent reasoning, followed the ice-cream case.

But, decided the same court soon afterwards, a corporation making out of flour, crackers, biscuits, Italian soup and fancy paste in great variety (but no bread), employing several hundred hands, and whose method is a process whereby flour from the barrels passes through a powder sifter, thence into a powder mixer, from that to a dough box on rails, to be worked into different kinds of dough, which go to cutting machines and finally into the ovens, whence the baked articles are taken, and boxed and shipped, all the materials being handled by machinery,—is a manufacturer, and exempt as such from taxation. State v. American Biscuit Mfg. Co. 47 La. Ann. 160, 16 So. 750.

The court's way of distinguishing the instant case from the previous ones is, in substance, by saying: It will readily be perceived that the establishment is a manufactory in which raw materials are made into wares suitable for use. There are new shapes, new combinations, new qualities, given to the raw material by the process of manufacturing the article. In the Eckendorf Case the exemption was claimed for the production of baker's bread. The baker produced no new article from the original material; he only prepared the manufactured article, flour, for consumption by cooking it. In the other case the defendant was a confectioner, selling ice cream which he made. There is certainly no similarity between the business of the defendants and the confectionery of the defendant in the ice-cream case. Here the identity of the original material is lost in the new articles created in the change of shape, new qualities, and new combinations which enter into their composition, which render them suitable for use in an entirely different manner than that in which the original material could be used. Simply baking the flour in the manner employed by bakers would not make the crackers, the fancy paste, macaroni, vermicelli, etc. Ibid.

A constitutional exemption from taxation of capital, machinery, and property employed in the manufacture of chemicals does not confer any immunity upon the maker and bottler of soda water, vichy, seltzer, and other carbonated beverages. Crescent City Seltz & Mineral Water Co. v. New Orleans, 48 La. Ann. 768, 19 So. 943.

Here, again the reasoning to sustain this conclusion is worth outlining. The process, said the court, in substance, of manufacture of these waters is to subject carbonate of lime or bicarbonate of soda to the action of sulphuric acid, which frees carbonic-acid gas and forms sulphate of lime. The gas absorbed in water produces the carbonated drink ready for use. We cannot appreciate the reasoning by which these carbonated waters are to be deemed chemicals. It is argued that, as muriatic acid is produced by a similar process applied to other materials, and that is a chemical, therefore carbonated drinks are chemicals; and that, as property employed in manufacturing chemicals is exempt, and soda and similar drinks are chemicals, the property used in making them is exempt, because they are the result of a chemical process. We are not called upon to construe the meaning in its fullest extent of the word "chemicals" in the Constitution; but it is clear to us that the framers of the Constitution never intended by exempting property employed to manufacture chemicals, to exempt all compositions or mixtures derived in part from the result of any and all chemical processes. That would be straining language, and a wide departure from the rigid interpretation applied to all tax exemptions. We think we are entirely safe in holding that soda, seltzer, and similar drinks are not chemicals, and that, if it had been the intent to exempt the making of such waters from taxation, it would have found plainer expression than can be, with any reason, deduced from exempting property employed to manufacture chemicals. Ibid.

The gates, filters, screens, shut-offs, cocks, and faucets, and distributing pipes of a water company, unlike the mains and meters of a gas company, are not to be classed as machinery employed in any branch of manufacturing, so as to be taxable, in Massachusetts, to a domestic corporation, instead of by assessment upon its stockholders in proportion to their shares. Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp. 100 Mass. 183.

d. Collecting and distributing ice.

Cutting, storing, and selling at wholesale naturally formed ice are not manufacturing, so as to make, in Massachusetts, the stock of ice, the steam engine, boiler, machinery, tools, and implements of one engaged in that business taxable at the place where they are kept and used, instead of in the town where the owner resides. Hittinger v. Westford, 135 Mass. 258.

And a New York corporation engaged in cutting, gathering, preserving, and, when the season arrives, transporting and vending, ice naturally formed upon the surface of the Hudson river is not a manufacturing corporation, nor engaged at all in carrying on manufacture, and therefore is not entitled to the tax exemption accorded by the New York statutes to manufacturing corporations wholly engaged in manufacturing within the state. People v. Kulckerbocker Ice Co. 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 689.

This conclusion was reached by substantially the same line of reasoning as that adopted in the case just cited from Massachusetts. No doubt, said the New York court, ice may be manufactured, and frigorific effects produced, by artificial means. Corporations exist for that purpose, and come literally within our manufacturing laws. Their methods in no respect resemble those of the defendant. Its tools and implements are, for convenience in handling and in marketing, a product, and not at all for making it. None of the cited cases, it was added, in substance, is so comprehensive as to include this; all that apply, require the production of some article, thing, or object by skill or labor out of raw material, or from matter which has already been subjected to artificial forces, or to which something has been added, to change its natural condition. Ibid.

But a majority of the supreme court of Michigan, in the case of Atty. Gen. ex rel. Miner v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157, 60 Am. Rep. 287, 26 N. W. 311, agreed neither with the conclusions nor the reasoning in these cases. Speaking through Champlin, J., who personally did not assent, the court was of the opinion that a process of preparing natural ice for general consumption, whereby, after it forms, without artificial means, sufficiently thick upon the surfaces of a river and lake, any snow that may have fallen upon it is scraped and shoveled off by scrapers drawn by horses and shovels wielded by men; and then it is marked off into squares of equal area, the enclosing lines of which are first cut a few inches deep, then plowed deeper by horse power, and finally sawed through by manual labor; after which the cakes, broken apart, are floated to a slide or elevator on the shore, hoisted into ice houses by a tackle operated by horse or steam power, packed in layers between and surrounded by nonconductors of heat, such as hay or sawdust; whence, when the season arrives it is taken in barges built for the purpose to points of distribution,—is certainly a process that reduces ice into form fit for use by both hand labor and machinery, and is, therefore, manufacturing. The writer of the opinion, although opposed to this view, makes a fair statement of the argument in support of it. He says: It is very likely that the garnering and preparation of ice fit for consumers of the article fall very near the line. True, its natural condition is not changed. The article itself is a natural product. It is ice when taken from the river and ice when it is delivered to consumers. It is reduced in size, and delivered in quantities to suit patrons. The form alone is changed. But it is not necessary to constitute a commodity a manufactured article that a chemical change should be wrought in the thing manufactured. Iron manufactured from iron ore remains iron. Cotton gathered from the ball and by means of complicated machinery manufactured becomes the cotton of commerce. Lumber is manufactured from logs or timber simply by changing its form. And it has been held that grinding bones to produce the bone dust of commerce was manufacturing within the meaning of the revenue laws of the United States, and that timber split into staves or long pieces designed for shovel handles was manufactured. Ibid.

But a law making machinery used for manufacturing cotton and woolen goods; yarns and other fabrics; machinery; agricultural implements and other articles not prohibited by law; manufactured products and the materials used therefor; manufactories and their machinery; and factory offices and warehouses exempt from all taxes, state and local, for a limited time,—does not embrace the property of a corporation whose business is manufacturing ice and bottling soda water by machinery. Greenville Ice & Coal Co. v. Greenville, 69 Miss. 86, 10 So. 574.

VII. Interpretations of laws.

The New Hampshire statute (G. L. chap. 53, § 10) authorizing towns, by vote, to exempt from taxation for a term not exceeding ten years any establishment therein, or proposed to be set up or operated therein, and the capital used in operating the same for the manufacture of fabrics of cotton, wool, iron, wood, or any other material; and providing that such vote shall be a contract for the term specified,—does not authorize a blanket vote exempting all capital of $5,000 and upwards which may thereafter be invested for manufacturing purposes in the town. To be valid the vote must exempt particular enterprises, either in esse, or actually projected. Cox Needle Co. v. Gifford, 62 N. H. 503.

Such a vote confers no exemption upon an unnamed establishment, even when it is one in a line of business that is mentioned. Neither can the effect of such a vote be enlarged by parol testimony that it was meant to include such an establishment. Franklin Falls Pulp Co. v. Franklin, 66 N. H. 274, 20 Atl. 333.

Nor does such statute authorize any renewal or extension of the term of exemption by a second vote beyond the ten year term once voted. Boody v. Watson, 63 N. H. 320.

But a vote of exemption, in virtue of such statute, of an establishment and the capital required to operate it, which might be set up by a specified manufacturing company, exempts the real estate necessarily occupied in the business of such establishment. Franklin Needle Co. v. Franklin, 65 N. H. 177, 18 Atl. 318.

A statute, reading: Shares of stock in banks, steamboat and transportation companies, trust companies, and other corporations, whether named in this section or not, except railroad corporations, shall be set in the list like other personal estate, to the owner thereof in the town where he resides if he resides in the state, otherwise in the town where the company has its principal place of business,—embraces manufacturing corporations. Waite v. Hyde Park Lumber Co. 65 Vt. 103, 25 Atl. 1089.

Under the Vermont statutory system of taxation, manufacturing corporations are taxable upon their credits due, as well as upon their real estate and machinery in the towns where they have their principal places of business; and the fact that their stockholders have been erroneously taxed upon their shares without excluding the corporate credits does not relieve the corporations from liability. Ibid.

When, throughout the entire legislative history of the state, the legislature's power to declare what property shall be exempt from taxation has been recognized and exercised, there has been given to a constitutional bill of rights requiring of every member of society a proportionate contribution to the expense of protecting life, liberty, and property a practical interpretation contemporaneous with the adoption of the Constitution, and so long practised and acquiesced in as to fix such construction as conclusively as would a judicial determination to the same effect. A statute, therefore, conferring upon towns the right to exempt manufacturing establishments from taxation by so voting must be held constitutional. Colton v. Montpelier, 71 Vt. 413, 45 Atl. 1039.

Nor does such a statute violate a constitutional provision declaring the people not bound by any law but such as they have by their own consent, or that of the representative body of the freemen, assented to for the common good; since it is not a delegation of legislative powers, but is perfected legislation in itself, merely leaving it to a town or city to say if it will avail itself of a privilege to encourage manufactures, the exercise of which privilege neither adds to, nor takes from, the law. Ibid.

A statute supplementary to an act authorizing the formation of corporations for manufacturing purposes, which extends its application to corporations organized to gather, store, and market ice, amounts to a legislative construction of the general act as one not broad enough to embrace such an ice company. People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 669.

Here appropriately may be noticed an argument advanced by the New York court of appeals in the same line, as going to prove that a corporation formed under a special act to construct, use, and provide one or more dry docks or wet docks to build, raise, repair, and copper vessels was not a manufacturing company, because its purposes were in principle the same as those of a company constructing warehouses, elevators or residences; and that, as the legislature had enacted a statute to authorize the formation of corporations for erecting buildings (a law for which there was no need if these could legally be formed under the general manufacturing act), it had interpreted the general manufacturing act as not embracing in its scope the building corporation. And then it added: "The same remarks would apply to the act under which the defendant was incorporated;" and that "the legislative interpretation was entitled to much weight in construing the act in question." People v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co. 92 N. Y. 487.

But it is well to remember, in weighing this argument in that case, that the corporation then before the court was incorporated under a special law enacted in 1843, while the general manufacturing act was passed in 1848, and the law for the formation of building corporations not until 1853. A special act passed before a general act can hardly be said to be an expression of the opinion of the legislature that its objects are not embraced in the latter.

A statute, however, taking out from a general exemption from taxation of manufacturing corporations certain kinds of corporations by name, thus making them taxable certainly and in any event, does not compel the conclusion that the corporations thus designated were necessarily, prior to the new enactment, either within or without the general exception. People ex rel. Brush Electric Mfg. Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 14 L. R. A. 708, 29 N. E. 808.

A general tax law imposing upon corporations a capital-stock tax, with a proviso against its application "to railway, canal, or banking corporations, or to savings banks, cemeteries, or religious corporations, or purely charitable or educational associations, or manufacturing companies or mining companies carrying on business in this state," does not exempt each entire class of the designated corporations, but only such of them as carry on their business within the state. Certainly, with no comma after the words "manufacturing companies," the phrase "carrying on business in this state" must be deemed to qualify manufacturing companies,—as much so, as it certainly does mining companies. Standard Underground Cable Co. v. Atty. Gen. 46 N. J. Eq. 270, 19 Am. St. Rep. 394, 19 Atl. 733, Affirming (N. J. Eq.) 18 Atl. 581.

Raw material for the manufacture of paper, paper in process of manufacture, and manufactured paper are, in New Jersey, visible personal estate, and hence taxable under the act of March 19, 1891 (P. L. 1891, p. 189), in the township, ward, or taxing district where it is found, and not at the owner's domicile. State, Warren Mfg. Co., Prosecutor, v. Dalrymple (N. J. L.) 28 Atl. 671.

In the state of New York manufacturing corporations, like other corporations and individuals, are taxable upon their real estate where that is situated, and upon their capital stock as personal property, locally, at the places named in their respective certificates of organization, although their actual administrative offices may be elsewhere. Oswego Starch Factory v. Dolloway, 21 N. Y. 449; Chesebrough Mfg. Co. v. Coleman, 44 Hun. 545; People ex rel. Knickerbocker Press v. Barker, 87 Hun. 341, 34 N. Y. Supp. 269; People ex rel. General Electric Co. v. Barker, 91 Hun. 590, 36 N. Y. Supp. 842; People ex rel. Edison Electric Light Co. v. Barker, 91 Hun. 594, 36 N. Y. Supp. 844; People ex rel. India Rubber & G. P. Insulating Co. v. Barker, 16 Misc. 252, 39 N. Y. Supp. 58.

But after such a corporation has been assessed in a county where it has a business office, which is not the county named in its certificate, and it has appeared before the tax assessors and obtained a reduction of its assessment, filing, upon its application thus resulting, a statement that its principal office and place of transacting its financial affairs is in that county, it is too late for it to raise the question of a want of jurisdiction to assess it at all, and consequent invalidity of the tax, in a proceeding subsequent to default to enforce payment. Re McLean, 138 N. Y. 158, 20 L. R. A. 389, 33 N. E. 821.

Statutes authorizing a municipality to levy and assess an annual tax for city purposes on all goods, wares, and merchandise, and articles of trade or commerce, sold within the city, and to collect it of the vendors and, also, to levy, assess, and collect for city use, an annual business tax on the average quarterly business of forwarding and commission merchants, brokers, banks, etc., without expressly mentioning manufacturers,—justify a city ordinance imposing taxes on the business of a manufacturing corporation making and vending its products in the city. Keystone Bridge Co. v. Pittsburgh (Pa.) 6 Cent. Rep. 153.

The Pennsylvania statute abolishing taxes on manufacturing corporations laid by and under the revenue laws of the commonwealth, and repealing such laws so far as they relate to and affect manufacturing corporations, relieved such corporations only from the payment of state taxes, and not from those imposed for county, borough, school, and township purposes. Hawes Mfg. Co's Appeal, 1 Monaghan (Pa.) 353, 17 Atl. 219.

That statute was intended to, and does, operate simply on capital employed in manufacturing, and it relieves from taxation only that capital used in manufacturing, not all the capital, whether so used or not, belonging to manufacturing corporations. Com. v. Lackawanna Iron & Coal Co. 129 Pa. 346, 359, 18 Atl. 133, 1120.

A statute providing that any person engaging in manufacturing shall for ten years from the date of his investment be entitled to receive from the treasuries of the state, county, and municipality, respectively, sums equal to the aggregate amounts of state, county, and municipal taxes levied and collected upon the property or capital employed or invested directly in such manufactures or enterprises, except land taxes, does not warrant the refunding to a manufacturing corporation entitled to all the benefits of such statute of a sum paid by it as its proportion of a duly voted town subscription to the capital stock of a railroad company. Carolina C. G. & C. R. Co. v. Tribble, 25 S. C. 200.

A constitutional ordinance exempting from taxation for a term of years all factories for working cotton, wool, silk, furs, or metals, and all others manufacturing implements or articles of use in a finished state, which should be established after its adoption, or which, having theretofore been abandoned, should resume operations within two years, does not embrace a cotton mill actually operating when the ordinance was adopted. Yacoma Cotton Mills v. Duke, 71 Miss. 790, 15 So. 929.

A constitutional provision exempting from taxation manufactories and manufacturers is not retroactive, and does not afford immunity from taxes lawfully laid before it was adopted. New Orleans v. L'Hote, 35 La. Ann. 1177; State 64 L. R. A.

ex rel. Stern's Fertilizer & C. Mfg. Co. v. New Orleans, 40 La. Ann. 897, 4 So. 891.

A constitutional exemption from taxation of capital, machinery, and property employed in manufacturing furniture and other articles of wood confers no exemption upon that employed in making wire furniture. Gast v. Board of Assessors, 43 La. Ann. 1104, 10 So. 184.

The Louisiana constitutional exemption of capital, machinery, and property employed in certain enumerated lines of manufacturing does not entitle the refiner of sugar and molasses purchased in the crude state, and refined to sell again, to any exemption, because sugar and molasses refining are not included in the list of exempted industries. State v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 51 La. Ann. 562, 25 So. 447, Affirmed in 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.

But the refiner of crude raw sugar and molasses is a manufacturer nevertheless, and in that state exempt from license or occupation taxes, because all manufacturers except those making alcoholic liquors, cigars, etc., and cotton-seed oil, are so exempt. State v. American Sugar Ref. Co. 106 La. 603, 32 So. 965, Overruling, in this respect the last-mentioned case.

Such constitutional exemption does not entitle the stockholders of corporations in the designated lines of manufacturing to any exemption from taxation upon their shares of stock as a part of their general property. State ex rel. Mechanics' & T. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 47 La. Ann. 1498, 18 So. 462.

A constitutional clause prohibiting the taxation of any article manufactured from the produce of the state otherwise than to pay inspection fees operates only to exonerate the article from taxation in the hands of the manufacturer, and does not inhibit the imposition of a privilege tax upon the business or occupation of selling it, even when followed by the manufacturer. Kurth v. State, 86 Tenn. 134, 5 S. W. 593.

VIII. Conclusion.

The decisions disclose many anomalies.

Why is cutting up trees into blocks of kindling wood for use in furnaces manufacturing, while cutting up ice into blocks for use in refrigerators is not? Why is making biscuits manufacturing, while making bread or ice cream is not? Why is printing and publishing books and magazines manufacturing, while printing and publishing newspapers is not? Why is putting the parts of a fountain pen together manufacturing, while the putting of the parts of a cask together is not? Why should the dried sap of the caoutchouc tree, if collected around a shoe last, be a manufactured article, while grass dried into hay is not? Many similar questions arise in one's mind, and find no answers when the cases are read together.

For a long time the state of New York was in an absurd position respecting the taxation of manufacturing corporations engaged in manufacturing within its borders. If such corporations chose to engage in trade in excess of their chartered powers, New York shut her eyes to the offense and gave them full exemption upon their manufacturing operations; but if, beside the power to manufacture, they took pains to obtain in advance power to trade as well, New York penalized them for obeying the law by taxing them in full upon their manufacturing operations. Vide, People ex rel. Tiffany & Co. v. Campbell, 144 N. Y. 169, 38 N. E. 990; People ex rel. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73; People ex rel.

Western Electric Co. v. Campbell, 145 N. Y. 587, 40 N. E. 239.

But, at last, fortunately for her dignity, the legislature changed the verblage of the statute, so that hereafter when she ignores disobedience she will not punish obedience. The effect of the change will be understood when the cases of People ex rel. Syracuse Improv. Co. v. Morgan, 59 App. Div. 302, 69 N. Y. Supp. 263, and People ex rel. Eastern Bermudez Asphalt Paving Co. v. Morgan, 61 App. Div. 373, 70 N. Y. Supp. 516, are contrasted.

In Benedict v. Davidson County (Tenn.) 67 S. W. 806, the division of the court arose out of inability to define with precision the point where manufacturing began in the evolution of a manufactured article from a natural and direct product of the soil to its final form. The majority opinion logically required the placing of that point when the first stroke of the axe-man descended on the living tree in the forest, but it was content to say that manufacturing had begun, and consequently exemption at some indefinite time before the cut log reached the yard of the sawmill on its way to division into rough lumber. The minority judge denied this, but he conceded that manufacturing begins an appreciable time before the stage where the article takes on its ultimate form. It would appear as if the court might have avoided its difference had its members so chosen. The Tennessee Constitution contained two exemption clauses in point. One (art. 2, § 28) exempted the direct product of the soil in the hands of the producer and his immediate vendee, and the other (art. 2, § 30), every article manufactured of the produce of the state, except to pay inspection fees. The facts showed that the logs in question were cut from trees that grew in Tennessee on lands owned by the claimants of exemption, or those from whom they purchased, and that the tax resisted was not an inspection tax. If the logs were unmanufactured they were the direct product of the soil in the hands of the producer or his immediate vendee; if they were manufactured they were manufactured from the produce of the state. In either case they were exempt. There is no transition in interregnum. The exemption no sooner ceases under one clause than it immediately begins under the other.

Conceding the force of the rule of interpreting laws, that words are to be taken in their popular, rather than their technical, sense, the question presses, How is the popular sense of words in common use ascertained? Is there any reliable guide to the popular meaning of a word constantly used outside of the popular dictionaries? Does not everyone in cases of doubt make these his first resort and final arbiters? Yet courts are found ignoring the dictionary meanings of such words as "manufacturing" and "chemicals," and delving in their own minds for significations deemed "popular and ordinary."

In estimating the value of decisions of the Federal courts as to the dutiability of manufactured articles under tariff acts, in respect of exemptions from taxation of manufacturers under state laws, the reader should keep in mind the differing principles upon which the Federal courts proceed respecting customs duties from those deemed controlling in the state courts in reference to tax exemptions. Duties are never imposed upon vague or doubtful interpretations. Powers v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 11,361; United States v. Isham, 64 L. R. A.

17 Wall. 496, 21 L. ed. 728; Adams v. Bancroft, 3 Sumn. 384, Fed. Cas. No. 44. While taxation is the rule, and exemption the exception, the former never surrendered, the latter never allowed in doubtful cases, and every exemption law is to be construed strictissimi juris. (Vide cases cited in note on Corporate taxation in the United States as affected by the contract clause in the Federal Constitution, to Adams v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 60 L. R. A. 33, Div. III., a.)

In many cases it is necessary to discriminate between concerns employing their capital wholly in manufacturing, and concerns employing capital in wholly manufacturing. A corporation exempted because it is wholly engaged in manufacturing may be none the less so because it confines its work to a single stage in the evolution of the manufactured article; but a corporation which is exempt only when it entirely manufactures something must necessarily do everything required to make raw material into a finished product. A cooper who buys staves, headings, and hoops already fashioned, and puts them together in a complete barrel, may be wholly engaged in manufacturing, and yet not manufacture barrels. If all manufacturers are exempt, then he is; but if only manufacturers of barrels are exempt, then he may be taxable. While it is not altogether safe to formulate a rule for deciding when a corporation is to be deemed carrying on manufacture itself, when, either it lets out its work to contractors, or buys in open market, fully fashioned, the parts of the article it produces, and puts them together, it may be suggested, tentatively, that the following will be found very nearly accordant with the current of authority; to wit: Where the main part of the manufacturing is done by the corporation itself it may, without loss of privilege, have minor parts of its work done by outside contractors, as in the case of the book publishers (People ex rel. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73); and where the work of assembling and combining the parts requires a very high degree of skill and ingenuity, as in the case of the fountain-pen maker (People ex rel. L. E. Waterman Co. v. Morgan, 48 App. Div. 395, 63 N. Y. Supp. 76); or the locomotive builders (Norris v. Com. 27 Pa. 494),—no loss of privilege will follow the purchasing in the open market of the segregated parts of the completed work; if, however, unskilled or slightly skilled labor can put together ready-made parts into the complete article fitted for use, as in the case of nailing prepared shooks into plain wooden boxes (Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States, 171 U. S. 210, 43 L. ed. 139, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837), the work does not rise to the dignity of manufacturing; and, probably, if the entire manufacturing business is turned over to an independent contractor, as in the case of the newspaper publisher (People ex rel. Jewelers' Circular Pub. Co. v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 1, 49 N. E. 248), the appropriation of the results of the contractor's operations is not carrying on manufacturing. The concluding part of the suggested rule is established in New York, but repudiated in New Jersey. State ex rel. North American Phonograph Co. v. State Board, 54 N. J. L. 430, 24 Atl. 507.

In other jurisdictions, therefore, it is open to debate. Should the rule thus suggested be generally adopted, it will still be difficult oftentimes to determine with fairness in which category a given case belongs.

J. B. G.

Carrie M. HENDRY

v.

Town of NORTH HAMPTON.

(.....N. H.....)

1. Imperfections in the surface of a highway which give a traveler on a bicycle an impetus which results in his falling over an adjoining unrailled and dangerous embankment cannot, as matter of law, be regarded as the cause of the resulting injury to him.
2. A bicyclist may hold a town liable for injuries caused by a defect making a highway unsuitable for ordinary travel, under a statute making towns liable for injuries to any person traveling upon a dangerous embankment upon a highway by reason of any defect or want of repair of such embankment, or defective railings, which renders it unsuitable for the travel thereon.

(December 31, 1903.)

EXCEPTIONS by defendant to rulings of the Superior Court for Rockingham County made during the trial of an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence, which resulted in a verdict in plaintiff's favor. Overruled.

The evidence tended to show that while plaintiff was slowly riding a bicycle along a highway in the defendant town, and exercising due care, she ran into a mud puddle, and was thrown over a dangerous embankment which was not railled or guarded, and received injuries for which she brought this action.

The grounds upon which defendant relied to defeat the action sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Page & Bartlett, for defendant:

A person riding a bicycle along the highway is bound to exercise the care required of one performing a dangerous act.—that is, the greatest care,—to avoid stones, holes, and puddles of water; and, when his view is unobstructed, and no excuse is shown for not looking ahead and seeing them, if he runs into them, it is clearly his own fault.

If plaintiff's own fault or negligence contributed in "any degree" to the accident, or if her damages were caused "in the least degree" by her own fault or negligence, she could not recover.

Farnum v. Concord, 2 N. H. 392; Norris v. Lithfield, 35 N. H. 271, 69 Am. Dec. 546.

NOTE.—As to right of bicyclists to recover for injuries caused by defective highway, see also note to Taylor v. Union Traction Co. 47 L. R. A. 289, and the later case of Richardson v. Danvers, 50 L. R. A. 127.

As to right of bicyclist riding on sidewalk to recover for injuries caused by defect therein, see, in this series, Lee v. Port Huron, 53 L. R. A. 308.

64 L. R. A.

What was the legal or proximate cause of the accident,—the cause which the law recognizes,—was a question for the jury under proper instructions.

Hendry v. North Hampton, 71 N. H. 26, 51 Atl. 283; Ela v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 71 N. H. 1, 51 Atl. 281.

The highway liability of towns being created by statute, the facts must bring each case within the statute in order to render a town liable.

Lovejoy v. Jones, 30 N. H. 170; Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304.

The question is whether the hole in the road, granting it to be a defect, was the prime, moving cause of the accident to the plaintiff, without the existence of which the accident would not have happened. If so, the accident was caused by a defect in the highway, and not by a dangerous embankment.

Littleton v. Richardson, 32 N. H. 59; Stark v. Lancaster, 57 N. H. 88; State v. Manchester & L. R. Co. 52 N. H. 528; Ela v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 71 N. H. 1, 51 Atl. 281.

Plaintiff cannot recover because she was neither walking upon the highway or using it as a traveler on foot, nor was she traveling upon it in a carriage within the meaning of the term "carriage" as used in the statute.

Richardson v. Danvers, 176 Mass. 413, 50 L. R. A. 127, 79 Am. St. Rep. 320, 57 N. E. 688.

Messrs. Emery, Simes, & Corey, for plaintiff:

Towns must use ordinary care to rail dangerous embankments, and are liable for such injuries as they, by the exercise of that care, may be held to have anticipated as likely to result from their neglect to do so.

The absence of the rail was the cause of the injury.

Winship v. Enfield, 42 N. H. 215; Norris v. Litchfield, 35 N. H. 271, 69 Am. Dec. 546; Davis v. Hill, 41 N. H. 329; Palmer v. Andover, 2 Cush. 600; Woodman v. Nottingham, 49 N. H. 387, 6 Am. Rep. 526; Stark v. Lancaster, 57 N. H. 88; Hendry v. North Hampton, 71 N. H. 26, 51 Atl. 283; Ela v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 71 N. H. 1, 51 Atl. 281; Olney v. Boston & M. R. Co. 71 N. H. 427, 52 Atl. 1097; Littleton v. Richardson, 32 N. H. 59; Richardson v. Danvers, 176 Mass. 413, 50 L. R. A. 127, 79 Am. St. Rep. 320, 57 N. E. 688; Rust v. Essex, 182 Mass. 313, 65 N. E. 307.

Remick, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. It is found by the superior court that there was evidence tending to prove that the plaintiff was in the exercise of due care. Furthermore, we have examined the evidence for ourselves, so far as it is made a part of the record, and are of the opinion that it warrants the finding of the superior court in this particular. The defendant's motions for a nonsuit and verdict upon the ground that the plaintiff was not in the exercise of due care were therefore properly overruled. The defendant's requests for instructions upon this point, so far as they embodied a correct statement of the law, were given in substance; and no error appears either in the instructions given or in the refusal of those requested.

2. The contention of the defendant that, because the hole in the road gave to the plaintiff the impetus which carried her over the unrailed and dangerous embankment, therefore the hole, not the unrailed embankment, was, as a matter of law, the cause of her injury, is best answered by the authorities, which are so conclusive against the defendant's contention—at least in this jurisdiction—that to enter upon a discussion of the question would be a work of supererogation. Littleton v. Richardson, 32 N. H. 59, 63; Stark v. Lancaster, 57 N. H. 88; Merrill v. Claremont, 58 N. H. 468; Ela v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 71 N. H. 1, 51 Atl. 281; Elliott, Roads & Streets, § 617. According to the view contended for by the defendants, there could have been no recovery in Norris v. Haverhill, 65 N. H. 89, 18 Atl. 85; 163 Briefs & Cases, 159; and Seeton v. Dunbarton, 72 N. H. 209, 56 Atl. 197. An able and instructive discussion of the question may be found in Sherwood v. Hamilton, 37 U. C. Q. B. 410, where the conflicting authorities are exhaustively reviewed, and the New Hampshire rule adopted as being in accordance with the weight of authority and the better reasoning. The instructions given upon this point were in accordance with the principles established by the authorities cited, and the instructions requested were properly denied.

3. The defendant's next and last contention is that § 1, chap. 59, p. 47, Laws 1893, making "towns . . . liable for damages happening to any person, his team or carriage, traveling upon a bridge, culvert, or sluiceway, or dangerous embankments and defective railings, upon any highway, by reason of any obstruction, defect, insufficiency, or want of repair of such bridge, culvert, or sluiceway, or dangerous embankments and defective railings, which renders it unsuitable for the travel thereon," imposes no duty upon towns to build and maintain suitable bridges, culverts, sluiceways, or railings for the protection of persons riding bicycles, and no liability for injuries happening to such persons from defects in these particulars. Under a statute providing "that any person or persons sustaining bodily injury upon any of the public highways or streets in this state by reason of neglect to keep such public highway . . . in reasonable repair and in condition reasonably safe and fit for travel," may recover just damages of the town in default, the supreme court of Michigan has held that a person injured while riding upon a bicycle by reason of a condition of the highway unsuitable for that mode of travel, but reasonably safe for travel in ordinary vehicles like wagons and carriages, cannot recover; that at the time the law was enacted bicycles were in use only to a limited extent, and the legislature did not intend to place upon townships and cities the burden of keeping their roads and streets in a safe condition for that kind of conveyance; that reasonable care in the construction and maintenance of highways for ordinary vehicles, such as wagons and carriages, is the measure of duty resting upon municipalities. Mich. Comp. Laws 1897, chap. 91, § 1; Leslie v. Grand Rapids, 120 Mich. 28, 78 N. W. 885. Construing a statute of New York, which provided that "every town shall be liable for all damages to person or property sustained by reason of any defect in its highways or bridges," the court said: "It cannot be successfully claimed that a larger measure of duty on the part of the commissioners of highways is due to bicycle riders than to persons traveling upon the road in ordinary vehicles. It is apparent that a bicycle rider upon an ordinary country road is exposed to greater dangers than a person riding in a wagon, and the great increase in the number of persons using these vehicles has created a demand for better and safer roads; but under the present highway laws a road in a condition which is reasonably safe for general and ordinary travel is all that the commissioners of highways are bound to maintain." N. Y. Rev. Stat. § 16, p. 1596; Sutphen v. North Hampstead, 80 Hun, 409, 411, 412, 30 N. Y. Supp. 128. In Massachusetts it is provided that "if a person receives or suffers bodily injury, or damage in his property, through a defect, or want of repair, or of sufficient railing, . . . he may recover . . . the amount of damage sustained thereby." Construing this statute, the court said: "The statute . . . was passed long before bicycles were invented, but although, of course, it is not to be confined to the same kind of vehicles then in use, we are of the opinion that it should be confined to vehicles ejusdem generis, and that it does not extend to bicycles. . . . A bicycle is of but little use in wet weather or on frozen ground. Its great value consists in the pneumatic tire. But this is easily punctured, and no one who uses a wheel thinks of taking a ride of any distance without having his kit of tools with him. A hard rut, a sharp stone, a bit of coal or glass, or a tack in the road, may cause the tire to be punctured, and this may cause the rider to fall and sustain an injury. It may impose an intolerable burden upon towns to hold them bound to keep their roads in such a state of repair and smoothness that a bicycle could go over them with assured safety." It was accordingly held that a road which is reasonably safe for ordinary travel is not defective merely because not fit for use by bicycles. Mass. Pub. Stat. 1881, chap. 52, § 18; Richardson v. Danvers, 176 Mass. 413, 50 L. R. A. 127, 79 Am. St. Rep. 320, 57 N. E. 688; Rust v. Essex, 182 Mass. 313, 65 N. E. 397.

Of the soundness of these decisions and their applicability to our statute we need not inquire, for they fall far short of deciding that a bicycle rider injured by reason of a defect in the highway rendering it unsuitable for ordinary travel is without remedy merely because when injured he was in the saddle of a bicycle instead of on a wagon seat, or a horse's back, or on his feet pushing a bicycle. In Rust v. Essex the court assumed that, if the highway could have been found defective for ordinary travel, the plaintiff "might have recovered for his injuries, notwithstanding the fact that he was riding upon a bicycle." The Michigan and New York cases convey the same idea. The defect complained of in the present case was an unrailed and dangerous embankment. We must assume from the instructions of the court and the verdict of the jury that it rendered the highway unsuitable, not only for traveling by bicycle, but for ordinary travel as well. This being so, we see no reason why the fact that the plaintiff was on a bicycle, instead of on horseback or on foot pushing his bicycle, should preclude her recovery. Common sense rejects the distinction. The statute furnishes no warrant for it, either in letter or spirit. It says: "Towns are liable for damages happening to any person . . . traveling," etc., without any expressed limitation as to the mode of conveyance. "A traveler is one who travels in any way." "To travel is to pass or make a journey from place to place, whether on foot, on horseback, or in any conveyance." Traveling is "the act of making a journey; change of place; passage." The word "traveling," as used in some penal statutes, may have a narrow meaning; but, in order to maintain an action against a city or town for a defect in a highway, one need be a traveler only in the general sense above indicated. Hardy v. Keene, 52 N. H. 370, 377; Hamilton v. Boston, 14 Allen, 475, 483; Black, Law Dict. 1185; Century Dict. titles Travel, Traveler, Traveling. It should also be observed that the bicycle is recognized by the public policy of New Hampshire as a legitimate method of traveling upon the highway, and that it is in common use for that purpose, with general consent. Laws 1897, p. 51, chap. 61, § 1; Id. p. 89, chap. 93. Being a traveler upon the highway, both according to the literal meaning of that term and by the public policy of the state as clearly manifested by the legislation and general custom referred to, the plaintiff, notwithstanding she was riding on a bicycle, was entitled at least to a highway in condition suitable for ordinary travel, and to damages for injuries happening to her by reason of any unsuitableness of the highway for such travel. It follows that the instructions given upon this point were correct, and that those requested were properly denied.

The question discussed as to whether a bicycle is a carriage within the meaning of the statute seems quite immaterial to the present case, because the plaintiff claims nothing on account of damage to her wheel, and her right to recover for damage to her person is in no way dependent upon the means by which she was moving, so long as she was a traveler and in the exercise of due care. But, if the question were material, and the instruction that a bicycle is not a carriage erroneous, the error was entirely in the defendant's favor, and prejudicial to the plaintiff alone.

Exceptions overruled.

All concur.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

George R. COOPER, Guardian, etc., of Ben O. McLean,

v.

BOARD OF REVIEW OF MONTGOMERY COUNTY.

(207 Ill. 472.)

1. A claim on a policy insuring the life of one who dies before the day on which property is to be valued for taxation is assessable under a statute providing for the assessment of claims due or to become due, although proof of death has not been made, and the insurer has sixty days after such proof in which to pay the demand.

NOTE.—As to right to tax paid-up insurance policies, see, in this series, State Board v. Holiday, 42 L. R. A. 826.

64 L. R. A.

2. For the purpose of taxation, the value of a claim on an insurance policy promising the payment of an amount certain within sixty days after proof of death will be presumed to be measured by the face value of the policy.

2. The fact that the funds of a life insurance company are subject to taxation in its hands does not prevent the assessment of the value of an unpaid claim against the company in the hands of a representative of the assured,—at least, where the fund to meet the claim is to be raised by assessment, and it does not appear that the assessment has been made, or the fund collected at the time the tax is levied.

(February 17, 1904.)

CERTIFICATION by the auditor of public accounts for the opinion of the Supreme Court of a question as to the validity of an assessment upon a claim under a mutual benefit certificate. Assessment upheld.

Statement by Magruder, J.:

The board of review of Montgomery county assessed appellant, as guardian, the sum of $4,330 on a total cash value of personal property, and appellant claims that said property was exempt from taxation for the year 1903. Appellant objecting to the assessment, and, claiming that the property was exempt from taxation, the board by its clerk thereupon certified a statement of the facts concerning said assessment to the auditor of public accounts. The auditor of public accounts, being satisfied that such property is liable to taxation, submits the question of its exemption from taxation to this court in accordance with the provisions of the 4th clause of § 35 of the revenue law of 1898 (4 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. 1902, p. 1118).

The facts certified are that Dr. S. H. McLean, the father of Ben O. McLean, died at Lincoln, in Logan county, on or about the 18th day of March, 1903, intestate; that at the time of his death he held a policy of life insurance in the Modern Woodmen of America for the sum of $3,000, payable to said son, Ben O. McLean; that he also held a policy of life insurance in the Court of Honor, in which the said Ben O. McLean was a beneficiary, to the amount of $1,333.33; that each of the above insurance companies is a fraternal beneficiary society; that their manner of paying policies is by an assessment levied upon the members of said society; that said Ben O. McLean is a minor of the age of seventeen years; that said George R. Cooper filed a petition in the county court of said county, asking to be appointed guardian of said Ben O. McLean, on March 23, 1903; that said petition states "that said minor has due him life insurance to the amount of about $4,200; that said George R. Cooper was appointed guardian of said Ben O. McLean by the county court of Montgomery county on March 27, 1903, and duly qualified, and from thence hitherto has been acting as such guardian; that each of said policies of insurance required proof of death as a condition precedent to the payment thereof, and allowed sixty days in which to pay said policies; that on the 1st of April, 1903, proofs of death had not been made under either of said policies, nor had any assessments been made on the members of said societies, or either of them, for the payment of either of said policies; that on April 1, 1903, no money had been paid to said guardian under either of said policies, nor had he taken any steps whatever at that time to collect the same further than to be appointed guardian; that on May 9, 1903, said Cooper received, as such guardian, from the Court of Honor the sum of $1,333.33, and on May 26, 1903, he received, as such guardian, from the Modern Woodmen of America the sum of $3,000.

64 L. R. A.

Messrs. Lane & Cooper, for appellant:

Money in the hands of the treasurer of a fraternal beneficiary society on the 1st of April is taxable in the township where such treasurer resides.

State Council O. K. v. Board of Review, 198 Ill. 441, 64 N. E. 1104.

The sovereign power of a state to levy taxes does not embrace life insurance policies.

Dutton v. Board of Review, 188 Ill. 391, 58 N. E. 953.

The taxation of rents before due is the taxation of something included in the taxation of the land.

Scully v. People, 104 Ill. 349.

Mr. H. J. Hamlin, Attorney General, for appellee:

The assessor is required to fix the value of property, and he may take any means within his reach to ascertain that value. The certificate would be presumed to be worth its face value.

Wedgbury v. Cassell, 164 Ill. 622, 45 N. E. 978.

Magruder, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Upon the certificate of facts set forth in the statement preceding this opinion the board of review predicated the right to make the assessment, and it is contended by George R. Cooper, guardian of Ben O. McLean, that the assessment is illegal and contrary to law.

The value of the two policies of insurance was assessed against the guardian as of the 1st day of April, 1903. "All property subject to taxation shall be listed by the person at the place and in the manner required by law, and assessed at the place and in the manner required by law with reference to the ownership, amount, kind, and value on the 1st day of April in the year, for which the property is required to be listed, including all property purchased on that day. The owner of property on the 1st day of April in any year shall be liable for the taxes of that year." 4 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. 1902, p. 1110; § 8, Revenue Act 1898. The father of the minor, Ben O. McLean, had died early in March, 1903, and Cooper was appointed his guardian on March 27, 1903, and qualified on that date. Was the guardian the owner of the policies on the 1st day of April?

By the terms of the 2d clause of § 1 of the revenue act, all "credits" shall be assessed and taxed; and by the 1st clause of § 6 of the revenue act, every person of full age and sound mind, being a resident of this state, is required to list all his "credits" and personal property for taxation. 3 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. 1896, 2d ed. pp. 3398-3406. In the 6th clause of § 292 of the revenue act "credits" are defined as follows: "Every claim or demand for money, labor, interest, or other valuable thing due or to become due, not including money on deposit." 3 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. 1896, 2d ed. p. 3520. Undoubtedly the claim of the guardian against the fraternal beneficiary societies who issued the policies or certificates to Dr. S. H. McLean in his lifetime comes within the statutory definition of "credits." It therefore follows that the claim was properly listed as the personal property of the guardian on April 1, 1903.

It is contended, however, on the part of the guardian, that a full and perfected claim for the amount due upon the certificates had no existence on April 1, 1903. The certificate of facts shows that each of said policies or certificates of insurance required proof of death as a condition precedent to the payment thereof, and also that each company had sixty days after the making of proof of death in which to pay the amount of the policy. It also appears from the certificate of facts that proofs of death had not been made under either of the policies on the 1st of April, 1903. It is claimed that the companies were not bound to pay the policies until proofs of death were submitted, and then not until sixty days had elapsed. The contention is that no valid claim existed against either of the said companies until proofs of death were submitted, and until the sixty days had passed, and that, therefore, the guardian was not the owner of any claim on the 1st day of April, 1903. The statutory definition of "credits" includes every claim or demand for money "due or to become due." The fact that the claim for the insurance money against the companies was not due until after the lapse of sixty days would make no difference in view of the fact that under the statute a claim for money "to become due" as well as one for money already due is included within the definition of "credits." The certificate of facts states that Dr. McLean, to whom the policies were issued, had died, and the submission of proof of his death was an act to be performed by the guardian; and if the claim was one which was "to become due" it was such a claim as well because it had not matured on account of the delay in filing the proofs of death as because the period of sixty days had not yet expired. If the claim had been merely one which would be due in sixty days, it comes within the definition of "credits," which embraces claims "to become due" as well as claims "due," and it would equally come within the definition if it was not yet due because the proofs of death had not been made.

It is urged that the board of review could not determine what the value of the policies was on April 1, 1903, and therefore that their value should not be taxed. The policies were certainly evidence of claims of the beneficiaries, and what their value was was a question to be determined by the assessor or the board of review. The value of the policies was fixed at their face value or the amount due by their terms. This would appear to have been a correct mode of ascertaining their value, as on the 9th and 26th days of May, 1903, the companies paid the full amounts called for by their terms. In such cases the policies will be presumed to be worth their face value. Wedgbury v. Cassell, 164 Ill. 622, 45 N. E. 978.

It is furthermore contended that the money with which the policies were to be paid was in the hands of the companies and that therefore they constituted a fund which belonged to the companies and was taxable as the property of the companies. In support of this position the case of State Council, C. K. v. Board of Review, 198 Ill. 441, 64 N. E. 1104, is referred to and relied upon. In the latter case it was held that a fund in the hands of the treasurer of a benefit society was properly assessed as the property of the society although orders had before April 1st been issued against a portion of the fund to beneficiaries of deceased members, it being there said: "No part of the fund assessed had been paid out prior to April 1st, and it then became liable to the tax in the hands of the treasurer of the institution, who was its lawful custodian." Taking the ground that the amount due upon the policies here in controversy was a fund which belonged to the companies, and was taxable on April 1, 1903, as the property of the companies, the objecting guardian contends that, if the claims are assessed against him as his property, there will be a double taxation of the same property. But there is no evidence here that the money was in the hands of the insurance companies on April 1, 1903. It appears from the certificate of facts that the manner of paying their policies by these companies is by an assessment levied upon the members of the society, and that on April 1, 1903, no assessment had been made upon the members of either of the societies for the payment of either of said policies. As, therefore, the funds were not in the hands of the societies on April 1, 1903, they could not be taxed as property belonging on that date to the societies or companies. If, therefore, the claims for the moneys due upon these policies are not taxed as the property of the objecting guardian, they will escape taxation altogether for the year 1903.

Counsel for the guardian refers us to no authority supporting the conclusion that because the money in the hands of the insurance companies was taxable the evidences of indebtedness against the insurance companies could not be taxed. A debtor who has money in his possession on April 1st is subject to assessment upon that money, and a creditor who holds a note or other evidence of indebtedness against such debtor at the same time is subject to assessment on that credit according to its value, whether due or not.

We are therefore of the opinion that the action of the board of review in assessing these claims against the insurance companies or societies as being the property of the guardian on April 1, 1903, at their face value was correct, and the decision of the board is approved.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

H. ENGBRETSON, Appt.,

v.

J. F. SEIBERLING et al.

(.....Iowa.....)

The insolvency of the debtor is sufficient to create an exception to the rule that acceptance of part of an amount due cannot effect the satisfaction of the whole debt.

(February 1, 1904.)

A PPEAL by complainant from a decree of the District Court for Winnecheik County in favor of defendants in a suit to enjoin the enforcement of an execution. Reversed.

Statement by McClain, J.:

Action to enjoin the enforcement of an execution held by W. H. Carter, assignee of J. F. Seiberling & Company, on the ground that the judgment on which the execution issued had been fully satisfied. On the trial plaintiff's petition was dismissed for want of equity, and judgment rendered for defendants, from which plaintiff appeals.

Mr. E. P. Johnson, for appellant:

Whenever the technical reason for the ap-

NOTE.—For part payment as accord and satisfaction in general, see note to Fuller v. Kemp, 20 L. R. A. 785; also the later cases in this series of Tanner v. Merrill, 31 L. R. A. 171; Clayton v. Clark, 37 L. R. A. 771; and Chicora Fertilizer Co. v. Dunan, 50 L. R. A. 401.

As to effect of part payment by third person as accord and satisfaction, see Marshall v. Bullard, 54 L. R. A. 862.

64 L. R. A.

plication of the rule that payment of a part of a claim will not operate as a satisfaction of the whole does not exist, the rule itself is not to be applied.

Kellogg v. Richards, 14 Wend. 116; Larned v. Dubuque, 86 Iowa, 177, 53 N. W. 105; Ruddleedin v. Smith, 36 Iowa, 669.

Insolvency of the debtor is sufficient to take the case out of the general rule.

Curtiss v. Martin, 20 Ill. 578; Larned v. Dubuque, 86 Iowa, 166, 53 N. W. 105; Ruddleedin v. Smith, 36 Iowa, 669.

Mr. E. W. Cutting, for appellees:

By the most elementary principles the decision is correct.

Bender v. Been, 78 Iowa, 283, 5 L. R. A. 596, 43 N. W. 216; 1 Cyc. Law & Proc. 325, 326; Marshall v. Bullard, 114 Iowa, 462, 54 L. R. A. 862, 87 N. W. 427; Stoutenberg v. Huisman, 93 Iowa, 213, 61 N. W. 917; Fentress v. Markle, 2 G. Greene, 553; Norris v. Slaughter, 3 G. Greene, 116; Hooker v. Hyde, 61 Wis. 204, 21 N. W. 52.

McClain, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It appears from the allegations of plaintiff's petition, which are in accordance with the evidence introduced on the trial, that J. F. Seiberling & Company, being the owners of a judgment recovered by them against this plaintiff for $256, accepted from such judgment debtor the sum of $65 in cash and his promissory note for $25 in full satisfaction of said judgment. J. F. Seiberling & Company subsequently assigned the judgment to W. H. Carter, who caused execution to issue thereon. It is further averred and proved that at the time the agreement was made to accept the partial payment in full satisfaction Engbretson was insolvent. The sole question for our consideration is whether the acceptance from an insolvent debtor of part payment in full satisfaction of a claim is founded upon such consideration that the entire debt is thereby discharged. The general rule that an agreement to accept part payment in full satisfaction is invalid for want of consideration, and the usual exceptions to that rule, have been often considered by this court, and a general citation of authorities on the subject is unnecessary. See Marshall v. Bullard, 114 Iowa, 462, 54 L. R. A. 862, 87 N. W. 427; Larned v. Dubuque, 86 Iowa, 166, 53 N. W. 105; Stoutenberg v. Huismen, 93 Iowa, 213, 61 N. W. 917; Ruddledin v. Smith, 36 Iowa, 669. But in none of these cases, nor in any others decided in this state, do we find an express exception, such as that insisted upon by the plaintiff in this case. We do, however, find suggestions in each of those cases indicating the existence of the thought that perhaps such an exception should be made in a proper case. In Marshall v. Bullard it is said: "If, however, such an agreement is supported by any new consideration, though insignificant or technical merely, if valuable, it will be upheld. Thus, if a part is to be and is paid before due, or at a place other than that at which the obligor was legally required to pay, or if payment is made in property, no matter what its value, or by the debtor in composition with his creditors generally, in which they agree to accept less than their demands, the consideration is held to be sufficient." And it was decided in that case that if the debtor, having no other way of obtaining the money which he was to pay in satisfaction of the debt, induced another to pay it for him, the acceptance of a less sum than the full amount of the debt thus procured to be paid by another would support an agreement to discharge the entire debt. In Larned v. Dubuque the court adverted to the fact that the defendant, relying on part payment in satisfaction of the entire indebtedness, might, in one sense at least, be said to have been an insolvent debtor, and the court in that case says that an agreement to accept part payment in full satisfaction of a judgment, if fully executed, is valid as a discharge of the entire judgment. And in Stoutenberg v. Huismen it is said, as a reason for sustaining the full release of a judgment on part payment, that "the settlement avoided litigation, settled the dispute, canceled the judgment, and secured the payment of $75 from the insolvent debtor." In Ruddledin v. Smith this language is used: "It is true that the amount realized by the judgment plaintiffs was less than half the amount of their judgment, but the defendant therein was insolvent, and the real property they had purchased under their execution sale was subject to a prior encumbrance." It cannot be claimed that these cases are by any means conclusive upon us in the determination of the question now for the first time squarely and clearly presented, but they certainly indicate a predisposition to regard the insolvency of the debtor as a matter which might be considered in determining the validity of an agreement to accept part payment in full discharge. There is some support for such a proposition in the decisions of other courts. In Curtiss v. Martin, 20 Ill. 557, the court, after stating the general rule, says (at p. 577): "But if the smaller sum be taken by way of compromise of a controverted claim, or from a debtor in failing circumstances, in full discharge of the debt, no reason is perceived why it should not be binding on the parties." In Dawson v. Beall, 68 Ga. 328, it is held that an agreement by a debtor not to go into bankruptcy, and thereby be discharged from the payment of the debt, furnishes a sufficient consideration to support a contract by the debtor to take less than the full amount thereof, and substantially the same conclusion is reached in Hinckley v. Arey, 27 Me. 362. So, in Pettigrew Mach. Co. v. Harmon, 45 Ark. 290, it was held that part payment by an assignee for the benefit of creditors, accepted in full satisfaction, was binding. In Rice v. London & N. W. American Mortg. Co. 70 Minn. 77, 72 N. W. 826, it was held that acceptance from the administrator of an estate of part payment in full satisfaction of a claim against the estate was binding, although it subsequently appeared that the estate was not insolvent. The only case which we have been able to find to the contrary is that of Pearson v. Thomason, 15 Ala. 700, 50 Am. Dec. 159, in which the court squarely holds that the fact of the debtor's insolvency can have no influence in determining whether the agreement of the creditor to accept a less sum than the entire debt in full satisfaction is without consideration; for it is said, whether the debtor is insolvent or not, the obligation to pay is not impaired, and the moral duty to make payment remains in full force. In view of the fact that, as indicated by the prior decisions on the question in this state, the rule that an agreement to accept part payment in full satisfaction is without consideration is purely technical, and subject to many exceptions which the courts have ingrafted upon it from time to time in order to avoid to some extent the injustice which is recognized as frequently resulting from its strict application, we are led to adopt as valid and reasonable the exception which has been hinted at or suggested, rather than authoritatively announced, in the cases already cited. Our conclusion is therefore that plaintiff in this case had a good defense to the enforcement of the judgment against him, and that his action to enjoin the further enforcement of the judgment should not have been dismissed as being without equity.

Reversed.

STATE of Iowa
v.
Ed. EVENSON, Appt.
(.....Iowa.....)

One assaulted by citizens of a town for the purpose of compelling him to leave it is not bound to retreat to avoid a conflict in order to protect himself from liability to prosecution for assault, but he may repel force with force so long as he uses only such force as is necessary, short of killing his assailants, even though he provoked the attack by drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

(January 12, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Worth County convicting him of assault and battery. Reversed.

Statement by Bishop, J.:

The defendant was indicted for an assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury. He was found guilty of assault and battery, and from the judgment entered on the verdict he appeals.

Messrs. Blythe, Markley, & Rule and Olcott, Rule, & Keeler, for appellant:

If this defendant was assaulted the law did not require him to retreat before he should use force to repel such assault. He might stand his ground and repel force with force so long as he used only such force as was necessary, under all of the circumstances as they appeared to him, and retreated to the wall before he resorted to the extreme measure of taking his assailant's life.

The defendant was lawfully upon the street of the town of Joice when a crowd of men, in pursuance of a criminal conspiracy to assault him and drive him and his companions out of town, came upon him suddenly, and with whips in hand ordered him out of town. Even if the whips had not been used at once, the assault had been completed, and the defendant had been assaulted in such a manner as to give him the right to repel the assault with force.

NOTE.—As to extent of right of self-defense by use of deadly weapon in case of assault generally, see, in this series, Drysdale v. State, 6 L. R. A. 424; People v. Pearl, 4 L. R. A. 709; Gutzman v. Clancy, 58 L. R. A. 744; and State v. Bartlett, 59 L. R. A. 756. 64 L. R. A.

An assault is "an attempt or offer, by force and violence, to do a corporeal injury to another."

McClain, Crim. Law, § 231; State v. Wyatt, 76 Iowa, 328, 41 N. W. 31; State v. Goering, 106 Iowa, 636, 77 N. W. 327; Beard v. United States, 158 U. S. 563, 39 L. ed. 1091, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; Runyan v. State, 57 Ind. 80, 26 Am. Rep. 52; Martin v. State, 5 Ind. App. 453, 32 N. E. 594; People v. Pearl, 76 Mich. 207, 4 L. R. A. 709, 15 Am. St. Rep. 304, 42 N. W. 1109; State v. King, 104 Iowa, 727, 74 N. W. 691.

Where one advances on another in a threatening manner, the latter may strike, or use a sufficient degree of force to prevent the intended blow, without retreating.

Gallagher v. State, 3 Minn. 270; Gil. 185; Com. v. Bouchet, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 343; Martin v. State, 5 Ind. App. 453, 32 N. E. 594.

Every citizen may rightfully traverse the streets, or may stand in all proper places, and need not flee from everyone who chooses to assail him.

Com. v. Drum, 58 Pa. 21; State v. Bartlett, 170 Mo. 658, 59 L. R. A. 756, 71 S. W. 148; State v. Sherman, 16 R. I. 631, 18 Atl. 1040; May, Crim. Law, § 62; Gallagher v. State, 3 Minn. 270, Gil. 185.

Messrs. Charles W. Mullan, Attorney General, and Lawrence DeGraff, for respondent:

To give rise to the right of self-defense, whether of life, or of the person, or of property, there must be necessity for defense, and the acts done in defense, to be justifiable, must not go beyond the necessity. It is not a question of real necessity, but reasonably apparent necessity, and each case must be determined by the circumstances involved in the case.

1 Clark & M. Crimes, p. 184; Aldrich v. Wright, 53 N. H. 398, 16 Am. Rep. 339; Creighton v. Com. 84 Ky. 103, 4 Am. St. Rep. 193.

A party who does not retreat, or attempt to shun a combat, but enters unnecessarily into it, does not act in self-defense.

State v. Shippey, 10 Minn. 223, Gil. 178, 88 Am. Dec. 70; Floyd v. State, 36 Ga. 91, 91 Am. Dec. 760; 4 Bl. Com. 185; State v. Tweedy, 5 Iowa, 433; State v. Jones, 89 Iowa, 183, 56 N. W. 427; State v. Shreve, 81 Iowa, 615, 47 N. W. 899; State v. Warner, 100 Iowa, 260, 69 N. W. 546; Roscoe, Crim. Ev. p. 708; State v. Donnelly, 69

Iowa, 706, 58 Am. Rep. 234, 27 N. W. 369; State v. McKinley, 82 Iowa, 445, 48 N. W. 804.

One who is attacked without felonious intent must retreat unless retreat will endanger his safety.

Morrison v. State, 84 Ala. 405, 4 So. 402; Hammil v. State, 90 Ala. 577, 8 So. 380; Erwin v. State, 29 Ohio St. 186, 23 Am. Rep. 733; State v. Sorenson, 32 Minn. 121, 19 N. W. 738; State v. Jones, 89 Iowa, 187, 56 N. W. 427; State v. Tripp, 34 Minn. 26, 24 N. W. 290; State v. Shippey, 10 Minn. 223, 88 Am. Dec. 70, Gil. 178.

One may defend a person with whom he stands in a family relation without being guilty of an assault, whenever, under the circumstances, he would have the right to defend himself, but not otherwise.

Clark, Crim. Law, 213; People v. Shorter, 2 N. Y. 193, 51 Am. Dec. 292; Davis v. People, 88 Ill. 350.

Whenever a person is assailed, and his life may be taken or great bodily injury suffered, whether or not a deadly weapon is used, he must retreat if he has reasonable opportunity to do so, if by so doing he does not enhance the danger to himself, before he can take the life of, or do great bodily injury to, his assailant.

State v. Jones, 89 Iowa, 183, 56 N. W. 427; State v. Warner, 100 Iowa, 261, 69 N. W. 546; State v. Weston, 98 Iowa, 125, 67 N. W. 84.

There is no reason why a person assailed by a simple assault should not be governed by the same rule.

State v. McKinley, 82 Iowa, 445, 48 N. W. 804; State v. Donnelly, 69 Iowa, 705, 58 Am. Rep. 234, 27 N. W. 369.

Bishop, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On the evening of December 15, 1902, the defendant, his brother, and two other young men were together on a side street of the town of Joice, in Worth county. They had been drinking intoxicating liquor, had indulged in much profane and obscene language, and there had been some fighting between them. After the fight was over, they moved to the main street of the town, where they stopped in front of a store. Here they continued their loud and boisterous talk, the same being more or less interspersed with profanity. In this situation a crowd of about a dozen citizens appeared on the scene, armed with horsewhips, and some one of them announced to defendant and his companions that they would give them five minutes to get out of town. The defendant responded that "if they did not leave him alone he would lay someone cold." The citizens at once began using their whips on defendant and his companions, and when the whips were used up they resorted to their fists, one of the number also making use of a piece of board. Defendant and his companions were forced back up the street by the onslaught made upon them, defending themselves meanwhile by the use of their fists. As they passed a platform scale standing on the sidewalk, defendant took therefrom the weight hanger, and, swinging it around his head, told the crowd to keep back. At this juncture one of the citizens, named Bilstad, seized the brother of defendant about the body, and the two began to struggle, when defendant stepped up and struck Bilstad with the hanger, the blow being sufficient to fell Bilstad to the walk.

The court, on its own motion, gave an instruction to the jury as follows: "The inhabitants of Joice had no right to drive the defendant and his party out of town by the use of force merely because they were fighting or using bad language in the streets. If the defendant and his party had committed, or were committing, any public offense, the remedy which the law gave the inhabitants of Joice was to arrest them, and take them before a magistrate, or complain to a magistrate or peace officer. On the other hand, if the defendant and his party had a reasonable opportunity to leave the scene in safety and avoid a conflict with the town people when they approached with whips and threatened the use of force, then the defendant and his party should have taken that course, and avoided a conflict. But if the town people assailed the defendant and his party so that they had no reasonable opportunity, after their intentions were known, to retire or retreat in safety, then they had the right to meet force with force, and defend themselves as in the case of any other assault." This instruction is complained of as error, the contention of counsel for appellant being that under the law the defendant, when threatened with an assault and battery, was not bound to retreat, but might stand his ground, and repel force with force, so long as he used only such force as was necessary. We think the doctrine thus contended for is sound. The defendant was rightfully on the streets of Joice, subject only to a lawful arrest for any violation of law on his part. The instruction rightly holds that the citizens by whom defendant was attacked had no right to either order him to leave town or to make an assault upon him with intent to inflict punishment upon his refusal to comply with their demands. And this is true without reference to the offensiveness of the previous conduct of the defendant or those with whom he was associated. The law makes provision for the punishment of those who violate any of its provisions, and the only right of the citizen was to invoke the process of the law in behalf of decency and good order. As applied to circumstances such as this record discloses, we do not understand it to be the law that one thus made the subject of attack is bound to retreat if there be time and opportunity to do so. In State v. Goering, 106 Iowa, 636, 77 N. W. 327, we said: "The rule is elementary that one unlawfully assaulted may in self-protection repel force with force. The extent to which he may go is to be measured by the character of the assault, but the right, as we have stated it, exists under any and all circumstances." In that case the defendant was being tried for an assault, and self-defense was urged in justification. In the course of an instruction the trial court told the jury, in substance, that the defendant had no right to defend himself unless it reasonably appeared to him that his life was in danger, or that he was likely to suffer great bodily harm from the assault made upon him. This was held to be error, and we are content with the holding. In effect, the language of the instruction condemned was equivalent to saying to the jury that when one is assaulted, and the character thereof does not involve life or great bodily injury, the person assaulted, if he does not choose to stand and submit to a battery, must retreat if any way is open to him. Such is not the law. See also Gallagher v. State, 3 Minn. 270, Gil. 185;

Com. v. Drum, 58 Pa. 21; State v. Bartlett, 170 Mo. 658, 59 L. R. A. 756, 71 S. W. 148; State v. King, 104 Iowa, 727, 74 N. W. 691; McClain, Crim. Law. We do not overlook the many cases wherein it is held that one may not, under the plea of self-defense, justify the taking of human life, if it reasonably appears that the same could have been avoided by making use of an avenue of escape open to him. But the principle thus declared upon has no application to a case where, as in the case at bar, one is wrongfully assaulted, and repels force by the use of like force. In the one case the law regards the liberty of the citizen to come and go as he pleases without molestation, save at the hands of the law, as the thing paramount. In the other case the law regards the temporary deprivation of the exercise of personal liberty on the part of one citizen as of less importance than is the life of another citizen, and this even though the latter is for the moment engaged in making an unlawful assault upon the former. Hence the injunction that a person assaulted must retreat, if he can do so in reasonable safety, before resorting to the extreme measure of taking the life of his assailant.

Conceding, therefore, that the provocation for the assault upon defendant was great, still, being wrongful, and the defendant having the right to resist in defense of himself and of his brother, it follows that the instruction given cannot be upheld.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded for a new trial.

KANSAS SUPREME COURT.

Kenneth MEAD, Plff. in Err.,
v.

PHENIX INSURANCE COMPANY of Hartford, Connecticut.

(.....Kan.....)

*1. A dwelling house, owned by a minor twelve years of age, was insured in his name. In May, 1894, it was destroyed by fire. The policy contained a condition that no suit or action for the recovery of any loss should be maintainable unless commenced within twelve months after the fire. In 1902, when the insured reached his majority, he brought an action on the policy to recover the amount of his loss. Held, that the contract limitation controlled the general statute of limitations, and that the action was barred.

(February 6, 1904.)

ERROR to the Court of Common Pleas for Wyandotte County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to enforce payment of the amount alleged to be due on a fire insurance policy. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Carroll, Monahan, & Warren, for plaintiff in error:

The action below was instituted and founded upon the unlawful conversion of plaintiff's policy, and, through a conspiracy and unlawful agreement between one C. C. Dail and defendant, said Dail surrendered to defendant the policy of plaintiff. All the

*Headnote by SMITH, J.

NOTE.—For a case in this series similar to the one above, holding that the minority of the beneficiaries in an accident insurance policy does not exempt them from complying with a stipulation requiring action on the policy to be brought within one year after right accrues, see Sugra v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 1 L. R. A. 847, 64 L. R. A.

allegations of the petition previous to the allegations of the conspiracy alleged therein are merely introductory to show the nature of the transaction about which the conspiracy arose.

Hayes v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co. 125 Ill. 626, 1 L. R. A. 303, 18 N. E. 322; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Swayze, 30 Kan. 118, 1 Pac. 36.

Payment of any part of the amount due on a policy on its conversion by defendant is a waiver of the conditions thereof for the benefit of the minor.

May, Ins. § 464.

A father of infant plaintiffs, as such, has no right to demand the money of the infants, and when they reside out of the state a guardian should be appointed in order to make a valid demand.

Williams v. Storrs, 6 Johns. Ch. 353, 10 Am. Dec. 340; Smith v. Redus, 9 Ala. 99, 44 Am. Dec. 429; Miles v. Kaigler, 10 Yerg. 10, 30 Am. Dec. 425; Co. Litt. 184; Dayley v. Tallferry, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 300; Strickland v. Hudson, 3 Rep. in Ch. 165; May v. Calder, 2 Mass. 55; Genet v. Tallmadge, 1 Johns. Ch. 3; Combs v. Jackson, 2 Wend. 153, 19 Am. Dec. 568.

C. C. Dail as agent individually or jointly with Mary Mead on the appointment of the infant could not receive or compromise this claim of plaintiff against defendant.

Mustard v. Wohlford, 15 Gratt. 329, 76 Am. Dec. 209; Armitage v. Widoe, 36 Mich. 124.

Plaintiff could not ratify this act,—an act absolutely void.

Trueblood v. Trueblood, 8 Ind. 195, 65 Am. Dec. 756; State v. State Bank, 5 Ind. 353; Whitney v. Dutch, 14 Mass. 457, 7 Am. Dec. 234; Fonda v. Van Horne, 15 Wend. 631, 30 Am. Dec. 77; Bell v. Cafferty, 21 Ind. 416; Knickerbocker Ins. Co. v. Gould, 80 Ill. 388; Home Ins. Co. v. Myer, 93 Ill. 272.

Messrs. McNaney & Alden, for defendant in error:

The petition seeks to set up a cause of action on the policy itself. The action was brought almost eight years after the fire. An action could not be maintained at the time the suit was brought because the provision in the policy that suit must be brought within a year was absolute,—a matter of contract, and not of limitation.

2 May, Ins. § 482; Riddlebarger v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 7 Wall. 386, 19 L. ed. 257; Suggs v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 71 Tex. 579, 1 L. R. A. 847, 9 S. W. 676; O'Laughlin v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 3 McCrary, 543, 11 Fed. 280; 13 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 392; McElroy v. Continental Ins. Co. 48 Kan. 200, 29 Pac. 478; German F. Ins. Co. v. Bullene, 51 Kan. 764, 33 Pac. 467; 64 L. R. A.

Douglass v. Lowell, 55 Kan. 574, 40 Pac. 917; Goodman v. Wilson, 54 Kan. 709, 39 Pac. 704.

The acts and contracts of infants should be deemed voidable only, and susceptible of ratification or disaffirmance at their election when they become of age.

Tyler, Infancy & Coverture, § 10; 2 Kent, Com. 235.

A minor can give parol authority to transact business for him, and can ratify, on arriving of age, those acts appointing agents which were simply voidable.

Armitage v. Widoe, 36 Mich. 124; Ward v. The Little Red, 8 Mo. 358; State ex rel. Stempel v. New Orleans, 105 La. 768, 30 So. 97; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 84; Southwestern R. Co. v. Chapman, 46 Ga. 557.

Smith, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In March, 1894, Kenneth Mead was a minor twelve years of age, and the owner of two lots on which there stood a frame dwelling. The building was destroyed by fire on May 11, 1894, while insured for $600 in the defendant in error company. Soon after the loss the mother of the insured settled with the company for $475, through her attorney, C. C. Dail. On May 26, 1902, after Kenneth Mead became of age, he brought this action against the insurance company to recover the amount of the policy, with interest. The petition sets out the fact of the fire, notice of the loss to the company, and the date and number of the policy, and avers that plaintiff on his part had performed all of its conditions. The petition had attached to it as an exhibit a copy of the policy, with an allegation as follows: "The plaintiff further says that shortly thereafter, to wit, August 2, 1894, through and by a conspiracy between defendant and another person, one C. C. Dail, the said policy, No. 4,930, was surreptitiously obtained from this plaintiff, then still a minor, and for a small consideration from defendant to said Dail delivered unlawfully and wrongfully to defendant, and by it canceled so that, if the copy of said policy which is hereto attached marked 'Exhibit A,' and made part hereof, is not an exact copy, the failure thereof is attributable to the cancellation of the same by defendant. Plaintiff further says that at said time, nor until the year 1896, he did not have any guardian to represent his interests in that or any other respect, and that only on about the 15th day of May, 1902, did he, when he became of full age, acquire the right to do so himself, and, if any default has accrued in premises against him, he pleads his minority against the same." The answer of the defendant below contained three defenses: First, a general denial; second, breach of covenant to give immediate notice of loss and make proof within sixty days; third, a failure to bring an action on the policy within twelve months after the fire. To these defenses plaintiff below replied that after the fire he had done all things required of him by the conditions of the policy, and that "through and by a conspiracy between said defendant and one C. C. Dail, for a small sum as in payment of said loss so covered by said policy, said defendant unlawfully and wrongfully obtained said policy from the said C. C. Dail, and converted said policy to its own use, and canceled the same, whereby it waived all the conditions of said policy required to be complied with by said plaintiff if they had not been complied with by him, which plaintiff asserts had been done." A trial was had before the court resulting in a judgment for the defendant below.

The policy contained this condition: "No suit or action on this policy for the recovery of any claim shall be sustainable in any court of law or equity until after full compliance by the insured with all the foregoing requirements, nor unless commenced within twelve months after the fire." It is clear that the action was based on the contract of indemnity to recover the loss. The allegation in the petition respecting a conspiracy between the company and Dail was made to excuse plaintiff in his failure to set up a true copy of the policy. The action was not founded on the conspiracy. It did not sound in tort. In the plaintiff's reply he alleged that the conditions precedent to a recovery by him had been waived by the insurance company in wrongfully obtaining the policy from Dail, thus confessing that he was bound by all the provisions in the insurance contract except the conditions pleaded in the answer. The action of plaintiff below was barred by the limitation of time fixed in the policy for the commencement of an action, which was twelve months from the time of loss. When the policy was issued and the loss occurred, the agreement limiting the time within which an action to recover on the insurance contract might be commenced was not illegal. McElroy v. Continental Ins. Co. 48 Kan. 200, 29 Pac. 478. By chap. 91, p. 182, Laws 1897, such contracts are no longer permitted. Gen. Stat. 1901, § 4446, subd. 7. The contract limitation in the policy controls the general statute of limitations, and is good even against minor beneficiaries. Suggs v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 71 Tex. 579, 1 L. R. A. 347, 9 S. W. 676; O'Laughlin v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 3 McCrary, 543, 11 Fed. 280. See also Riddlesberger v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 44 L. R. A.

7 Wall. 386, 19 L. ed. 257. In McElroy v. Continental Ins. Co. 48 Kan. 200, 29 Pac. 478, the dismissal of an action brought within the time required by the policy was held not to extend the time to begin another within a year, under § 4451, Gen. Stat. 1901.

The judgment of the court below will be affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

KANSAS CITY, FORT SCOTT, & MEMPHIS RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

B. F. BLAKER et al.

(.....Kan.....)

- *1. Where an insurance company pays to the insured a loss occasioned by the wrong of a third party, and the value of the property destroyed exceeds the amount paid by the insurance company, the insured may bring an action in his own name against the wrongdoer, and may recover the full amount of the loss.
2. A dealer in grain and lumber leased a portion of the right of way of a railroad company on which to build an elevator and warehouses, and it was stipulated that the railroad company should not be liable for the burning of property erected or stored on the rented premises. The lessee had other property connected with that on leased premises, which was destroyed by fire negligently set out by the railroad company on the rented premises, and which continued from there and burned property not on the right of way. Held, that the fact that the railroad company was exempt from liability for the burning of the property on the right of way, and which first caught fire, will not relieve it from liability for the negligent burning of the connected property.
3. The placing of structures on the right of way of a railroad company, and which are permitted to remain there with the consent of the company until they

*Headnotes by JOHNSTON, Ch. J.

NOTE.—As to liability of person whose sparks from his smoke stack set fire to a building, for loss of another building set on fire from an intermediate building, see, in this series, Read v. Nichols, 7 L. R. A. 130.

For a case in this series limiting the liability of one who negligently starts a fire, which spreads to lands of other owners, to the damage done on the abutting lands, see Hoffman v. King, 46 L. R. A. 672.

As to effect of negligence in piling wood near railroad track on liability of company for negligently setting it on fire, see Boston Excelsior Co. v. Bangor & A. R. Co. 47 L. R. A. 82.

As to negligence in placing near railroad track cotton which is set on fire by sparks from a locomotive, see Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Marbury Lumber Co. 50 L. R. A. 620.

are negligently set on fire by a passing locomotive, which fire extends to and burns other and adjoining property, does not constitute contributory negligence on the part of the owner, nor deprive him of the remedy given by law for the negligent burning of property not on the right of way.

4. The fact that fire which destroyed property originated in sparks from a passing locomotive may be shown by circumstantial evidence.
5. A person who has been employed as a locomotive engineer for a long time, and who is qualified by experience and observation to understand the operation and effect of spark arresters in locomotives, may give testimony as to whether a locomotive equipped with a spark arrester in first-class condition would prevent the escape of sparks or fire from a locomotive sufficient to ignite and burn property on or near the right of way.

(January 9, 1904.)

ERROR to the District Court for Miami County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover the value of property destroyed by fire through the alleged negligence of the defendant. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. L. F. Parker and Pratt, Dana, & Black, for plaintiff in error:

Every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest.

Kan. Gen. Stat. 1901, § 4454.

A right of action against a party who negligently and wrongfully destroying property by fire is not assignable.

Kansas Midland R. Co. v. Brehm, 54 Kan. 751, 39 Pac. 690; Plano Mfg. Co. v. Burrows, 40 Kan. 361, 19 Pac. 809; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Kansas Farmers' Ins. Co. 7 Kan. App. 447, 53 Pac. 607; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. German Ins. Co. 2 Kan. App. 395, 42 Pac. 594; Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 151, 26 Pac. 857; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Neet, 7 Kan. App. 495, 54 Pac. 134.

Under the terms of the lease there can be no recovery for anything placed by plaintiffs on the right of way, or for anything to which fire was communicated therefrom.

Such an agreement as the one in this case, to release from any damages by fire to property placed on the right of way of a railroad, has been frequently held to be good.

Griswold v. Illinois C. R. Co. 90 Iowa, 265, 24 L. R. A. 647, 57 N. W. 843; Stephens v. Southern P. Co. 109 Cal. 86, 29 L. R. A. 751, 50 Am. St. Rep. 17, 41 Pac. 783; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 L. R. A. 193, 17 C. C. A. 62, 36 U. S. App. 152, 70 Fed. 201; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 148 Ind. 196, 40 L. R. A. 101, 46 N. E. 917, 47 64 L. R. A.

N. E. 464; Wabash R. Co. v. Ordelheide, 172 Mo. 436, 72 S. W. 684; Ordelheide v. Wabash R. Co. 80 Mo. App. 357; Hahn v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 80 Mo. App. 411; Wabash R. Co. v. Ordelheide, 88 Mo. App. 589.

There was no evidence of negligence on defendant's part in setting out the fire, if defendant did set it out.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ayers, 56 Kan. 176, 42 Pac. 722; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Garrison, 66 Kan. 625, 72 Pac. 225.

The testimony of the expert was certainly incompetent.

Missouri & K. Teleph. Co. v. Vandevort (Kan.) 72 Pac. 771; Erb v. Popritz, 59 Kan. 264, 68 Am. St. Rep. 362, 52 Pac. 871; Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256.

Plaintiffs saw fit, in their petition, to make the specific charge against defendant that its spark arrester was defective. They were then bound by this allegation.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ayers, 56 Kan. 176, 42 Pac. 722; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Garrison, 66 Kan. 625, 72 Pac. 225; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Fudge, 39 Kan. 543, 18 Pac. 720; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Snaveley, 47 Kan. 637, 28 Pac. 615.

Mr. L. C. Boyle, for defendants in error:

The value of the property destroyed exceeded the amount of insurance paid. In such case suit should be prosecuted in the name of the assured.

Norwich Union F. Ins. Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 987; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Home Ins. Co. 59 Kan. 434, 53 Pac. 459.

B. F. Blaker & Company, under the terms of their lease, assumed the risk of fire on only that portion of the property located on defendant's right of way.

Rutherford v. Wabash R. Co. 147 Mo. 447, 48 S. W. 921.

The proximate cause of the injury was the wrongful escape of the fire from the defendant's engine.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Stanford, 12 Kan. 354, 15 Am. Rep. 362; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Bales, 16 Kan. 252.

Negligence on the part of a railroad company in permitting fire to escape from its engines may be shown wholly by circumstantial evidence, and it is not necessary in such cases that any particular act of negligence should be introduced.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Bales, 16 Kan. 252; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 58 Kan. 447, 49 Pac. 602; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Gibson, 42 Kan. 34, 21 Pac. 788; Pt. Scott, W. & W. R. Co. v. Karracker, 46 Kan. 511, 26 Pac. 1027.

Ft. Scott, W. & W. R. Co. v. Tubbs, 47 Kan. 630, 28 Pac. 612; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McBride, 54 Kan. 172, 37 Pac. 978; Walker v. Kendall, 7 Kan. App. 801, 54 Pac. 113; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Lawrence (Ind. Terr.) 76 S. W. 254.

It was perfectly competent to show that there was a device which would prevent sparks from escaping from an engine.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Bales, 16 Kan. 254; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Campbell, 16 Kan. 204.

Whether a spark arrester will prevent the escape of fire is a subject of expert testimony.

Davidson v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 34 Minn. 51, 24 N. W. 324; Elfelt v. Smith, 1 Minn. 125, Gil. 101; Rogers, Expert Testimony, §§ 1, 5, 605; Heald v. Thing, 45 Me. 392; Nelson v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co. 71 N. Y. 453; Dickenson v. Fitchburg, 13 Gray, 546; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 440, 440A; Krippner v. Biehl, 28 Minn. 139, 9 N. W. 671; Taylor, Ev. § 1275; 2 Jones, Ev. § 383.

Johnston, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

B. F. Blaker & Company recovered a judgment against the Kansas City, Ft. Scott, & Memphis Railroad Company for the destruction of their lumber yard at Fontana by fire, alleged to have been negligently started by an old and defective engine which the railroad company was operating. The fire started on the roof of an elevator owned by B. F. Blaker & Company, which was situate on the right of way of the railroad company, and had been placed there under a lease which had been several times renewed. The lease under which possession was held when the fire occurred, among other things, provided that "said second parties agree to use the above-described property for elevator and warehouse only, said premises and all buildings thereon to be used conjunctively for the purpose of receiving, storing, and holding freight and property received or transported over the lines of party of the first part," etc. There was a further provision in the lease that the railroad company "shall not be held liable for any loss or damage by fire communicated either by sparks from locomotives or otherwise to any property erected or stored upon said rented premises." Aside from the elevator, the fire destroyed lumber sheds and other structures wholly or partly on the right of way, but on account of the provision in the lease above mentioned no recovery was sought or given for the destruction of property situated on the right of way. The lumber yard, including structures and material, was insured in the Lumbermen's Exchange, a mutual insurance company, to 64 L. R. A.

the extent of $3,000. After the fire that company paid B. F. Blaker & Company, as indemnity, $2,980. An agreement was made between the insurance company and B. F. Blaker & Company that the latter should bring a suit in its own name, and prosecute it to judgment, and of the amount recovered the insurance company should get three fourths and B. F. Blaker & Company the remaining one fourth. In the pleadings and at the trial the railroad company insisted that the Lumbermen's Exchange was the real party in interest, but it was not made a party, and the action was prosecuted to judgment by B. F. Blaker & Company alone, who were awarded by the jury $3,000 as damages, and there was a further award of $400 as attorneys' fees.

It is contended here that the evidence did not establish a right of action in B. F. Blaker & Company, and that the court erred in not sustaining the railroad company's demurrer to the evidence. The fact that the insurance company was not a party plaintiff is the principal ground of this contention. The claim is that, as the insurance company had paid the greater part of the loss, it was a proper party, and in fact the only real party in interest in the result of the action. This question has already received the consideration of the court, and sanction has been given to the rule that, where the value of the property destroyed exceeds the insurance money paid, the action must be brought in the name of the owner, and not in the name of the insurance company. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Home Ins. Co. 59 Kan. 432, 53 Pac. 459. The rule proceeds on the theory that the insured sustains towards the insurer the relation of trustee, and is well supported by the authorities. Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 984; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 3 Dill. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 96; London Assurance Co. v. Sainsbury, 3 Dougl. K. B. 245; Rockingham Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bosher, 39 Me. 253, 63 Am. Dec. 618; Hart v. Western R. Corp. 13 Met. 99, 46 Am. Dec. 719; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. New York & N. H. R. Co. 25 Conn. 265, 65 Am. Dec. 571; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co. 139 U. S. 223, 35 L. ed. 154, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Marine Ins. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 41 Fed. 643. The rule stated is applicable here, as the value of the property destroyed exceeded the amount paid by the insurance company. In addition to the rule of law which holds the insured in such cases chargeable as trustee, there was a specific agreement between the insured and the insurance company that he should act and account in the capacity of a trustee to the insurance company, and the recovery would necessarily conclude both parties, and effectively bar any other or further recovery against the railroad company for the loss.

It is next contended that no liability exists because the fire was communicated from the elevator to other structures not rightly on the right of way, and thus carried along to property not on the right of way. There was, as we have seen, a provision in the lease exempting the company from loss by fire of property situated on the rented premises. This exemption was not a license, however, to negligently set out fires which might burn the elevator and pass over the right of way, destroying other property. B. F. Blaker & Company assumed the risk of destruction by fire of property on the right of way which was rented, and nothing more. There was no release from liability for the negligent destruction of other property, although it may have been connected with that situated on the right of way. It is not necessary to a recovery that the fire should have been directly communicated to the property destroyed, nor will the fact that the fire passed over intervening land, in order to reach that destroyed, prevent a recovery. It was a continuous fire, negligently set out by the railroad company, as the testimony of the plaintiff below tends to show, and, under the authorities, appears to have been the proximate cause of the loss for which the action was brought. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Stanford, 12 Kan. 354, 15 Am. Rep. 362; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Bales, 16 Kan. 252. See also Rutherford v. Wabash R. Co. 147 Mo. 447, 48 S. W. 921. The other buildings near to or connected with the elevator cannot be regarded as an intervening and independent cause of the injury. There is a claim that, as there was a provision in the lease that the lessee should use the premises for elevator and warehouses only, the maintaining thereon of other structures, like lumber sheds, was unwarranted, and to some extent contributed to the injury. The lumber sheds and some other structures wholly or partly on the right of way may not be warehouses in the strict sense of that term, but the parties to the lease had given practical interpretation to the term, and had treated these structures as proper appurtenances. Most, if not all, of them were on the right of way when the lease was executed, and materials shipped over the railroad had been previously stored in them. Aside from that, their existence and location were recognized in the lease itself, where it was "agreed by parties of the first part that they will at all times leave open and unobstructed for the passage of wagons and vehicles a strip of ground 16 feet wide 64 L. R. A.

between their elevator and lumber sheds, parallel with the main track of said railroad." The lumber sheds referred to were manifestly located on the right of way, and the parties contemplated that they should remain there, and be used for the purpose of storing lumber and other material shipped over the railroad. If there had been no such express recognition of the lease, but the structures had been placed or maintained on the right of way with the consent of the company, and from them the fire was communicated to the other property, it would not constitute contributory negligence on the part of the lessees, nor deprive them of the remedy given by law for losses to property not on the right of way, the proximate cause of which was the negligence of the railway company. Sherman v. Maine C. R. Co. 86 Me. 422, 30 Atl. 69; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 91 U. S. 454, 23 L. ed. 356; 13 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 487.

It is contended that the evidence of negligence of the railroad company in setting out the fire was insufficient, and that some of that received was incompetent. It was mainly circumstantial, but we deem it to be sufficient to support the verdict. A heavy freight train passed the buildings destroyed shortly before the fire was discovered. It was running rapidly, working steam, and leaving a trail of smoke behind it. Within a few minutes after it passed persons in the neighborhood saw a patch of fire on the roof of the elevator. No fire was kept in the elevator at the time, as it had been locked up for two weeks before the fire occurred. The wind was blowing from the railroad track toward the elevator. As far as the testimony goes, no one saw sparks proceeding from the engine and lighting on the building, but there was nothing in the testimony to show that the fire could have arisen from any other source, and the facts recited, in the absence of proof of any other cause, tend to show that the fire was caused by the sparks from the engine, and whether the fire so originated was a proper question for the jury. The effect of circumstantial evidence of this character was before the court in the recent case of Kansas City, F. S. & M. R. Co. v. Perry, 65 Kan. 792, 70 Pac. 876. After a full consideration and a review of the authorities it was there held that "the fact that soon after the passing of an engine a fire starts near a railway track in an inclosed field covered at the time with a growth of highly inflammable vegetation, and travels before a high wind in a direction away from the track, is sufficient to warrant a jury in finding that the fire was caused by the operation of the railroad, without its appearing that the engine emitted sparks or live cinders, or was put to special exertion, and without further proof excluding other possible origins." A witness, who had been a locomotive engineer for sixteen years, was introduced to prove the character and operation of spark arresters. After describing them, he stated, in answer to an inquiry, that an engine equipped with a spark arrester in first-class condition would prevent the escape from the engine of sparks or fire that would ignite property on the right of way. There was no objection to this testimony on the ground that the witness was not qualified to testify on the subject, but it is that the testimony was upon an ultimate fact which it was the duty of the jury to determine. The witness was qualified, and the testimony related to a matter which is the subject of expert testimony, and one which inexperienced persons are not likely to understand. The operation of a spark arrester and its effect in arresting sparks and cinders passing through it, as well as the length of time that they would continue to burn, could be intelligently told by witnesses who had had special advantages and opportunities for observing the operations of engines and the effect of sparks issuing from engines equipped with the different kinds of spark arresters. The opinion, based as it was on experience and observation, was not an ultimate issue in the case, but was an important consideration in the determination of an ultimate issue, and was properly admitted.

The case appears to have been fairly submitted to the jury, and, although some of the rulings on the instructions are criticised, we find nothing in them which warrants special comment. What has already been said answers most of the objections which were made to the rulings of the court in charging the jury, and we see nothing in them or in other rulings which would warrant us in disturbing the verdict of the jury.

The judgment of the District Court will therefore be affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

N. McALPINE et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CHICAGO GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY et al.

(.....Kan.....)

*1. A strip of land lying along the margin of a navigable stream was

*Headnotes by CUNNINGHAM, J.

NOTE.—As to abandonment of highway by nonuser, see, in this series, Maire v. Kruse, 26 L. R. A. 449, and note, 64 L. R. A.

included in the plat of a city and dedicated to the public by the use of the word "leave" written thereon. Several streets opened upon this tract, and many lots had no other means of ingress and egress, except over and along it. Held, that its dedication included its use as a street, as well as a landing place for boats.

2. Such strip of land is not abandoned by the public, so as to cause a reverter to the original dedicators or their representatives, because railroads have been permitted to lay their tracks and build depots upon it; nor because its use has been permitted for other unauthorized purposes; nor because river commerce has ceased, and boats do not land upon it; nor because approach to the river margin has become difficult.
3. Land dedicated to a public use does not revert to the dedicators because of misuse or nonuse, unless its use for the dedicated purpose has become impossible, or so highly improbable as to be practically impossible.

(January 9, 1904.)

ERROR to the Court of Common Pleas for Wyandotte County to review a judgment in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover possession of certain real estate. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Sutton & Sutton, for plaintiffs in error:

Land dedicated to a particular public purpose will revert to the dedicator when there has been a full and lawful abandonment of the use for which the dedication has been made, or when the dedication has spent its force by the use becoming impossible.

Dill. Mun. Corp. § 515; Board of Education v. Edson, 18 Ohio St. 221, 98 Am. Dec. 114; Campbell v. Kansas, 102 Mo. 326, 10 L. R. A. 593, 13 S. W. 897; Kent County v. Grand Rapids, 61 Mich. 144, 27 N. W. 888; Mahoning County v. Young, 8 C. C. A. 27, 16 U. S. App. 253, 59 Fed. 96; Rowzee v. Pierce, 75 Miss. 846, 40 L. R. A. 402, 65 Am. St. Rep. 625, 23 So. 307.

A dedication is not a conveyance, it does not in this regard satisfy the requirements of the statute of frauds, nor can the public be a grantee.

Cincinnati v. White, 6 Pet. 431, 8 L. ed. 452; Gardiner v. Tisdale, 2 Wis. 153, 60 Am. Dec. 407.

Statutes which provide that maps and plats of cities and towns shall be a sufficient conveyance to vest the fee of the land dedicated to the public in the city or county, "in trust for the use therein named, expressed, or intended, and for no other purpose," do not change the rule of reverter.

Board of Education v. Edson, 18 Ohio St. 221, 98 Am. Dec. 114; Mahoning County v. Young, 8 C. C. A. 27, 16 U. S. App. 253, 59 Fed. 96; Kent County v. Grand Rapids, 61

Mich. 144, 27 N. W. 888; Campbell v. Kansas, 102 Mo. 326, 10 L. R. A. 593, 13 S. W. 897.

Property dedicated in compliance with such a statute cannot be put to any other use than that named, expressed, or intended by the dedicator.

Board of Education v. Kansas City, 62 Kan. 374, 63 Pac. 600; Chicago v. Ward, 169 Ill. 392, 38 L. R. A. 849, 61 Am. St. Rep. 185, 48 N. E. 927; LeCleecq v. Gallipolis, 7 Ohio, pt. 1, p. 217, 28 Am. Dec. 641; St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Minn. 330, 34 L. R. A. 184, 63 N. W. 267, 65 N. W. 649, 68 N. W. 459.

The abandonment need not in its nature be such that under no circumstances could the use be resumed. It is sufficient to entitle the donor to resume possession that there is no reasonable probability of the use being resumed.

Kent County v. Grand Rapids, 61 Mich. 144, 27 N. W. 888; Campbell v. Kansas, 102 Mo. 326, 10 L. R. A. 593, 13 S. W. 897; Board of Education v. Edson, 18 Ohio St. 221, 98 Am. Dec. 114.

Messrs. J. W. Dana and M. J. Reitz, for defendants in error:

In order to work a reverter of the use, there must be shown an impossibility of the execution of the use.

All evidence of misuse, nonuser, or abandonment is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial to show that said use has become impossible.

Coffin v. Portland, 27 Fed. 412; Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 498, 8 L. ed. 477; Wyandotte County v. First Presby. Church, 30 Kan. 620, 1 Pac. 109; Wilgus v. Miami County, 54 Kan. 605, 38 Pac. 787, 42 Kan. 467, 22 Pac. 615; Goode v. St. Louis, 113 Mo. 257, 20 S. W. 1048.

The municipal authorities have passed no ordinance vacating said levee, or declaring it impossible to use it for levee purposes.

Possession of the levee by licensees, lessees, or trespassers is merely misuse, which may be terminated at any time.

Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 498, 8 L. ed. 452; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 653; Coffin v. Portland, 27 Fed. 412; Wilgus v. Miami County, 54 Kan. 605, 38 Pac. 787; Wyandotte County v. First Presby. Church, 30 Kan. 620, 1 Pac. 109; Forbes v. Board of Education, 7 Kan. App. 452, 53 Pac. 533; Ashland v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 105 Wis. 398, 80 N. W. 1101; Chaffee v. Atkin, 57 S. E. 507, 35 S. E. 800, 36 S. E. 3; Osage City v. Larkin, 40 Kan. 206, 2 L. R. A. 56, 10 Am. St. Rep. 186, 19 Pac. 658; Webb v. Butler County, 52 Kan. 375, 34 Pac. 973; Driggs v. Phillips, 103 N. Y. 77, 8 N. E. 514; Ralston v. Weston, 46 W. Va. 544, 76 Am. St. Rep. 834, 33 S. E. 326; Balti- 64 L. R. A.

more v. Frick, 82 Md. 77, 33 Atl. 435; Richardson v. Davis, 91 Md. 390, 46 Atl. 964; Holmes v. Cleveland, C. & C. R. Co. 93 Fed. 101; Cleveland v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 93 Fed. 113; Giffen v. Olathe, 41 Kan. 342, 24 Pac. 470; Goode v. St. Louis, 113 Mo. 257, 20 S. W. 1048.

A levee may be used for a boat landing; it may be used for building dikes upon; it may be used for a public dump; it may be used to "cord wood upon," or for a "public park" or breathing place; finally, it may be used for a place to load and unload trains of cars.

Goode v. St. Louis, 113 Mo. 257, 20 S. W. 1048.

The fee of all real estate, when dedicated to public use by the proprietor of any town or city, rests absolutely in the county wherein such real estate lies, and the county forever afterwards holds the property in trust for such use.

Atohison & N. R. Co. v. Garside, 10 Kan. 564; Wood v. National Waterworks Co. 33 Kan. 597, 7 Pac. 233; Armstrong v. Portsmouth Bldg. Co. 57 Kan. 67, 45 Pac. 67; United States v. Illinois C. R. Co. 154 U. S. 225, 38 L. ed. 971, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1015; Burlington Gaslight Co. v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 165 U. S. 370, 41 L. ed. 749, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359.

Plaintiffs are estopped from claiming any rights to said levee by reversion, even though there may be a misuser, abandonment, or diversion of said use, for the reason that the purchasers of the lots fronting on said levee have the right to believe and rely on the representations made by the original grantors that said levee would forever belong to the public, and remain an open means of communication from their premises to the river or to the railroads.

Wilgus v. Miami County, 54 Kan. 605, 38 Pac. 787; Wyandotte County v. First Presby. Church, 30 Kan. 620, 1 Pac. 109.

Messrs. Miller, Buchan, & Morris, Arthur F. Smith, Frank Hagerman, N. H. Loomis, R. W. Blair, and H. A. Scandrett also for defendants in error.

Cunningham, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was one in ejectment for the recovery of a three-fourths interest in a tract of land lying between the platted portion of what is now Kansas City, Kansas, on the west, and the Missouri river, on the east. The plaintiffs are the heirs of the proprietors of the original plat of Wyandotte, now Kansas City, Kansas. This tract in dispute is of irregular form, and, as originally delimited upon the plat, was from 700 to 900 feet wide, and perhaps a mile long. Upon the plat it was designated and dedicated as "levee." By reliction and alluvion, accretions have been added to the river margin, until now the tract is more than twice the size in width it was at the time of the dedication. The defendants are the city of Kansas City; several railroad companies who have received permission from the city to build upon this tract of land their tracks, depots, etc., and who are now using the same for such purposes; some private parties, who have erected and are now maintaining manufacturing plants of various kinds; and numerous persons who have squatted and built upon the same more or less temporary habitations, and who are now residing there, as it would appear, without permission from anyone, and as trespassers.

The evidence for the plaintiffs, in brief, shows that the Wyandotte City Town Company was a partnership; that the plat of the city was filed for record in 1859; that there were indicated thereon, by name, various streets and alleys as dedicated to public use, besides the tract in controversy which was named "levee;" that several of these streets, running at right angles with the river, opened at their eastern ends upon this levee; that quite a large number of lots have no other approach to them, save that afforded by this levee tract; that at the time of this platting the Missouri river was navigated quite extensively by both freight and passenger boats, and continued to be so navigated up to the year 1866, during which time the current of the river swept well up to the eastern line of the levee, and afforded ample natural landing place for such boats and the commerce brought by them; that after that time navigation fell off by reason of the fact that railroads were built to and from the town, affording easier and swifter communication, and also that the river became less navigable, and the landing less feasible, by reason of the fact that the current was diverted to the eastern or Missouri shore, the western shore receiving the accretions above noted, and leaving a wide, marshy, and comparatively untraversable alluvion between the river and the levee, as originally platted. It appeared, however, that occasionally pleasure and other craft had landed there at differing stages of water, up to five or six years ago, and that, with some improvements in the way of wharfs and roadways, easy and adequate communication could now be had to the point where navigable water might be reached.

At the conclusion of plaintiff's evidence, the court sustained a demurrer thereto, and they are now here asking a reversal of this action. Their claim is stated most fairly and frankly in their brief, and perhaps no better basis of the discussion here involved can be found than a repetition of the statement. It is: "This suit proceeds upon the theory that this tract of land was dedicated to the public for a levee; that a levee is a landing place for boats and for commerce carried on by river; that this levee was never improved for such purpose by the city or other person or corporation; that no boats have landed at it for twelve years, and, in all human probability, will never again use it for a landing; that it has been permanently abandoned by the city authorities and the public as a levee, because (1) the decreased flow of water in the Missouri river makes the navigation of that river impossible; (2) the permanent change in the channel of the Missouri river from the Kansas to the Missouri bank would make impossible an approach by steamboats to the levee, if any should by chance appear upon the Missouri river; (3) the complete substitution of railroad carriage of freight and passengers for river transportation." Upon this premise the plaintiffs deduce the conclusion that abandonment of the use for which this tract of land was dedicated by the original proprietors has been shown, and that therefore the title thereto, and with it the right of possession, has reverted to the plaintiffs, as the representatives of such proprietors. We are therefore called upon to examine the soundness of their premise, and the correctness of the conclusions deduced.

What, then, we first inquire, was the purpose, as indicated by the word "levee," for which this tract was dedicated? Are we confined to the rather narrow definition which the plaintiffs would have us give to this word, and hold that it simply meant a landing place for boats and commerce carried on by river? Necessarily must be added to this the right to pass over, across, and along this tract for the hauling of such goods and passengers as should be there delivered by reason of such commerce. This implies its use as a highway or street, at least to some extent. Would that use be limited to vehicles used for the loading and unloading of river traffic, or does it not, as well, include the right of the general public to use the same as a street for all purposes? It is true, perhaps, that in the popular sense the more restricted meaning obtains, probably because of the fact that such tracts are most largely used in connection with water commerce, rather than because of an analytical examination of the question. It is equally true that it would greatly surprise the general public of cities where boats tie up at well-improved levees that no one other than those who came and went with goods in promoting "commerce carried on by river" were permitted to traverse the same. It is clear that we may not here give to this word the restricted meaning which plaintiffs' definition contemplates, for, besides the suggestions already made, such a restriction would make each of the streets whose eastern terminus is upon this tract a mere cul-de-sac. Neither would the proprietors of lots abutting the levee have any method of ingress or egress thereto. Primarily the word "levee" has no such restricted meaning. The lexicographers tell us that it is derived from the same root as the word "lever," and means a rise of ground—specifically, "an embankment to prevent inundation, or the steep bank of a river;" and, used as a transitive verb, it is "to keep within a channel by means of levees." The law dictionaries but re-echo this definition, and say: "Levees are embankments to prevent the overflow of rivers." Discussing these various definitions, see St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Minn. 351, 34 L. R. A. 184, 63 N. W. 267, 65 N. W. 649, 68 N. W. 453; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; Coffin v. Portland, 27 Fed. 412-416; New Orleans v. Morris, 3 Woods, 115, Fed. Cas. No. 10,163; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 649; Napa v. Howland, 87 Cal. 88, 25 Pac. 247.

It may well be argued, in the light of recent disastrous experience, that portions of the land in dispute may be needed and used in pursuance of the primary meaning of the term, and that the city, to guard itself from floods, will need to raise embankments thereon. We therefore certainly question the soundness of the plaintiffs' major premise,—that a levee is only a landing place for boats. While a levee is a place for the landing of boats and commerce, it is much more than that; and, were we to grant the abandonment of the disputed tract for that purpose, we would not thereby grant that it was abandoned for all other purposes so as to revert.

Giving to the word "levee" the narrow construction contended for by plaintiffs, we pass to inquire if the conclusion that there has been an abandonment and consequent reverter is warranted by their facts. By their brief the rule as stated, and, we think, correctly, is: "Land dedicated to a particular purpose will revert to the dedicator when there has been a full and lawful abandonment of the use for which the dedication has been made, or when the dedication has spent its force by the use becoming impossible." That is, abandonment, to cause a reverter, is something more than a mere cessation of use. The fact that the use has become inconvenient or undesirable, to the extent that it has ceased entirely, will not constitute an abandonment on the part of the public, so as to cause a reverter; and 64 L. R. A.

this even though such nonuser has extended through a long series of years. In Wilgus v. Miami County, 54 Kan. 605, 38 Pac. 787, a plot of land dedicated as "Seminary square" was held not to have been abandoned through a nonuse of twenty-five years. A like rule is announced in Wyandotte County v. First Presby. Church, 30 Kan. 620, 1 Pac. 109, concerning a lot dedicated by the same plat that contains the land here in controversy, where nonuse had continued for an equal or greater period of time. In Forbes v. Board of Education, 7 Kan. App. 452, 53 Pac. 533, a block dedicated to the public use as "University square" was held not to be vacated after twenty-six years of nonuser. In Ashland v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 105 Wis. 398, 80 N. W. 1101, it is held: "Mere nonuse of a street for any period of time will not operate as an abandonment of rights conferred by a proper dedication, and, until the time arrives when the street is needed for actual use, all persons in possession hold subject to such rights." In Coffin v. Portland, 27 Fed. 412, 416, 417, 420, it is held: "And when, as in this case, the dedication is unconditionally made to a public use, as a levee or landing-place, no formal acceptance of the same is necessary, nor does the existence or continuance of the easement depend on the extent of the use or improvement of the premises, or that they are used or improved at all; and it is even doubtful if the same can be lost by the adverse occupation of the premises by private parties for any length of time. 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed., § 675. . . . Where the fact of dedication of a street or landing is in dispute, nonuser is evidence, more or less cogent, according to circumstances, against a dedication. But where, as in this case, the dedication is admitted, the evidence of nonuser is immaterial. The right to the use, once admitted, is not affected by it. Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 505, 8 L. ed. 477. Property dedicated to public use does not revert to the donor, unless, it may be, where the execution of the use becomes impossible, and, if such property is appropriated to an unauthorized use, a court of equity will compel a specific execution of the trust, by restraining the parties engaged in the unlawful use, or by causing the removal of obstructions or hindrances to the lawful one. Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. 507, 8 L. ed. 477. See also 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 653." In Archer v. Salinas City, 93 Cal. 43, 16 L. R. A. 145, 28 Pac. 839, the rule is stated: "Whenever the dedication is complete, the property thereby becomes public property, and the owner loses all control over it, or right to its use. . . . The property dedicated has become public property, impressed with the use for which it was dedicated; and neither can the public divert it from that use, nor can it be lost by adverse possession. Nor is the effect of such dedication impaired by any delay in the use of the land for which it was set apart. Such failure to make use of the land does not authorize the owner to resume possession. The public can thereafter appropriate the land to the use for which it was dedicated whenever convenience or necessity may suggest." In Parker v. St. Paul, 47 Minn. 317, 50 N. W. 247, the rule is put: "Moreover, streets, levees, and the like are often laid out on land acquired for or dedicated to such purposes with reference to future as well as present requirements, and therefore it is not legitimate to assume that the property has been abandoned merely because it has not yet been used by the public. It may also be safely laid down as sound, both upon reason and upon consideration of public policy, that until the time arrives when a street, levee, or the like, is required for actual public use, and when the public authorities may be properly called upon to open or prepare it for such use, no mere nonuser for any length of time, however great, will operate as an abandonment." This court, in Giffen v. Olathe, 44 Kan. 350, 24 Pac. 474, quotes approvingly from the case of Lake View v. Le Bahn, 120 Ill. 92, 9 N. E. 269, as follows: "Until the time arrives when any street or part of a street is required for actual public use, and when the public authorities may be properly called upon to open it for use, no mere nonuser for any length of time will operate as an abandonment of it, and all persons in possession of it will be presumed to hold subject to the paramount right of the public." The court further cites as supporting the same view a number of cases. Very many more cases could be cited announcing the same doctrine. Indeed, we hardly think, from the plaintiffs' argument, that they claim that mere nonuser will ever constitute an abandonment, but that there must be coupled with such nonuser the further fact that the use has ceased because it has become impossible. This we believe to be the rule of the authorities. In Coffin v. Portland, 27 Fed. 420, the rule is stated thus: "Property dedicated to public use does not revert to the donor, unless, it may be, where the execution of the use becomes impossible. In Osage City v. Larkin, 40 Kan. 206, 2 L. R. A. 56, 10 Am. St. Rep. 186, 19 Pac. 658, it is held that 'an alley retains its character as an alley although the lots on both sides thereof are owned by one person, and is so intersected by a railroad as to make it practically impassable.'" An extreme case is found in Logansport v. 64 L. R. A.

Shirk, 88 Ind. 563, where it is held: "The construction of a canal through a street by the city suspends, but does not destroy, the easement for a street, and such an easement revives on the abatement of the canal,"—with many cases cited in support thereof. Judge Dillon, in his work on Municipal Corporations, 4th ed. § 653, states the rule as follows: "Property unconditionally dedicated to public use or to a particular use does not revert to the original owner, except where the execution of the use becomes impossible. If the dedicated property be appropriated to an unauthorized use, equity will cause the trust to be observed or the obstruction removed." There is nothing to be found in the evidence which goes to show that the use of the tract in question, even were it limited to a boat landing, has become impossible. Indeed, the evidence shows to the contrary. As a matter of law, we know that the Missouri river is a navigable stream. Vast sums of money are expended by the general government for its improvement, and even though at the present but little, if any, commerce is being carried on over its waters, or during the immediate past has been, who shall say that the time may not come, possibly soon, when transportation conditions may so change that navigation may again be profitably resumed? That such a possibility exists may at least serve to exercise a restraining influence upon railroad rates. Certainly it cannot be said either that navigation upon the river has been permanently abandoned, or that by the improvements of wharfage and ways upon the levee it may not again be usable as a landing. That use is now being made of the levee by railroads, manufactories, and squatters counts for little. Such use, if unauthorized or unwarranted, could be prevented by proper action for that purpose. Certain it is that neither city nor county could give away the rights of the public in a tract of land dedicated to public use by authorizing its use for an unwarranted purpose.

We conclude that neither misuse nor nonuse alone will be sufficient to constitute an abandonment of land dedicated to a public use, so as to work as a reverter to the dedicators; that nonuse, to accomplish it, must have been the result of causes rendering use impossible, or at least so highly improbable as to closely approach the impossible; that in this case no such condition was shown by plaintiffs' evidence, even if we take the narrow view that the dedication was only for the purpose of affording a landing place for boats and for commerce carried on by river. We are farther of the opinion that this narrow view may not be sustained,—that the dedication was for other purposes as well, —and it may well be doubted that a reverter would necessarily follow the complete drying up of the Missouri river.

The judgment of the trial court is affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

ATCHISON, TOPEKA, & SANTA FE RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

Herschel PALMORE.

(.....Kan.....)

*1. A card 5 or 6 inches square, tacked to the end of a wooden railway tie in a pile of ties loaded in a box car, discovered by a laborer engaged in unloading the ties for final use, bearing the printed words "Arkansas and Texas Tie Company," and the written words, "Creosote Treated Ties," is technically the best evidence of whatever information its inscription imparted; but, since it is obvious a card of that character is not intended to be preserved, and is not likely to be preserved, very slight evidence of its loss is sufficient to authorize parol proof of its contents, and a verdict will not be set aside because no other foundation for secondary proof than the foregoing facts is established.

*2. Before inscriptions upon a card of the character described can be offered in evidence as an admission of the truthfulness of their recitals, or as an admonition concerning the character of the ties, it must be made to appear that the party to be charged made the admission or had notice of the warning.

*3. In an action for damages for a negligent injury to the eyes, claimed to be permanent, a timely request for an expert physical examination of the injured organs in the usual and ordinary manner should be granted, although involving the use of drugs for dilating the pupils of the eyes, subject, however, to the limitation that the examination do not produce serious discomfort or any deleterious consequence.

(February 6, 1904.)

ERROR to the District Court for Sumner County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

*Headnotes by BURCH, J.

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to right to compel physical examination, see Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Hill, 9 L. R. A. 442; McQuigan v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 466; Graves v. Battle Creek, 19 L. R. A. 641; Lyon v. Manhattan R. Co. 25 L. R. A. 402; Carrico v. West Virginia C. & P. R. Co. 24 L. R. A. 50; Hall v. Manson, 34 L. R. A. 64.

Messrs. A. A. Hurd and O. J. Wood, for plaintiff in error:

The trial court committed reversible error in its refusal to require the plaintiff to submit himself to an examination by medical experts.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Thul, 29 Kan. 466, 44 Am. Rep. 659; Ottawa v. Gulliland, 63 Kan. 165, 88 Am. St. Rep. 232, 65 Pac. 252.

The testimony as to the card and its contents was not the best evidence, was secondary evidence, was not competent, and was hearsay of the most flagrant kind, and should not have been admitted by the court. Its admission was reversible error.

St. Louis, L. & W. R. Co. v. Maddox, 18 Kan. 546; Simpson v. Smith, 27 Kan. 565; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Langdon, 71 Miss. 146, 14 So. 452; Woodman v. Hunter, 53 Kan. 393, 36 Pac. 713; Walker v. O'Connell, 59 Kan. 306, 52 Pac. 894; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Pointer, 9 Kan. 620; Dodge v. Childs, 38 Kan. 528, 16 Pac. 815; Union P. R. Co. v. Fray, 35 Kan. 700, 12 Pac. 98; Stark v. Cummings, 5 Kan. 85; Tennis v. Inter-State Consol. Rapid Transit R. Co. 45 Kan. 503, 25 Pac. 876; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilkinson, 55 Kan. 83, 39 Pac. 1043; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Osborn, 58 Kan. 768, 51 Pac. 286; Cherokee & P. Coal & Min. Co. v. Dickson, 55 Kan. 62, 39 Pac. 691; Maier v. Randolph, 33 Kan. 340, 6 Pac. 625.

If the action of the court in overruling the demurrer to the evidence was based entirely upon this incompetent and flagrantly hearsay testimony, then, in considering the action of the court, this court ought to require to be done what the trial court ought to have done, and will treat this ruling on the demurrer to the evidence to the same extent and with like effect as though the incompetent and improper evidence had not been introduced.

Lee v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Kan.) 63 L. R. A. 271, 73 Pac. 110.

Mr. W. W. Schwinn, for defendant in error:

The railroad company owes the duty of inspecting its property with which its employees are set to work, to protect them from injury by reason of any defective or dangerous condition of the tools or property which they are handling.

Solomon R. Co. v. Jones, 30 Kan. 601, 2 Pac. 657; Kansas City & P. R. Co. v. Ryan,

A. 207; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Huddleston, 36 L. R. A. 681; O'Brien v. La Crosse, 40 L. R. A. 831; Jane v. Spokane Falls & N. R. Co. 46 L. R. A. 153; Stack v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 52 L. R. A. 328; South Bend v. Turner, 54 L. R. A. 896, and Austin & N. W. R. Co. v. Gluck, post, —

52 Kan. 637, 35 Pac. 292; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Holt, 29 Kan. 149.

Burch, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff recovered a judgment for damages against the defendant resulting from personal injuries claimed to have been received by him while in the railroad company's employ. He charged that the defendant sent him into a box car to unload wooden ties which had been prepared for use by immersion in creosote, a virulent poison, the natural effect of which is to destroy the tissues of the human body with which it may come in contact; and that in handling the ties a fine light dust which had accumulated upon them, and which had become impregnated with the creosote, was disseminated in the air, and into his eyes, by means of which they were badly burned, and his vision was permanently impaired.

On the trial the only evidence offered to prove that the ties had been treated with creosote, or that the defendant had any knowledge of the fact that they had been so treated, was the following: I got in to unload the ties, and the only place for me to work was to get behind that pile of ties and shove them out. The other places were filled up. I was told to get into this separate car. The rest of my gang went to another car, all except one man; and I went to shove these ties out. There was dry stuff on top of the ties blew into my eyes and burned my eyes for fifteen minutes, so that I had to stop work for about that long, and I went to the door; and as I went to the door, after I got so that I could see again, I saw on the end of the ties a card about 5 or 6 inches square. . . .

Q. Now you may tell what you saw, Herschel.

A. I saw a card. At the heading of the card was printed, says, "Arkansas and Texas Tie Company;" in indelible blue pencil was marked, "Creosote Treated Ties."

Q. You say the card was printed on it "Arkansas and Texas Tie Company?"

A. Printed at the top, the heading of the card; and in blue pencil was marked "Creosote Treated Ties."

Q. Where was the card?

A. It was tacked on the end of a tie about the middle of the pile on that end. . . .

Q. And that was on one tie?

A. One tie, about the middle of the car.

The railroad company insists that the card itself should have been produced or accounted for. In strictness the card would have furnished the best evidence of whatever information its inscriptions imparted. Its affixature was so slight and temporary that it was removable without effort. It was easily portable and preservable, and its description falls within that of a private document best provable by production. But, inasmuch as the card was casually discovered by a laborer when unloading the ties for final use, and inasmuch as it is apparent that the card was not intended to be, and was not likely to be, preserved, only very slight evidence was required to show its loss; and that is sufficiently furnished by the very statement of the circumstances, so that a verdict should not be overturned because a foundation for secondary proof was not sufficiently established.

A more serious objection to the proof of the language of the card is that the defendant was not shown to be cognizant of it or privy to it in any way. The card could be important only as an admission of the truthfulness of its recitals, or as an admonition concerning the character of the ties. Without some proof that the company made the one or had due information of the other, it could not be found. The fact that the plaintiff found the card tacked to the ties was wholly inadequate for either purpose. Any stranger to the company might have placed it there; and, if it were affixed without the authority of the officers or agents of the company, it was nothing more than the declaration of the person doing so, and of no binding effect without proof of facts showing it was intended as a means of conveying information concerning the character of the ties, and that the officers or agents of the company were, or should have been, apprised of it in time to notify the plaintiff. Unsupplemented as the evidence stood, it was not only insufficient to establish a liability on the part of the company, but should have been stricken out.

Before the trial began, the defendant made a request for an expert physical examination of the plaintiff's eyes in the usual and ordinary manner. No objection was made to the time or form or propriety of the request. On behalf of the plaintiff, it was stated that he consented that experts might examine his eyes by inspecting them, but that he protested against the court permitting experts or anybody else to put drugs into his eyes for the purpose of dilating them. No reason whatever for this protest was vouchsafed. On the part of the defendant it was suggested that in no instance could a proper examination of the eye be made without dilating certain of its parts, and the request was made that this feature of the examination be left to the experts themselves. Thereupon the court made the following order: "The plaintiff, by his consent, may subject himself to have his eyes examined, but the court will not permit any drugs to be used in the examination without the consent of the plaintiff." On the trial the plaintiff himself testified to a great destruction of his eyesight. Two physicians produced by him detailed the results of superficial observations of the eyes, and pronounced his vision to be permanently impaired. One of them was twenty-five years of age, had been practising medicine but eighteen months, and had been without eye practice, except in a clinical way connected with his college work. The other was a physician of experience, but he was not interrogated concerning any special qualifications he might possess for the diagnosis of cases of this character. Two physicians called by the defendant stated they had inspected the plaintiff's eyes, and were able to describe the condition of the outer tissues, but they united in asserting that no superficial examination could discover the facts or test the truthfulness of the plaintiff's statements; that the true condition of his eyes could only be ascertained by an ophthalmoscopic examination of their deeper structures; that a dilation of the pupils by appropriate drugs for that purpose was essential, and that such was the usual and ordinary method of examining eyes by all specialists.

Upon the submission of the cause the jury returned the following remarkable special findings:

Q. If you find for plaintiff, what do you allow him for loss of time in the past?

A. Nothing.

Q. If you find for plaintiff, what do you allow him for loss of time in the future?

A. Nothing.

Q. If you find for plaintiff, what do you allow him for pain and suffering in the past?

A. Nothing.

Q. If you find for plaintiff, what do you allow him for prospective pain and suffering?

A. Nothing.

Q. If you find for plaintiff, what do you allow him for mental pain and anxiety?

A. Nothing.

Q. If you find for plaintiff, what do you allow him for loss of ability to earn a livelihood?

A. Nothing.

Q. If you find for plaintiff, what do you allow him for permanent injuries?

A. $5,000.

If, therefore, the ruling of the court upon the application for an examination of the plaintiff's eyes was erroneous, it was not cured by any subsequent circumstance of the trial.

It is a matter of common knowledge that, through the restriction of the energies of trained students and investigators to that single field, ophthalmology has been brought to a state of comparative perfection. Here, as in all other quests for truth conducted under the guidance of the scientific method, the first requirement is a full and accurate observation of the facts. The sages of old, from the data at hand proved that the flood of the Nile is caused by the tears of Isis shed for Osiris, until the eye of the explorer rested upon the melting snows of the mountain peaks of central Africa. The ancient method of establishing facts yet dominates some minds, but the modern scientific expert will be content with nothing short of a view of the facts where they can be seen. Therefore he has invented the ophthalmoscope for the exploration of the interior of the eye, the rhinoscope for the exploration of the nasal cavities, and other appropriate instruments for the exploration of other hollow organs of the body, and he will not attempt to bridge the chasm between ignorance and knowledge in any case where they may be of assistance until he has availed himself of their use. The question therefore arises whether or not the law, as a means of justice, will tolerate any other than the surest method of ascertaining truth; whether or not, with all the marvels of scientific achievement placed at its command, the rule of thumb shall be sufficient for its purposes; and whether or not in this case the timely application of the defendant for the production of the best evidence shall be granted before a transfer from the treasury of the defendant to the plaintiff of the sum of $5,000 is ordered.
64 L. R. A.

In the case of Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Thul, 29 Kan. 466, 44 Am. Rep. 659, an order of a district court denying an application requiring a plaintiff in a personal injury case to submit to an expert examination of his eyes was declared to be erroneous. Mr. Justice Valentine, speaking for the court, said: "The tendency of modern adjudications and of modern thought is to open the door as wide as possible for the introduction of all evidence that may throw light upon the particular subject then undergoing investigation. All attainable evidence and instruments of evidence, within certain limitations, may be presented to the jury for their inspection and consideration and all proper modes of investigation or inspection may be resorted to for the purpose of enabling the jury to arrive at just and correct conclusions. Many instruments of evidence, however, can be examined only by the aid of experts, and in all such cases the aid of experts is not only allowable, but may be demanded as a matter of right by the party needing such aid. It was shown in the present case by the testimony of Dr. Williams that the nature, the extent, and the permanency of the injury to the plaintiff's eyes could not be determined with any reasonable degree of accuracy except by a careful examination, made by some oculist or person who had made diseases and affections of the eyes a special study; and we would naturally suppose that such would be the case, independent of the testimony of Dr. Williams. Hence it would seem that in a case like the present the evidence of some such expert who had made such an examination would be an almost indispensable necessity; but such evidence in many cases could not be obtained unless the plaintiff were first compelled by an order of the court to submit himself to a personal examination by some such expert. Now, is such evidence to be lost, and justice possibly defeated, or may the court order that such an examination may be had? We favor the proposition contained in the latter portion of this alternative." It does not affirmatively appear from the statement of facts, however, if the examination of Thul contemplated the use of drugs, and in support of its opinion the court quotes from a decision of the supreme court of Iowa as follows: "To our minds, the proposition is plain that a proper examination by learned and skilled physicians and surgeons would have opened a road by which the cause could have been conducted nearer to exact justice than in any other way. The plaintiff, as it were, had under his control testimony which would have revealed the truth more clearly than any other that could have been introduced. The cause of truth, the right administration of the law, demand that he should have produced it. The use of anæsthetics, opiates, or drugs of any kind should have been forbidden, if, indeed, it had been proposed; and it should have prescribed that he should be subjected to no tests painful in their character." This authority, however, is by no means conclusive. Drugs are of infinite shades of potency from the rankest poisonousness to absolute innocuousness. They may produce death, or an effect so fleeting and temporary that only the most skilled observer can be conscious of it; and reactions from them range from the utterly intolerable to the positively pleasurable. The question, therefore, is not if drugs shall be used, but if an examination shall be made without serious inconvenience and without deleterious effect. Any enforced examination is vexatious and embarrassing, and very frequently must involve some slight degree of that discomfort which is denominated pain; but an examination may nevertheless be made with due consideration of both the sensibilities of the plaintiff and the demands of justice. Other adjudicated cases cast little light upon the question. In the case of Strudgeon v. Sand Beach, 107 Mich. 496, 65 N. W. 616, the court held: "An order requiring the plaintiff in an action for personal injuries to submit to an examination by physicians, necessarily involving the use of anæsthetics, is properly refused." It is to be inferred, however, from the report of the case, that the physicians were there demanding the total subjugation of consciousness—a measure so extreme that the court might well refuse to consider it. In Hess v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 566, the court, in a speculative way, remarked: "The examination should, however, be conducted in such a manner as to avoid the infliction of pain, the subjection to indignity, or the endangering of health or life. No anæsthetics, opiates, or drugs should be administered." But it then proceeded to order an examination "by electric tests by means of a battery of such moderate power as is approved by medical authority in like cases, and as will not inflict pain or endanger the health or life of plaintiff, either or all." Just why degrees of potency should be recognized in the application of a powerful natural agent like electricity and rejected when considering vegetable or mineral substances is not obvious. In the case of Belt Electric Line Co. v. Allen, 102 Ky. 551, 80 Am. St. Rep. 374, 44 S. W. 89, 551, it is said: "That examination should be ordered and had under the direction and control of the court, whenever it fairly appears that the ends of justice require the disclosure or more certain ascertainment of facts which can only be brought to light or fully elucidated by such an examination, and that the examination may be made without danger to the plaintiff's life or health, and without the infliction of serious pain." And in the case of South Bend v. Turner, 156 Ind. 418, 54 L. R. A. 396, 83 Am. St. Rep. 200, 60 N. E. 271, after reviewing the authorities to the date of the decision, the supreme court of Indiana drew the following conclusion: "The cases above cited as affirming the existence of the power establish the following propositions: . . . (4) That the examination should be applied for and made before entering upon the trial, and should be ordered and conducted under the direction of the court, whenever it fairly appears that the ends of justice require a more certain ascertainment of important facts which can only be disclosed or fully elucidated by such an examination, and such an examination may be made without danger to the plaintiff's life or health or the infliction of serious pain." In these two cases, however, the narrow question under consideration was not independently discussed. So far as the intrinsic character of the agency employed is concerned, the law should not distinguish between dilations accomplished by mechanical and by medicinal means. In the case of O'Brien v. La Crosse, 99 Wis. 421, 40 L. R. A. 831, 75 N. W. 81, the refusal of the plaintiff's physician to permit the use of a catheter in the course of an examination by physicians employed by the defendant was upheld, because it appeared that a dangerous inflammation was likely to result. In the case of Louisville R. Co. v. Hartlege, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 152, 74 S. W. 742, the supreme court of Kentucky adhered to the rule announced in Belt Electric Line Co. v. Allen, 102 Ky. 551, 80 Am. St. Rep. 374, 44 S. W. 89, but affirmed an order denying an examination of the person of a woman which involved a mutilation and severe pain. But in the carefully considered cases of Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Hill, 90 Ala. 71, 9 L. R. A. 442, 24 Am. St. Rep. 764, 8 So. 90, and Brown v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (N. D.) 95 N. W. 153, the examinations authorized necessarily contemplated either an internal digital exploration or the use of the speculum. The conclusion to be drawn from these decisions therefore is that due precautions for the comfort and safety of the subject are the matters for primary consideration. With these provided for, the method and means employed should be left to the discretion of the expert making the examination.

From all this the conclusion must follow that the district court should have required an expert examination of the plaintiff's eyes to be made, subject to the limitation that it should not produce serious discomfort or any deleterious consequence; and, in order to insure the execution of its order according to the strict letter of its terms, the court should have approved, if it did not actually select, the experts appointed to make the examination.

The judgment of the District Court is reversed, with direction to proceed further in accordance with this opinion.

All the Justices concur.

GEORGIA SUPREME COURT.

C. P. BYRD, Plff. in Err.,
v.

James W. ENGLISH et al.

(117 Ga. 191.)

*A party to a contract, who is injured by reason of the failure of the other party to comply with its terms, cannot recover damages for the negligent act of a third person, by which the performance of the contract was rendered impossible.

(February 11, 1903.)

*Headnote by CANDLER, J.

NOTE.—Liability for damage to business by injuring tangible property of other party.

That wrongful injury to business is as much an injury to a property right as an injury to tangible property, and as such the subject of an action, would seem to be so clear as not to need the support of decision; but, even if this were not so, such cases as Curran v. Galen, 152 N. Y. 33, 37 L. R. A. 802, 57 Am. St. Rep. 496, 46 N. E. 297; Matthews v. Shankland, 25 Misc. 604, 56 N. Y. Supp. 123; Sherry v. Perkins, 147 Mass. 212, 9 Am. St. Rep. 689, 17 N. E. 307; Otis Steel Co. v. Local Union No. 218, 110 Fed. 698; Murdock v. Walker, 152 Pa. 595, 34 Am. St. Rep. 678, 25 Atl. 492; Brace Bros. v. Evans, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 163; Cœur D'Alene Consol. Min. Co. v. Miners' Union, 19 L. R. A. 382, 51 Fed. 260; and Casey v. Cincinnati Typographical Union No. 3, 12 L. R. A. 193, 45 Fed. 135, certainly establish the proposition.

In Rigby v. Hewitt, 5 Exch. 240, 19 L. J. 64 L. R. A.

ERROR to the City Court of Atlanta to review a judgment in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover damages for alleged injury to business caused by negligent acts of defendants. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Vasser Wooley for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Spencer R. Atkinson and Rosser & Carter, for defendants in error:

The efficient, proximate cause of the injuries and damage, of which the plaintiff complains, was not the excavation which it was alleged was the act of the defendants, Exch. N. S. 291, the court said that every person who does a wrong is at least responsible for all the mischievous consequences that may reasonably be expected to result, under ordinary circumstances, from such misconduct.

A fire company from an adjoining city had laid its hose across a railroad track in order to throw water upon the plaintiff's building, which was on fire. It was combatting the fire with success, and would probably have extinguished it with little damage to the plaintiff, when a train upon the defendant's railroad severed the hose and prevented the further efforts of the firemen. Metallic Compression Casting Co. v. Pritchburg R. Co. 109 Mass. 277, 12 Am. Rep. 689. It was decided that the plaintiff might maintain an action against the railroad company for its loss subsequent to the cutting of the hose. In this case the contention was that, assuming that the hose was properly laid across the track, the plaintiff had no cause of action, because the hose was not its property, nor were the men who had but the failure of the electric company to perform its contract to deliver power to the plaintiff's plant; and the breaking of the wires and conduits, by means of which the plaintiff was supplied with electrical power, if wrongful at all, was the tort, of which the electric company alone could complain, and not one out of which a cause of action could arise in favor of the plaintiff in error.

Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. p. 75; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 486; Southern R. Co. v. Webb, 116 Ga. 152, 59 L. R. A. 109, 42 S. E. 395; Watson, Damages for Personal Injuries, §§ 33, 58, 71; Macon v. Dykes, 103 Ga. 847, 31 S. E. 443; Central R. Co. v. Price, 106 Ga. 176, 43 L. R. A. 402, 71 Am. St. Rep. 246, 32 S. E. 77; Central R. Co. v.

Edwards, 111 Ga. 528, 36 S. E. 810; Hopkins, Personal Injuries, §§ 14-16.

The mere fact that the injury would not have occurred but for the defendant's act is not the test of proximate cause.

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 572; 1 Jaggard, Torts, §§ 26, 130a, b, pp. 245, 372-374; 1 Addison, Torts, §§ 10-12, pp. 12, 13.

The law cannot undertake to trace back a chain of causes indefinitely, for it is obvious that this would lead to inquiries far beyond human power and wisdom, in fact, indefinite in their scope.

Cuff v. Newark & N. Y. R. Co. 35 N. J. L. 17, 10 Am. Rep. 215; Georgia R. Co. v. Hayden, 71 Ga. 518, 51 Am. Rep. 274.

To obviate a recovery against an indefinite number of wrongdoers upon precise-the possession of it its servants. In response to this argument, the court said that while this was true, and it was also true that their services were voluntary, and if they had gone away and taken the hose and engine with them the plaintiff would have had no legal claim against them, those circumstances were immaterial as matter of fact. The men and engine were in fact furnishing water to the plaintiff, and were thereby extinguishing the fire; that they were rendering the same service to the plaintiff as if they were hired and were using the plaintiff's hose; that the defendant cut off the supply of water, and this was as really an interference with the plaintiff's possession as if it held the possession under a deed, and as if the men were laboring under a contract; and that the interference was tortious.

The reasoning in this case is very difficult to get away from, and, if it is correct, it would seem to indicate that BYRD V. ENGLISH cannot be deemed a well-considered case. In other words, that it is no business of the wrongdoer how another obtains his right; if the wrong injures it, he is liable, no matter what its source.

But in Mott v. Hudson River R. Co. 1 Robt. 593, which was also a case where the hose in use by firemen in extinguishing a fire which was burning the plaintiff's dwelling was cut by the defendant's railroad train, it was said that the act of the defendant was not the immediate cause of the injury to the plaintiff; that it was only immediately the cause of destroying the instruments used to prevent injury, and that, although they were then actually in use, the same principle must govern as if they were just being prepared for use, or on their way, or even kept in readiness for use. That it was the same as if the hose cart were on its way to the fire and were interrupted by illegal obstructions in the street, or injured by a locomotive,—the plaintiff might have lost the benefit of it; or if any one negligently lost the key of its house, so that it could not be got out in time; or if anyone, having contracted to repair the hose within a certain time, failed to do so; that in all these cases the negligence of the delinquent party might more or less contribute to the result of the destruction of the plaintiff's property, yet, as a result of the negligence, the consequences would be too remote to make him liable for damages. 64 L. R. A.

This reasoning does not appear to be as satisfactory or convincing as that of the Massachusetts case. Besides the court had just held that the cutting of the hose by the train was an accident, and was not the result of negligence on the part of the railroad company, and was due mainly to the neglect of the firemen and the plaintiff to station persons at a proper distance on either side of the place where the hose crossed the track to warn those under whose management the train was, and stop the train.

An action may be maintained against a district council for the negligence of a contractor employed by the defendant to construct a sewer for them, by reason of which negligence a gas main was broken and the gas escaped into the house in which the plaintiffs (husband and wife) resided and an explosion took place by which the wife was injured and the husband's furniture was damaged. The explosion which took place was the direct consequence of the act of negligence complained of, and occurred in the ordinary course of events attendant thereon, as would be known to anyone of intelligence who cared to think about the matter. Hardaker v. Idle [1896] 1 Q. B. 335, 65 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 363, 74 L. T. N. S. 69. In this case the court said, on the subject of the remoteness of damage, that the nature of the gas, its certainty to escape, and to find its way wherever it can get, and explode if it escapes in large quantities and comes into contact with fire, all render the breaking of a gas main very dangerous if houses are near; and that such an accident as that which actually happened was one that might have been reasonably expected. In principle may not the same thing be truly said of a negligent act which severs a sub-way containing the wires by which electricity is transmitted for the purpose of light and power?

In Hughes v. McDonough, 43 N. J. L. 459, 39 Am. Rep. 603, the declaration alleged that the plaintiff, a blacksmith and horseshoer, had obtained the patronage of a person, and on one occasion had shod a certain mare of his customer in a good and workmanlike manner; and that the defendant, maliciously intending to injure him and impair and destroy the work, without the knowledge of the owner loosed a shoe that the plaintiff had recently put on the mare so that it would come off easily, and thus make it appear that plaintiff was an unskilful ly the same cause of action, the plaintiff is remitted to the person supplying the nearest efficient link in the chain of causation.

Ashley v. Harrison, 1 Esp. 48; Vickars v. Wilcocks, 8 East, 1; Dale v. Grant, 34 N. J. L. 142; Rockingham Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bosher, 39 Me. 253, 63 Am. Dec. 618; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. New York & N. H. R. Co. 25 Conn. 265, 65 Am. Dec. 571; Anthony v. Slaid, 11 Met. 290; Kahl v. Love, 37 N. J. L. 5.

Candler, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The petition filed by the plaintiff in the court below makes substantially the following case: The plaintiff was engaged in the printing and publishing business in the city of Atlanta, maintaining a large establishment, in which many workmen were employed. In the operation of his machinery and the lighting of his place of business he was dependent upon electric power supplied by the Georgia Electric Light Company, a corporation, and this power was conveyed by means of wires contained in conduits which were laid down under the ground. On a named day the defendants were engaged in constructing a building which was to be located on the same street as that on which the plaintiff's place of business was situated, and, as incident to the work of construction, were excavating the lot of the defendant English, on which the building was to be constructed, for the purpose of inclosing a basement. In doing this they also excavated the earth under the sidewalk adjoining the lot. This was done without authority of law, and in violation of an ordinance of the city of Atlanta. By the negligence of the employees of the defendants, a wall of earth was allowed to fall in on the conduits containing the electric wires over which power was conveyed to the plaintiff's plant. The wires were broken, and for several hours he was without the means of conduct-and careless horseshoer, and thus deprive the plaintiff of the patronage and custom of his customer. The second count charged the defendant with driving a nail in the foot of the horse after it had been shod by the plaintiff, with the same design. Upon the argument the contention of the defendant was that the wrong was done to the customer; that it was his horse whose shoe was loosened and whose foot was pricked, and that the immediate injury and damage were to him, and consequently the damages of the plaintiff were too remote. But the court held: That this contention involved a misapplication of the legal principle, and could not be sustained. That the illegal act of the defendant had a close causal connection with the hurt done to the plaintiff, and that such hurt was the natural and almost direct product of such cause. That such harmful result was sure to follow, in the usual course of things, from the specified malfeasance. That the defendant was conclusively chargeable with the knowledge of this injurious effect of his conduct, for such effect was almost certain to follow from such conduct, without the occurrence of any extraordinary event, or the help of any extraneous cause. That the act had a twofold injurious aspect,—it was calculated to injure both the customer and the plaintiff; and, as each was directly damaged, the court could perceive no reason why each should not repair his losses by an action. To be sure the court afterwards said that the action of the defendant was, in effect, a defamation of the plaintiff in his trade, but it is difficult to perceive why, if one, by injuring the tangible property of another, may, by defaming the character of the plaintiff in his trade or profession, thus damage his occupation or business, the same may not be done when the injury to the tangible property of the third person is in its nature a trespass, or the result of unwarranted negligence.

The case of Dale v. Grant, 34 N. J. L. 142, is cited in the opinion of BRAD v. ENGLISH as a case in point illustrating the principle governing that case. But this can hardly be correct.

64 L. R. A.

The decision in Dale v. Grant was that one having a contract to take from a manufacturing corporation all of its manufactured products cannot maintain an action against a person who interferes with the machinery by which the manufacturing corporation operates its plant, and thus prevents it from furnishing its goods to the plaintiff under such contract, for the profits which the plaintiff claims to have lost by reason of such wrongful interference by the defendant with such machinery.

In BRAD v. ENGLISH the negligent act of the defendant was a direct injury to the business of the plaintiff, immediately arresting its operation, while in Dale v. Grant the direct injury was to the business of the corporation which furnished its goods to the plaintiff. The cases would have been similar if, instead of the plaintiff in BRAD v. ENGLISH having brought the action, the latter had been instituted by one of his customers.

In Tarleton v. McGawley, Peake N. P. Cas. 205, 3 Revised Rep. 689, plaintiff's vessel was trading with the natives on the coast of Africa. The defendant was with his vessel near by, engaged in the same business. As a boat was returning to the shore from plaintiff's vessel, where it had been for the purpose of establishing a trade, the defendant, maliciously intending to hinder and deter the natives from trading with plaintiff, fired from his ship a canon loaded with gunpowder, and shot at the canoe, and killed one of the natives, whereby the natives of the coast were deterred and hindered from trading with plaintiff, and plaintiff thereby lost the trade. It was held that an action therefor could be maintained.

In Cue v. Breeland, 78 Miss. 864, 29 So. 850, which was an action for damages done to a county bridge, the plaintiff was connected with the bridge only in this way: He erected the same under a contract with the county, and bound himself to the county, by his contract and a bond, to maintain the bridge for five years after its erection. It was held that the defendant, by the negligence and wilfulness of whose servants, engaged in the floating of logs down the stream, the bridge was destroyed, was ing his business, by reason of which fact he suffered damage set out in the petition. By amendments it was alleged that the plaintiff had a right to demand of the Georgia Electric Light Company the electric power which it had been furnishing him; that, but for the tort complained of, that company would have furnished him with power, and he would not have been damaged as set out; that the conduits of the electric light company were placed in the street by authority of the city of Atlanta, and in the exercise of the right of eminent domain in the company; that the plaintiff was under a contract with the Georgia Electric Light Company, by virtue of which that company furnished him with electric power, and under the terms of which he could not recover from it for damage occasioned by an accidental interruption of the current such as this was; that at the time of the commission of the tort complained of there was no other company or person in Atlanta offering to furnish electric current from whom the plaintiff could have secured service during the interval of interruption caused by the breaking of the wires; that it was impracticable to change the motive power used by the plaintiff during that interval; that the injury done was remedied at the earliest possible moment, and that everything possible was done to reduce the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff. The court sustained a general demurrer to the petition as amended, and the plaintiff excepted.

In the brief of counsel for the defendants in error considerable stress is laid upon the argument that the plaintiff cannot recover because the negligence of the defendants (conceding that they were negligent as alleged in the petition) was not the proximate cause of the injury done to the plaintiff. In view of the decision of this court in the case of Southern R. Co. v. Webb, 116 Ga. 157, 59 L. R. A. 109, 42 S. E. 395, we are not prepared to say that the failure of the liable. It was claimed that, as the bridge was not the property of the plaintiff, but of the county, the action could not be maintained; but the court said that the wrong was done to the plaintiff, and not to the county, and consisted in putting the plaintiff in a situation where he was bound to rebuild, and it was the cost of the rebuilding that was the measure of his damages, and with the damages thus sought to be recovered the county had nothing to do.

The advent of electricity as a motive power, and the means of its transmission as such, are comparatively recent, but large industries which could scarcely have existed but for it, in which vast interests are involved, are in successful operation by means of it. In view of which, what was said by the judge who delivered the opinion of the court in Hundley v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 105 Ky. 162, 63 L. R. A. 289, 88 Am. St. Rep. 298, 48 S. W. 429, would seem not to be inappropriate in connection with the subject here considered, viz.: "As the population of the country increases, as the business and commercial industries multiply, . . . thus facilitating the conduct of the business, the pursuit of occupations and callings, and the promotion of the social and political intercourse of the world, courts are called upon to apply familiar principles to new questions; if none seem to be applicable, to enunciate a just rule, suited to the state of facts before it, and for future application to similar facts. It can never be said that the novelty of a complaint is an objection to the action."

The statement by the court in BYRD v. ENGLISH, that it was "not prepared to say that the failure of the power in the plaintiff's place of business was not such a result as was reasonably to be anticipated from the alleged tort of the defendants in so excavating the lot on which they were at work that the conduits containing the electric wires were broken, and the current interrupted,"—would seem to be an admission that the defendants were bound to know that the effect of their negligence would be just what it actually was,—the destruction of the plaintiff's power and the consequent stoppage of, and, therefore, injury to, his business; and also, indirectly that the cause of such injury was proximate and direct. How and where the power was obtained, by whom and under what circumstances it was furnished, and the nature or character of the contract by which it was furnished, can hardly be said to be of concern to the wrongdoer,—its negligent destroyer. If the wrongdoer was negligent in breaking the wires, and was thereby made liable to their owner for the resulting injury to his property interests therein, and if he could reasonably have foreseen that the result of his negligence would be, not merely the breaking of the wires and the damage to their owner, but the interruption of the business to which they supplied power and the consequent damage to its owner, he must be equally liable to each of the parties so damaged, unless he owed a duty to the one which he did not owe to the other. But the duty which he owed to the owner of the wires was only the ordinary duty to use reasonable care to avoid injuring another's property, and there can be no basis in reason for contending that this duty was not owed to the owner of the business as much as to the owner of the wires.

The ownership of the wires does not seem to be a material fact with respect to the duty which the wrongdoer owed to the people damaged by his act. If the proprietor of the business in which the electricity was used had owned the wires the only difference would have been that the trivial cost of mending or replacing the broken wire would have been added to his damage. It is not easy to see how the duty of the wrongdoer to avoid causing injury to his property and business would have been in any degree changed. Again, the proprietor of the business, though he did not own the wires, might, by his contract, be obliged to keep them in good repair and replace them when necessary; so that, even with respect to the broken wires themselves, he would be the only party injured. In any such case it seems plain that it would be the duty of the negligent wrongdoer to avoid injury to either of the per-power in the plaintiff's place of business was not such a result as was reasonably to be anticipated from the alleged tort of the defendants in so excavating the lot on which they were at work that the conduits containing the electric wires were broken, and the current interrupted. There is another view, also presented by counsel for defendants in error, which, if correct, settles beyond doubt that the court below was right in sustaining the general demurrer to the petition. It will be borne in mind that this is not an action for an injury to the person or property of the plaintiff. It is not claimed that the defendants have violated any contractual duty owed to the plaintiff. Their duty to the public in performing the work in which they were engaged was to do it in such manner as not to negligently injure the person or property of anyone. According to this petition the damage done by them was to the property of the Georgia Electric Light Company, who were under contract to the plaintiff to furnish him with electric power, and the resulting damage done to the plaintiff was that it was rendered impossible for that company to comply with its contract. If the plaintiff can recover of these defendants upon this cause of action, then a customer of his, who was injured by the delay occasioned by the stopping of his work, could also recover from them, and one who had been damaged through his delay could in turn hold them liable, and so on without limit to the number of persons who might recover on account of the injury done to the property of the company owning the conduits. To state such a proposition is to demonstrate its absurdity. The plaintiff is suing on account of an alleged tort by reason of which he was deprived of a supply of electric power with which to operate his printing establishment. What was his right to that power supply? Solely the right given him by virtue of his contract with the Georgia Electric Light Company, and with that contract the defendants are not even remotely connected. If, under the terms of his contract, he is precluded from recovering from the electric light company, that is a matter between themselves, for which the defendants certainly cannot be held responsible. They are, of course, liable to the company for any wrong that may have been done it, and the damages recoverable on that account might well be held to include any sums which the company was compelled to pay in damages to its customers; but the customers themselves cannot go against the defendants to recover on their own account for the injury done the company. A case in point, which well illustrates the principle governing the one now under consideration, is that of Dale v. Grant, 34 N. J. L. 142, where it was held that "a party who, by contract, is entitled to all the articles to be manufactured by an incorporated company, he (such party) furnishing the raw materials, cannot maintain an action against a wrongdoer, who, by a trespass, stops the machinery of such company, so that it is prevented from furnishing, under said contract, manufactured goods to as great an extent as it otherwise would have done." In the opinion (p. 149, 34 N. J. L.) the court says: "The law does not attempt to give full rep-sons whom he could see that his act would directly and necessarily damage.

The proposition that one who causes injury to the property rights of two or more other persons at the same time, by the same act, is equally liable to each of them for the resulting damage to his property, if the damage to each of them must have been equally foreseen and was in each case the direct and proximate result of the negligent act, seems so clearly reasonable and just as to need no argument. A great variety of cases may easily be suggested in which the law unquestionably holds that a liability for negligence which exists toward one of several injured persons extends to each of the others, although they may have stood in different relations to the particular thing on which, or through which, the wrongful act operated, if their damages could have been equally foreseen, and were equally a direct and proximate result of the negligence. For instance, if one negligently frightens a horse, causing a runaway which damages the horse and a vehicle containing several persons, who are injured at the same time, it can hardly be questioned that liability for his negligence will extend, not only to the owner of the damaged horse and conveyance, but also to each of the persons injured, though one may be the owner, another a friend riding with him 64 L. R. A.

by invitation, and still another a passenger for hire. If that be true, the defendant in the case above was justly liable to the owner of the business which was injured, as much as to the owner of the broken wires. The proposition stated above is not controverted or considered in the case of BYRD v. ENGLISH. The court in that case proceeded on the assumption that the injury to the plaintiff's business was not a direct result of the defendant's negligence, and that this damage resulted indirectly by preventing the performance of a contract by which the owner of the wires agreed to supply the electricity for the business. This assumption seems to be clearly erroneous. The contract itself contained an exemption from liability for accidental interruptions to the supply. There was, therefore, no breach of contract, but a direct injury to the business by cutting off its supply of light and power. The same tort damaged the property of the owner of the wires by breaking them, and damaged the property of the proprietor of the business by cutting off its supply of light and power. If, as the court intimates, the latter result, as well as the former, was reasonably to be anticipated by the wrongdoer, it seems clear that the ordinary and simple principles of the law of negligence should create a liability for damages equally to each of the parties injured. P. H. V.

aration to all parties injured by a wrong committed. If this were so, all parties holding contracts, if such exist, under the plaintiffs, who may have been injuriously affected by the conduct of the defendants, would be entitled to a suit. It is only the proximate injury that the law endeavors to compensate. The more remote comes under the head of damnum absque injuria." So, also, in Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. New York & N. H. R. Co. 25 Conn. 265, 65 Am. Dec. 571, it is held that, where one person has contract relations with another, an injury to the latter, which affects disastrously those relations, does not constitute a legal injury to the former. From the opinion delivered by Storrs, J., we quote the following very pertinent remarks: "Such are the complications of human affairs, so endless and far-reaching the mutual promises of man to man in business and in matters of money and property, that rarely is a death produced by human agency which does not affect the pecuniary interest of those to whom the deceased was bound by contract. To open the door of legal redress to wrongs received through the mere voluntary and factitious relation of a contractor with the immediate subject of the injury would be to encourage collusion and extravagant contracts between men, by which the death of either through the involuntary default of others might be made a source of splendid profits to the other, and would also invite a system of litigation more portentous than our jurisprudence has yet known." To the same effect, see Anthony v. Slaid, 11 Met. 290; Rockingham Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bosher, 39 Me. 253, 63 Am. Dec. 618; Fowler v. Athens City Waterworks Co. 83 Ga. 220, 20 Am. St. Rep. 313, 9 S. E. 673. It follows from what has been said that the plaintiff's petition did not state a cause of action, and that the general demurrer thereto was properly sustained.

Judgment affirmed.

All the Justices concur except Lumpkin, P. J., absent on account of sickness.

John DOE ex dem. J. A. STEWART et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

H. W. GARRETT, Impleaded, etc.

(.....Ga.....)

*One who purchases a lot in a public

*Headnote by TURNER, J.

NOTE.—For another case in this series as to right to maintain ejectment to recover burial lot, see Hancock v. McAvoy, 18 L. R. A. 781, with note as to what title or interest will support action of ejectment.
64 L. R. A.

cemetery for burial purposes, though the right of interment therein be exclusive, does not acquire any title to the soil, but only a mere easement or license, which will not support an action of ejectment.

(January 15, 1904.)

ERROR to the Superior Court for Muscogee County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action of ejectment to recover possession of a cemetery lot. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Reese Crawford and McNeill & Levy for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Charlton E. Battle, for defendant in error:

The purchaser of a lot in a cemetery, though under a deed absolute in form, does not take any title to the soil. He acquires only a privilege or license to make interments in the lot purchased, or an easement in the property exclusively of others, so long as the ground remains a cemetery.

Civil Code, § 3083; Jacobus v. Congregation of Children of Israel, 107 Ga. 518, 73 Am. St. Rep. 141, 33 S. E. 853; Perley, Mortuary Law, pp. 177, 178, 187; 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 717; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 787-789; Hancock v. McAvoy, 151 Pa. 460, 18 L. R. A. 781, 25 Atl. 47, 31 Am. St. Rep. 774; Kincaid's Appeal, 66 Pa. 411, 5 Am. Rep. 377; Bessemer Land & Improv. Co. v. Jenkins, 111 Ala. 135, 56 Am. St. Rep. 26, 18 So. 565; Hollman v. Platteville, 101 Wis. 94, 70 Am. St. Rep. 899, 76 N. W. 1119.

Such a deed or right to a burial lot in a public cemetery will not support an action of ejectment.

Hancock v. McAvoy, 151 Pa. 460, 18 L. R. A. 781, 25 Atl. 47, 31 Am. St. Rep. 774; 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 717, note 50; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 786, note 1; Perley, Mortuary Law, pp. 177, 178, 187; Adams, Ejectment, *16; Union Petroleum Co. v. Bliven Petroleum Co. 72 Pa. 173.

The rule is not altered by the circumstance that the right of burial is conveyed with the common formula of heirs and assigns forever.

5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 788; Hook v. Joyce, 94 Ky. 450, 21 L. R. A. 96, 22 S. W. 651; Jacobus v. Congregation of Children of Israel, 107 Ga. 521, 73 Am. St. Rep. 141, 33 S. E. 853.

Such an owner of a cemetery lot, while not having a fee to the soil, but only an easement therein, has such an interest as will support an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, since such an action will lie at the instance of one who, though not the holder of the legal title to the fee, has a usufructuary interest in land.

As to adverse possession of burial lot, see, in this series, Hook v. Joyce, 21 L. R. A. 96, and Roumillot v. Gardner, 53 L. R. A. 729.

Jacobus v. Congregation of Children of Israel, 107 Ga. 518, 73 Am. St. Rep. 141, 33 S. E. 853; 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 621, 720; Wright v. Hollywood Cemetery Corp. 112 Ga. 884, 52 L. R. A. 621, 38 S. E. 94.

Turner, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This bill of exceptions was founded upon an action of ejectment brought in the superior court of Muscogee county, for a lot in a cemetery in the city of Columbus, known and distinguished in the plan of said cemetery as lot No. 184 in section or extension of C of said cemetery, "the said tract or parcel of land being a cemetery lot for burial purposes." The action was founded on the several demises of James A. Stewart and others, also of "the city of Columbus," and also of "the mayor and council of the city of Columbus," these two latter demises being framed to cover the different names by which the municipality was designated in the acts of the general assembly. To the petition in this case an abstract of title was appended, the particulars of which need not be set out in full. The defendant filed a general demurrer, the substance of which may be stated in the language of the fourth ground thereof as follows: "Because the petition shows upon its face that the land sued for is a cemetery lot contained in the public cemetery in the city of Columbus, known as 'Linwood cemetery,' and, said tract or parcel of land being, as described in said petition, a cemetery lot for burial purposes, the right and title of the plaintiffs, if any, in such property, is not of such a character as will support an action of ejectment, the right of burial in such cemetery lot being merely a license, or at best an easement, in said property, and ejectment will not lie for the recovery of a license or an easement." The court below sustained the demurrer and dismissed the case. The plaintiffs excepted in due form, and brought the case to this court.

The question is whether an action of ejectment will lie for the recovery of a tract or parcel of land averred to be a cemetery lot for burial purposes. The courts in many of the states have held that the purchaser of a lot in a public cemetery, though under a deed absolute in form, does not take any title to the soil, but that he acquires only a privilege or license to make interments in the lot purchased, exclusively of others, so long as the ground remains a cemetery. See the cases collected in 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 64 L. R. A.

1717. And there would seem to be good reason for holding that, when a cemetery lot is conveyed for burial purposes, it cannot be devoted to any other use, whatever may be the form of the conveyance. In the case of Jacobus v. Congregation of Children of Israel, 107 Ga. 518, 73 Am. St. Rep. 141, 33 S. E. 853, the same being styled an "equitable petition," this court held that even punitive damages could be recovered for an unlawful interference with a cemetery lot; and Mr. Justice Fish, reasoning upon the case, used this language (p. 521, 107 Ga., p. 43, 73 Am. St. Rep., p. 854, 33 S. E.): "As a general rule, one who purchases and has conveyed to him a lot in a public cemetery does not acquire the fee to the soil, but only the easement or license of burial therein." The opinion then proceeds to cite an array of authorities to the effect that damages may be recovered from any person who wrongfully trespasses upon, desecrates, or invades the burial lot of another. And, in a proper case, the courts will, by injunction, restrain a trespass upon a burial lot. See 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. 720, and authorities cited.

The case of the New York Bay Cemetery Co. v. Buckmaster, 49 N. J. L. 449, 9 Atl. 591, cited by counsel for the plaintiffs in error, on examination does not seem to support his view that one who has the right of burial in a cemetery lot can maintain an action of ejectment against another who wrongfully enters thereon. While the deed under consideration in that case recited that the premises were to be had and held for the uses of sepulture only, and for no other uses whatever, the law of New Jersey (P. L. 1850, p. 194) required the cemetery company to grant the fee to the purchasers of lots, and for that reason the court held that an action of ejectment would lie for the recovery of the lot. We have also examined the other cases cited by the able counsel for the plaintiffs in error, but we have not found them sufficient to overcome the great weight of authority which supports the view which we have adopted.

In the present case the parcel of land sought to be recovered being averred to be a cemetery lot for burial purposes, any conveyances upon those terms would carry only a limited use or an easement. Such a use is also sometimes called a mere license. To recover such an easement or license, an action of ejectment will not lie. Adams, Ejectment, *16; Perley, Mortuary Law, pp. 177, 178, 187; 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 717, note 50; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 474; Union Petroleum Co. v. Bliven Petroleum Co. 72 Pa. 173; Hancock v. Mo-Avoy, 151 Pa. 460, 18 L. R. A. 781, 31 Am. St. Rep. 774, 25 Atl. 47. If for any public reason the disestablishment of a cemetery is necessary, the police power is adequate. It may be added that, while the action of ejection has its uses, its quaint fictions and devices do not seem appropriate to the ascertainment of any right in a burial lot. If any fiction is pardonable in a case of this kind, it would be fitter to hold that the fee in these sacred premises belongs to the dead. Within these hallowed precincts no court would desire to send the sheriff with a writ of possession. This instinct of humanity is loyalty to a statute impressed upon all hearts. Its influence is not confined to the weak and ignorant. The plaintive appeal which marks the grave of Shakespeare is said to have been inspired by his fear of a removal of his bones to a charnel house:

"Good friend, for Jesus' sake forbear
To dig the dust enclosed here."

Judgment affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

LOUISIANA SUPREME COURT.

Alicia HEBERT

v.

LAKE CHARLES ICE, LIGHT, & WATER-WORKS COMPANY, Limited, Appt.

(.....La.....)

*1. A wire of an electrical company, detached from the poles and lying in the streets of a town, is, of course, out of place, and those having control of it and charged with the legal duty of taking due care of it have the burden of accounting for its being found in that condition and situation, and to show that it was not due to its negligence.

2. It is the absolute duty of an electric light company conveying electricity by overhead wires strung through the streets of a city to keep its wires constantly insulated so as to be prepared to guard against the effect of objects coming in contact with them regardless of the facts and causes which may bring about the contact.

3. The facts that a telephone company may have strung its wires above those of the electric light company already in position, and should have taken no steps to guard against the coming in contact of the wires of the two companies at the crossing points, and that in stringing its wires it did so, so negligently and loosely that one of its wires fell, in a storm, upon an uninsulated wire below, causing it to burn and fall on the street, are no excuse to the electric company in not having performed its own duty of additional and special precautions in the premises. A fault on the part of the telephone company did not relieve it from the consequence of its own fault. The falling of the telephone wire on the wire below would have been attended with no disaster but for the uninsulated condition of the latter, and that condition is to be attributed as the proximate cause of the death of the husband and father of the plaintiffs.

(November 16, 1903.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Judicial District Court for the Parish of Calcasieu in plaintiff's favor in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged negligent killing of her husband. Modified and affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Pujo & Moss, for appellant:

As between an electric light company and another electrical company, prior authority to occupy, or prior occupation of, the streets will not confer upon such company an exclusive right. A subsequent licensee is under duty so to maintain its wires and lines as not to interfere with the rights of the prior occupant of the streets, properly to maintain and operate its lines and to transact the business it is authorized by its franchise to transact.

Joyce, Electric Law, § 516.

The proximate cause of the injury was the falling of the telegraph and telephone wire upon the live trolley wire.

*Headnotes by NICHOLLS, Ch. J.

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to presumption of negligence in case of injury from broken or fallen electric wires, see Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Simpson, 31 L. R. A. 536, and note; Snyder v. Wheeling Electrical Co. 39 L. R. A. 499; Boyd v. Portland General Electric Co. 57 L. R. A. 619; and Newark Electric Light & P. Co. v. Buddy, 57 L. R. A. 624.

As to liability for injuries by electric wires in highways generally, see City Electric Street R. Co. v. Conery, 31 L. R. A. 570; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 31 L. R. A. 572; Mitchell v. Charleston Light & P. Co. 31 L. R. A. 577; McKay v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. 64 L. R. A.

Co. 31 L. R. A. 589; Huber v. La Crosse City R. Co. 31 L. R. A. 583; Suburban Electric Co. v. Nugent, 32 L. R. A. 700; Atlanta Consol. Street R. Co. v. Owings, 33 L. R. A. 798; Newark Electric Light & P. Co. v. Carden, 37 L. R. A. 725; Bergin v. Southern New England Teleph. Co. 39 L. R. A. 192; Gannon v. Laclede Gaslight Co. 43 L. R. A. 505; Mooney v. Luzerne, 40 L. R. A. 811; Brush Electric Light & P. Co. v. Lefevre, 49 L. R. A. 771; Boyd v. Portland General Electric Co. 52 L. R. A. 509; Thomas v. Maysville Gas Co. 53 L. R. A. 147.

Albany v. Watervliet Turnp. & R. Co. 76 Hun, 136, 27 N. Y. Supp. 848.

The storm was the proximate cause of the damages sustained, and defendant is not liable.

Keasbey, Electric Wires, § 236; Crowell, Electricity, § 250, p. 220; Joyce, Electric Law, § 450; Boyd v. Portland Electric Co. 37 Or. 567, 52 L. R. A. 511, 62 Pac. 378; Mitchell v. Charleston Light & P. Co. 45 S. C. 146, 31 L. R. A. 578, 22 S. E. 767.

When two causes co-operate to produce the damage resulting from a legal injury, the proximate cause is the originating and efficient cause which sets the other cause in motion.

Lafayette v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. 40 La. Ann. 861, 4 Sp. 875; Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256; Blythe v. Denver & R. G. R. Co. 15 Colo. 333, 11 L. R. A. 617, 22 Am. St. Rep. 403, 25 Pac. 702.

Messrs. McCoy & Moss, for appellee:

Every act whatever of man that causes damage to another obliges him by whose fault it happens to repair it. The survivors may recover the damages sustained by them by the death of the parent, or child, or husband, or wife, as the case may be.

Civil Code, art. 2315; Clairain v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 40 La. Ann. 178, 3 So. 625.

Electricity is the most dangerous force known to man, and those who make merchandise of it are bound to use the utmost degree of care in the construction, maintenance, and operation of plants generating that deadly agency, consistent with the practical operation of a lawful business.

Clements v. Louisiana Electric Light Co. 44 La. Ann. 692, 16 L. R. A. 43, 32 Am. St. Rep. 348, 11 So. 51; Potts v. Shreveport Belt R. Co. 110 La. 1, 34 So. 103; Mitchell v. Raleigh Electric Co. 129 N. C. 166, 55 L. R. A. 398, 85 Am. St. Rep. 735, 39 S. E. 801; Joyce, Electric Law, § 445; Fitzgerald v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 200 Pa. 540, 86 Am. St. Rep. 732, 50 Atl. 161; Jones v. Union R. Co. 18 App. Div. 267, 46 N. Y. Supp. 321; Caglione v. Mount Morris Electric Light Co. 56 App. Div. 191, 67 N. Y. Supp. 660; Wittleder v. Citizens' Electric Illuminating Co. 47 App. Div. 410, 62 N. Y. Supp. 297; Schweitzer v. Citizens' General Electric Co. 21 Ky. L. Rep. 608, 52 S. W. 830; Keasbey, Electric Wires, §§ 238-254.

Where an individual or a corporation owns and operates an electric-light plant, generating a high tension current of electricity, conveying it by means of overhead wires along the streets of a town or city, and it is shown that a traveler upon one of the streets came in contact with one of its wires lying upon the sidewalk and was killed thereby, he being without contributory fault, 64 L. R. A.

the burden of proof is thrown upon defendant to show that the wire was in the street without negligence on its part. Otherwise it will be liable for damages. Res ipsa loquitur.

Boyd v. Portland Electric Co. 37 Or. 567, 52 L. R. A. 509, 62 Pac. 378; 2 Jaggard, Torts, 864; Joyce, Electric Law, § 606; Keasbey, Electric Wires, 2d ed. § 271; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 82 Md. 293, 31 L. R. A. 572, 51 Am. St. Rep. 464, 33 Atl. 763; Haynes v. Raleigh Gas Co. 114 N. C. 203, 26 L. R. A. 810, 41 Am. St. Rep. 786, 19 S. E. 344; Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Simpson, 21 Colo. 371, 31 L. R. A. 566, 41 Pac. 499; Moran v. Corlies Steam Engine Co. 21 R. I. 396, 45 L. R. A. 267, 43 Atl. 874; Trenton Pass. R. Co. v. Cooper, 60 N. J. L. 219, 38 L. R. A. 637, 64 Am. St. Rep. 592, 37 Atl. 730; Snyder v. Wheeling Electrical Co. 43 W. Va. 661, 39 L. R. A. 499, 64 Am. St. Rep. 922, 28 S. E. 733; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 512, 513, notes; Bigelow, Torts, 596; Wharton, Neg. § 241; Cooley, Torts, 799; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 60; Clairain v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 40 La. Ann. 182, 3 So. 625.

Where two corporations are shown to have caused, or contributed by their combined negligence to, the commission of a tort they are liable in solido for damages flowing therefrom.

Cline v. Crescent City R. Co. 41 La. Ann. 1031, 6 So. 851; Cline v. Crescent City R. Co. 43 La. Ann. 327, 26 Am. St. Rep. 187, 9 So. 122; Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. New York Gas & Electric Light Co. 27 Neb. 284, 43 N. W. 126; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. § 122; Kain v. Smith, 80 N. Y. 458; Roberts v. Johnson, 58 N. Y. 613; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 466.

The primary object of insulation upon overhead electric wires is protection to life and limb, and economy in operation is a secondary object.

Potts v. Shreveport Belt R. Co. 110 La. 1, 34 So. 103.

Electric-light plants must be maintained at all times in such a sound and safe condition as to withstand such violent storms as may be reasonably anticipated.

1 Am. Elec. Cas. 168; Keasbey, Electric Wires, § 230.

If damage is caused by the defendant's negligence and some other cause for which he is not responsible, including the "act of God" or superior human force directly intervening, the defendant is, nevertheless, responsible, if his negligence is one of the proximate causes of the damage.

Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 39, notes; Woodward v. Aborn, 35 Me. 271, 58 Am. Dec. 699; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Sulphur

Spring Independent School Dist. 96 Pa. 65, 42 Am. Rep. 529; Delisle v. Bourriague, 105 La. 77, 54 L. R. A. 420, 29 So. 731.

A jury's verdict of $8,000 for death of a man twenty-one years of age, earning $32.50 per month where his wife and child are dependent upon his earnings for support, is not excessive, and should not be disturbed.

Curley v. Illinois C. R. Co. 40 La. Ann. 817, 6 So. 103; Myhan v. Louisiana Electric Light & P. Co. 41 La. Ann. 970, 7 L. R. A. 172, 17 Am. St. Rep. 436, 6 So. 799; Le Blanc v. Sweet, 107 La. 369, 90 Am. St. Rep. 303, 31 So. 766.

Nicholls, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff, in her own behalf, as widow of Rosalie Hebert, and as tutrix of their minor child, seeks to obtain judgment against the defendant for $28,031 as damages to herself and to her said child arising from the death of her deceased husband, Rosalie Hebert, occasioned, it is charged, by the fault of the defendant corporation.

She charges that her deceased husband, about 8 o'clock on the evening of December 1, 1901, was standing near the southeast corner of the intersection of Ryan and Mills streets, two public thoroughfares in the city of Lake Charles, and that a slight wind and rain coming up suddenly caused him to seek shelter under the open shed just north of the building occupied by the Lake Charles Carriage & Implement Company, Limited, at the northwest corner of the intersection of said streets; that the darkness being very great while crossing Ryan street in a northwesterly direction, just as he reached the sidewalk on the west side of said street and in front of said building he came in contact with a wire hanging from an electric light pole and lying along the ground, charged with electricity in a careless and negligent manner, and was instantaneously killed thereby; that said wire was a part of the electric-light system owned and operated by the defendant, the Lake Charles Ice, Light, & Waterworks Company, and the wire which electrocuted her husband was carrying and charged with a current of electricity generated by said company; that it was at that time in a rotten and decayed condition, and was stripped of insulation to such an extent as to leave it practically bare; that said dangerous and defective condition existed throughout the said electric-light system,—all of which were facts well known to defendant corporation and its agents, servants, and employees at that time and long prior thereto; that said corporation had been and was at that time guilty of the grossest negligence, and was actively violating its charter and contract with the city of Lake Charles 44 L. R. A.

and the ordinances of said city, in that it had constructed and was then operating and maintaining its electric-light plant in a careless, improper, and dangerous manner; that said dangerous and defective condition of said wires and system and the gross negligence of the defendant company as set forth were the direct, proximate, and sole causes of the death of her husband, and he was not guilty of any act of contributory negligence.

After so charging, plaintiff made allegations usual to such actions, and prayed for trial by jury and judgment.

Defendant answered, pleading, first, the general issue. It admitted that it was the owner of an electric-light system in the city of Lake Charles which it maintained and operated, by means of which it supplied both public and private illumination. It averred that its wires were strung by virtue of the terms of its franchise with the city of Lake Charles, granted in 1891, and its poles located at the direction and under the supervision of the city engineer. That long after the stringing of its wires at the place designated in plaintiff's petition the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Company, in extending its telephone system in the said city, strung its wires at said point above and over those of defendant. That on the night in question, at the place mentioned in plaintiff's petition, one of the wires was burned in two by coming in contact with a wire of said telephone and telegraph company, which caused the severed ends to fall to the ground. Defendant specially denied that the deceased, Rosalie Hebert, came to his death by electrocution therefrom. That on the night it was alleged Hebert came to his death there was a severe tornado or cyclonic disturbance in the city of Lake Charles, which resulted in the loosening and unfastening of a great portion of the wires of the telephone and telegraph company's system, one of them falling upon and coming in contact with the smaller wire of defendant, thereby cutting it in two; and, if any one was responsible for the alleged death of said Hebert, it was the Cumberland Telegraph & Telephone Company, and not respondent.

Defendant specially denied that its electric system was in the condition mentioned, but, on the contrary, it averred that its wires were new, properly insulated, and in good condition. It averred that the claim of the plaintiff was inflated and unfounded in law, even should defendant be responsible, as she sought to recover judgment based upon the earning capacity of the deceased on a life expectancy of forty years, making no allowance for the loss of a day, or for costs of subsistence, illness, or any of the ordinary, usual, and fixed charges of a life, and to that extent plaintiff was endeavoring to enrich herself at the expense of the defendant company; that plaintiff's claim was extortionate and extravagant, inasmuch as defendant's plant had been recently valued at $30,000 by an expert. That defendant's company officers bore no malice against the deceased, and were not even acquainted with him, and his death, if chargeable to defendant, could not be made the basis for exemplary or punitive damages, which, though not declared upon in plaintiff's petition, apparently constituted the item of damages asked. That the night when Hebert came to his death was stormy, dangerous, and tempestuous, and, if he was electrocuted in the manner and form charged,—which was specially denied,—his death was due to his own contributory negligence in being out in the streets and moving from place to place under dangerous conditions, which contributory negligence defendant pleaded in bar of the action.

The jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff individually for the sum of $4,000 and in her capacity as tutrix for $4,000.

The court rendered judgment in conformity to the verdict. After an unsuccessful application for a new trial, defendant appealed.

There can be, in view of the evidence adduced, no contention as to the fact that the deceased, Rosalie Hebert, came to his death by coming in contact with one of the copper wires attached to defendant's electric plant in the town of Lake Charles, which at the time of his doing so was lying in one of the streets of the town, and charged with electricity generated at defendant's power house, which was sufficient in strength to kill, and which in fact did kill, him. Such a wire of an electric company, detached from the poles, and lying on the streets of a town, is, of course, out of its proper place, and those having control of it and charged with the legal duty of taking due care of it were bound to account for its being found in that condition and situation. See Maus v. Broderick, 51 La. Ann. 1153, 25 So. 977.

The defendant company was not only charged by general law with the duty of seeing that its wires were so placed and so kept, as to injure no one, but it was accorded by the town authorities the privilege or right of stringing its wires on its streets upon the express condition that it should use the utmost precautions in this respect. An examination of the issue in this case must commence with the recognition of an absolute duty on the part of the corporation of protection to the public from things belonging to it or in its custody by due care. The obligation we here refer to is especially emphasized in the case of the owners of buildings and in a more general manner referred to in articles 666, 667, and 670 of the Civil Code, and in the legal maxim, Sic utere.

Plaintiff's counsel contends that, where an individual or corporation owns and operates an electrical-light plant generating a high current of electricity, conveying it by means of overhead wires along the streets of a town or city, and it is shown that a traveler upon one of the streets came in contact with one of its wires lying upon the sidewalk and was killed thereby, he being without contributory negligence, the burden of proof is upon it to show that the wire was without negligence on its part (res ipsa loquitur); and in support of that proposition they refer the court to Boyd v. Portland Electric Co. 40 Or. 126, 57 L. R. A. 619, 66 Pac. 576; 2 Jaggard, Torts, 864; Joyce, Electric Law, § 606; Keasbey, Electric Wires, 2d ed. § 271; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 82 Md. 293, 31 L. R. A. 572, 51 Am. St. Rep. 464, 33 Atl. 763; Haynes v. Raleigh Gas Co. 114 N. C. 203, 26 L. R. A. 810, 41 Am. St. Rep. 786, 19 S. E. 344; Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Simpson, 21 Colo. 371, 31 L. R. A. 566, 41 Pac. 499; Moran v. Corliss Steam Engine Co. 21 R. I. 386, 45 L. R. A. 267, 43 Atl. 874; Snyder v. Wheeling Electrical Co. 43 W. Va. 661, 39 L. R. A. 499, 64 Am. St. Rep. 922, 28 S. E. 733; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 512, 513, and notes; Bigelow, Torts, 596; Wharton, Neg. § 241; Cooley, Torts, 799; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 60; Clairain v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 40 La. Ann. 182, 3 So. 625.

We are of the opinion that this proposition is conservative and correct. The owners of electrical machinery are in a much better position to know and be informed as to its situation, when such a condition of things takes place, than would be an entire stranger to its affairs, who, being lawfully upon the street, should have been injured by its wires.

Defendant insists that it has in this case shown everything in defense which it could be called upon to show. It claims that, if there be legal liability to plaintiff by anyone, it is by the Cumberland Telephone Company; that the latter company, when it erected its own poles and strung its wires, found defendant already in position under legal authority, and upon it was imposed the duty of doing everything that should be necessary for the protection of life and property; that it should have strung its wires below that of the defendant, or, if it strung it above them, it should have availed itself of every instrumentality in its power and under its control to guard against the cause of the injury in this case, which it ascribes to the falling of one of the wires of the telephone company upon one of its own and burning it so as to make it fall.

For the purposes of this case it may be conceded that defendant correctly states the duty of the Cumberland Telephone Company under the circumstances, but it would by no means follow as a legal consequence that the existence of that duty relieved the defendant company from its own duty in the premises. It should have taken steps itself to relieve the situation from danger, and not have remained inactive simply because some other company had come to have legal obligations to the public imposed upon it. If, after the defendant company placed its poles and strung its wires, new facts or conditions arose, making, in view of them, its first existing status dangerous to the public, it was a mistake on its part to suppose that the changed situation would carry with it no new or increased obligations on its part to the public by way of remedy. If the situation was such as would have enabled it (defendant) to have forced the Cumberland Telephone Company to perform the duty imposed upon it, it should have made use of its power in that direction, or, failing that, it should have applied some proper remedy itself.

The expert witnesses testify that there was an easy remedy at hand for preventing the wires of the two companies coming in contact with each other at the points of crossing; one of which was to erect an extra pole, known as a "span pole," at the point of intersection, and attaching the wire or wires to it by placing upon either one of the wires a piece of insulating material known as "waterproofed wood." Granting that this was exacting on its part more than ought to be called for, the defendant should certainly have placed its own lines in perfect order at the crossing point. If, as appears from evidence adduced by its own witnesses, the lines of the defendant company below this point had the insulation upon it worn off or taken from it by the dragging by the telephone company of its wires over them in the process of its construction or repairs, the injured lines should have been at once repaired, and not allowed to have remained in that dangerous condition. The wires should have been insulated independently of the cause of the defect or the quarter from which it arose. The fact that there were other lines above their own had the effect of increasing their obligations, not of lessening them. One of defendant's witnesses (who did not pretend to be an expert, however) testified that the object of insulation was to prevent the escape of electricity, and that it afforded no protection to life. This is in direct opposition to expert testimony in the record, and to Potts 64 L. R. A.

v. Shreveport Belt R. Co. 110 La. 1, 34 So. 103, where it was stated by this court that the principal object of its use was for that very purpose. If, as the defendant urges, there was danger to its own lines from the presence of the telephone company's lines above and the danger of their falling, it was gross carelessness on its part to have allowed its wires to have remained just below without insulation as long as it did. If the telephone company had a duty to perform, the defendant had one also to perform, and both failed to perform it, and as a consequence of such failure a life was lost. Both corporations were bound in solido, and the fault of one is no excuse for the fault of the other. Defendant seeks to avoid the consequence of its fault by urging that the immediate, direct, and proximate cause of Hebert's death was a most unusually violent storm, which it had no reason to anticipate, which threw down a wire of the telephone company.

Defendant's counsel quote from Keasbey on Electric Wires, 2d ed. § 236, to the following effect: "Where, however, the proximate cause of the injury is an external force for which the company is not responsible, the question of liability will depend on whether the force was one that might reasonably have been anticipated, whether there was negligence in not having the materials strong enough or sound enough to resist it, and whether the injury was the natural and probable consequence of the negligence." An electric light company that has erected its poles and wires in the streets of a municipality with the consent of the proper authorities, is not an absolute insurer against accident therefrom. It is only bound to exercise care and diligence in the erection and maintenance of the system proportionate to the danger, and when it has fulfilled this obligation it has discharged its entire duty, and its liability ceases. In support of this position they cite Croswell, Electricity, § 236; Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Simpson, 21 Colo. 371, 31 L. R. A. 566, 41 Pac. 499; Boyd v. Portland Electric Co. 37 Or. 567, 52 L. R. A. 511, 62 Pac. 378. They quote the supreme court of South Carolina as saying in Mitchell v. Charleston Light & P. Co. 45 S. C. 146, 31 L. R. A. 577, 22 S. E. 767, that "the company is charged with so placing its wires and so keeping them in repair as to withstand the ordinary weather,—rain, heat, cold, and wind. It is alleged on the part of the company that its wire was broken in consequence of a severe wind-storm. Was it an ordinarily windy day, such as is liable to occur at that time of the year, or was it one that could not be anticipated? The law does not require impossibilities. If a cyclone that could not be anticipated or reasonably foreseen was the cause of that wire falling, and the company was not negligent in allowing it to remain there for an unreasonable length of time, then under those circumstances it would not be liable."

In the case at bar the defendant was in default as to the condition of its wires at the point where the accident took place not only as respects extraordinary storms, but as to events likely to happen at any moment from the simplest causes. It was failing, and had for a long time before failed, to have placed matters in such a condition as was required of it affirmatively to do for the public safety, not only by the general law, but as the condition upon which it had been granted the right or privilege of stringing its wires in the public streets. Had its wires been in fact in such a condition as they were required to be at the time of an extraordinary storm, a different case would have been presented to us. The defendant was not required to take extraordinary precautions to meet possible extraordinary future events, but it was expected, if an extraordinary storm should arise, that its wires would protect the public as far as possible,—at least against the effect of the storm. The care and true caution required at the hands of the defendant were not simply the ordinary care of a reasonably prudent man. In the case of Fitzgerald v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. the supreme court of Pennsylvania laid down as the rule applicable to a company like the defendant making use of such a dangerous agency that it was bound to know, not only the extent of the danger, but to use the very highest degree of care practicable to avoid injury to everyone who may be lawfully in proximity to its wires, and liable to come accidentally or otherwise in contact with them. The defendant (the court said), in accord with the common practice of electric companies, recognizes this obligation by insulating its wires; but the duty was not only to make the wires safe by proper insulation, but to keep them so by constant oversight and repairs. 200 Pa. 540, 86 Am. St. Rep. 732, 50 Atl. 161. The same view was taken in Mitchell v. Raleigh Electric Co. 129 N. C. 166, 55 L. R. A. 398, 85 Am. St. Rep. 735, 39 S. E. 801, where it was said: "Its association [of such a company] is with [apparently] the most inoffensive and harmless piece of mechanism, if wire can be classified as such, in common use. In adhering to the wire, it gives no warning or knowledge of its deadly presence. Vision cannot detect it. It is without color, motion, or body. Latent, and without sound, it exists, and, being odorless, the only means of its discovery lie in the senses of feeling communicated through the touch, which, as soon as done, becomes its victim. In behalf of human life and the safety of mankind generally, it behooves those who would profit by the use of this subtle and violent element of nature to exercise the greatest degree of care and constant vigilance in inspecting and maintaining the wires in perfect condition." To the same effect are the expressions of this court in Potts v. Shreveport Belt R. Co. 110 La. 1, 34 So. 103, and also Joyce on Electric Law, § 445.

Plaintiff maintains that, if damage is caused by the defendant's negligence and some other cause for which he is not responsible, including "the act of God," or superior human force directly intervening, the defendant is nevertheless responsible if his negligence is one of the proximate causes of the damage. Also, where the negligence of a defendant contributes so directly to the plaintiff's damage that it is reasonably certain that the other cause alone would not have been sufficient to produce it, the defendant is liable, notwithstanding he may not have anticipated or been bound to anticipate the interference of the superior force, which, concurring with his own negligence, produced the damage; that, negligence of a defendant resulting in damage to the plaintiff having been shown to exist prior to the existence of a storm, the burden is upon it to show that the damage would have occurred even had there been no negligence on its part; that, to escape liability under a plea of vis major, the defendant must show that it is free from contributory fault. In support of this position the court is referred to Shearn & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 39, and cases there cited; Woodward v. Aborn, 35 Me. 271, 58 Am. Dec. 699; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Sulphur Spring Independent School Dist. 96 Pa. 65, 42 Am. Rep. 529; Delisle v. Bourriague, 105 La. 77, 54 L. R. A. 420, 29 So. 731.

Granting, in the case at bar, that the storm which occurred on December 1, 1902, at Lake Charles, was of such unusual severity as to have caused most unexpectedly the falling of one of the wires of the telephone company, what would have been the effect of the storm, and the result of such falling, under existing circumstances, had defendant's wires been insulated? The testimony adduced goes to show that the telephone wire would have lain in contact with defendant's wire perfectly harmless, and the plaintiff's intestate would have been alive to-day, but that the telephone wire falling upon defendant's uninsulated wire burned it almost immediately in two, and instantly killed plaintiff's husband.

We cannot give, under the existing conditions, to the storm referred to, the defensive force which defendant attaches to it. We think that notwithstanding the storm, and notwithstanding the falling of the telephone wire, Hebert would not have been killed had not at the moment of his death the telephone wire come in contact with a live wire of the defendant company which had been negligently left by it for some time before without proper insulation; and therefore the defendant company must bear the consequence of not only its negligence, but of its fault. The case was tried by a jury of the vicinage. Their verdict was sustained by the district judge. The jury, the judge, and the attorneys all viewed the place at which the accident occurred, and were in position to apply the evidence to the situation much better than this court could. We would not be justified in setting the verdict aside unless we were satisfied it was clearly wrong; and that we are not.

Defendant urges upon us that the amount of the verdict is too large, and it presents to us for our consideration the fact that the corporation has paid no dividend, and is heavily in debt. The extent of its indebtedness is not disclosed, but the value of its property is shown to exceed $125,000.

The plaintiffs are entitled to be paid from that property, to the extent that they have a legal claim, as fully as any other creditor, and they should not be postponed on account of others. So far as the want of means may have been advanced in extenuation of the failure of the defendant to have placed and kept its wires in legal condition, the position is not well founded. A corporation undertaking to carry on a business as dangerous as that in which the defendant is engaged must be prepared to meet the legal requirements of the situation from the beginning. It cannot be permitted to work its way forward to a safe condition, and in the meantime subject the public to danger to life and limb. The state does not guarantee the stockholders of a corporation that their investment shall be a paying one, nor does it protect a corporation from being forced, either by direct authority of the state, or indirectly through the execution of judgments of courts, to place the property in the condition which safety and the rights of the public demand, even though the effect of so doing will be to cause loss to the parties in interest. It is entitled to exact justice, with discrimination neither for nor against it.

The deceased was about twenty-one years of age. He had been married about eighteen months. He left a widow, who, so far as the record shows, is without means of support. She has one child, issue of the marriage, born after the father's death. The deceased was a man of small means, gaining his livelihood partly by farming upon a small tract of rented land, partly as a laborer in the field. His earnings are shown not to have exceeded $40 per month. He was a man in good health, sober and industrious. His expectancy of life under the mortality tables was forty years. In addition to want of actual support for the future for herself and child, she has lost the companionship and affection of her husband. The elements which go to fix the quantum of damages in such a case are difficult of ascertainment, but it is none the less the duty of the court to fix the amount as best it may in the exercise of a sound discretion. The mortality tables are simply an assistance to the court by way of estimate or approximation. They have no absolute probative force. They may properly be referred to by insurance companies in making their contracts, but judgments of court cannot be based absolutely upon them. The earning power of the deceased would have had to be exercised throughout a long number of years, and under numberless contingencies. We think, in consideration of all the facts of this case, that the verdict of the jury was for too large an amount. It should be reduced to the sum of $3,000 in favor of the plaintiff individually and $3,000 in her capacity as tutrix.

For the reasons herein assigned the amount of damages awarded by the jury is hereby reduced to $6,000. The judgment of the court rendered on the verdict is correspondingly reduced to $6,000 as above stated. As so reduced and amended, the judgment appealed from is affirmed, at the costs of the plaintiff and appellee.

Petition for rehearing overruled January 18, 1904.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

BALTIMORE UNIVERSITY of Baltimore City, Appt.,

v.

George S. COLTON.

(.....Md.....)

1. A law school cannot dismiss a student, or refuse to permit him to graduate, for irregularity in attendance, where its custom, as understood at the time of his matriculation, was that all that was necessary for graduation was payment of the required fees and completion of the work, to accomplish which the student might take such time as was needed.
2. Mandamus will lie to compel the reinstatement of a student wrongfully expelled from a law school without notice.
3. An action for breach of contract is not an adequate remedy for the wrongful expulsion of a student from a law school, thereby depriving him of the opportunity of obtaining a diploma and degree to which, under his contract, he is entitled.
4. The existence of an equitable remedy will not defeat a right to a writ of mandamus.

(February 19, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from an order of the Baltimore City Court awarding a writ of mandamus to compel the reinstatement of petitioner as a student in the defendant University. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George A. Solter and Albert S. J. Owens for appellant.

Mr. S. Gross Horwitz, for appellee:

When there is a uniform and well-established usage, it shapes the contract of the parties, and it serves as a guide to its true meaning and understanding.

Lyon v. George, 44 Md. 300.

A usage, or habit of trade, of an individual or a corporation, known to a third party, is of binding force and effect, in all contracts between them.

Merriam v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co. 20 Conn. 354, 52 Am. Dec. 344; Loring v. Gurney, 5 Pick. 15; Norris v. Fowler, 87 N. C. 9; Knapp v. United States & C. Exp. Co. 55 N. H. 348; Fowler v. Brantly, 14 Pet. 318, 10 L. ed. 473; Renner v. Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. 581, 6 L. ed. 166; Bank of Columbia v. Magruder, 6 Harr. & J. 180, 14 Am. Dec. 271; Montgomery & E.

R. Co. v. Kolb, 73 Ala. 396, 49 Am. Rep. 54; 2 Greenl. Ev. § 251; Corbett v. Underwood, 83 Ill. 324, 25 Am. Rep. 392; Gibson v. Culver, 17 Wend. 305, 31 Am. Dec. 297; Hooper v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 27 Wis. 81, 9 Am. Rep. 439.

It would be quite competent for the university to agree that, in consideration of $100, instruction should be delivered to the petitioner for the entire residue of his life. The court will never concern itself with the adequacy of the consideration for a contract.

Foster v. Ulman, 64 Md. 526, 3 Atl. 113; Citizens' Trust & Deposit Co. v. Tompkins, 97 Md. 182, 54 Atl. 619.

Had the university engaged to allow the petitioner both to attend classes until he should be able to graduate, and also to postpone payment of the tuition fees until he had passed in all branches, there would be no such indefiniteness or want of mutuality as to avoid the contract.

Pistel v. Imperial Mut. L. Ins. Co. 88 Md. 552, 43 L. R. A. 219, 42 Atl. 210; Crooker v. Holmes, 65 Me. 195, 20 Am. Rep. 687; Bagby v. Walker, 78 Md. 247, 27 Atl. 1033.

The contract in this case does not fall within that class of contracts in which non-payment of an instalment of money by one party entitles the other party to declare the contract rescinded.

Curtis v. Gibney, 59 Md. 131; McGrath v. Gegner, 77 Md. 331, 39 Am. St. Rep. 415, 26 Atl. 502.

Where mutual covenants go to the whole consideration on both sides, they are mutual conditions, the one precedent to the other; but where the covenants go only to a part, there a remedy lies on the covenant to recover damages for the breach of it; but it is not a condition precedent.

Ritchie v. Atkinson, 10 East, 306; Fothergill v. Walton, 8 Taunt. 582; Carpenter v. Cresswell, 4 Bing. 411; Davidson v. Gwynne, 12 East, 389.

In this contract the covenant to pay in instalments is an independent covenant, a breach of which affords, not the right to rescind, but only the right to sue.

Franklin v. Miller, 4 Ad. & El. 605.

Failing to rescind during the nineteen months in which the money was to be paid,

NOTE.—For a case in this series holding that mandamus will lie to reinstate a pupil in school if the action of the officers by whom a pupil was refused continuance in the school was arbitrary or capricious, see Jackson v. State, 42 L. R. A. 792.

As to right of court to review question of guilt 64 L. R. A.

or innocence of pupil expelled from public schools, see Board of Education v. Booth, 53 L. R. A. 787.

As to right to exclude, suspend, or expel pupils generally, see note to Board of Education v. Purse, 41 L. R. A. 593.

the university obviously elected to hold the petitioner to the contract, and could not rescind afterwards.

Powell v. Bradlee, 9 Gill & J. 220.

Matriculation, or admission to membership in a university, confers certain franchises. It entitles the student to contract for such lectures as he may desire to attend. He is not obliged to attend in any mode other than may be agreeable to his own pleasure. He may remain forever at the university if he desires, and he may attend only such lectures as he pleases. The interpretation of the word "matriculate" is for the court.

Uphur v. Baltimore, 94 Md. 748, 51 Atl. 953.

No expulsion can be decreed until after charges are preferred and an opportunity given to the member to defend.

Denver Chamber of Commerce v. Green, 8 Colo. App. 424, 47 Pac. 140; Medical & Surgical Soc. v. Weatherly, 75 Ala. 248; Com. v. Pennsylvania Beneficial Inst. 2 Serg. & R. 141.

Mandamus is the true remedy.

Rea v. Askew, 4 Burr. 2186; Conner v. Groh, 90 Md. 684, 45 Atl. 1024; Hardcastle v. Maryland & D. R. Co. 32 Md. 35.

Having in four years passed in all subjects, two only excepted, petitioner is entitled to his diploma upon passing in the two subjects remaining; and mandamus is the proper remedy.

People ex rel. Cecil v. Bellevue Hospital Medical College, 60 Hun, 107, 14 N. Y. Supp. 490, Affirmed in 128 N. Y. 621, 28 N. E. 253; Jackson v. State, 57 Neb. 183, 42 L. R. A. 792, 77 N. W. 662; Com. ex rel. Hill v. McCauley, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 77; Com. ex rel. Fischer v. German Soc. 15 Pa. 251; King v. University of Cambridge, 1 Strange, 557; Com. v. Pennsylvania Beneficial Inst. 2 Serg. & R. 141; Medical & Surgical Soc. v. Weatherly, 75 Ala. 248; Hardcastle v. M. & D. R. Co. 32 Md. 35; People ex rel. Gray v. Medical Soc. 24 Barb. 570; Ang. & A. Priv. Corp. § 420; Clarke v. Bishop, 2 Strange, 1082; Weber v. Zimmerman, 23 Md. 45.

Fowler, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

George S. Colton was a student at the law school of the Baltimore University. The faculty notified him at the close of the session of 1900-1901 that they would not permit him to take the final examinations, and refused to consider him as a candidate for graduation, whereupon he filed in the Baltimore city court a petition for mandamus against the Baltimore University. The petition alleges that the defendant university duly organized and established the law school, and that the rules adopted for the government and regulation of said school provided that no preliminary examination should be required for matriculation; that students should be admitted without distinction of sex; that the matriculation fee should be $5; that the course of study should be divided into branches, junior and senior; that a diploma fee of $20 should be payable on graduation, and that the degree of Bachelor of Laws should be conferred on those students who should pass the intermediate and final examinations, submit the usual theses, and pay the said fees and all tuition fees; that the school was intended to offer special inducements to young men who should desire to occupy themselves in business during the day, and therefore lectures were given wholly during the evening hours; that in the year 1896 the petitioner was a young man, entirely without means, obliged to support himself and assist in the support of his sister by his daily exertions; that, having aspirations for the bar, he resolved to enter the said law school of said university, and to pursue his studies as diligently as the discharge of his other duties might permit; that he did enter said school, was duly matriculated, and attended lectures; that the nominal duration of the course of instruction was two years, but that out of regard to the tax on the time of students busily engaged during the day there was the privilege of attending classes during such length of time as might be required by them to pass in all branches; that the only cash payment was the matriculation fee, and that a uniform usage of the university entitled students to postpone payment of the other charges until graduation; that Howard Bryant, the secretary and treasurer of the said school, notified the petitioner that the entire tuition charge would be $100, which he might pay at any time before graduation; that the sum of $47 on account of tuition fees had been paid by him on the faith of said representations, and that the same had been accepted by said school, the last of said payments being on the 3d of June, 1899; that the petitioner had attended the lectures, and had, down to the year 1900—a period of four years—passed in all subjects there taught except two; that during the session of 1900-1901 a complete change took place in the faculty, but that he continued to attend lectures under the new faculty until May, 1901, when, as we have seen, he was informed he would be no longer recognized as a student, and would not be allowed to graduate; that he made application to the faculty to reinstate him, and offered to pay any sum they might think due by him, but, although no charges had been made against him, his application was refused on the ground that he had not attended lectures, and the faculty did not know him. The defendant answered this petition, admitting that no charges had ever been made against the petitioner; that he had always borne himself courteously and becomingly as a student; that he had offered to pay all sums which might be due by him; that he had been denied the privileges of the law school because he was not known to the faculty, had attended few of their lectures, and had not been regarded by them as a student. The answer denies the existence of the general usage set up in the petition, but admits that it is true that the payment of the tuition fee is sometimes deferred at the request of deserving impecunious students, in the discretion of the faculty, and denies that this privilege was ever afforded to the petitioner. The answer further alleges that the petitioner entered the law school five years ago, and failed to pass the examination; that it was never contemplated by the university that students should pursue their studies piecemeal, and extending over such a long period; that the petitioner abandoned the course of study for several years, and, having failed to pass examinations, and not having paid the tuition due, the writ should not issue. Issue was duly joined, and the case was tried before a jury. After all the evidence was in on both sides, the defendant submitted a prayer asking the court to withdraw the case from the jury. This prayer was refused, and the prayer of the plaintiff was granted. The judgment was against the defendant, and the writ was ordered to issue as prayed. The defendant has appealed.

The defendant excepted to the refusal of its prayer asking the court to withdraw the case from the jury, and it excepted generally and specially to the granting of the plaintiff's prayer, and finally excepted to the overruling of its motion non obstante veredicto not to direct the issuing of the writ. But all these exceptions present substantially the same questions. We will therefore consider the first exception in order, and in doing so we will be compelled to examine all the testimony offered by the plaintiff to ascertain if it is legally sufficient to entitle him to recover. The first witness on the part of the plaintiff was Mr. Howard Bryant, who testified that he was one of the professors of the law school, and its general agent for the purpose of transacting business with the law students and applicants to become such. He was also a director and secretary and treasurer. The plaintiff was matriculated in 1896, and his name appears in the catalogue of the university. The school was for needy young men. If the students did not have the money, and wanted indulgence, that indulgence was given. Student would not be turned away if he failed to graduate in two years, and had the right to remain until he succeeded in passing. Tuition fees were $100, $5 for matriculation, and $20 for diploma. At one time students were allowed, if they could pass all examinations, and had paid all fees, to graduate in one year; but later students were required to attend two years at least. Fees were not increased if the student remained longer than two years. That he, as treasurer, received from the plaintiff in June, 1899, two payments, amounting to $37, on account of tuition. That the old faculty, of which he was a member, resigned in 1900, and the same year the new faculty was appointed; and that, if the plaintiff had passed his examination, and paid the balance of the fees, and was otherwise qualified, we would have graduated him. On cross-examination he said that, if a student matriculated for three years, and did not pass during the three years, he could go on for another year, or possibly two years. "How long he could go on I do not know. There was no rule, but it was understood by the faculty, and the students understood it, I think." The petitioner testified that he matriculated in October, 1896; at that time he was working for the Baltimore Bargain House; that he had nothing except what he worked for; supported himself and afflicted sister; that, wishing to become a lawyer, he called on Mr. Bryant, the agent, etc., of the law school; was informed by him it would cost $125; told him he did not have the money, and he said that was not necessary, just so the money was paid before graduation, and "it made no difference whether I graduated in one, two, or three years, or whenever I graduated; attended lectures up to 1900; had then passed eighteen subjects out of twenty, and had paid $47 on tuition and $5 matriculation fee; then there was trouble and the faculty resigned, and having paid $47, and gone so far through the school, I called on Dr. Biedler, secretary of the university; told him what examinations I had passed, and how much I had paid; he said that was all right, just to remain with the school, and that he would give me credit for my marks and what I had paid, and told me to tell the other students what he had told me, and not to let any of them go to any other school, if possible; gave me a paper that new professors would be appointed; when new professors were appointed and the school opened, went down and started in; received notice from one of the professors, which gave me access to bar library;" attended lectures on subjects on which he was deficient, and also a number of other lectures; at the end of the term was about to take his examination, when one of the professors refused to recognize him, and then, on the 18th May, 1901, received the note from the secretary of the law school informing him that he was not a student of the school; that the usage with reference to duration of the course of studies was that, if you were able to do so, you could graduate in one year, or you could take as long as you wanted; the usage in regard to payment of tuition charges was that they had to be paid before you graduated; that a letter from Mr. Clendinen (which was read) was addressed to the plaintiff to the effect that the former students of the university who continued to prosecute their studies with the then present faculty will be allowed credit for all the marks theretofore awarded, and also credit for all money paid by them to the former faculty. There are several other witnesses who testified as to the usage to allow students to remain until they had graduated. Mr. Fluegel testified that in his class, he being a graduate of the law school, there were some who remained four and four and a half years, and that the usage with reference to the payment of the fees was that the matriculation had to be paid at once, but that the remaining fees could be paid at any time before graduation, because the students were supposed to be men of little means, working in the daytime and studying at night.

During the examination of the plaintiff the defendant produced one of its books containing an agreement signed by the plaintiff, agreeing to become a member of the University Law School for the session 189-, and promising to pay as tuition the sum of $100 and $5 for matriculation. This entry also shows that the plaintiff, at the time he entered, paid the matriculation fee and $5 on account of tuition. The balance of tuition was to be paid at the rate of $5 per month, and all payable before graduation. That is all. There is nothing in reference to the duties to be performed by the school. What it actually did we learn from the testimony,—namely, that the usage was not to exact the payments as prescribed.

If the foregoing testimony be true,—and for the purposes of the question we are considering, namely, its legal sufficiency, that is conceded,—there can be no doubt we think, that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict. It shows that he became a duly matriculated member of the university; that, although there was an agreement on his part to pay the balance of his tuition ($95) in monthly instalments, yet, not only in his case this agreement was waived, but a general usage was established permitting any students to pay at the time of graduation. Not only so, but while it appears that a term consisted of two sessions of nine months each, yet, if a student did not or could not graduate in that time, a general usage was established extending the term three, four, four and a half years, and even longer. The plaintiff testified that one of the faculty said this term might continue ten years, and we find no contradiction of this testimony, although there was ample opportunity to do so; but, whether contradicted or not, its truth is conceded. It was conceded also, by the defendant that it dismissed the plaintiff without making any charges, and without giving him a chance to make any explanation, because he had not been regarded by them as a student, had attended few of the lectures, and was not known to the faculty. The evidence of the plaintiff, however, which is conceded to be true, is that he not only attended all the lectures it was possible for him to attend, but that one of the new professors gave him a card recognizing him as a member of the school, and that he had paid and the defendant had received his money, that no further sum had ever been demanded, but that he had offered to pay any sum the defendant might think he owed. There is nothing, even if we include the testimony of the defendant, to show that irregularity in attending lectures was a cause for expulsion or dismissal. Indeed, the school seems to have been regulated for the convenience of impecunious but ambitious young men who had to work elsewhere during the day, and often at night. And for this reason the usage was established allowing the term to extend three, four, and four and a half, and more years, instead of two years, as originally fixed. It follows, therefore, we think, that the plaintiff was wrongfully dismissed.

Under such circumstances, has he a right to mandamus to be restored to the rights and privileges of membership of the law school, to which, it must be conceded, he was once entitled, and of which he has, it is conceded, been deprived without notice? Of course, if one voluntarily becomes a member of an incorporated society or association whose by-laws provide for expulsion for specified causes, the right of amotion is clearly established in the corporate body and may be duly exercised in the manner and for the purposes prescribed. High, Extr. Legal Rem. 3d ed. § 292. But here there is not only an expulsion without notice, but it does not appear that the de-defendant corporation has ever enacted any by-laws on the subject, or that, if any, they were complied with. Want of notice has always been regarded as sufficient ground for invoking the aid of mandamus in cases of membership in corporations organized for the purpose of business or profit. High, Extr. Legal Rem. § 295. And now it is generally held that the same rule also applies to the restoration to membership in a private corporation when no pecuniary interests are involved (Merrill, Mandamus, §§ 158-167), so that, whether the law school or university be regarded as organized for profit or not, in either case mandamus is the proper remedy. But, in addition to this, it is clear the plaintiff has no other adequate remedy at law. He asks and seeks not damages, but a restoration to his right to attend the school, listen to the lectures, and, finally, to pass the required examinations, and thus obtain a diploma, with the degree of Doctor of Laws. An action for breach of contract cannot, therefore, be considered an adequate remedy. Nor can he have, as suggested, a bill for specific performance, so long as he has an adequate remedy at law, to wit, the writ of mandamus. It is not, however, a sufficient answer that the plaintiff might have redress in a court of equity. Hardcastle v. Maryland & D. R. Co. 32 Md. 35.

From what we have said it follows that the plaintiff's prayer was properly granted, for it merely instructs the jury that, if they believe the testimony, which we have rehearsed in the former part of this opinion, the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict; and, as we have already said, mandamus is the proper remedy.

The motion non obstante rests upon the same grounds the defendant relied on to support its demurrer to the evidence, and these we have already considered.

Order affirmed, with costs to the appellee.

Harry P. DALE, Admr., etc., of Peter W. Dale, Deceased, Appt.,
v.

Huldah Jane BRUMBLY.

(.....Md.....)

1. A fund which has, under the order of the court, been deposited with the clerk does not become subject to attachment by the determination of the one who is enti-

NOTE.—As to garnishment of property in custody of law, see, in this series, Dunsmoor v. Furstenfeldt, 12 L. R. A. 508, and note; Re parte Hurn, 13 L. R. A. 120; Holker v. Hennessey, 39 L. R. A. 105; and Allen v. Gerard, 49 L. R. A. 351.
64 L. R. A.

pled to receive it, and an order of the court that it be paid to him.

2. A clerk of court is a public officer, within the rule that money is not subject to attachment in the hands of such officers.

(January 15, 1904.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Wicomico County dissolving an attachment which had been laid upon the funds in the hands of the clerk of court to satisfy a claim against defendant. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James E. Ellegood for appellant.

Messrs. N. T. Fitch and E. P. Graham, for appellee:

The fund being in the hands of the clerk of the court as such, it is contrary to public policy to permit his being (in the character of garnishee) subjected to annoyances and responsibilities inconsistent with his duties as a public officer.

Wilson v. Ridgely, 46 Md. 235; Baltimore v. Root, 8 Md. 100, 63 Am. Dec. 692.

While the fund was in the hands of the clerk as a public officer, it was nevertheless "money paid into court," and in custodia legis, and not liable to attachment.

Mattingly v. Grimes, 48 Md. 105; 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 212.

In any event, the fund in question, being the proceeds of the endowment certificate to which the appellee is entitled as beneficiary, is exempt from attachment by virtue of the provisions of § 143, act 1894, chap. 295.

Dale v. Brumbly, 96 Md. 674, 54 Atl. 655.

Jones, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case it appears that the appellee is the widow of William Brumbly, and, as such widow, became entitled to a share in the proceeds of an insurance upon the life of the said William Brumbly in the Improved Order of Heptasophs. This insurance money was, in the course of equity proceedings affecting its distribution, in the circuit court for Wicomico county, by an order of that court, deposited with the clerk thereof. The appellant held a judgment against the said William Brumbly and the appellee to the amount of $878.30, with interest from July 3, 1894, and costs. In the progress of these equity proceedings in which the order of the court was passed for the deposit of the money above referred to, an auditor's account was stated, in which there was distributed to the appellee the sum of $922.88.

This auditor's account was ratified by the circuit court for Wicomico county on the 10th day of April, 1903; and on the following day, April 11, 1903, the appellant had issued upon the judgment held by him against the appellee and her deceased husband an attachment, and procured the same to be laid in the hands of the clerk of the court, James T. Truitt, to bind the sum of $922.88 awarded by the auditor's account to the appellee. The order of court ratifying the auditor's account was in these words: "The above audit and distribution is hereby ratified and confirmed, and the clerk of this court is directed to pay over the fund accordingly, dated April 10, 1903," and was duly signed by the judge. Upon motion of the appellee, through her counsel, and after answer to the said motion by the appellant, and hearing upon an agreed statement of facts, in substance the same as those herein set out, the court below, on the 6th of July, 1903, quashed the attachment issued against the appellee, and gave judgment for her for costs. From such judgment this appeal was taken.

Upon behalf of the appellee it is claimed that, at the time of the attachment laid, the money attached was in custodia legis, and exempt from attachment. It is not disputed, as we understand, that money paid into court, as the funds in this case were, pending the adjudication of questions made as to who were entitled to be paid the same, cannot be attached. This was enunciated as the law in the case of Farmers' Bank v. Beaton, 7 Gill & J. 421, 28 Am. Dec. 226 (see p. 428, 7 Gill & J., 28 Am. Dec. 230), and we conceive that to be settled. It is contended on the part of the appellant that this principle or rule of practice does not apply in the circumstances of this case, because, after the rights of the parties had been adjudicated as respected the fund in court, the shares of the several parties in interest ascertained and fixed, the auditor's account by which this was made to appear ratified, and the clerk had been directed to pay out the money accordingly, the share of any distributee of the fund is liable to attachment as if the funds were in the hands of a trustee in equity under a like state of facts. In the case of Mattingly v. Grimes, 48 Md. 102, where real estate was sold by a trustee under the decree passed in the cause, and an auditor's account distributing the funds had been stated and ratified, and an attachment was laid in the hands of the trustee to affect the share of one of the distributees in the fund, it was held expressly that the funds were not liable to the process of attachment, because they had, prior to the attachment, been paid into court under an order to that effect. It then comes back to this: Where was the custody of the fund in controversy here when the attachment in this case was laid? To this there would seem to be but one answer. The custody was certainly with the court up to the time of its direction to the clerk to pay it out. Such direction to the clerk did not, and was not meant to, change the custody of the fund. Any particular part of the fund that the clerk was to pay out was not separated from the whole fund until it was actually being paid over. Until then it was not distinguishable from the whole fund, as respected the custody. The direction to the clerk to pay out the fund did not put it into his possession and control further than it had been prior to such direction. He was to pay it out from the custody in which it was. In other words, he was merely, figuratively speaking, the hand of the court. He may be likened to the official of a bank, who, upon the authorization, either general or special, of the bank, pays out money to a customer who presents a check indicating the amount to be paid. The money is paid from the custody of the bank, and the custody is with the bank until the money paid out is actually segregated from the general funds therein and paid over. The funds to be distributed in a case like this are not held and distributed as are those in the hands of a trustee for a like purpose, and which are paid out under the authority of a decree or decretal order which the court itself cannot change except in some recognized mode of legal procedure. We cannot doubt the authority of the court in such a case as this to recall, if it sees fit, any authorization given to the clerk to pay out the money, and direct the payment in some other mode or by some other agent, or, in case of the temporary disability of the clerk by sickness, or his temporary absence, if it best served the convenience of parties in interest, to recall the direction to the clerk to pay, and direct another mode of payment. We must hold that at the time of the laying of the attachment in this case the money attached was in court, and not liable, therefore, to the process. But more than this, the clerk was a public officer; and while the duty he was in this case performing in respect to the funds in question is not specifically defined in the law as one of his official duties, yet it was by reason of his relations to the court as a public officer that the duty was imposed upon and assumed by him. The case is therefore clearly within the reason of the law which exempts funds in the hands of public officers—if we assume that here the funds in question were in the hands of the clerk—from the process of attachment. In the case of Wilson v. Ridgely, 46 Md. 235, it was held that an attachment laid in the hands of the treasurer of Prince George's county was properly quashed on the ground of his being a public officer, if it were shown that the funds attached were held by him as treasurer. The law creating the office of treasurer for that county provided (Pub. Local Laws, art. 16, § 49, as enacted by Acts 1872, chap. 294, p. 481), that, upon a sale of property being made by the treasurer to enforce the payment of taxes, he should, out of the proceeds of sale, pay the amount of taxes due, etc., "and to pay surplus, if any, to the owner thereof." The attachment in the case was laid in the hands of the treasurer to affect the surplus of the proceeds of sale of certain real estate sold by him for the payment of state and county taxes. The court there adopted the reasons for exempting public officers from the process of attachment given by Mr. Justice Sergeant in the case of Bulkley v. Eckert, 3 Pa. St. 368, 45 Am. Dec. 650, as follows: That "great public inconvenience would ensue if money could be thus arrested in the hands of officers, and they be made liable to all the delay, embarrassment, and trouble that would ensue from being stopped in the routine of their business,—compelled to appear in court, employ counsel, and answer interrogatories, as well as take care that the proceedings are regularly carried on. . . . If a precedent of this kind were set, there seems no reason why the state or county treasurer, or other fiscal officers of the commonwealth or of municipal bodies, may not be subjected to the levying of attachments, which has never been attempted, nor supposed to come within the attachment law." This reasoning most clearly applies to the position of the clerk of the court in a case like this. It must be conceded that counsel for appellant has produced authorities which are not in harmony with the foregoing views. See Dunlop v. Patterson F. Ins. Co. 74 N. Y. 145, 30 Am. Rep. 283; Dunsmoor v. Furstenfeldt, 88 Cal. 522, 12 L. R. A. 508, 22 Am. St. Rep. 331, 28 Pac. 518. To follow these, however, would place us in conflict with the governing principle of the decisions of our own court to which reference has been made.

It will be unnecessary to discuss other questions suggested in the argument and the briefs of counsel, since what has been said disposes of the appeal in this case. In addition to this, the facts appearing in the record are not sufficient to clearly or distinctly present such questions.

The judgment of the court below will be affirmed. Judgment affirmed, with costs to the appellee.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Louis DELORY

v.

Warren K. BLODGETT et al.

(185 Mass. 126.)

1. An expert machinist employed by a machine company and sent to make repairs upon plants of other persons at their request as his services may be needed, and who is, while so employed, subject to the direction of the one seeking his services as to what shall be done, although in his method of work he acts upon his own judgment, is, during the time so employed, the servant of the latter and the fellow servant of his employees, although he receives his wages from his own employer, who collects the pay for his time from those seeking his services.
2. A master is not shown to be negligent in employing an engineer by evidence that he had been known to drink intoxicating liquor, where there is nothing to show that the master knew it, or that he had ever been intoxicated.

(February 25, 1904.)

NOTE.—As to which of two or more persons is the master of another who is conceded to be the servant of one of them, see also note to Hardy v. Shedden Co. 37 L. R. A. 33, and the later case in this series of Brady v. Chicago & G. W. R. Co. 57 L. R. A. 712.
64 L. R. A.

EXCEPTIONS by plaintiff to rulings of the Superior Court for Suffolk County, made during the trial of an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries for which defendants were alleged to be responsible, which resulted in a verdict in favor of defendants. Overruled.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Walter A. Buie and William J. Miller, for plaintiff:

The plaintiff and the defendants' employees were not engaged in working together to a common end. Plaintiff was subject to the general direction and control of the American Tool & Machine Company and he was not, as to the manner of doing the work, under the direction of the defendants, or their agents or servants.

Reagan v. Casey, 160 Mass. 374, 36 N. E. 58; Mills v. Thomas Elevator Co. 54 App. Div. 124, 66 N. Y. Supp. 398, Affirmed in 172 N. Y. 660, 65 N. E. 1119; Hoadley v. International Paper Co. 72 Vt. 79, 47 Atl. 169; Murray v. Dwight, 161 N. Y. 301, 48 L. R. A. 673, 55 N. E. 901; Brennan v. Berlin Iron Bridge Co. 74 Conn. 382, 50 Atl. 1030; Coates v. Chapman, 195 Pa. 109, 45 Atl. 676; Sherman v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 71 Vt. 325, 45 Atl. 227.

Two persons having different masters, though engaged in a common employment, are not fellow servants; and, if one is injured through the negligence of the other, the injured person is not precluded from recovering for his injury from the master whose servant caused the harm, merely because both servants were engaged upon the same work or enterprise.

Burrill v. Eddy, 160 Mass. 198, 35 N. E. 483; Morgan v. Smith, 159 Mass. 570, 35 N. E. 101; Kelly v. Johnson, 128 Mass. 530, 35 Am. Rep. 398; Johnson v. Lindsay [1891] A. C. 371; Cameron v. Nystrom [1893] A. C. 308; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Conroy, 63 Miss. 562, 56 Am. Rep. 835; Svenson v. Atlantic Mail S. S. Co. 1 Jones & S. 277; Eckman v. Lauer, 67 Minn. 221, 69 N. W. 893; Jansen v. Jersey City, 61 N. J. L. 243, 39 Atl. 1025; Melvin v. Pennsylvania Steel Co. 180 Mass. 196, 62 N. E. 379; Welch v. Maine C. R. Co. 86 Me. 552, 25 L. R. A. 658, 30 Atl. 116.

Only those persons who are engaged in the same common pursuit under the same general control, and receive compensation from the same source, are fellow servants.

Kelly v. Johnson, 128 Mass. 530, 35 Am. Rep. 398; Gilman v. Eastern R. Corp. 10 Allen, 233, 87 Am. Dec. 635.

The mere act of the defendants' superintendent in calling the plaintiff up into the sheave house and requesting him to adjust the wire rope so that it would run true in the groove of the sheave, while the superintendent stood by and looked at the plaintiff doing the work, was not such an exercise of control over the plaintiff as would make him the fellow servant of the defendants' servants (the superintendent and engineer).

Morgan v. Smith, 159 Mass. 570, 35 N. E. 101.

Samuelian v. American Tool & Mach. Co. 168 Mass. 12, 46 N. E. 98, is inconsistent with other decided cases in this commonwealth, and is against the current of decisions in other jurisdictions.

Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Conroy, 63 Miss. 562, 56 Am. Rep. 835; Pollock, Torts, 6th Eng. ed. 100, 101; Johnson v. Lindsay [1891] A. C. 371; Cameron v. Nystrom [1893] A. C. 308; Ward v. New England Fibre Co. 154 Mass. 419, 28 N. E. 299.

It is the duty of the master to select fit and competent persons for his service, just as it is his duty to provide reasonably safe machinery; and neither duty can be so delegated as to relieve the master from liability for a failure of a subordinate to exercise proper care in its discharge.

Gilman v. Eastern R. Corp. 10 Allen, 233, 87 Am. Dec. 635, 13 Allen, 443, 90 Am. Dec. 210; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Henthorne, 19 C. C. A. 623, 43 U. S. App. 113, 73 Fed. 64 L. R. A.

634; Monahan v. Worcester, 150 Mass. 439, 15 Am. St. Rep. 228, 23 N. E. 228; Hills v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. 55 Mich. 437, 21 N. W. 878; Western Stone Co. v. Whalen, 151 Ill. 472, 42 Am. St. Rep. 244, 38 N. E. 241; Carson v. Canning, 180 Mass. 461, 62 N. E. 964.

Messrs. Carver & Blodgett and F. H. Smith, Jr., for defendants:

There was no evidence that the engineer was incompetent, or that the defendants were negligent.

Gilman v. Eastern R. Co. 13 Allen, 433, 90 Am. Dec. 210; McDermott v. Boston, 133 Mass. 349; Tarrant v. Webb, 18 C. B. 797; Buckley v. Gould & C. Silver Min. Co. 8 Sawy. 394, 14 Fed. 833; Spring Valley Coal Co. v. Patting, 30 C. C. A. 168, 58 U. S. App. 575, 86 Fed. 433; Thomas v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 97 Fed. 245; Gilmore v. Mittineague Paper Co. 169 Mass. 471, 48 N. E. 623; McPhee v. Souilly, 163 Mass. 216, 39 N. E. 1007; Robinson v. Fitchburg & W. R. Co. 7 Gray, 92; Hodges v. Scott, 118 Mass. 530; Hopkins v. Damon, 138 Mass. 65.

Whether a servant, in performing or in not performing a certain duty, resulting in injury to a coworker, is thereby acting as a fellow servant merely, or as a representative of the master, is a question of law, and not of fact.

Johnson v. Boston Tow Boat Co. 135 Mass. 209, 46 Am. Rep. 458; McGinty v. Athol Reservoir Co. 155 Mass. 183, 29 N. E. 510.

All servants employed by the same master in a common service are fellow servants, whatever may be their grade or rank.

Rogers v. Ludlow Mfg. Co. 144 Mass. 198, 59 Am. Rep. 68, 11 N. E. 77; Barstow v. Old Colony R. Co. 143 Mass. 535, 10 N. E. 255; Mellor v. Merchants' Mfg. Co. 150 Mass. 362, 5 L. R. A. 792, 23 N. E. 100.

A general servant of one master may become the servant of another for some special service.

Morgan v. Smith, 159 Mass. 570, 35 N. E. 101; Coughlan v. Cambridge, 106 Mass. 268, 44 N. E. 218; Hasty v. Sears, 157 Mass. 123, 34 Am. St. Rep. 267, 31 N. E. 759; Samuelian v. American Tool & Mach. Co. 168 Mass. 12, 46 N. E. 98.

Knewlton, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff, while repairing machinery in the defendants' shop, was injured through the negligence of one Whippen, the defendants' engineer, in starting the machinery. The plaintiff rests his claim for damages on two propositions: First, that he was not a servant of the defendants, and therefore that Whippen was not his fellow servant;

and, secondly, that, if Whippen was his fellow servant, the defendants were negligent in employing him, because he was an unfit person to be intrusted with the management of an engine.

The plaintiff's relations to the defendants appear from his testimony, as follows: He said he was a millwright and carpenter in the general employment of the American Tool & Machine Company as a jobber; that jobbers were sent to do any kind of work, and were supposed to go wherever they were sent, and work until the work was done; that he and another man were directed by telephone to go to the defendants' place; that he had been there two or three times before; "that what he was sent to do, first, was to tighten up the pulley;" that afterwards, while he was in the engine room washing his hands, the defendants' superintendent, Alden, came down and said to him, "Hurry upstairs; there is something wrong with the belt;" that he went upstairs with the superintendent, and started to work and adjusted the tightener; that when he got through that the superintendent said to him, "Come over and see if the wire is leading in the center of the sheave;" that when he first came upstairs it was at the request of Mr. Alden, the superintendent; that when he went up to go to work on the tightener Mr. Alden went with him; that after he got through with the tightener he asked Mr. Alden if there was anything else to do, and that Mr. Alden called his attention to the rope that ran over the sheave. The plaintiff's undisputed evidence shows that he was an expert workman lent to the defendants by his general employer to make repairs upon their machinery. It appears that the American Tool & Machinery Company was accustomed to render bills to the defendants for labor and materials furnished, the labor being charged and paid for at a price per hour.

The law in regard to persons working in this way has often been considered by this court. In Hasty v. Sears, 157 Mass. 123, 34 Am. St. Rep. 267, 31 N. E. 759, Mr. Justice Barker quoted, as a true statement of the principle, this language from Cockburn, Ch. J., in Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co. L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 205-209: "But when one person lends his servant to another for a particular employment, the servant, for anything done in that particular employment, must be dealt with as the servant of the man to whom he is lent, although he remains the general servant of the person who lent him." In Coughlan v. Cambridge, 166 Mass. 268-277, 44 N. E. 218, 219, Mr. Justice Merton says: "The test is whether, in the particular service which he is engaged to perform, he continues liable to the direction and control of his master, or becomes subject to that of the party to whom he is lent or hired." In Ward v. New England Fibre Co. 154 Mass. 419, 28 N. E. 299, it was held that on the question whether work was done by the general master of the servant under a contract which gave him the right to control the business as it was going on, and to complete it without any right of interference or control by the person for whom it was being done, the fact that the payment was to be made at the usual prices for labor and materials, instead of by giving a round sum, was not conclusive. The mode of payment in such a case is usually very significant; but it is possible for a proprietor to contract for the performance of certain work on his property in a way which will give the contractor a legal right to furnish the whole work, and to direct all details, without interference by the proprietor, and to receive at the end a price to be determined by the current rates for labor and materials. In such a case, if the proprietor should prevent the performance of the contract by the contractor, he would be liable in damages; and, so long as the work was going on, the workmen would be servants of the contractor, under his direction and control. This fact was also referred to in Morgan v. Sears, 159 Mass. 570, 35 N. E. 101, but in each of the cases the true principle was recognized, as stated by Mr. Justice Lathrop in the latter case, as follows: "There is no doubt that the general servant of one person may become the servant of another by submitting himself to the control and direction of the other. In such a case the servant becomes the fellow servant of the servants of the person under whose control he comes, and neither his general master nor his special master is liable if he is injured by the negligence of one of the other servants." It makes no difference whether the proprietor to whom a servant is lent actually exercises his right of control and direction as to the details of the work, or simply sets the servant to do what is necessary, trusting to his expert skill for the result. This was decided in Linnehan v. Rollins, 137 Mass. 123, 50 Am. Rep. 287. As was said in Samuelson v. American Tool & Mach. Co. 168 Mass. 12, 46 N. E. 98: "The fact that they relied largely upon his skill and experience did not affect their absolute right to control him in everything he did upon their machinery." The question in every case is whether the proprietor for whom the work is being done has given up his proprietorship of the particular business to an independent contractor, and has thus divested himself of the right of control, so that he has no longer a legal right to terminate the work or direct it. If he has done nothing to limit his rights in regard to the business which is being done for his benefit, but retains his proprietorship of it, each man who works in it is legally subject to his control while so engaged, and, in reference to the rights of third persons who are affected by the work, is his servant. The rule applied when one furnishes for hire or lends to another a team of horses, with a driver, is simply an application of this principle. The circumstances are often such that, while the driver is the servant of the person to whom the team is furnished in reference to the question what he shall do or where he shall go, there is an implication that, as to the particulars of the management of the horses, he is the servant of his general employer, in whose interest and as whose representative he will manage and direct, within reasonable limits, such matters as pertain to the health and safety of the horses and the safety of the vehicle. In these particulars, for the preservation of his property, it will be presumed that the owner of the team retains in his driver a right of control. This is the ground of the decisions in Huff v. Ford, 126 Mass. 24, 30 Am. Rep. 645; Reagan v. Casey, 160 Mass. 374, 36 N. E. 58; and Driscoll v. Towle, 181 Mass. 416, 63 N. E. 922. In the present case the plaintiff's testimony shows that he was not only legally subject to the direction and control of the defendants, but that the control was exercised by the defendants' superintendent by a series of directions. The plaintiff was a servant of the defendants, and a fellow servant of Whippen, the engineer.

There was no evidence that the defendants were negligent in employing an unfit or incompetent servant. There was testimony from two witnesses that at some times Whippen had been known to drink intoxicating liquor, but there was no evidence that he was ever intoxicated or that the defendants had knowledge that he drank intoxicating liquor, much less that he drank to excess. The testimony of other witnesses indicated that he was not in the habit of drinking liquor. The jury would not have been warranted in finding the defendants negligent in employing him.

Exceptions overruled.

Harry W. SMITH, Appt.,
v.

ETNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.
(185 Mass. 74.)

1. Steeple-chase riding by one who gives his occupation as a cotton merchant is voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger, within the meaning of an accident insurance policy exempting the insurer from liability for injuries resulting from such exposure.

2. Knowledge by the agent of the insurer that the insured occasionally rode in steeple chases does not constitute a waiver of a provision in the policy that the insurer shall not be liable for injuries received through voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger.

(February 25, 1904.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Supreme Judicial Court for Worcester County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover upon an accident insurance policy. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frank Bulkeley Smith, T. H. Gage, Jr., and Frank F. Dresser, for appellant:

It was not necessary for the plaintiff to say that he rode horses, any more than that he ate, he slept, or traveled in street cars. The term "occupation" has reference to the vocation, profession, or calling in which the insured is engaged for his profit, and does not preclude him from the performance of acts and duties which are simply incidents connected with the daily life of men in any society.

National Acci. Soc. v. Taylor, 42 Ill. App. 97; Stone v. United States Casualty Co. 34 N. J. L. 371; Fox v. Masons' Fraternal Acci. Assn. 96 Wis. 390, 71 N. W. 363; Union Mut. Acci. Assn. v. Frohard, 134 Ill. 228, 10 L. R. A. 383, 23 Am. St. Rep. 664, 25 N. E. 642; Kentucky Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Franklin, 102 Ky. 512, 43 S. W. 709; Travellers' Preferred Acci. Assn. v. Kelsey, 46 Ill. App. 371; North American Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Burroughs, 69 Pa. 43, 8 Atl. 212; Tucker v. Mutual Ben. Life Co. 50 Hun, 50, 4 N. Y. Supp. 505.

A voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger implies a conscious, intentional exposure; something which one is consciously willing to take the risk of.

Keene v. New England Mut. Acci. Assn. 161 Mass. 149, 36 N. E. 891; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Randolph, 24 C. C. A. 305, 47 U. S. App. 260, 78 Fed. 754; Manufacturers' Acci. Indemnity Co. v. Dorgan, 22 L. R. A. 620, 7 C. C. A. 581, 16 U. S. App. 290, 58 Fed. 945; Burkhard v. Travellers' Ins. Co. 102 Pa. 262, 48 Am. Rep. 205; Equitable Acci. Ins. Co. v. Osborn, 90 Ala. 201, 13 L. R. A. 267, 9 So. 869.

NOTE.—For earlier cases in this series as to what constitutes voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger, see Fidelity & C. Co. v. Chambers, 40 L. R. A. 482, and note; Willey Casualty Co. v. Sheppard, 47 L. R. A. 650; 64 L. R. A.

Fidelity & C. Co. v. Sittig, 48 L. R. A. 359; Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Thornton, 49 L. R. A. 116; Smith v. Etna L. Ins. Co. 56 L. R. A. 271; and Small v. Travelers' Protective Assn. 63 L. R. A. 510.

The jury should decide for themselves, under all the facts before them attending the death of the insured, whether it was caused by his wilful exposure to an unnecessary danger or peril.

Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Seaver, 19 Wall. 531, 22 L. ed. 155; Keeffe v. National Acci. Soc. 4 App. Div. 392, 38 N. Y. Supp. 854; Miller v. American Mut. Acci. Ins. Co. 92 Tenn. 167, 20 L. R. A. 765, 21 S. W. 39; Thomas v. Masons' Fraternal Acci. Asso. 64 App. Div. 22, 71 N. Y. Supp. 692; Cornwell v. Fraternal Acci. Asso. 6 N. D. 201, 40 L. R. A. 437, 66 Am. St. Rep. 601, 69 N. W. 191; Collins v. Bankers' Acci. Ins. Co. 96 Iowa, 216, 59 Am. St. Rep. 367, 64 N. W. 778; Conboy v. Railway Officials' & Employees' Acci. Asso. 17 Ind. App. 62, 60 Am. St. Rep. 154, 46 N. E. 363; Knickerbocker Casualty Ins. Co. v. Jordan, 7 Ohio L. J. 71; Jones v. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. 92 Iowa, 652, 61 N. W. 485.

The policy was not effectively canceled by the defendant company. It could not be canceled without notice and tender of the unearned premium to the legal owners and holders of the policy.

May, Ins. § 67; Lattan v. Royal Ins. Co. 45 N. J. L. 453.

Both acceptance of unearned premium and notice of cancellation are necessary, "for acceptance of unearned premium without notice is not a cancellation of the policy."

Crawford v. Aachen & M. F. Ins. Co. 100 Ill. App. 454; Manlove v. Commercial Mut. F. Ins. Co. 47 Kan. 309, 27 Pac. 979; Wood, Fire Ins. § 107; McLean v. Republic F. Ins. Co. 3 Laus. 423; German Ins. Co. v. Rounds, 35 Neb. 752, 53 N. W. 660; Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Botto, 47 Ill. 516.

A broker or agent to procure insurance is not an agent to receive notice of cancellation of the policy, and his authority from the insured ends with the procurement of the policy.

White v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. 120 Mass. 330; Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 278, 27 L. ed. 932, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Insurance Cos. v. Raden, 87 Ala. 311, 13 Am. St. Rep. 36, 5 So. 876; Quong Tse Ning v. Anglo-Nevada Assur. Corp. 86 Cal. 566, 10 L. R. A. 144, 25 Pac. 58; Broadwater v. Lion F. Ins. Co. 34 Minn. 465, 26 N. W. 455; Body v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 63 Wis. 157, 23 N. W. 132; Rothschild v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 74 Mo. 41, 41 Am. Rep. 303; Hermann v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 100 N. Y. 411, 53 Am. Rep. 197, 3 N. E. 341; American F. Ins. Co. v. Brooks, 83 Md. 22, 34 Atl. 373.

Messrs. Herbert Parker and Henry H. Fuller for appellee.
64 L. R. A.

Morton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover indemnity under an accident insurance policy for injuries received by the plaintiff while engaged in riding a steeple chase. The case was heard by a judge of the superior court upon agreed facts, and the court found and entered judgment for the defendant, and the plaintiff appealed.

The policy in suit is a renewal policy, and expired June 6, 1901. The accident occurred June 1, 1901. The original policy was issued in 1895, and ran for one year. There have been successive renewals from year to year as each expired. In the application on which the original policy was issued, the plaintiff's occupation was stated to be that of a cotton manufacturer. The application required that the "occupations" of the applicant "should be fully stated." In the policy the plaintiff was described as "a cotton manufacturer by occupation." Amongst the conditions on which the policy was issued was one that the policy should not cover injuries caused by "voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger." On May 28, 1901, the defendant learned that the plaintiff engaged in steeple-chase riding, and directed its agent in Worcester to cancel the plaintiff's policy, on the ground that it could not assume that hazard, or take the chance of a claim. Thereupon the defendant's agent sent a check for the unearned premium to the agents through whom the plaintiff had procured the policy, and to whom he had paid the premiums, with a request to notify the plaintiff that the policy had been canceled, and to return it. The plaintiff was absent from the city, and his bookkeeper opened the letter containing the notice and check, and, after communicating with the agents through whom the plaintiff had obtained the policy, and being assured by them that it would be all right to do so, delivered up the policy. There was a provision in the policy giving the defendant the right to cancel it upon returning the unearned premium. Upon being informed as to what had taken place in his absence, the plaintiff repudiated what had been done, and notified the defendant he held the check subject to its order.

There are two questions before us: (1) Whether the plaintiff's injuries were received in consequence of a voluntary exposure to an unnecessary danger, within the meaning of the policy; and (2) whether the policy had been duly canceled before the accident.

We do not find it necessary to consider whether the policy had been duly canceled, as we are of opinion that there was a voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger. Steeple-chase riding, as commonly understood, differs from ordinary riding and driving, and involves elements of unusual hazard and danger. There can be no question that the danger was unnecessary, and that the exposure to it was voluntary. There was nothing in the description of the occupation of the plaintiff, contained in the policy, nor in anything else contained in the policy, which included steeple-chase riding, or which showed that the plaintiff engaged in it. We do not mean to say that an accident policy containing a provision like that contained in the policy in this case against voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger debars the insured from recovery if injured while engaged in the common sports and amusements. But in steeple-chase riding the liability to accident is much greater than in the ordinary sports and amusements. The fact that the race in which the plaintiff was injured was for amateurs makes no difference. Neither does the circumstance that the defendant's agent was aware that the plaintiff occasionally rode steeple-chase races make any difference. The liability to the defendant depends on the terms of the policy, and whether an accident sustained in steeple-chase riding comes within them. For reasons already given, we do not think that it does.

Judgment affirmed.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

THIRD NATIONAL BANK of the City of New York, Plff. in Err.,

v.

George A. STEEL.

(129 Mich. 434.)

1. A court will not entertain a suit to charge a person on an unsigned representation as to the credit of another person, although it is valid where made, if the statute of the place where the suit is brought provides that no action shall be brought to charge one on such a representation, unless it is in writing, signed by the party to be charged thereon.
2. The defense that the statute prevents the maintenance of an action because the instrument on which it is brought is not signed by the party to be charged may be raised by a plea of the general issue.

3. A signed letter stating that the writer remembers "of exhibiting a statement" of another's resources is not sufficient to make the letter a signed statement of them, within the meaning of a statute providing that no action shall be brought on such a statement unless it is signed, where the statement on which the plaintiff relies was exhibited by a third person, and there is nothing in the letter to identify the one to which it refers, and by the terms of the letter the exhibited statement did not contain the whole substance of the communication upon the subject.

(February 11, 1902.)

NOTE.—Conflict of laws as to statute of frauds.

- I. As between law of forum and substantive law of contract, 119.
- II. As between law of place where contract is made and that of place where it is performed, 122.
- III. As between law of place where contract is made and that of place where property is situated, 123.
- I. As between law of forum and substantive law of contract.

The earlier decisions upon this point are shown in the note to Wolf v. Burke, 19 L. R. A. 792. An examination of the cases there cited reveals a decided conflict among the authorities. Some of the cases adopt the distinction in Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801, 22 L. J. C. P. N. S. 1, 16 Jur. 1021, 1 Week. Rep. 22, to which attention is there called; others repudiate it; others make no allusion to it, and render decisions that are consistent either with its adoption or repudiation. The latter is also true of Brinker v. Scheunemann, 43 Ill. App. 659, which applied a statute of another state declaring a contract void. The decisions upon this question, so far as it relates to the mode of acceptance of a bill of exchange, will be found in a note to Spies v. National City Bank, 61 L. R. A. 193.

A few decisions have been rendered upon 64 L. R. A.

the point since the publication of the note first referred to. Some of these repudiate the distinction, and take the view that the statute of frauds, regardless of the differences in phraseology upon which the distinction was based, is substantive, rather than remedial. Thus, Miller v. Wilson, 146 Ill. 523, 37 Am. St. Rep. 180, 34 N. E. 1111, Reversing 42 Ill. App. 332, held that a statute of Illinois (lex fori) providing, in effect, that "no action shall be brought" upon a parol contract for the sale of land, did not apply to a contract made in Kansas with reference to land in that state. So, in Raphael v. Hartman, 87 Ill. App. 634, the court, speaking of a contract not to be performed within a year, said that, if the contract were within the Illinois statute of frauds, it would not avail defendants, because it was made in New York and must be construed according to the laws of New York. So, in Cochran v. Ward, 5 Ind. App. 89, 51 Am. St. Rep. 229, 29 N. E. 795, Affirmed on Rehearing in 5 Ind. App. 97, 51 Am. St. Rep. 235, 31 N. E. 581, the court expressly repudiated the distinction, and held that a parol agreement made in Illinois to lease land in that state for one year, to begin at a definite future time, being within the Illinois statute of frauds, which declares that "no action shall be brought," could not be enforced in Indiana, although not repugnant to the statute of the latter state. Another case, Heaton v. Eldridge, 56 Ohio St. 87, 36 L. R. A. 817, 60 Am. St. Rep. 737, 46

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Clinton County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to hold defendant liable for losses which were alleged to have accrued to plaintiff by relying upon false and fraudulent representations made by defendant. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Spaulding, Norton, & Deoling for plaintiff in error.

Mr. H. E. Walbridge, for defendant in error:

There is no contractual relation between the defendant and the Third National Bank upon which to found a cause of action, and whatever right of action is claimed is by reason, only, of whatever wrong, if any, there may have been in Mr. Steel's making statements respecting the financial condition. In other words, the right of action does not arise out of contract, but from tort.

The lex loci will not be followed where it contravenes the policy of the state where it is attempted to be asserted. If by the law of the forum no action can be maintained on a particular oral contract if made in that country, the like rule will obtain as to the contract made abroad, although it was valid by the law of the place where made.

Story, Conf. L. § 576; Andrews v. Herriot, 4 Cow. 508; Pearall v. Dwight, 2 Mass. 84, 3 Am. Dec. 35; Bank of United States v. Donnelly, 8 Pet. 361, 8 L. ed. 974; First Nat. Bank v. Burch, 80 Mich. 242, 45-

N. E. 638, while apparently repudiating the distinction, seems to regard the statute of frauds, without reference to the differences in phraseology upon which the distinction is based, as remedial, rather than substantive, and therefore holds that the statute of frauds of the forum is applicable to a contract made in another state. The statute of the forum which was applied in this case, however, was in substantially the same terms as the 4th section of the English statute, declaring that no action should be brought on the contract, and therefore would have been applicable even if the distinction had been adopted.

Obeare v. First Nat. Bank, 97 Ga. 587, 33 L. E. A. 384, 25 S. E. 335, held that a provision of the Georgia Code, declaring that, in order for a partial payment upon a note to constitute a new point from which the period of limitation will run, it must be entered upon the note, relates to the remedy, and applies, although the note was made and payable in another state. In this case no allusion is made to the distinction, and it will be observed that the decision is consistent either with the adoption or repudiation of the distinction.

But it has been held in Georgia that the validity and construction of an agreement for arbitration, made in Tennessee, depend upon the law of Tennessee; and a parol award, being valid by the law of that state, will be upheld in Georgia. Green v. East Tennessee & G. R. Co. 37 Ga. 456.

It will be observed that THIRD NAT. BANK v. STEEL expressly adopts and applies the distinction.

Emery v. Burbank, 163 Mass. 326, 28 L. R. A. 57, 47 Am. St. Rep. 458, 39 N. E. 1026, takes a new position upon the point. It was held in that case that a statute of Massachusetts, providing that an agreement to make a will shall not be valid unless in writing, applied to an agreement made in another state by a Massachusetts testator. It will be observed that this provision is substantive, rather than remedial, in form, and that, if the court had been guided solely by the form of the statute, it would not have been applied to the agreement in question because it was not made in Massachusetts. The real ground of the decision in this case is that the statute embodied a fundamental public policy, namely, the prevention of fraud and perjury, which required the extension of the statute to agreements made in other states, by Massachusetts testators. The court expressly refrained from expressing any opinion upon the question whether the statute would apply to such an agreement made in another state by a nonresident of Massachusetts. The opinion in this case—unnecessarily, as it seems to the present writer—ascribes a double character to the statute, taking the view that, while the statute is substantive in form, it implies also a rule of procedure broad enough to cover an agreement made in another state by a Massachusetts testator. It was said in this connection: "It is possible, however, that a statute should affect both validity and remedy by express words; and, this being so, it is possible that words which in terms speak only of one should carry with them an implication also as to the other." The ultimate ground of the decision, however, is the public policy embodied in the statute. In this view the necessity of ascribing a remedial character to the statute is not apparent; for the distinction based upon the substantive or remedial character of the statute has no significance, so far as the conflict of laws is concerned, when the statute of the forum, either by virtue of its express terms or by virtue of the public policy embodied in it, applies to foreign, as well as domestic, contracts. Even assuming that a statute is purely substantive and not remedial at all, it may certainly be applied to contracts made outside of the forum, if, in express terms, it covers such contracts; and even if it does not, in express terms, extend to foreign contracts, it may, even without ascribing a remedial character to it, be extended to such contracts upon the ground that it embodies a part of the distinctive public policy of the forum. In other words, the distinction, based upon the character of the statute as substantive or remedial, is only important, so far as the choice of laws is concerned, when the terms of the statute are not explicit in this respect, and it embodies no distinctive public policy by virtue of which it may be extended to foreign contracts.

None of the other cases have invoked the public policy of the forum as a ground of extending the statute of the forum to foreign contracts, although, as shown in the note to Wolf v. Burke, 19 L. R. A. 792, they have frequently resorted to the distinction made in Leroux v. Brown to accomplish that result. The possibility of applying the principle here stated to other

N. W. 93; Heaton v. Eldridge, 56 Ohio St. 87, 60 Am. St. Rep. 737, 46 N. E. 638; Emery v. Burbank, 163 Mass. 326, 28 L. R. A. 57, 47 Am. St. Rep. 456, 39 N. E. 1026; 1 Beach, Modern Law of Contracts, §§ 595-598; Hoadley v. Northern Transp. Co. 115 Mass. 304, 15 Am. Rep. 106; King v. Sarria, 69 N. Y. 24, 25 Am. Rep. 128; Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Downer v. Chesebrough, 36 Conn. 39, 4 Am. Rep. 29; Galloway v. Holmes, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 349; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Elwell, 111 Mich. 689, 70 N. W. 334; Bush v. Sprague, 51 Mich. 41, 16 N. W. 222; Hess v. Culver, 77 Mich. 599, 6 L. R. A. 498, 18 Am. St. Rep. 421, 43 N. W. 994; Swann v. Phillips, 8 Ad. & El. 457; Lyde v. Barnard, 1 Tyrw.

& G. 250; Haslock v. Fergusson, 7 Ad. & El. 86; Kimball v. Comstock, 14 Gray, 508; Wells v. Prince, 15 Gray, 562; McKinney v. Whiting, 8 Allen, 207; Belcher v. Costello, 122 Mass. 189; Cook v. Churchman, 104 Ind. 141, 3 N. E. 759.

It is not necessary to plead the statute of frauds in order for the defendant to avail himself of such a defense.

Kinnie v. Owen, 1 Mich. 249; Ingalls v. Eaton, 25 Mich. 32; Rawson v. Finlay, 27 Mich. 268; Edwards v. Chandler, 14 Mich. 471, 90 Am. Dec. 249.

The statutory general issue is as broad as at the common law, where everything that plaintiff had to show to make out his case was put at issue.

Osburn v. Lovell, 36 Mich. 250.

provisions of the statute of frauds depends, of course, upon the question whether the prevention of frauds and perjuries, which is the object of such statute, is regarded as a part of the distinctive public policy of the forum. There were some considerations favoring such view with reference to the particular provision involved in the case referred to that do not apply to other provisions. Again, it will be observed that, even in Massachusetts, where the case was decided, contracts valid by their substantive law have been upheld and enforced, though contrary to the statute of frauds of the forum. Denny v. Williams, 5 Allen, 1. (See note to Wolf v. Burke, 19 L. R. A. 793.)

It will be observed that the principle based upon the public policy of the forum, while it subjects a foreign contract to the statute of the forum, does not involve the following propositions, which are the necessary logical consequences of the adoption of the distinction made in Leroux v. Brown (4 c.), the distinction based upon differences in the phraseology of the statutes in declaring the consequences of noncompliance with their terms):

1. The proposition that, if the statute of frauds of the place that furnishes the law of the contract merely provides that no action shall be brought on the contract, the contract may be enforced if not in violation of a similar statute of the forum. The distinction never seems to have been applied with such result except in Marie v. Garrison, 13 Abb. N. C. 210 (a referee's report); but there seems to be no logical escape from the proposition, and it was expressly said in Downer v. Chesebrough, 36 Conn. 39, 4 Am. Rep. 29, that, if the decision in Leroux v. Brown—that the provision of the statute involved in that case applied to the remedy—was sound, it necessarily followed that, if the statute of frauds had existed in France, but not in England, the action must have been sustained, although it could not have been by the law of France.

2. The proposition, which is a corollary of the last, that the contract may be enforced, though it violates both a statute of the place which furnishes the substantive law declaring that no action shall be brought on the contract, and a statute of the forum declaring, in effect, that the contract shall be invalid or void. The distinction seems to have been applied with this result in Marie v. Garrison, 13 Abb. N. C. 210, and 64 L. R. A.

It is difficult to see how it can be avoided upon the assumption that the distinction is sound.

Upon the other hand, the adoption of the principle that a particular provision of the statute of frauds embodies a part of the distinctive public policy of the forum which requires its extension to foreign contracts is perfectly consistent with the refusal to enforce a foreign contract which is not in conflict with the statute of the forum, because it is in conflict with the statute of the place which furnishes the substantive law of the contract, even if the latter statute merely provides that no action shall be brought on the contract. In one respect the principle based upon the public policy of the forum is more effective than the distinction based upon the particular phraseology of the statute in extending the statute of the forum to foreign contracts; for the distinction can only be invoked for that purpose when the statute of the forum is remedial in form, while the principle referred to may be invoked whether that statute is remedial or substantive in form. The principle based on the public policy of the forum is, however, less effective in extending the statute of the forum to foreign contracts than the principle which repudiates the distinction, and ascribes a remedial character to the statute without reference to its phraseology; since the public policy of the forum must be superadded to the statute in order to call the former principle into operation, while the latter principle may be called into operation by the statute itself without reference to the public policy of the forum. There is very little support, however, for the latter view of the statute of frauds,—at least among the cases involving any question as to the conflict of laws.

As already shown, there is a decided tendency, upon the part of the later cases, to repudiate the distinction, made in Leroux v. Brown, based upon differences in phraseology in declaring the consequences of a noncompliance with the terms of the statute. Repudiating the distinction, the better view seems to be that the statute of frauds, without regard to its form in the respect mentioned, is substantive rather than remedial. In this view a contract is governed by its substantive law with reference to matters ordinarily comprehended by the statute of frauds, and not by the law of the forum; but this rule is subject to the right of the court of the forum to apply

The burden of proof rested with the plaintiff to show that the statute of frauds did not bar his right of recovery.

Dayton v. Williams, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 31; Bush v. Sprague, 51 Mich. 41, 16 N. W. 222; Harris Photographing Supply Co. v. Fisher, 81 Mich. 136, 45 N. W. 661; Kroll v. Diamond Match Co. 106 Mich. 127, 63 N. W. 983; Whipple v. Parker, 29 Mich. 369; Palmer v. Marquette & P. Rolling Mill Co. 32 Mich. 274.

A contract which is void under the statute of frauds cannot be used for any purpose.

Chamberlain v. Dow, 10 Mich. 319; Hall v. Soule, 11 Mich. 494; Holland v. Hoyt, 14 Mich. 238; Grimes v. Van Vechten, 20 Mich. 410; Scott v. Bush, 27 Mich. 421, 12 Am. Rep. 311; Detroit, H. & I. R. Co. v. Forbes, 30 Mich. 176; Hillebrands v. Nibbelink, 40 Mich. 646; Sutton v. Rowley, 44 Mich. 112, 6 N. W. 216; Raub v. Smith, 61 Mich. 543, 1 Am. St. Rep. 619, 28 N. W. 676; Wardell v. Williams, 62 Mich. 50, 4 Am. St. Rep. 814, 28 N. W. 796.

If the defendant had not appeared at all in this case, it would have been the duty of the court to have instructed the jury to render a verdict for the defendant, unless it appeared from the plaintiff's own showing that he was able to establish the representations to have been made in writing and signed by the defendant.

May v. Sloan, 101 U. S. 231, 25 L. ed. 797; Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 29 L. ed. 703, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 486; Busick

any or all of the provisions of the statute of frauds of the forum to a contract made and performable elsewhere, or with reference to real property situated elsewhere, if it regards such provision or provisions as embodying a distinctive part of the public policy of the forum.

11. As between law of place where contract is made and that of place where it is performable.

Upon any hypothesis other than that the statute of frauds, regardless of its form, is remedial, it may become necessary to choose between the law of the place where the contract is made and that of the place where it is performable. As between the two, the weight of authority seems to be in favor of the law of the place where the contract is made. Thus, it has been held (in cases that hold or assume that the contract in this respect is governed by its substantive law, and not by the lex fori as such) that a contract, valid by the law of the place where it is made, will be enforced, though contrary to the statute of frauds of the place of performance. Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406, 23 L. ed. 245; Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Hunt v. Jones, 12 R. I. 266, 34 Am. Rep. 635; Perry v. Mt. Hope Iron Co. 15 R. I. 380, 2 Am. St. Rep. 902, 5 Atl. 632; Allen v. Schuchardt, 1 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 13, Fed. Cas. No. 236; Green v. Lewis, 26 U. C. Q. B. 618. (See also, upon this point, cases cited in note to Spies v. National City Bank, 61 L. R. A. 193, subd. IV.)

In Houghtaling v. Ball, 19 Mo. 84, 59 Am. Dec. 331, 20 Mo. 563, it was held that the fact that wheat, sold and delivered in Illinois, was to be paid for upon its arrival at St. Louis, was not sufficient to subject the contract to the Missouri statute of frauds.

The following quotation from Green v. Lewis, 26 U. C. Q. B. 618, seems to embody the correct rule on this point: "It may well be that, if any part of the contract to be performed in England [Canada?] would be in itself contrary to, or in violation of, our law, our courts would refuse to enforce it, even if shown to be legal by the lex loci contractus [stating authorities]; . . . but we have seen no case in which, if the parties had bound themselves by a contract lawful and obligatory in the place of making, its performance in another country would be refused because certain solemnities 64 L. R. A.

required by the law of the latter had not been observed in its original creation. If the parties have once bound themselves lawfully for any universally lawful purpose, such as here for the sale of goods at a fixed price, it appears to us that our courts must hold them bound here as they would be in the place of the contract."

This was said in reply to the contention that, as the contract of sale was to be performed by delivery at Toronto, the law of Ontario, as the place of performance, should govern.

So, it has been held, conversely, that a contract in violation of the statute of frauds of the place where it was made will not be enforced, though valid according to the law of the place of performance. Kelwert v. Meyer, 62 Ind. 587, 30 Am. Rep. 206; Dacosta v. Davis, 24 N. J. L. 319; Roethke v. Philip Best Brewing Co. 33 Mich. 340.

In Goldstein v. Scott, 76 App. Div. 78, 78 N. Y. Supp. 730, a provision of the New Jersey statute of frauds, that no broker or real-estate agent selling or exchanging land shall be entitled to any commission unless his authority is in writing, was applied to a contract made in New Jersey. It does not appear where the contract was to be performed, but the decision is expressly put upon the ground that the contract was made in New Jersey.

In many of the cases the contract was made and performable in the same state. Some of these cases contain no intimation as between the law of the place where the contract is made and that of the place where it is performable. Thus, in Denny v. Williams, 5 Allen, 1, the court said that, as the contract was made in the city of New York, and was to be performed there, the laws of the state of New York must govern in respect to its construction and performance. Others, however, e. g., Kling v. Fries, 33 Mich. 275; Forward v. Harris, 30 Barb. 338; and Allshouse v. Ramsay, 6 Whart. 331, 37 Am. Dec. 417, seem to intimate that, in case of a conflict, the law of the place where a contract is made should govern in this respect. These cases, however, are only full authority for eliminating the lex fori as such.

A contract made and performable in Michigan is governed by the Michigan statute of frauds, without reference to the residence of the agents of the party who made the contract. Foster v. Lumbermen's Min. Co. 63 Mich. 188, 36 N. W. 171. So, Brinker v.

v. Van Ness, 44 N. J. Eq. 82, 12 Atl. 609; Birchell v. Neaster, 36 Ohio St. 331; Suman v. Springate, 67 Ind. 115; Popp v. Nranke, 68 Wis. 364, 31 N. W. 916; Hudson v. Emmons, 107 Mich. 549, 65 N. W. 542.

An objection that the evidence does not sustain the declaration is in time if made at any stage of the case before judgment.

Pennsylvania Min. Co. v. Brady, 14 Mich. 260; Shaw v. Hoffman, 21 Mich. 151; Moore v. Nason, 48 Mich. 300, 12 N. W. 162.

Montgomery, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought against the defendant to recover the amount of a loan made to Robert M. Steel, which loan, it is Scheunemann, 43 Ill. App. 659, speaking of the statute of frauds, said that a contract is to be interpreted and defined by the law of the place where it is made, and where, in the absence of anything to indicate the contrary, it is presumed that it is to be performed.

Other cases, however, have expressly held that the law of the place of performance prevails over the law of the place where the contract is made, in this respect. Thus:

The validity of a parol antenuptial contract is governed by the law of Illinois, rather than that of Pennsylvania, notwithstanding that it was made in the latter state, where, at the time of the marriage, the husband was a resident of Illinois, and the matrimonial domicile was established in the latter state, and the contract was to be performed in such state. Davenport v. Karnes, 70 Ill. 465. The actual question in this case, however, related to real property in Illinois, and the decision may be really referable to the principle that the lex rei sitæ governs, although the court seems to have applied the law of Illinois as the lex loci solutionis.

A verbal agreement made in Germany for the employment of a person for one year, to begin at a subsequent date, which contemplates performance in New York, is subject to the New York statute of frauds. Turnow v. Hochstadter, 7 Hun, 80.

A verbal agreement entered into in Louisiana, though invalid in that state because not in writing, is valid where the partnership business is to be prosecuted in California. Young v. Pearson, 1 Cal. 448.

It will be observed that, in the three cases last cited, the contract was to be performed at the forum, so that the lex loci solutionis and lex fori were the same; but it is clear that the decisions rest upon the ground that the lex loci solutionis, rather than the lex fori as such, governs.

In Wilson v. Lewiston Mill Co. 150 N. Y. 314, 55 Am. St. Rep. 680, 44 N. E. 959, the court expressly held that the question as to the governing law in this respect depended upon the presumed intention of the parties, and said in this connection that the lex loci solutionis and lex loci contractus must be taken into consideration, but that neither was of itself conclusive. It was held that, under the circumstances of the case, the parties must have contemplated that the contract, which was for the sale of cotton, should be considered a Maine contract, and controlled by the laws of that state. This decision is apparently upon the assumption that the contract was technically completed in New York, but was performable in Maine. In the opinion in Goldstein v. Scott, 76 App. Div. 78, 78 N. Y. Supp. 736, however, it is assumed that the question that was referred to the intention of the parties in the Wilson Case related to whether the contract was to be regarded as made in Maine or New York, and not to whether the place where the contract was made, or that of the place where it was performable, assuming them to be different, furnished the governing law. In this view, the opinion in the Wilson Case would be in harmony with what seems to be the true rule; but the opinion in that case seems scarcely susceptible of such interpretation. Some of the cases cited in the note to Spies v. National City Bank, 61 L. E. A. 193, with reference to the acceptance of bills of exchange, seem to refer the question to the intention of the parties; and in one case, Hall v. Cordell, 142 U. S. 116, 35 L. ed. 956, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154, the law of the place of performance of the agreement to accept was applied.

alleged, was induced by the false and fraudulent representations of the defendant, George A. Steel. The declaration avers that on the 27th of June, 1895, the defendant represented that Robert M. Steel was worth a sum in excess of $1,000,000; that this representation was made through the instrumentality of an innocent agent, General Spaulding, to whom was committed an unsigned statement of the resources and liabilities of Robert M. Steel, under date of March 1, 1895. The plaintiff introduced testimony tending to support the averments of the declaration. The defendant offered no testimony in the case, but rested his defense upon the legal ground that our statute (3 Comp. Laws 1897, § 9518) denies any remedy to the plaintiff in such case.

Assuming, as this subdivision does, that the statute of frauds is substantive, rather than remedial, it relates to the formal validity of the contract, and would therefore seem to come clearly within the first rule laid down in Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406, 23 L. ed. 245; namely: Matters bearing upon the execution, the interpretation, and the validity of a contract are to be determined by the law of the place where the contract is made; rather than the second rule; namely: Matters connected with its performance are regulated by the law prevailing at the place of performance. While the first rule cannot literally, and without qualification, be applied to matters bearing upon the essential validity of the contract, it seems to need no limitation or qualification as applied to matters affecting its formal validity.

III. As between law of place where contract is made and that of place where property is situated.

Most of the cases in which there was an actual conflict between the two have held, without reference to the particular question involved, or to the character of the action, that a contract relating to real property is governed by the statute of frauds of the place where the property is situated, rather than by the statute of

The plaintiff shows that no such statute as that in question is in force in New York, and contends that, as it was expected that General Spaulding would exhibit this statement to the plaintiff in New York, the law of New York should govern, and that the Michigan statute constitutes no bar. This is the first and most important question presented in the case. The authorities are not in harmony as to whether, under a statute such as the one in question, the transaction is wholly void, or whether the effect and force of the language are simply to exclude the remedy. There are not wanting authorities which sustain the contention of plaintiff, and which hold, in construing statutes similar to this, that the case is to be ruled by the law of the state where the transaction occurs or the contract is made, and that a contract valid in another state is not rendered invalid in the state where the action is brought. Plaintiff's counsel cite and rely upon the case of Kling v. Fries, 33 Mich. 275, in support of their contention. The question involved in that case was whether a contract, valid in the state where it was entered into, could be enforced in this state, in view of our statute (3 Comp. Laws 1897, § 9516), which provides that "no contract for the sale of any goods, wares, or merchandise, for the price of $50 or more, shall be valid, unless the purchaser shall accept," etc. It was held that this section of the statute had reference to contracts made within the state, and such, we think, would be the holding in any jurisdiction. There are, however, cases, like Cochran v. Ward, 5

the place where the contract is made. It was so held in Burrell v. Root, 40 N. Y. 496, and Siegel v. Robinson, 56 Pa. 19, 93 Am. Dec. 775, where the action was for the recovery of the purchase price of land; and in Bissell v. Terry, 69 Ill. 184, where the suit was for specific performance. So, in Abell v. Douglass, 4 Denio, 305, a parol transfer of an equitable interest in real property in Pennsylvania was upheld upon the assumption that the common-law rule prevailed in Pennsylvania, notwithstanding the New York statute declared that trusts could only be declared created or transferred in writing.

In Carrington v. Brents, 1 McLean, 167, Fed. Cas. No. 2,446, Affirmed in 9 Pet. 86, 19 L. ed. 60 (a bill to obtain legal title), it was held that a parol contract, made in Virginia for land in Kentucky, was not void under the Kentucky statute of frauds, since the contract was made long before the state of Kentucky was organized. It was further held that the contract was valid according to the law of Virginia. At the time the contract in question was made Kentucky was a part of the state of Virginia, and the implication seems to be that the law of Kentucky, as the lex rei sitæ, would have governed if Kentucky had been a separate state at the time the contract was made.

In Smith v. Burnham, 3 Sumn. 435, Fed. Cas. No. 13,019, however, Judge Story assumed that the statute of frauds of a state in which a parol copartnership for the purchase and sale of land in Maine was made, would govern; though he further held that it was not necessary to determine whether the contract was made in Massachusetts, in Maine, or in New Hampshire, since the statutes of all those states were substantially alike.

In Wolf v. Burke, 18 Colo. 264, 19 L. R. A. 792, 32 Pac. 427 (action to recover purchase price); Miller v. Wilson, 146 Ill. 523, 37 Am. St. Rep. 186, 34 N. E. 1111 (action to recover purchase price); Anderson v. May, 10 Helak. 84 (action for rent); and Cochran v. Ward, 5 Ind. App. 89, 51 Am. St. Rep. 229, 29 N. E. 795, Affirmed on Rehearing in 5 Ind. App. 97, 51 Am. St. Rep. 235, 31 N. E. 581 (action for breach of lease),—the contract was made in the state where the property was situated; and the decisions are only full authority for eliminating the lex fori as such. In Cochran v. Ward, 5 Ind. App. 89, 51 Am. St. Rep. 229, 29 N. E. 795, 64 L. R. A.

31 N. E. 581, the court, referring to the general rule that contracts relating to real property are governed by the lex rei sitæ, said: "There can be no doubt of the correctness of this rule in so far as it relates to questions of construction, title, covenants real, mode and formality of execution, and all things else which the laws of the situs impress upon the nature of the property and the character of the tenure and mode of transmission. But where a conveyance is executed in this state between citizens of this state, for lands in another state, in so far as it treats of covenants which never attach to the soil, but are essentially personal, the laws of this state control." The court in this case, however, took pains to state that the actual controversy was merely between the lex fori on one hand and the lex loci contractus and lex rei sitæ on the other; and that, consequently, it had maintained no distinction between the latter, or between actions real and personal. The distinction above suggested is also supported by the opinion in Polson v. Stewart, 167 Mass. 211, 36 L. R. A. 771, 57 Am. St. Rep. 452, 45 N. E. 737 (see note to Union Nat. Bank v. Chapman, 57 L. R. A. 513), though the actual question in that case was as to the capacity of a married woman to contract with reference to real property. And see also Smith v. Burnham, 3 Sumn. 435, Fed. Cas. No. 13,019, supra.

It is clear, both upon principle and authority, that contracts relating to personal property are governed by the statute of frauds of the place where the contract is made, rather than that of the place where the property is situated. Dacosta v. Davis, 24 N. J. L. 319; Hatch v. Collins, 34 Hun, 314; Allen v. Schuchardt, 1 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 13, Fed. Cas. No. 236; Eaves v. Gillespie, 1 Swan, 130; Dougherty v. Curle, 2 Humph. 453. In some cases, however, as when there is a sale of an unidentified part of a larger mass, the place where the property is situated may determine the location of the last act essential to the consummation of the contract; but this consideration does not militate against the rule that the place where the contract is made furnishes the governing law in this respect.

See also note to Brown v. Wieland, 61 L. R. A. 417, for a discussion of the question as to the effect of the statute of frauds upon the governing law with respect to sales of intoxicating liquor.

Ind. App. 89, 51 Am. St. Rep. 229, 29 N. E. 785, 31 N. E. 581, which apply the same rule to a statute such as the one involved in the present case. Our statute reads as follows: "No action shall be brought to charge any person upon or by reason of any favorable representation or assurance made concerning the character, conduct, credit, ability, trade, or dealings of any other person, unless such representation or assurance be made in writing, and signed by the party to be charged thereby, or by some person thereunto by him lawfully authorized." 3 Comp. Laws 1897, § 9518. The peculiar wording of this section distinguishes it from those sections of the statute which declare that a contract made without certain prescribed formalities shall not be valid, or shall be void. The cases which fail to note this distinction usually refer to Story, Conf. L. § 262. The first case in which the distinction between the two sections was noted is the carefully considered case of Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801. This case was argued at length. A separate opinion was filed by each of the justices, all concurring, and the conclusion reached that, under the language of the statute (§ 4 of the British act), which provides that "no action shall be brought upon any agreement," etc., the contract was not necessarily void, but that this provision affected the remedy, and that, as it affected the remedy, the lex fori governed. The views expressed by Judge Story in his work above cited were called to the attention of the court, but the chief justice answered by saying: "Dr. Story puts the 4th and 17th sections together, as both avoiding the contract;" showing that, in the view of the court, Judge Story had failed to note the true distinction. This case of Leroux v. Brown was followed in Downer v. Chesabrough, 36 Conn. 39, 4 Am. Rep. 29, and was cited approvingly by Mr. Justice Matthews in Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 134, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102. In 1 Brandt, Suretyship & Guaranty, § 52, it is said: "The statute of frauds does not provide that the contract to answer for another shall be illegal or void if not in writing. It says, 'no action shall be brought.' The contract is just as legal since the enactment of the statute as it was before, but no action can be brought to enforce it. . . . As the prohibition is against the remedy, the courts of a country in which the statute prevails will not enforce an unwritten contract of suretyship or guaranty made in another country, which was perfectly valid and enforceable in the country where the contract was made. This is upon the principle that, while the validity and binding force of a contract depend upon the law of the country in which it was made, the remedy is always governed by the law of the country in which the action is brought." In Wharton, Conf. L. 1st ed. at § 690, it is said: "But the question shifts where there is a local statute, like the statute of frauds, directing that no suit shall be sustained, in certain classes of cases, except on written testimony. Such statutes are based on moral grounds. Their object, as is shown by the title of that which served as the pattern of all others, is to prevent fraud and perjury. Here, then, would come into play the position on which Savigny lays such great stress, that moral laws, or laws to effect moral ends, which are imposed by particular states, are peremptory and coercive, and are to be taken as rules of procedure by the judges of such states." The writer refers to the position of Judge Story, and criticises it, and directs attention to a note appended to Judge Story's work by Judge Redfield, as follows: "We must confess that upon principle, as the statute does not declare the contracts void, but only that no action or suit, either in law or equity, shall be maintained on such contract, it ought to be regarded as a statute affecting the remedy, rather than the contract; and that, wherever made, it could not be sued in the courts of a state where the statute expressly provided that no such action shall be maintained." In Anson, Contr. p. 62, referring to the provisions of § 4 of the English statute, it is said: "The terms of the section do not render such a contract void, but they prevent it being enforced by action. The contract, therefore, though it cannot be sued upon, is yet available for some purposes." And in a note, referring to some of the cases which are apparently opposed to the doctrine of Leroux v. Brown, it is said: "In none of these cases is the proposition announced in Leroux v. Brown considered. They are decided on the assumption that the note or memorandum required affects the validity of the contract. While many of the cases involve contracts for the sale of chattels, still the decisions are not based on any distinction between the 17th and 4th sections, except Houghtaling v. Ball, 20 Mo. 563." In our view, the better reasoning is found in the case of Leroux v. Brown and the authorities which follow it; and the holding of the circuit judge upon this point is sustained.

But it is contended that this defense was not open to the defendant, for the reason that the statute of frauds was not pleaded. We think the general issue was sufficient to enable the defendant to raise the question. It goes to the whole liability. See May v. Sloan, 101 U. S. 231, 25 L. ed. 797;

Busick v. Van Ness, 44 N. J. Eq. 82, 12 Atl. 609. While the authorities are not uniform upon this question, we think the better rule is that a general denial puts the plaintiff to his proof of a contract complying with the law, or of a transaction which would render the defendant liable. For a collection of authorities sustaining this rule, see 9 Enc. Pl. & Pr., p. 709. While the question has never been distinctly ruled by this court, it has been assumed in many cases that the defense of the statute of frauds was open under the general issue. Subdivisions "b" and "c" of circuit court rule No. 7, cited in the brief of counsel for plaintiff, have no application.

It is further contended that the circuit judge erred in directing a verdict, and in refusing to admit a certain letter written by defendant, for the reason that, had the letter been received, it would have shown, in effect, that there was a written statement signed by George A. Steel. The contents of the letter offered in evidence were as follows, the letter being addressed to the president of the plaintiff bank: "I remember, when arranging the loan prior to October, 1895, of exhibiting statement of my father's resources and liabilities, showing net resources considerably in excess of $1,000,000, as shown by his books; and at the time stated that considerable fire loss since the date of statement reduced this amount somewhat." Was this letter so connected with the statement in question as to make the latter a signed statement, within the meaning of the statute? It will be noted that the statement introduced in evidence was not exhibited by defendant, George A. Steel, in person, but by General Spaulding. It will also appear that there was not enough in this writing to identify the statement, either as to amount or date, but parol evidence would have to be introduced to connect them. Further than that, the exhibited statement was, according to the terms of the letter introduced, not the whole substance of the communication made by defendant to the plaintiff. We think, therefore, it cannot be said that this amounted to a signed statement within the requirements of this statute.

The judgment will be affirmed.

Long and Grant, JJ., did not sit. The other Justices concur.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

William HENSLIN, Appt.,
v.

Charles A. WHEATON et al., Respts.

(.....Minn.....)

*1. In an action against a physician and surgeon for negligence and unskillfulness in applying to plaintiff's body the device known as "Roentgen's X-rays" for the purpose of locating a foreign substance thought to be in his lungs, it is held that the rule of liability is the same as that applied in other actions for malpractice, and one of ordinary care and prudence.

2. A physician who applies the X-rays, not for medical purposes, but to locate a foreign substance in the body of his patient, is not entitled to have the question of his care and skill in applying it determined by the opinions of physicians of his own school.

(January 8, 1904.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the District Court for Ramsey County

* Headnotes by BROWN, J.

NOTE.—As to degree of care or skill that a physician or surgeon must exercise generally, see, in this series, Whitesell v. Hill, 37 L. R. A. 830, and note; also Burk v. Foster, 59 L. R. A. 277, and cases in note to Johnson v. State, 61 L. R. A. 287.
64 L. R. A.

denying his motion for new trial after judgment in defendants' favor, in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been inflicted upon him by defendants' malpractice. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. S. C. Olmstead and Charles H. Taylor, for appellant:

The evidence shows a prima facie case of negligence for the jury. The exposures of plaintiff to said machine were made by Dennis, not as medical treatment, but in an attempt to satisfy himself of the location, in plaintiff's body, of the piece of gold metal inhaled by plaintiff, before advising plaintiff whether or not its presence might prove injurious.

Harriott v. Plimpton, 166 Mass. 585, 44 N. E. 992.

Under the maxim or rule known as "res ipsa loquitur," it was not necessary for plaintiff to have made direct proof of negligence on the part of defendants.

21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 512; Wood v. Roxborough C. H. & N. Pass. R. Co. 12 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 155; Rintoul v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 17 Fed. 905; Bevis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 26 Mo. App. 19; Ellis v. Portsmouth & R. R. Co. 24 N. C. (2 Ired. L.) 138; Moore v. Parker, 91

N. C. 275; 1 Kinkad, Torts, § 371, pp. 729-732; 1 Shearn. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. §§ 58-60; McLean v. Burbank, 11 Minn. 277, Gil. 189; Olson v. Great Northern R. Co. 68 Minn. 155, 71 N. W. 5; Clarke v. Nussau Electric R. Co. 9 App. Div. 51, 41 N. Y. Supp. 78; West v. Martin, 31 Mo. 375, 80 Am. Dec. 107; Hathorn v. Richmond, 48 Vt. 557; Sanderson v. Holland, 3s Mo. App. 233.

The dangerous character of electricity, in high voltage, has come to be a matter of common knowledge. This common knowledge, it would seem, should in itself have required extreme care on the part of defendant Dennis, when assuming to expose plaintiff in the manner which he did; for the thought of danger in so frequent and extended exposures would have occurred, even to a layman.

Wittenberg v. Onsgard, 78 Minn. 342, 47 L. R. A. 141, 81 N. W. 14; 1 Kinkad, Torts, § 371.

Messrs. C. D. O'Brien, T. D. O'Brien, and T. A. Garrity for respondents.

Brown, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Action to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by the negligence and unskillfulness of defendants. The action was dismissed on the trial in the court below, and the plaintiff appealed from an order denying a new trial. The facts are as follows: Plaintiff, under the impression that he had inhaled into his lungs the gold crown of one of his teeth, went to defendants, who are practising physicians and surgeons, for medical advice and treatment. He informed one of the defendants of his trouble,—the fact that he had inhaled the gold crown,—and was anxious to know what could be done to relieve him. For the purpose of locating the crown, if anywhere in his lungs, defendants applied the X-rays to his person. He was exposed to this device on several different occasions, one or two skiagraphs being taken; but the efforts to locate the crown by this method were unsuccessful. Plaintiff suffered no particular inconvenience from the fact that it was in his lungs, but he was anxious to have it located, and, if possible, removed. About two weeks subsequent to the application of the X-rays to his person there appeared upon his back what is termed an "X-ray burn." This was very painful, and did not immediately yield to medical treatment, or become wholly healed for a considerable time, though it appears to have been wholly healed at the time of the trial of the action. On the theory and claim that defendants were negligent and unskillful in applying the X-rays to his person, this action was brought to recover damages.

This is the first case to come before us involving alleged negligence on the part of physicians in applying the recently discovered X-rays, and no rule of care in such cases has been laid down. But there can be no doubt that the rule applicable to the care and skill required of physicians toward their patients in other cases applies. That rule was stated in Martin v. Courtney, 87 Minn. 197, 91 N. W. 487, in the following language: "The legal obligation of the physician to his patient, where his conduct is questioned in an action of this character, demands of him no more than the exercise of such reasonable care and skill as is usually given by physicians and surgeons in good standing." The rule is one of ordinary care and prudence, and the question presented in the case at bar is whether the evidence received and that offered on the trial tended to show a failure on the part of defendants to exercise such care. Plaintiff testified, in support of the allegations of the complaint, that the exposure of his person to the X-rays was made for too long a period of time, and that the tube or bulb through which the rays are generated was placed too close to his body. He testified to the number of times the X-rays were applied, and the length of time,—from thirty to forty minutes on each occasion,—and that the tube of the apparatus was placed within 2 inches of his person in each instance, except one. Plaintiff then called Prof. Freeman as an expert witness, who testified that he was familiar with electricity, and had been from childhood; that he had taught it for a number of years; that he knew the X-ray and its properties; that he had been a professor of physical sciences at the State Normal School at Winona; that he had used the X-ray more or less since its discovery by Roentgen in demonstrations and diagnosis, and in lectures before classes in physics and classes in the study of therapeutical methods. He disclosed that he was thoroughly familiar with the apparatus and had used both the coil and static machines, and had examined frequently the style of machine used by defendants. In short, the foundation was fully laid for his opinion as an expert touching the questions involved in the case. Plaintiff sought to prove by him that it was negligence to apply the X-ray to the person of a patient with the tube only 2 inches from the body; that the effect of the X-ray upon the body, and the extent or degree the flesh would be affected, are determined by the nearness of the exposure; and also whether the nearness of the exposure was likely to cause an X-ray burn, when, if farther removed, such would not result. In short, the testimony of this witness, if received, would tend to show unskilfulness and negligence on the part of defendants. Defendants objected to all such evidence on the ground that the witness was not a physician and surgeon, and was incompetent to testify against them under the rule announced in the case of Martin v. Courtney, 75 Minn. 255, 77 N. W. 813, which objection the court sustained. The ruling is assigned as error. It was held in that case that, in an action against a physician or surgeon for malpractice—unskilfulness in treatment being charged—the physician was entitled to have the propriety of his treatment tested by physicians of the same school; that, if a physician of the allopathic school be sued for malpractice, the question whether his treatment was unskilful should be tested by the rules and methods of that school, and the testimony of a physician of the homeopathic school would be incompetent. The trial court applied that rule to the case at bar, and in doing so we are of opinion that it erred. The application of the X-ray to plaintiff was not for the purpose of treating any disease or ailment from which he suffered, but for the purpose of locating, if possible, a foreign substance thought to be in his lungs. While it, perhaps, may in some instances be used as a remedial agent, it was not so employed in this case. The so-called X-rays, discovered by Roentgen, have been recognized and known to scientists, both in and out of the medical profession, for some eight years. During this time the apparatus for the generation of the X-rays, together with the fluoroscope, has been used very generally by electricians, professors of physics, skiagraphers, physicians, and others, for experimental and demonstrative purposes. It is a scientific and mechanical appliance, the operation of which is the same in the hands of the college professor, or the physician of the allopathic, homeopathic, or any other school of medicine. It may be applied by any person possessing the requisite scientific knowledge of its properties, and there would seem to be no reason why its application to the human body may not be explained by any person who understands it. The rule in the Courtney Case can, therefore, have no application to the case at bar. It might apply, did it appear that the application of the X-rays to plaintiff's person was for medical purposes, and not for the scientific purpose of discovering the presence of a foreign substance in his lungs.

It was conceded by the defendants that the X-ray burn frequently follows an application of the rays to the body, but that some are not susceptible to its influence, while others are; that the burn is likely to follow, regardless of the distance the apparatus is placed from the person of the patient; and that it is impossible to determine in advance who are and who are not susceptible to injurious effects. Whether this is so, or not, we are not permitted to determine at this time. The question was one of fact, or perhaps might have been, had the case been fully tried, and for the jury to determine.

For the error in excluding the evidence of witness Freeman and dismissing the action, the order appealed from must be reversed.

It is so ordered.

MONTANA SUPREME COURT.

ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS, Division 1, of Anaconda, Appt.,
v.

Charles W. SPARROW et al., Respts.

(.....Mont.....)

1. A court will not blindly follow the construction of a particular statute by the courts of the state from which it was borrowed, when it does not appeal to the court as founded on right reasoning.
2. The liability of sureties on a contractor's bond is not for the direct payment of money, within the meaning of a statute authorizing an attachment in actions on contracts "for the direct payment of money."

(November 16, 1903.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the District Court for Deer Lodge County dissolving an attachment. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. T. O'Leary and H. R. Whitehill, for appellant:

The action is upon a bond,—an express contract for the direct payment of money. It is for an amount certain. The measure of liability is furnished and fixed, and all sums within that measure are agreed to be paid, and agreed to be paid on a con-

NOTE.—The above decision presents an unusual question in the law of attachment.

As to attachments in actions on contracts tainted with fraud, see note to Weare Commission Co. v. Druley, 30 L. R. A. 465.
64 L. R. A.

t contingency which it is alleged has become certain. The plaintiff alleges that the full amount of the bond is due. That is the fact in issue, and it cannot be determined upon a motion to dissolve the attachment.

Newell v. Whitwell, 16 Mont. 243, 40 Pac. 866; De Leonis v. Etchepare, 120 Cal. 407, 52 Pac. 718; Withers v. Brittain, 35 Neb. 436, 53 N. W. 375.

The contract is for the direct payment of money upon a contingency which in this case is alleged to have happened. The bond only limits the amount to be paid and all sums within that limit are agreed to be paid. The proof goes only to such as are within the bond, and as to such the bond liquidates them.

Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161; Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 215; San Francisco v. Brader, 50 Cal. 506; Monterey County v. McKee, 51 Cal. 255; Donnelly v. Struven, 63 Cal. 182; Dunn v. Mackey, 80 Cal. 104, 22 Pac. 64; Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9, 33 Pac. 741; Flagg v. Dare, 107 Cal. 482, 40 Pac. 804; Hyman v. Newell, 7 Colo. App. 78, 42 Pac. 1016; Wilson v. Wilson, 8 Gill, 192, 50 Am. Dec. 685; Fisher v. Consequa, 2 Wash. C. C. 382, Fed. Cas. No. 4,816; Drake, Attachm. §§ 12-23, 27; Roelofson v. Hatch, 3 Mich. 277; Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Fonda, 65 Mich. 533, 32 N. W. 664.

Our statute is similar to, and taken from, the statutes of California. The California cases are therefore controlling in this state. Sharman v. Huot, 20 Mont. 555, 63 Am. St. Rep. 645, 52 Pac. 558.

Meers, Rodgers & Rodgers and George B. Winston for respondents.

Holloway, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On November 16, 1898, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Division No. 1, of Anaconda, Montana, entered into an agreement with Edward B. White, a contractor and builder, by the terms of which White agreed to furnish the materials and erect a building for the order in Anaconda, for which he was to be paid the sum of $13,575, the building to be completed prior to December 1, 1898, and all the work to be done according to plans and specifications which were furnished. For the faithful performance of that contract White executed his indemnity bond in the sum of $3,500, with respondents Sparrow, Wegner, Radefeld, and Thieffenthaler as sureties, the condition of the undertaking being that, "if the said Edward B. White shall in all things comply with the contract in letter and spirit, and turn over to the said A. O. H. Div. No. 1, of Anaconda, the said building fully finished and completed in all its parts in strict compliance with the said plans and specifications, . . . then the above obligation to be void, otherwise to remain in full force and virtue." The complaint alleges that, although White entered upon the work and performed a part of it, he abandoned the same before it was completed, and that the appellant was compelled to complete the same at a cost of more than $4,500 over and above the contract price of the building. The complaint then alleges that prior to the commencement of this action this appellant recovered a judgment against White for the breach of said contract in the sum of $5,440, and that White was soon afterwards adjudged a bankrupt without assets. The prayer of the complaint is for the full amount of the bond.

At the time of the commencement of this action and the issuance of summons, upon a proper affidavit being made and the undertaking required by law being given, the clerk of the district court issued a writ of attachment under which the sheriff of Deer Lodge county levied upon property belonging to the defendants. Thereafter the defendants appeared, and moved the court to discharge the attachment upon the ground, among others, that the action is not founded upon a contract for the direct payment of money within the meaning of §§ 890 and 891 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This motion was by the court sustained, and the attachment dissolved. From the order dissolving the attachment this appeal is prosecuted.

Section 890 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides as follows: "Sec. 890. The plaintiff, at the time of issuing the summons, or at any time afterward, may have the property of the defendant attached, as security for the satisfaction of any judgment that may be recovered, . . . as follows: In an action upon a contract, express or implied, for the direct payment of money," etc. Without question this is an action upon an express contract, and the only difficulty to be met with is in the proper construction of the phrase "for the direct payment of money." So far as we are advised, California and Oregon are the only other states having the same statutory provision. Colorado had prior to 1895. Sections 120 and 121 of the California practice act (Stat. 1851, chap. 5, p. 68; Code Civ. Proc. 1897, §§ 537, 538) contain the same provisions as our § 890, above, and those sections received construction by the supreme court of California in Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161, where by a divided court it was held that an ordinary appeal bond was a contract for the direct payment of money within the meaning of §§ 120 and 121, above. However the majority of the court characterized its own opinion as not being very satisfactory. This decision was made the sole ground for holding that a bail bond was likewise a contract for the direct payment of money (San Francisco v. Brader, 50 Cal. 506); and upon the authority of these two cases the same court, in Monterey County v. McKee, 51 Cal. 255, held the official bond of the county treasurer was such a contract as is contemplated by the attachment statute.

It is contended by appellant that, under the rule of construction that, where a statute is adopted from another state by this state, it is adopted with the construction given it by the highest court of that state, the decision in Hathaway v. Davis is conclusive in this instance. It may be true, as assumed by counsel for appellant, that our § 890, above, was borrowed from California, and yet that is only an assumption, as there is nothing whatever to indicate that it is a fact. The expression "for the direct payment of money" does not appear in our attachment laws from January 15, 1869, to the adoption of the Code in 1895, at which latter date at least two other states had substantially the same statutory provision as California. However, this court will not blindly follow the construction given a particular statute by the court of a state from which we borrowed it, when the decision does not appeal to us as founded on right reasoning. We understand the rule to be "that the construction put upon such statutes by the courts of the state from which they are borrowed is entitled to respectful consideration, and that only strong reasons will warrant a departure from it." Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 371; Oleson v. Wilson, 20 Mont. 544, 63 Am. St. Rep. 639, 52 Pac. 372; or, as was said in Stadler v. First Nat. Bank, 22 Mont. 203, 74 Am. St. Rep. 586, 56 Pac. 114: "When a particular statute has been adopted by this state from the statutes of another, after a judicial interpretation (suited to our condition) has been placed upon it by the parent state, the courts of this state are bound by the interpretation of the courts of the state whence it was adopted, or will at least accord respectful consideration to such interpretation, and depart from it only for strong reasons." Prior to 1895 Colorado had an attachment statute which provided that the writ should issue upon the plaintiff making an affidavit that the action is brought upon an overdue promissory note, bill of exchange, or other written instrument for the direct and unconditional payment of money only or upon an overdue book account. Mills's Anno. Code, § 92. This section received consideration in Hurd v. McClellan, 14 Colo. 213, 23 Pac. 792, which was an action upon an appeal bond, and reference is there made to the case of Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161, and the majority opinion disapproved. The supreme court of Colorado, after holding that such appeal bond does not come within the purview of § 92, above, says: "In this case the obligation assumed by the sureties was not direct, but collateral. They could be charged only upon failure of the principal to pay. If he failed to pay the judgment appealed from, if affirmed by this court, then there would be a breach of the condition of the bond upon which a cause of action might be predicated." In People v. Boylan, 25 Fed. 595, Hallett, J., in construing the above section of the Colorado Code in an action upon an administrator's bond, says: "A direct payment is one which is absolute and unconditional as to time, amount, and the persons by whom and to whom it is to be made. And a written instrument which provides for such payment is one which expresses those terms fully. It is needless to point out the difference between such an instrument and an administrator's bond." Commenting on the majority opinion in Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161, Judge Hallett says: "It is to be observed, also, that in the only case cited from that state [California] in which the question was discussed the views expressed were not altogether satisfactory to the court. . . . And the opinion will hardly be more convincing to the profession than it was to the court." In Hathaway v. Davis, 33 Cal. 161, Sawyer, J., dissenting, says: "The undertaking upon which a recovery is sought is 'that the appellants will pay all damages and costs which may be awarded against defendant on the appeal, not exceeding $300.' This appears to me to be an undertaking that another party shall pay, and not that the party himself will pay. There is no promise that the defendants themselves will pay any money at all, and consequently no contract on their part for the direct payment of money. On a failure of the appellants in the suit to pay in accordance with the terms of the undertaking, there is a breach, it is true, and the party to the undertaking is liable for damages for the breach. But the liability is strictly for damages, and not on his own contract that he himself will pay money. For these reasons I think there was no contract, express or implied, on the part of the defendant for the direct payment of money within the meaning of the attachment law, and that an attachment is unauthorized." It is to be noted that this dissenting opinion is quoted with approval in Hurd v. McClellan, 14 Colo. 213, 23 Pac. 792.

The Code of Civil Procedure of New York

(§ 635) provides for the issuance of an attachment "in an action . . . to recover a sum of money only as damages for . . . a breach of contract, express or implied," and § 649 provides the manner of levying the writ. Construing these sections, the supreme court, in Trepagnier v. Rose, 18 App. Div. 393, 46 N. Y. Supp. 397, said: "But we are clear that, to be an instrument for the payment of money, it must be an instrument which acknowledges an absolute obligation to pay, not conditional or contingent; one, the execution of which being admitted, it would be incumbent on the plaintiff, in an action to enforce it, only to offer the instrument in evidence to entitle him to a recovery,—in other words, an instrument that admits an existing debt. We think that this is the correct line which divides such instruments from other written contracts which contain obligations on the part of one party or the other to pay money, such as agreements of sale, hiring, leases, building contracts, etc."

One of the definitions given in Webster's Dictionary for the word "direct" is "immediate; express; unambiguous; confessed; absolute;" and it does seem that, if the term is to be given any meaning, as used in our attachment statute, it must distinguish a particular class of contracts for the payment of money from all other contracts for the payment of money. In other words, that class of contracts which provide for the direct payment of money must differ somewhat from all other contracts for the payment of money, or the term "direct" has no meaning whatever. The term first appeared in our attachment statute in 1866

(Act Third Legal Assem. approved December 3, 1866, chap. 12, § 1, p. 62). This act was amended by an act of the fifth legislative session approved January 15, 1869 (Laws 1869, § 11, p. 64), and the word "direct" omitted, and it does not reappear until 1895, when its re-enactment into our laws must be presumed to have been done for a purpose, viz., to limit the operation of the writ of attachment. Before 1895 an attachment could be had in every action upon a contract, express or implied, for the payment of money, where the debt was not secured. Since then the writ can only issue in those cases arising on contracts, express or implied, for the direct payment of money, and, applying the definitions of the term "direct" as given above, the obvious intention of the legislature can be made plain. The contracts now contemplated by § 890, above, are such only as require the payment unconditionally and absolutely of a definite sum. As the sureties to the undertaking under consideration became liable only on condition that their principal, White, defaulted in the performance of his contract, and then only for such sum as the indemnified party might recover as damages for the breach (not exceeding the sum mentioned in the bond), we are of the opinion that the bond sued upon is not such a contract as is contemplated in § 890, above, and that the attachment was properly discharged.

The order discharging the attachment is affirmed.

Brantly, Ch. J., and Milburn, J., concur.

NEBRASKA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Nebraska ex rel. LANCASTER COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, Plff. in Err.

v.
Paul HOLM.

(.....Neb.....)

*1. A county officer is not required to account for and pay over to his county money received by him in payment for services performed for another, by private agreement, which are not part of the duties of

*Headnotes by BARNES, C.

NORM.—The above case seems to come very close to the line between the work that a public officer on a salary may do for his own profit during the time for which he receives the salary, and that for which he must account as an officer. If evidence had been admitted that this 64 L. R. A.

his office, and which are not incompatible with, and are not included within, his official duties.

2. It is no part of the official duties of a register of deeds to search the records of his office to ascertain whether persons signing a petition to obtain a liquor license are freeholders.

3. Such officer may, by agreement, perform such services for persons who, under the rules of the excise board of a city, are required to make proof of the qualifications of such signers by his certificate, and may collect and receive such compensation as may be agreed upon therefor.

4. In such a case he must place the fee work was done by his deputies, who were also paid salaries, the claim of the register to the fees would seem manifestly untenable; but this might have raised a question of right as between him and the deputies themselves.

for his certificate and seal on his fee book and account for and pay the same over to the county, if in excess of the salary allowed him by law; but he cannot be compelled to account for and pay over the amount received by him for his labor in searching the records.

(December 16, 1903.)

ERROR to the District Court for Lancaster County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in a mandamus proceeding to compel the accounting for money alleged to belong to the county. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the Commissioner's opinion.

Messrs. James L. Caldwell, William T. Stevens, and Loren E. Winslow, for plaintiff in error:

It is the duty of the county treasurer to make searches of the tax lists, books, and records in his office, in his care and control as such county treasurer, and to make abstracts and copies thereof, and attach his certificate and seal thereto when lawfully demanded, and to demand and receive reasonable fees therefor.

State ex rel. Buffalo County v. Allen, 23 Neb. 451, 36 N. W. 756; State ex rel. Miller v. Sovereign, 17 Neb. 175, 22 N. W. 353; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Leidtke, 12 Neb. 171, 10 N. W. 703; State ex rel. Chesney v. Wallichs, 16 Neb. 110, 20 N. W. 27; Ripley v. Gifford, 11 Iowa, 367; Henry v. Tilson, 17 Vt. 479; State ex rel. Frontier County v. Kelly, 30 Neb. 574, 46 N. W. 714; State ex rel. Holt County v. Hazelet, 41 Neb. 257, 59 N. W. 891; State ex rel. Lancaster County v. Silver, 9 Neb. 85, 2 N. W. 215; Bayha v. Webster County, 18 Neb. 131, 24 N. W. 457; Heald v. Polk County, 46 Neb. 28, 64 N. W. 376.

The county treasurer was the county's officer and agent, and cannot in any instance be heard to say he performed the service as an individual.

Blaco v. State, 58 Neb. 566, 78 N. W. 1056; Morris v. State, 47 Tex. 593; Com. v. Philadelphia, 27 Pa. 497; Olean v. King, 116 N. Y. 362, 22 N. E. 559; People v. Swineford, 77 Mich. 573, 43 N. W. 929; People v. Van Ness, 79 Cal. 84, 12 Am. St. Rep. 134, 21 Pac. 554; Hughes v. People, 82 Ill. 78; Delaware County v. Griffin, 17 Iowa, 166; Graham County v. Van Slyck, 52 Kan. 622, 35 Pac. 299.

He performed these services as register of deeds; he assumed to have the power to perform the service and make the certificate; and he charged for it as register of deeds.

State v. Leach, 60 Me. 58, 11 Am. Rep. 172; State v. Wedge, 24 Minn. 150; State v. Porter (Neb.) 95 N. W. 769. 64 L. R. A.

That the services were performed after office hours is immaterial.

State ex rel. Holt County v. Hazelet, 41 Neb. 257, 59 N. W. 891.

On petition for rehearing.

Wherever the rights of third persons require the performance of a duty, it becomes an official duty.

Smith v. State, 1 Kan. 365.

Fees are a compensation for public officers for services rendered to individuals.

Tillman v. Wood, 58 Ala. 578; Evans v. Trenton, 24 N. J. L. 764; State ex rel. Holt County v. Hazelet, 41 Neb. 257, 59 N. W. 891; Flemming v. Hudson County, 30 N. J. L. 280.

Paul Holm and his deputy and clerks were the servants and agents of the county, and could not act in an official and a private capacity at the same time. All "fees" belong to the county.

Bedwell v. Custer County, 51 Neb. 387, 70 N. W. 945; Hayes County v. Christner, 61 Neb. 275, 85 N. W. 73.

He charged fees for his services, and cannot be heard to claim that they are his own perquisites.

Ripley v. Gifford, 11 Iowa, 367; Henry v. Tilson, 17 Vt. 479; Morris v. State, 47 Tex. 593; Com. v. Philadelphia, 27 Pa. 497; People v. Swineford, 77 Mich. 573, 43 N. W. 929; People v. Van Ness, 79 Cal. 84, 12 Am. St. Rep. 134, 21 Pac. 554; State v. Leach, 60 Me. 58, 11 Am. Rep. 172.

Messrs. Stewart & Munger, for defendant in error:

There is no statute prescribing any fee or charge to be made by the register of deeds for such services.

Officer's fees are charges authorized by law to be made for specific acts of official duty.

Drexel v. Douglas County, 62 Neb. 862, 87 N. W. 1055.

These charges were neither "authorized law;" nor were they for acts of "official duty;" nor is any fee prescribed by law.

Lusk v. Carlin, 5 Ill. 395.

As it was not respondent's duty to do the work, he could either refuse to do it or contract for a compensation therefor.

Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882, 86 N. W. 941; Drexel v. Douglas County, 62 Neb. 862, 87 N. W. 1053; Cornell v. Irvine, 56 Neb. 657, 77 N. W. 114; Mallory v. Ferguson, 50 Kan. 685, 22 L. R. A. 99, 32 Pac. 410; State v. Obert, 53 Kan. 107, 36 Pac. 64; San Bernardino County v. Davidson, 112 Cal. 503, 44 Pac. 659.

Unless the statute allows a fee for a legal duty, none can be charged, but the services must be gratuitous.

Red Willow County v. Smith (Neb.) 93 N. W. 151; O'Shea v. Kavanaugh (Neb.)

91 N. W. 578; State ex rel. Axen v. Meserve, 58 Neb. 451, 78 N. W. 721; Stoner v. Keith County, 48 Neb. 279, 67 N. W. 311; Held v. Polk County, 46 Neb. 28, 64 N. W. 376; Bayha v. Webster County, 18 Neb. 131, 24 N. W. 457; State ex rel. Lancaster County v. Silver, 9 Neb. 85, 2 N. W. 215; 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 390; Howland v. Wright County, 82 Iowa, 164, 47 N. W. 1086.

If Holm had no authority to collect any fees, or exacted too much, such an act is illegal, and is denounced by statute. For doing that he must pay a penalty for every offense.

Courier Printing & Pub. Co. v. Leese (Neb.) 91 N. W. 357; O'Shea v. Kavanaugh (Neb.) 91 N. W. 578; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. McEvony, 52 Neb. 567, 72 N. W. 956.

In addition, an officer is liable on his bond to the person from whom such fee is exacted.

Kane v. Union P. R. Co. 5 Neb. 105; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. McEvony, 52 Neb. 566, 72 N. W. 956.

Barnes, C., filed the following opinion:

The plaintiff in error filed its petition in the district court against the defendant, praying for a writ of mandamus to compel him, as register of deeds of Lancaster county, to enter certain sums of money, received as hereinafter stated, on his fee books, and to account for and pay the same over to said county. Defendant filed his answer to the alternative writ, and on the issues thus joined, together with a stipulation or agreed statement of facts, the court rendered a judgment denying the writ and dismissing the relator's action. From that judgment the county prosecuted error.

It appears from the record that, during the time the defendant was the register of deeds of Lancaster county, the excise board of the city of Lincoln required every person applying for a saloon license in said city to obtain a certificate of the register of deeds to the effect that the persons signing his petition were freeholders; that during the defendant's two terms of office he made search of the records and furnished such certificates for 224 applicants; that he charged each of such persons for his investigation of the records $3.50, and 50 cents for his certificate as register of deeds; that in each case he reported the 50 cents for the certificate as fees, placed the same upon his fee book, and duly accounted for and paid the same over to the county. It further appears that his salary fixed by law was $2,500 per year; that he received and retained that sum for each fiscal year, which included the sums so reported for certificates as aforesaid; that he refused to enter the amount paid him for searching the records on his fee book, and refused to pay it over to the county, claiming that such service was no part of his official duties, and that he had the right to contract with the applicants for his work in examining the records, and receive from each of them such a sum as they should agree to pay him for the services so performed. It is contended, however, on the part of the relator, that the sums so received by the defendant were collected and received by him by virtue of his office, that he was entitled to receive only $2,500 per year from all sources, and that therefore the court erred in denying the writ and dismissing the action. This is the sole question presented for our consideration.

It may be stated at the outset that, if the services for which respondent received the money in question were any part of the duties of his office, he would be required to account for and pay the same over to the relator; and it would make no difference whether the statute prescribing such duties fixed the amount of compensation therefor, or whether the amount was fixed by the agreement of the respondent and the person for whom he performed the service. Counsel for the relator contends that the money was received because of respondent's official position, and the judgment should be reversed because of the rule announced in State ex rel. Miller v. Sovereign, 17 Neb. 175, 22 N. W. 353. In that case the acts performed by Sovereign were a part of his official duties, and it was held that he could not, by making his certificate as a notary public instead of county clerk, avoid accounting for the fees which were fixed by law for the performance of those duties. We are also cited to the well-known case of State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Leidtke, 12 Neb. 171, 10 N. W. 703. In that case Leidtke, who was the auditor of public accounts, performed certain duties in administering the law relating to insurance companies. Those duties were required of him by virtue of his office, and the fees therefor were fixed by law. The statute further provided that such fees should be paid to him as auditor. It was contended that for that reason he was entitled to retain those fees in addition to the amount of his salary as fixed by law and the Constitution. It was held that the Constitution requires these fees to be paid to the state treasurer, and Leidtke was for that reason ordered to account for and pay the same over to the state. Counsel also calls our attention to the case of State ex rel. Chesney v. Wallich, 16 Neb. 110, 20 N. W. 27. The only question involved in that case was whether or not a county presenting its refunding bonds to the auditor for registration must pay one fourth of 1 per cent on the dollar for each bond registered as provided by law. Our attention is also called to State ex rel. Frontier County v. Kelly, 30 Neb. 574, 46 N. W. 714. In that case it was held that where a county clerk, who was also a notary public, took acknowledgments of deeds, mortgages, affidavits, and depositions, as a notary public, it was his duty to enter upon his fee book, as county clerk, and report to the county board, every item received by him for such services, under the rule laid down in State ex rel. Miller v. Sovereign, 17 Neb. 175, 22 N. W. 353. It was further held that he could not retain the fees received by him for making and certifying abstracts of title, which was a part of the duties of his office, although he was at that time a bonded abstractor. The relator relies, also, on the case of State ex rel. Holt County v. Hazelet, 41 Neb. 257, 59 N. W. 891. In that case the county clerk insisted that he was entitled to receive, retain, and not account for and pay over to the county, the fee of $2 for furnishing the sheriff with a certificate of liens and encumbrances in cases of appraisals and sale under decrees of foreclosure and on execution. It was held that it was a part of the official duties of the clerk to furnish such certificates when requested to do so by the sheriff; that he was entitled to collect therefor the sum of $2 in each case, which he must enter upon his fee book and account for, notwithstanding the duty was performed by his deputies outside of regular office hours. State ex rel. Lancaster County v. Silver, 9 Neb. 85, 2 N. W. 215, is also relied on by the relator. Silver was the county clerk of Lancaster county, and claimed that extra compensation should be allowed him by the board of commissioners for making the tax list and duplicates. His claim was disallowed, and it was held that a public officer must discharge all of the duties pertaining to his office for the compensation allowed by law, and that he cannot be allowed compensation for extra work unless it is authorized by the statute. We are further cited to Bayha v. Webster County, 18 Neb. 131, 24 N. W. 457. The only question presented in that case was whether or not the clerk was entitled to extra compensation for making out the tax list, and it was again held that a public officer must discharge all the duties pertaining to his office for the compensation allowed by law; that he can receive no compensation for extra work unless it is authorized by statute. Lastly, our attention is called to the case of Heald v. Polk County, 46 Neb. 28, 64 N. W. 376, where the same question was involved, and was decided in the same way as in the case last above mentioned.

It is further contended that, even if it was not the official duty of the respondent to perform these services, yet he was the county's officer, and the custodian of its books and seal, and that he cannot be heard to say that he performed them as an individual. To sustain this view, the relator cites Blaco v. State, 58 Neb. 566, 78 N. W. 1056. An examination of that case discloses that the decision is based, as in all of the foregoing cases, on the fact that the fees were received on account of official services provided for by law; and the particular point decided was that the respondent must account for such fees, whether he performed the services regularly or irregularly, and that his bondsmen could not escape liability on the claim that the services were irregularly performed.

So it would seem that our decision must be based upon the sole question as to whether or not the services rendered for the applicants, as above stated, were a part of the official duties of the respondent. If they were, then he must account for and pay over the money received therefor to the relator. If, however, they were no part of his official duties, then the question falls within the rule announced in the case of State v. Obert, 53 Kan. 107, 36 Pac. 64, where it was held that a county treasurer, who, for compensation, made searches and answered letters of inquiry, and charged therefor, without a statute authorizing a charge, did not have to report such fees, except for his certificate alone. The law of Kansas on this question is the same as the law of this state. It was provided by the Kansas statutes that, in counties having a population of more than 5,000, and not over 10,000, the treasurer should receive $1,500 per annum, and that he should account for, and pay over to the county, all of the money collected by him as fees in excess of that amount. It was stated in the body of the opinion that, under the general statutes relating to fees and salaries, county officers are entitled to no more compensation than the salaries fixed by law, and that all fees received by them for official services should be accounted for, and deducted from each quarterly allowance of salary. The court further said: "We do not think that the fees Obert collected for making and certifying abstracts of title, and in writing letters, and giving information therein as to taxes, etc., should be reported or accounted for. Such services are no part of the official duty of a county treasurer, as that duty is defined by the statute;" citing Mallory v. Ferguson, 50 Kan. 685, 22 L. R. A. 99, 32 Pac. 410. The same rule was announced in the case of San Bernardino County v. Davidson, 112 Cal. 503, 44 Pac. 659. In that case it was shown that it was the custom of miners to have the county recorder record notice of mining claims. There was no statute requiring such work, but the clerk kept a record, and charged for it. It was held that "it was no duty imposed by law, and no fees fixed by law for it, and hence he need not account for such fees." The case of Cornell v. Irvine, 56 Neb. 657, 77 N. W. 114, seems to throw some light on this question. There it was said that, where a state officer has rendered services outside of, and not incompatible with, his duties as such officer, it is not proper for the auditor of public accounts to refuse to issue a warrant in payment of such extra services merely because the salary of such officer was already paid for the period during which said extra services were rendered. And so it was held that Judge Irvine was entitled to receive compensation for lectures delivered to the law class of the State University, and that such services were not incompatible with, and were not included within the scope of, his duties as supreme court commissioner. We have recently held in Shepard v. Easterling, 61 Neb. 882, 86 N. W. 941, that a county judge might be allowed the sum of $300 by the county board for docketing several hundred old cases, and for making an index to the records of the probate court, because such services were extraofficial; in other words, that the county judge could not be required, as a part of the duties of his office to perform the services which should have been performed by his predecessor, and, although no fees were fixed by law for the performance of such services, he could contract with the commissioners to do that work, and would be entitled to receive the amount agreed upon, over and above the amount of fees which he could retain during his current term. In the case at bar it cannot be contended that the respondent was obliged to perform the services in question as a part of his official duties. The rule of the excise board of the city of Lincoln was in no manner binding upon him. He could not be compelled to perform any duties or services except such as the statute enjoined upon him. As a strict matter of law, there seems to be no reason why he could not contract with the persons applying for saloon licenses to search the records for them, and receive such compensation therefor as might be agreed upon. The fact that such services were performed by his deputies, who had received payment from the county for their services, or that they were performed by himself personally, we are not at liberty to consider, because no competent offer to prove that fact was made by the relator. While the conduct of the respondent may be of doubtful propriety, and while, perhaps, from an equitable standpoint, the money in question ought to be paid to the relator, yet these matters cannot be taken into consideration by us in deciding this case. The question presented is whether or not, as a matter of law, the respondent can be compelled to account for and pay over the money in controversy herein. It appearing that the services rendered by respondent were no part of the duties of his office, we are constrained to hold that the money paid him therefor under private contract or agreement cannot be recovered by the relator, and therefore the district court did not err in denying the writ and dismissing the action.

For the reasons above given, we recommend that the judgment of the district court be affirmed.

Albert and Glanville, CC., concur.

Per Curiam:

For the reasons stated in the foregoing opinion, the judgment of the District Court is affirmed.

Petition for rehearing denied.

NORTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

J. D. ELLIOTT, Appt.,

v.

M. F. JEFFERSON.

(183 N. C. 207.)

1. Where a grantor, in dividing his estate, makes calls different from those which he had previously marked upon the ground, the question whether those in the deed, or those marked on the ground, will control, depends upon his intention.

NOTE.—As to controlling effect of landmarks or monuments over calls for courses and distances in determining boundaries, see also, in this series, Teass v. St. Albans, 19 L. R. A. 802, 64 L. R. A.

2. One claiming that calls in a deed, which vary from those previously run on the ground, did not represent the will of the grantor, has the burden of showing that fact, where the calls in the deed are not inherently inconsistent.
3. The rule that a marked line controls a call in a deed for course and distance is not applicable unless the marked line is so connected with the deed, either by intrinsic or extrinsic evidence, as to create a presumption that the grantor intended to adopt it.

4. No rule can be invoked for the construction of a deed which tends to defeat the intention of the grantor.

(October 20, 1903.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for Beaufort County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover certain logs which were alleged to have been wrongfully cut on property belonging to plaintiff. Affirmed. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Rodman & Rodman, for appellant:

The object of every deed is to enable one to retrace the lines actually made, or intended to be made, as the boundaries of the tract conveyed. The rule is that lines actually run and marked at or before the execution of the deed control course and distance.

Cherry v. Slade, 7 N. C. (3 Murph.) 82; Den ex dem. Reed v. Shenok, 14 N. C. (3 Dev. L.) 76; Safret v. Hartman, 50 N. C. (5 Jones L.) 185; Shaffer v. Hahn, 111 N. C. 1, 15 S. E. 1033.

If both Elliott and Jefferson are in possession of different parts of the disputed land, the possession of that part not in the actual possession of either is in him who has the true title.

Boomer v. Gibbs, 114 N. C. 76, 19 S. E. 226.

Messrs. Small & MacLean and Charles F. Warren for appellee.

Douglas, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for the recovery of certain logs, and, in its determination, involves the title to the land from which the logs were cut. There are many exceptions both to the giving and refusal of instructions, but all that are necessary for us to consider are substantially involved in the question whether the line run and marked by Burbank before the execution of the deeds in question should control the boundaries of the land, regardless of the calls in the deed. As the jury found the issues as to title in favor of the defendant, all question as to the measure of damages is practically eliminated from the consideration of this case. Both parties claim under J. S. and W. H. Lodge by deeds of equal date, so the only question of boundary is as to the dividing line between the two tracts.

The principal exception relied on by the plaintiff is to the refusal of the court to give the following instruction: "If the jury, from the evidence, find that the two Lodges, who then owned the land, in 1875 employed the witness Burbank to run out these lands, which are afterwards conveyed unto the Morgans and Mrs. Corbin, and that in making this survey of these lands the witness Burbank ran from the gum to the pine, and from the pine to the cypress stump under water, and that this line from the pine to the stump was blazed or marked, and that afterwards the deed to the Morgans was made, calling from the gum north, 73 east, and from the pine 73½ east, and that the line called for in these deeds was the line which Burbank ran from the gum to the pine and from the pine to the stump under water, then these lines actually run and marked would be the true lines, whether the course given in the deed was the same course the compass now gives or not." If this prayer referred to the purpose and intent of the grantors at the time the deeds were executed, we think it is sufficiently included in the instructions that were given. If it meant anything else, it was properly refused.
64 L. R. A.

The following instructions, among others, were given by the court: "The court charges you that the burden is upon the plaintiff to satisfy you by a preponderance of the evidence that W. H. and John S. Lodge, for the purpose of making the division above mentioned, had the line claimed by plaintiff actually run and marked, and established such line as the dividing line between these two tracts of land; and further, that when the deeds to Mary Morgan and Martha Corbin were made on March 15, 1876, after the survey of Burbank, it was the intention of said W. H. and John S. Lodge, in describing the lands conveyed in said deed, to convey the same as run and marked by said Burbank; and the plaintiff must satisfy you by a preponderance of the evidence that this line was actually run and marked as the division line between the Morgan and Corbin land, and that when the deeds were made it was the purpose and intention of said John S. and W. H. Lodge to convey the land in accordance with this line, if you find that the same was run and marked as before explained. . . . Now, if you should find from the evidence that it was the purpose of the parties to this deed, at the time the same was made, not to run from the pine to the stump, but that it was their purpose and intention to run from the pine the course and distance called for in the deed, to the creek, then the line as described in this deed, allowing the proper variation, would be the true line of the defendant Jefferson. . . . If you should find from the evidence that it was the purpose and intention of the parties to the deed to begin at the gum designated by Gay, and run the course and distance given in the deed to Mary Morgan, then the line as described in said deed, allowing the proper variation, would be the true line of the Mary Morgan tract. If it was the purpose and intention of John S. and W. H. Lodge to make the line from the pine to the stump the division line between the Mary Morgan and Martha J. Corbin land, and the survey was made for that purpose, and the line actually run and marked, still they could abandon such purpose and intention, and make the lines such as they inserted in the deeds, and, if they did not so abandon their purpose, the lines as inserted in their deeds would control." We see no error in these instructions, or in any material part of the charge. The plaintiff says in his brief: "We submit that these instructions, as given by the court, were erroneous, in that they made the whole question of whether the marked line controlled in the deed turn on whether the course as given was given by mistake or not. We contend that there are two grounds upon which the marked line controls: (1) When the call is north or south, and the line actually runs south or north, we submit that there is a question of mistake; that the draftsman simply makes the mistake of reversing his call. (2) That there is another ground, and that is that where a surveyor goes out and actually runs a line, and takes the course as given by his compass at the time, and records that course, and the line is marked by it, that the marked line controls. The course as given by his compass may be recorded by the draftsman correctly, but the compass may have had some temporary aberration of the needle, causing it to read incorrectly. Now, this view of the law was entirely excluded by the charge as given by the court, but it was made to depend upon the question of intention and mistake, and, we submit, under the authorities above cited, was erroneous." His honor was correct in charging that the jury should be governed in their verdict by what they might find to have been the purpose and intention of the grantors at the time of the execution of the deeds. If at that time they intended to adopt the line run and marked by Burbank, and thought that the calls in the deed followed that line, there was evidently a mistake in drawing the deed, as it failed to correctly set forth the intention of the grantors. If, however, they intended the line to follow the calls in the deed, regardless of any marked line, such calls must control the location of the line. Where the description in a deed is not inherently inconsistent, it is the prima facie expression of the will of the grantor. It is different where, for instance, the courses and distances are incapable of practical location, or are inconsistent with marked lines or other natural objects called for in the deed itself. This matter would have been much simplified if the deeds in question had called for the Burbank line, which might easily have been done, had the grantors so desired.

There is an exception to the following charge: "That, if the two deeds to Mary Morgan and Martha Corbin were drawn without mistake on the part of the draftsman, then the lines called for in these deeds would control, and not the marked lines, if any exist." This paragraph, taken by itself, might be capable of misconstruction, from the use of the word "draftsman," but we think it is so qualified by the remainder of the charge as to clearly inform the jury that they must be governed by the intent of the grantors, whose language the deed is supposed to be, in the absence of evidence to the contrary. We think the error of the plaintiff lies in a misapprehension of the application of the rule that in case of a discrepancy a marked line controls the calls in the deed as to courses and distances. This rule never applies unless the marked line is so connected with the deed, either by intrinsic or extrinsic evidence, as to create a presumption as to the intent of the grantor. The mere running and marking of a line can never convey the title to land, nor can it take the place of a deed. At best, it can only serve to locate the land conveyed in the deed, and can operate only in aid of the deed. Admitting that a line is run in contemplation of a deed, it does not bind the grantor, as a different contract may be made, or the line subsequently changed. As no title can vest, except by the execution of a deed, the vital question is the intent of the grantor at the time of such execution. Perhaps the farthest this court has gone in allowing marked lines to control a conveyance of land is in Barker v. Southern R. Co. 125 N. C. 596, 74 Am. St. Rep. 658, 34 S. E. 701. It was there held that where a grantor had executed a deed defective in fact, but admittedly intending to convey the land in question, and, in furtherance of such intention, had had the land surveyed, and had placed the defendant in possession thereof, under known and visible boundaries, he was estopped from maintaining an action of ejectment against the defendant, who had ever since remained in open, continuous, and adverse possession. That case turned upon the doctrine of estoppel, and not upon the theory that the marked lines and corners had given validity to the deed. If the defendant had not been in possession, and especially if the land had been in possession of an innocent purchaser, a different question would have been presented. Wherever a marked line or other natural object is permitted to vary the description called for in the deed, it is always in presumed furtherance of the intent of the grantor in the execution of the deed. In other words, it is to carry out the true intent of the deed, and never in derogation thereof. This principle is clearly recognized in the authorities cited by the plaintiff himself, as will appear from the following extracts: In Cherry v. Slade, 7 N. C. (3 Murph.) 82, which really went off on the point that the jury, instead of finding the facts, had only found the evidence, Taylor, Ch. J., says on page 90: "This rule is founded upon the same reasons with the preceding ones, the design of all being to ascertain the location originally made; and calling for a well-known line of another tract denotes the intention of the party, with equal strength, to calling for a natural boundary, so long as that line can be proved." In Den ex dem. Reed v. Shenck, 13 N. C. (2 Dev. L.) 415, the court says on page 417: "For many years we have in all cases, I believe, except one, adhered to the description contained in the deed, and it is much to be lamented that we do not altogether. The case to which I allude is, where the deed describes the land by course and distance only, and old marks are found corresponding in age, as well as can be ascertained, with the date of the deed, and so nearly corresponding with the courses and distances that they may well be supposed to have been made for its boundaries, the marks shall be taken as the termini of the land. This is going as far as prudence permits, for what passes the land not included by the description in the deed, but included by the marked termini? Not the deed, for the description contained in the deed does not comprehend it. It passes, therefore, either by parol or by a mere presumption. As far as we know, there has been no series of decisions by which the description in the deed is varied by marks, unless they were made for the termini of the land described in the deed, or supposed to be so made, and to which it was intended the deed should refer, or to which it was supposed the deed did refer, or, rather, supposed that the courses and distance corresponded with the marks, and that the same land was described, whether by course and distance in the deed, or by the marked termini." In Safret v. Hartman, 50 N. C. (5 Jones L.) 185, the court says on page 189: "His honor charged 'that, notwithstanding the black-oak was not called for in the deed, yet, if it was marked as a corner to the land conveyed, at the time of the conveyance, the line should be extended to it, regardless of course and distance.' In this there is error. His honor misconceived and misapplied the rule laid down in Cherry v. 64 L. R. A.

Slade, 7 N. C. (3 Murph.) 82: 'Where it can be proved that there was a line actually run by the surveyor, which was marked and a corner made, the party claiming under the patent or deed shall hold accordingly, notwithstanding a mistaken description of the land in the patent or deed.' This rule presupposes that the patent or deed is made in pursuance of the survey, and that the line was marked, and the corner that was made in making the survey was adopted and acted upon in making the patent or deed, and therefore permits such line and corner to control the patent or deed, although they are not called for, and do not make a part of it. Parol evidence being thus let in for the purpose of controlling the patent or deed, by establishing a line and corner not called for, as a matter of course, it is also let in for the purpose of showing that such line and corner were not adopted and acted on in making the patent or deed, because the rule presupposes this to be the fact." In Baxter v. Wilson, 95 N. C. 138, the court says on page 143: "For instance, when there has been a practical location of the land, as when it can be proved that there was a line actually run and marked, and a corner made, such a boundary will be upheld, notwithstanding a mistaken description in the deed. Cherry v. Slade, 7 N. C. (3 Murph.) 82. The construction has been adopted by our court, to carry out the intention of the parties, when it is clearly made to appear; and, to effect that object, course and distance will be disregarded, if the means of correcting the mistake be furnished by a more certain description in the same deed, and especially will it be so when some monument is erected contemporaneously with the execution of the deed." The doctrine thus laid down is in full accord with the principles enunciated and the cases cited in Bowen v. Gaylord, 122 N. C. 816, 29 S. E. 340, and is sustained by the general current of authority here and elsewhere. In the construction of all deeds and grants, there is one essential object to be kept in view, and that is to ascertain the true intent of the grantor, and to give full effect to that intention, when not contrary to law. All rules of construction adopted by the courts are simply means to a given end, being those methods of reasoning which experience has taught are best calculated to lead to that intention. Hence all authorities unite in saying that no rule can be invoked, no matter how correct in its general application, that tends to defeat the intention of the grantor. This doctrine is of such universal acceptance as to require but few citations, more to illustrate its extent than to prove its existence. It is well expressed by Chief Justice Shaw in Salisbury v. Andrews, 19 Pick. 250, 252, as follows: "In construing the words of such a grant, where the words are doubtful or ambiguous, several rules are applicable,—all, however, designed to aid in ascertaining what was the intent of the parties, such intent, when ascertained, being the governing principle of construction." In Smith ex dem. Dormer v. Parkhurst, 3 Atk. 135, Lord Chief Justice Willes says: "Another maxim is that such a construction should be made of the words in a deed as is most agreeable to the intention of the grantor. The words are not the principal thing in a deed, but the intent and design of the grantor. We have no power, indeed, to alter the words, or to insert words which are not in the deed; but we may and ought to construe the words in a manner the most agreeable to the meaning of the grantor, and may reject any words that are merely insensible. Those maxims, my lords, are founded upon the greatest authority (Coke, Plowden, and Lord Chief Justice Hale), and the law commends the astutia (the cunning) of judges in construing words in such a manner as shall best answer the intent. The art of construing words in such a manner as shall destroy the intent may show the ingenuity of counsel, but is very ill becoming a judge." Devlin on Deeds, § 835, says: "But it is doubtful how far arbitrary rules can be of service where the only object is to determine the intention of the parties. In fact the truth was well expressed by Mr. Justice Sanderson (Walsh v. Hill, 38 Cal. 481, 487), who said that, 'in the construction of written instruments, we have never derived much aid from the technical rules of the books. The only rule of much value . . . is to place ourselves as near as possible in the seats which were occupied by the parties at the time the instrument was executed; then, taking it by its four corners, read it.' This is the main object of all construction. When the intention of the parties can be ascertained, nothing remains but to effectuate that intention."

The judgment of the court below is affirmed.

STATE of North Carolina

v.

Andrew C. BIGGS, Appt.

(133 N. C. 729.)

1. The legislature cannot define the practice of medicine or surgery, for the purposes of an act forbidding such practice without a license, as the management of any disease, physical or mental, real or imaginary, for fee or reward, by any method whatever.

2. The attempt to confer the exclusive right to treat all diseases, physical or mental, real or imaginary, upon licensed doctors, is unconstitutional.
3. An examination and license as for a practitioner of medicine and surgery cannot be required for the treatment of disease by baths, physical culture, the manipulation of muscles, bones, spine, and solar plexus, and advice as to diet.

(December 18, 1903.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Guilford County, convicting him of practising medicine and surgery without a license, contrary to the provisions of the statute. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. C. M. Stedman and E. J. Justice, for appellant:

It is only when the public good demands it that legislation against a person following such avocation as he desires will be upheld.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; State v. Pendergrass, 106 N. C. 667, 10 S. E. 1002; State v. Gardner, 58 Ohio St. 599, 41 L. R. A. 689, 65 Am. St. Rep. 785, 51 N. E. 136.

The destruction of the property of the citizen, and proscribing his right to follow innocent pursuits, are expressly prohibited by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and by N. C. Const. art. 1, §§ 1, 7, 17, 31.

The act of 1903, chap. 697, is unconstitutional in toto. It makes it unlawful for any but the excepted classes mentioned therein, to minister to the sick for fee or reward, unless they stand the examinations prescribed by law for allopaths and osteopaths; and thereby proscribes all others than the adherents of these two schools. The act gives a false and arbitrary definition to the term, "the practice of medicine;" and thereby citizens of the state are deprived of "the enjoyment of the fruits of their own labor," when the public good does not require it.

State v. Yopp, 97 N. C. 479, 2 Am. St. Rep. 305, 2 S. E. 458; Smith v. Lane, 24 Hun, 632.

The examination prescribed for osteopaths is before a board composed entirely of allopaths in the branches taught in the schools of the latter, and not in the branches peculiar to osteopathy, and is more severe than that prescribed for those who pro-

NOTE.—As to constitutionality of a statute requiring a license from all who announce to the public their readiness to heal or relieve those suffering from disease, see, in this series, Parks v. State, 59 L. R. A. 190.

As to constitutionality of regulations as to pose, regularly, to practise medicine and surgery.

State v. Liffing, 61 Ohio St. 39, 46 L. R. A. 336, 76 Am. St. Rep. 358, 55 N. E. 168; Nelson v. State Bd. of Health, 108 Ky. 769, 50 L. R. A. 386, 57 S. W. 501; State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 289, 55 L. R. A. 791, 87 Am. St. Rep. 605, 62 N. E. 325.

Our constitutions are founded upon individualism, and they make prominent the theory that to the individual should be granted all the rights consistent with public safety, and our development is chiefly attributable to the firm establishment and maintenance of those rights by an authorized resort to the courts for their protection against all hostile legislation which is not required by considerations of public health or safety. In the absence of such considerations those rights are alike immutable.

See note to State v. Goodwill, 6 L. R. A. 622.

Mr. Robert D. Gilmer, Attorney General, for the State:

Skilled trades and learned professions are subjects of police regulation.

Tiedeman, State & Federal Control, § 87, pp. 241, 242; Cooley, Torts, p. 289; Brannon, 14th Amendment, p. 81; State v. Van Doran, 109 N. C. 869, 14 S. E. 32; State v. Call, 121 N. C. 643, 28 S. E. 517.

Laws regulating the practice of medicine are of ancient origin.

Dr. Bonnam's Case, 8 Coke, 116a.

Laws of this character have been incorporated in the statutes of almost every state in the Union, and have been upheld as a valid exercise of the police power of the state.

State ex rel. Burroughs v. Webster, 150 Ind. 616, 41 L. R. A. 212, 50 N. E. 750.

The legislature has "ample power to protect the public health and welfare by providing that only the learned may pursue a learned profession whose activities so closely affect them."

State v. Gravett, 65 Ohio St. 289, 55 L. R. A. 791, 87 Am. St. Rep. 605, 62 N. E. 325.

In the interpretation of statutes it is the duty of the courts to resolve every doubt in favor of their constitutionality, and to assume that the legislature, in their enactment, acted in good faith, for the public good.

practice of medicine generally, see cases in note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 579.

For cases in this series holding that the practice of osteopathy is the "practice of medicine" within the meaning of statutes regulating such practice, see Little v. State, 51 L. R. A. 717; State v. Gravett, 55 L. R. A. 791, and Bragg v. 64 L. R. A.

State v. Moore, 104 N. C. 714, 17 Am. St. Rep. 696, 10 S. E. 143.

The definition of what constitutes the practice of medicine as defined in the act of 1903 embraces the osteopath, and the mode or manner of determining his qualifications to practise his profession is a question purely within the domain of legislation.

Williams v. People, 121 Ill. 88, 11 N. E. 881; People, use of State Bd. of Health v. Blue Mountain Joe, 129 Ill. 377, 21 N. E. 923; Driscoll v. Com. 93 Ky. 399, 20 S. W. 431; Hedderich v. State, 101 Ind. 564, 51 Am. Rep. 768, 1 N. E. 47; Harding v. People, 10 Colo. 387, 15 Pac. 727; Eastman v. State, 109 Ind. 278, 58 Am. Rep. 400, 10 N. E. 97.

The act of 1903 is constitutional. The statute applies alike to all persons belonging to the same class,—that is, to all osteopaths. In such cases the legislature is the sole judge of the classification.

State v. Stevenson, 109 N. C. 734, 26 Am. St. Rep. 595, 14 S. E. 385; State v. Moore, 113 N. C. 697, 22 L. R. A. 472, 18 S. E. 342.

There is nothing in the statute which indicates any intention on the part of the legislature to deprive any person of his rights. The object and spirit of the statute are clearly within the police power, and its purpose is to prevent the incompetent osteopath from practising his profession.

Eastman v. State, 109 Ind. 278, 58 Am. Rep. 400, 10 N. E. 97; Iowa Eclectic Medical College Asso. v. Schrader, 87 Iowa, 659, 20 L. R. A. 355, 55 N. W. 24.

The defendant does not possess any natural right to practise his profession which is not subject to the control of the legislature, restricted only by positive provisions of the Constitution.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 197, § 4; Eastman v. State, 109 Ind. 278, 58 Am. Rep. 400, 10 N. E. 97; Williams v. People, 121 Ill. 88, 11 N. E. 881; People v. Phippin, 70 Mich. 6, 37 N. W. 888.

Clark, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant is indicted on a charge that he "did unlawfully and wilfully begin, engage in, and continue the practice of medicine and surgery, and the branches thereof, for fee or reward, without having obtained a license so to do from the Board of Medical Examiners of the state of North Carolina." Upon the facts found, the court was of opinion that the defendant was guilty. The defendant appealed from the judgment imposed.

State, 58 L. R. A. 925; contra, State v. Liffing, 46 L. R. A. 334, and Nelson v. State Bd. of Health, 50 L. R. A. 383.

As to right of Christian Scientists to practice without physician's license, see State v. Buswell, 24 L. R. A. 68, and State ex rel. Swarts v. Mylod, 41 L. R. A. 428.

The special verdict found that the defendant advertised himself as a "nonmedical physician;" that he held himself out to the public to cure disease by a "system of drugless healing, and treats patients by said system without medicine, claiming not to cure by faith;" that he advertises to cure by natural methods, without medicine or surgery. The only acts that he is found by the verdict to have performed are that "he administers massage baths and physical culture, manipulates the muscles, bones, spine, and solar plexus, and kneads the muscles with the fingers of the hand; he writes no prescriptions as to diet, but advises his patients what to eat and what not to eat; all the above treatment is administered to the exclusion of drugs." It was admitted that the defendant was not licensed by the State Medical Board, and claims no exemption, under the provisions of the act of 1903, as a nurse, or midwife, nor as one curing by prayer; and then there is the important finding that "the defendant charges a fee or reward for his services," and has treated patients by the above treatment, and received payment therefor, since the passage of chap. 697, p. 1074, Laws 1903, To Define the Practice of Medicine and Surgery.

Section 3124 of the Code requires that every person who applies for license to practise "medicine or surgery or any of the branches thereof" shall stand an examination in "anatomy, physiology, surgery, pathology, medical hygiene, chemistry, pharmacy, materia medica, therapeutics, obstetrics, and the practice of medicine." There was added by § 2, chap. 117, p. 180, Laws 1885, the following provision: "And any person who shall begin the practice of medicine or surgery in this state for fee or reward, after the passage of this act, without first having obtained license from said board of examiners [meaning the State Board of Medical Examiners] shall not only not be entitled to sue for or recover before any court any medical bill for services rendered in the practice of medicine or surgery or any of the branches thereof, but shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than $25, nor more than $100, or imprisoned, at the discretion of the court, for each and every offense."

The constitutionality of this last act has been vigorously assailed in the courts, on the ground that everyone has an "inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," as our great Declaration phrases it, and that by that guaranty it is the right of everyone to earn his livelihood by pursuing any calling or vocation not unlawful, and that to place his liberty to do so within the power of a committee chosen by those already pursuing any given calling would be to infringe upon § 7 of article 1 of our state Constitution, which forbids exclusive privileges and emoluments to any set of men, and § 31 of the same article, which prohibits "monopolies and perpetuities." Of late years there has been added the argument that such act is also obnoxious to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which prohibits any state "to deny to any person the equal protection of the law." There was undeniably great force in the argument on that side. The lawmaking power slowly in this state and in others, yielded to the view that it could or should pass such act. In 1858-59 (Acts 1858-59, chap. 258, p. 356) it first incorporated "The State Medical Society," and authorized the above examination, and prohibited anyone to practise medicine or surgery or prescribe for the cure of diseases, for fee or reward, without such license, but was careful to add a proviso that no one who should practise without such license should be guilty of a misdemeanor, the only penalty being that if he practised on credit he could not recover his fees in the courts. The law remained thus till the above-recited act passed in 1885, and which was made prospective. The constitutionality of this last statute was fully considered, and, after a most able argument against it by counsel, was sustained by this court, but not without great hesitation, and upon the ground solely that the act was "an exercise of the police power for the protection of the public against incompetents and impostors, and is in no sense the creation of a monopoly or special privilege." State v. Call, 121 N. C. 646, 28 S. E. 517. If the object of the act could be construed as intended to give special and exclusive privileges to a special body of men, and not solely and in truth for the protection of the public, the legislature was prohibited by the Constitution from enacting it, nor could the legislature restrict the cure of the body to the practice of "medicine and surgery," or establish any state system of healing. State v. McKnight, 131 N. C. 723, 59 L. R. A. 187, 42 S. E. 580. After these decisions, moderation and wisdom would have suggested that the matter rest. Those who wish to be treated by practitioners of medicine and surgery had the guaranty that such practitioners had been duly examined and found competent by a board of gentlemen eminent in that high and honorable profession, and those who had faith in treatment by methods not included in the "practice of medicine and surgery," as usually understood, had reserved to them the right to practise their faith and be treated, if they chose, by those who openly and avowedly did not use either surgery or drugs in the treatment of diseases. The courts have declared that they possessed this right, and that the legislature could not, under the Constitution, restrict all healing to any one school of thought or practice. What is "the practice of medicine and surgery" is as well understood, and its limits, as the practice of dentistry. The courts have also held that of the many schools of "medicine and surgery" the legislature could not prescribe that any one was orthodox and the others heterodox, but that those professing the different systems—"allopathic," "homeopathic," "Thompsonian," and the like—should be examined upon a course such as is taught in the best colleges of that school of practice, but that it is not essential that a member of each, or of any special school, should be upon the board of examiners.

At the last session of the general assembly the following act (Act 1903, chap. 697, p. 1074) was passed amendatory of § 3122 of the Code: "For the purpose of this act the expression 'practice of medicine and surgery' shall be construed to mean the management, for fee or reward, of any case of disease, physical or mental, real or imaginary, with or without drugs, surgical operation, surgical or mechanical appliances, or by any other method whatsoever: Provided, that this shall not apply to midwives nor to nurses: Provided further, that applicants not belonging to the regular school of medicine shall not be required to stand an examination except upon the branches taught in their regular colleges, to wit, the osteopaths shall be examined only upon descriptive anatomy, general chemistry, histology, physiology, urinalysis, and toxicology, hygiene, regional anatomy, pathology, neurology, surgery, applied anatomy, bacteriology, gynecology, obstetrics and physical diagnosis: Provided, this act shall not apply to any person who ministers to or cures the sick or suffering by prayer to Almighty God, without the use of any drug or material means."

Chief Justice Pearson, in McAden v. Jenkins, 64 N. C. 801, noted, as of common knowledge, and reiterated in Raleigh & S. Air-Line R. Co. v. Jenkins, 68 N. C. 505, that railroad charters are drafted by "promoters," and hence should be construed most strongly against the grantees and in the interest of the public. Though there may be no promoters here, the same rule applies to this act amending the charter of this corporation, in whose supposed interests it was evidently drafted, and not solely in the interest of the public. Under the guise of "construction" of those well-understood terms, the "practice of medicine and surgery," the act essays to provide that the expression "practice of medicine and surgery" shall be construed to mean the management 'for fee or reward' of any case of disease, physical or mental, real or imaginary, with or without drugs, surgical operation, surgical or mechanical appliances, or by any other method whatsoever." That is, the practice of surgery and medicine shall mean practice without surgery or medicine, if a fee is charged. If no fee is charged, then the words "surgery and medicine" drop back to their usual and ordinary meaning, as by long usage known and accustomed. Where, then, is the protection to the public, if such treatment is valid when done without fee or reward? Yet, unless the act confers, and is intended solely to confer, protection upon the public, it is invalid. The legislature cannot forbid one man to practise a calling or profession for the benefit or profit of another.

Again, the act means more than its friends probably intended, for it says, "any case of disease, physical or mental, real or imaginary." Is not a disease of the eye physical, and is not a disease of the ear, or of the teeth, or a headache, or a corn, physical? Then every dentist and aurist and oculist is indictable unless he has also license from the State Medical Society as an M. D., as is also every corn doctor who relieves aching feet, and every peripatetic of stentorian lungs, on the courthouse square, who banishes headaches, real or imaginary, by rubbing his hands over some credulous brow. He, too, must be an M. D. Then there is the closing expression, forbidding treatment "for fee or reward" by other than an M. D. "by any other method whatsoever." This would take in all the old women and the herb doctors, who, without pretending to be professional nurses, relieve much human suffering, "real or imaginary," for a small compensation. Then it is forbidden to relieve a case of suffering, "physical or mental," in any method unless one is an M. D. It is not even admissible to "minister to a mind diseased" in any method, or even dissipate an attack of the "blues," without that label, duly certified. Is not this creating a monopoly, and the worst of monopolies, that diseases shall not be cured or alleviated, whether real or imaginary, mental or physical, though without medicine or surgery, "if for a fee," unless one has undergone an examination on "anatomy, physiology, surgery, pathology, medical hygiene, chemistry, pharmacy, materia medica, therapeutics, obstetrics, and the practice of medicine?" Such examination is eminently proper for one who holds himself out as an M. D., and those who wish to employ an M. D. should certainly have the guaranty that is given by his license that the M. D. is competent. But how about those who are too poor, or too ignorant, or too perverse, to wish that kind of treatment? Is it requisite that the man who treats a diseased ear shall really be competent in obstetrics, or that it is a penalty to treat a disease of the eye unless the operator understands chemistry, or that it is indictable in this state to remove corns or to plug teeth without full knowledge of the materia medica, or to banish headache by the application of the hands without having passed a satisfactory examination on anatomy, or to apply a fomentation without being able to "pass up" on therapeutics, or to sell a little herb tea for the stomach ache without being scientifically versed in pathology and physiology? The act is too sweeping. Besides, the legislature could no more enact that the "practice of medicine and surgery" shall mean "practice without medicine and surgery" than it could provide that "two and two make five," because it cannot change a physical fact. And when it forbade all treatment of all diseases, mental or physical, without surgery or medicine, or by any other method, for a fee or reward, except by an M. D., it attempted to confer a monopoly on that method of treatment, and this is forbidden by the Constitution.

Our early legislation naturally gave physicians no special privileges, but it was directed solely to fixing a limitation upon their charges and providing penalties for malpractice. Were a monopoly of all treatment of diseases conferred upon M. D.'s, it would necessarily follow that the legislature would have to prescribe their scale of charges again. That matter could not, with due regard to the public interest, be left to a monopoly. The medical profession merited and obtained a due share of prosperity prior to above statute of 1903, and will receive no great detriment because the defendant cannot be punished under its provisions.

Those not M. D.'s contend that the allopathic system of practice is contrary to the discoveries of science, and injurious to the public. Some M. D.'s doubtless believe that all treatment of disease, except by their own system, is quackery. Is this point to be decided by the M. D.'s themselves, through an examining committee of five of their own number, or is the public the tribunal to decide, by employing whom each man prefers, whether allopath, homeopath, osteopath, or the defendant? The law says that the M. D.'s may examine and certify whether an applicant is competent to be one of their number, and no one can practise medicine and surgery without it; but they cannot decide for mankind that their own system of healing is now and ever shall be the only correct one, and that all others are to be repressed by the strong arm of the law. This act admits Christian Scientists to practise to cure diseases without such examination. By what process of reasoning can massage baths and the defendant be excluded? In the cure of bodies, as in the cure of souls, "orthodoxy is my doxy, heterodoxy is the other man's doxy," as Bishop Warburton well says. This is a free country, and any man has a right to be treated by any system he chooses. The law cannot decide that any one system shall be the system he shall use. If he gets improper treatment for children or others under his care, whereby they are injured, he is liable to punishment; but whether it was proper treatment or not is a matter of fact, to be settled by a jury of his peers, and not a matter of law, to be decided by a judge, nor prescribed beforehand by an act of the legislature.

The practice of medicine and surgery, in the usual and ordinary meaning of that term, is of the highest antiquity and dignity. In the Code of Hammurabi, King of Babylon, fifteen centuries older than the Code of Moses, and which, engraved on a column of black diorite, was but recently dug up at Susa, in ancient Elam, there are found (§§ 215-225) regulations of the medical profession, fixing a scale of fees, and penalties for malpractice. Physicians are mentioned in both the Old and New Testaments. Jeremiah asks, "Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician there?" The public have a right to know that those holding themselves out as members of that ancient and honorable profession are competent, and duly licensed as such. The legislature can exert its police power to that end, because it is a profession whose practice requires the highest skill and learning. But there are methods of treatment which do not require much skill and learning, if any. Patients have a right to use such methods if they wish, and the attempt to require an examination of the character above recited for the application of such treatments is not warranted by any legitimate exercise of the police power. The effect would be to prohibit to those who wish it those cheap and simple remedies, and deprive those who practise them of their humble gains, by either giving a monopoly of such remedies to those who have the title M. D., or prohibiting the use of such remedies altogether, neither of which results the legislature could have contemplated, and both of which are forbidden by the provisions of the Constitution above cited.

In this case the defendant is found guilty of the following acts, and no more: (1) Administering massage baths and physical culture; (2) manipulating muscles, bones, spine, and solar plexus; (3) kneading the muscles with the fingers of the hand; (4) advising his patients what to eat and what not. And all this without prescriptions, without any drugs or surgery. These acts, by the terms of the statute, are harmless and not indictable, "unless done for fee or reward." There is nothing in this treatment that calls for an exercise of the police power by way of an examination by a learned board in obstetrics, therapeutics, materia medica, and the other things, a knowledge of which is so properly required for one who would serve the public faithfully and honorably as a doctor of medicine.

It is not only in the scope of the police power for the state to regulate the "practice of medicine and surgery," and to throw around the public any reasonable protection against unfit members of that honorable profession, and provide against malpractice, but the general assembly can prohibit any pretended art of healing which is calculated to deceive and injure the public. It is also within its power to protect the public against the ignorant and vicious who profess knowledge and skill in any art or profession of healing in which technical knowledge and learning are required to safely and properly practise it. But it is not found here that the defendant is deceiving and injuring the public, or is ignorant and incompetent, to the detriment of the public, in the application of the methods he uses. It may be that if he were not there some of the patients might call in an M. D., but that is due, possibly, to the ignorance or perversity of the patients, who may prefer the defendant's methods and scale of fees. The police power does not extend to such cases. The law is thus stated in Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 137, 138, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501, 38 L. ed. 389: "The legislature may not, under the guise of protecting the public interests, arbitrarily interfere with private business, or impose unusual and unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations. In other words, its determination as to what is a proper exercise of its police power is not final or conclusive, but is subject to the supervision of the courts." After citing cases, it is said on page 138, 152 U. S., page 501, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep., page 389, 38 L. ed.: "In all those cases the acts were held to be invalid as involving an unnecessary invasion of the rights of property, and a practical inhibition of certain occupations, harmless in themselves, and which might be carried on without detriment to the public interests." See also State v. Pendergrass, 106 N. C. 667, 10 S. E. 1002; State v. Gardner, 58 Ohio St. 599, 41 L. R. A. 689, 65 Am. St. Rep. 785, 51 N. E. 136.

License is required for the practice of pharmacy, of dentistry, of law, and many other skilled professions. We have a state system of law, for the "law is the state," and laws are prescribed by the legislature; and we also have a state system of education. Yet it is not indictable for one not a lawyer to draw wills, deeds, bills of sale, or any other legal instrument whatever; nor is it made punishable to settle litigation out of court by arbitration or otherwise, without the aid of a lawyer, nor to teach in other than the state schools. Though there are many methods of treating diseases among which the legislature is not authorized to select one as the state system, excluding all others, yet this act, if valid, would make it punishable by law to charge a fee for treatment of "any disease, real or imaginary, mental or physical, by any method whatever," unless the party has been admitted by a committee from one school of treatment, upon examination of that system, thus denying mankind any relief from pain and suffering, except at the hands of that particular school of medical thought. It may be, and probably is, the best system. But that is a matter which must be decided by those who seek and must pay for the relief,—not by the M. D.'s themselves, nor by the courts. Judges are lawyers, and are not competent to decide, except for themselves as individuals, which is the best system of treatment, and those practitioners who eschew medicine and surgery may well object to leaving the question whether "medicine and surgery" is the only permissible method of treatment to be decided by the practitioners of that method.

The defendant is not charged nor shown to be an osteopath, and disclaims being one. His learned counsel contends that Act 1903, chap. 697, p. 1074, is further unconstitutional because of the following (quoted from his brief): "There is no provision for the examination of any but allopaths and osteopaths. It provides that all persons, except midwives, nurses, and those who profess to heal by prayer, who minister to the sick for fee or reward, 'by any other method whatsoever,' shall be construed to be practising medicine or surgery, and then follows this language: 'Provided further, that applicants not belonging to the regular school of medicine shall not be required to stand an examination except upon the branches taught in their regular colleges; to wit, the osteopaths shall be examined only upon descriptive anatomy, general chemistry, histology, physiology, urinalysis and toxicology, hygiene, regional anatomy, pathology, neurology, surgery, applied anatomy, bacteriology, gynecology, obstetrics, and physical diagnosis.' The osteopath is required to stand an examination in surgery and every other branch that those belonging to the regular school of medicine are required to be examined in, except pharmacy, materia medica, therapeutics, and the practice of medicine, and, in addition, he is required to stand an examination in branches that the regular medical student is not required to be examined on, as follows: 'histology, urinalysis and toxicology, regional anatomy, neurology, bacteriology, gynecology, and physical diagnosis.' But it is remarkable that he is not required to pass examination in the branches that his profession recognizes and teaches to be of special importance in the practice of osteopathy, such as principles of osteopathy, osteopathic manipulations, and osteopathic diagnosis." As his client is not an osteopath, we are not called upon in this case to pass upon the alleged discrimination against osteopaths in the prescribed course of study. But if it be objected that we have only shown that the defendant's practice did not call for the examination required, as above set out, for an allopath, it may be as well to say that the acts of which he was convicted of doing "for a fee," to wit, using massage baths, physical culture, manipulating muscles, bone, spine, and solar plexus, and advising his patients as to diet, could be done as safely to the public, so far as shown, without an examination on "histology, urinalysis and toxicology, bacteriology, neurology, and gynecology," which are some of the things added to the course by the aforesaid act, for the comfort and convenience of those wishing to obtain license to practise osteopathy, and, of course, only to protect the public against incompetents in that line of practice.

It is possible, however, that an expert knowledge of gynecology is not essential in administering baths, and there is room for serious doubt whether bacteriology and toxicology are connected with massage in any way. The term "practice of medicine and surgery" embraces probably the larger, and certainly by far the most profitable, part of the "treatment of diseases," but is not co-extensive with the latter term, and cannot be made so, unless "surgery and medicine" are adopted as the state system of treatment,—a monopoly,—and all other methods are made indictable. On the other hand, the State Medical Society would hardly wish to broaden out so as to take in all methods of treatment of diseases, for this would be to take in practitioners and practices which they would not wish to recognize. All the law so far has done or can do is to require that those practising on the sick with knife and drugs shall be examined and found competent by those "of like faith and order." Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, in an address before the Medical Society in Massachusetts, said: "If the whole materia medica was sunk to the bottom of the sea, it would be all the better for mankind and all the worse for the fishes." An eminent medical authority in this state has said that out of twenty-four serious cases of disease, three could not be cured by the best remedies, three others might be benefited, and the rest would get well anyway. Stronger statements could be cited from the most eminent medical authorities the world has known. Medicine is an experimental, not an exact, science. All the law can do is to regulate and safeguard the use of powerful and dangerous remedies, like the knife and drugs, but it cannot forbid dispensing with them. When the Master, who was himself called the Good Physician, was told that other than His followers were casting out devils and curing diseases, He said, "Forbid them not."

Upon the special verdict the defendant should be adjudged not guilty.

Reversed.

Walker and Connor, JJ., concur in result.

OKLAHOMA SUPREME COURT.

Nathan NEELEY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

SOUTHWESTERN COTTON SEED OIL COMPANY.

(13 Okla. 356.)

*1. The court may withdraw a case
* Headnotes by BURFORD, Ch. J.

from the jury, and direct a verdict for the defendant, where the evidence is undisputed, or is of such conclusive character that the court, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, would be compelled to set aside a verdict returned in opposition to it.

2. In case of an accident to an employee the fact of accident carries

NOTE.—As to right of servant who continues work on the faith of the master's promise to remove a specific cause of danger, see also, in this series, Illinois Steel Co. v. Mann, 40 L. R. A.
64 L. R. A.

with it no presumption of negligence on the part of the employer, and it is an affirmative fact for the injured employee to establish that the accident was the result of the negligence of the employer.

3. It is the duty of the employer to furnish the employee a reasonably safe place to work, and reasonably safe appliances with which to work, reasonably safe material to work with, and reasonably competent fellow servants. He is required to furnish appliances free from defects discoverable by the exercise of ordinary care, and the employee has the right to rely upon this duty having been performed; and while, in entering the employment, he assumes the ordinary risks incident to the business, he does not assume the risk arising from the neglect of the employer to perform the positive duty owing to the employee with respect to appliances furnished. The exception to this rule is that where the employee receives for use a defective appliance, and with knowledge of the defect and its dangerous character continues to use it without notice to his employer, he cannot recover for an injury resulting from such defective appliance thus voluntarily used.
4. A servant entering into an employment which is hazardous assumes the usual risks incident to such service and those which are apparent to ordinary observation, and, when he accepts or continues in the service with knowledge of the character of appliances from which injury may be apprehended, he also assumes the hazards incident to such situation.
5. The risks assumed by an employee are such perils as exist after the employer has used due care and precaution to guard the former against danger by providing him a reasonably safe place to work in, reasonably safe appliances to work with, reasonably safe materials to work upon, and reasonably competent fellow servants to work with; but, when the employee undertakes to use defective or unsafe appliances with knowledge of such unsafe condition he assumes the increased risk of danger, and the employer is relieved from responsibility to the employee by reason of the employee's knowledge.
6. It is the duty of the employer to provide the employee with reasonably safe machinery, tools, and appliances with which to do his work, and he cannot relieve himself from liability by delegating this duty to another; and, in case of injury resulting from defective or unsafe appliances, the relations of fellow servants cannot arise.

7. If an employee discovers that appliances furnished him by the employer with which to do his work are defective or dangerous, and informs the employer of such defect, and requests that the employer remedy such defect so as to avoid increased risk, and the employer gives him assurances that the defect will be remedied, and, relying upon such assurance, the employee continues in the service, but before the repairs are made an injury results to the employee by reason of such defective appliances, the employee will ordinarily be entitled to recover. But if, after giving such assurances, and prior to the accident, the employer directly or indirectly revokes his former promise to repair or remedy, the employee will not, in such event, be warranted in further continuing his service based upon such promise to repair; and, under such circumstances, the question of contributory negligence should ordinarily be left to the jury.
8. When, on the trial of a cause, a question is presented as to the existence of negligence or contributory negligence, and the facts which the evidence reasonably tends to establish are such that all reasonable men must draw the same conclusions from them, the case is one of law for the court; but, if fair-minded men may honestly draw different conclusions, the cause should not be withdrawn from the jury.

(September 10, 1903.)

ERROR to the District Court for Oklahoma County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries for which defendant was alleged to be responsible. Reversed.

Statement by Burford, Ch. J.:

The plaintiff, Neeley, brought this action in the district court of Oklahoma county to recover damages from the Southwestern Cotton Seed Oil Company for personal injuries received while in the employ of the defendant. The plaintiff was a common day laborer, and had been in the employ of the defendant as such for only a few weeks 781, and note; Albrecht v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 53 L. R. A. 653; Rice v. Eureka Paper Co. 62 L. R. A. 611, and the following case of Collins v. Harrison.

As to delegation of personal duties of master to another, see cases in note to Lafayette Bridge Co. v. Olsen, 54 L. R. A. 33; also Trade-water Coal Co. v. Johnson, 61 L. R. A. 161.

As to when question of negligence of master, or contributory negligence of servant, is for the court, and when it is for the jury, see also, in this series, Goodrich v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 5 L. R. A. 750; Warden v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 552; Nelson v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 15 L. R. A. 583; Schroeder v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 827; Mensch v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 450; Orman v. Mannix, 17 L. R. A. 602; East Tennessee, V. 64 L. R. A.

& G. R. Co. v. Kane, 22 L. R. A. 315; Illingsworth v. Boston Electric Light Co. 25 L. R. A. 552; Giraudi v. Electric Improv. Co. 28 L. R. A. 597; Union P. R. Co. v. Erickson, 29 L. R. A. 137; Tobey v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 496; Prosser v. Montana C. R. Co. 30 L. R. A. 814; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. Barry, 43 L. R. A. 349; Hanley v. California Bridge & Constr. Co. 47 L. R. A. 597; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Fowler, 48 L. R. A. 531; McKee v. Tourtellotte, 48 L. R. A. 542; Dallemard v. Saalfeldt, 48 L. R. A. 753; Lafayette Bridge Co. v. Olsen, 54 L. R. A. 33; Coley v. North Carolina R. Co. 57 L. R. A. 817; Long v. Illinois C. R. Co. 58 L. R. A. 237; and O'Neill v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 60 L. R. A. 443.

when the accident occurred. The defendant is a corporation engaged in the manufacture of cotton seed oil and cotton seed products at its plant at Oklahoma city. As part of its buildings, was a large room about 30 by 50 feet, containing portions of its mill machinery. Through this room, about 18 feet from the floor, extended a steel revolving shaft, on which were pulleys, and from which connecting belts drove these various machines. The floor was smooth and slick from the oil. One of the pulleys on this shaft carried an 8-inch leather belt to the pulley on the "linters." Occasionally this belt slipped off the upper pulley while the machinery was in motion, and it was necessary to go up to the upper shaft to replace it. It is usual and customary in oil mills of this character to have a footboard placed a few feet below the shaft, upon which persons could walk and stand when oiling or repairing the machinery or adjusting the belts. This mill had only been completed one season, and no footboard had been placed in position. The company had procured to be made for its use a ladder about 18 feet long, constructed of two 2x4 pine scantlings, dressed down to about 2x3½, for side pieces, upon which steps or cross-pieces were nailed, made from 1x3 boards. This ladder was weak on one side, and had a tendency to turn sidewise with the weight of a person, and to avoid this defect a 1x4 board about 2 to 3 feet long had been nailed on the inner side of the right-hand scantling. This ladder was furnished by the company to be used for placing the belt upon the upper shaft or pulley. In order to perform this difficult feat, the lower end of the ladder was placed upon the floor, and the upper end rested against the revolving shaft. One employee then ascended the ladder and lifted the belt in place, while another employee went upon some part of the machinery and held the other end in place, and the two operating together thus readjusted the belt to its proper place. It required from the man upon the ladder a force or resistance of from 100 to 200 pounds to force the belt onto the pulley. All the employees who had used this ladder considered it weak and limber, and two or three had called the attention of the superintendent to this fact, and requested that the company put up a footboard to avoid the anticipated danger. The superintendent informed the employees who gave him this warning that he understood his business, and that, if they did not want to use the ladder, he would get someone who would. On the 31st day of January, 1899, the plaintiff, who had been in the employ of the company about two weeks as a laborer, was engaged in operating the machinery in the room in question, when the belt came off, and he and a fellow servant attempted to replace it. The plaintiff placed the ladder in position, and ascended it, and took the belt in his hands, and was in the act of placing it on the pulley when the ladder gave down and fell to the floor with the plaintiff. The plaintiff received injuries resulting in a severe shock, a wound on the head, and the fracture of the bones in both wrists. After the fall one side of the ladder was found broken apart, and the piece that had been nailed on to strengthen it was both broken and split. About one week before the accident the night foreman had told the plaintiff that he intended to put up a footboard along the shafting in question, and about three days before the accident the plaintiff told the foreman that the ladder seemed unsafe, and asked him to put up a footboard. To this request his reply was: "That ladder is all right, and you boys go ahead, and if it don't suit you, and you can't do this work, I'll get men that can do it." The plaintiff, previous to the accident, was strong and able-bodied, thirty-three years old, and a common laborer, and has been disabled from work ever since. The plaintiff, on the trial of the cause to a jury, introduced evidence tending to establish the foregoing state of facts. The defendant demurred to the evidence, and the court sustained the demurrer, and rendered judgment for the defendant. From this judgment the plaintiff has appealed, and we are called upon to review the proceedings below.

Messrs. Hays & McMechan and M. Fulton for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Howard & Ames for defendant in error.

Burford, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In the briefs presented for our consideration a great many cases are cited from the various state courts and quite a number from the Supreme Court of the United States. The questions embraced in this case have been extensively discussed by the jurists and authors, and no court or text writer has ever been able to harmonize the numerous decisions. Every question presented could be decided either way, and have ample authority for its support. The Supreme Court of the United States has in the last quarter of a century had before it every legal proposition that is likely to arise in a personal injury case, and enunciated rules which ought to be safe for a court to follow which has no state Constitution, statute, or judicial precedents to control or embarrass it. It has been the policy of this court, on questions where there is a seeming conflict between the state courts and the Supreme Court of the United States, to follow that court which has direct appellate supervision over the decisions of this court, and we are content to continue that policy. There are a few general principles established by repeated decisions of that court, which, when applied to the facts in the case under consideration, control every question presented by the record. We will not attempt to follow the arguments presented in the briefs upon either side, but will endeavor to determine each question which, in our judgment, may be fairly raised by the record in this case, and argued in the briefs.

When may a court take a case from the jury and direct a verdict? "If the evidence, giving the plaintiff the benefit of every inference to be fairly drawn from it, so conclusively established contributory negligence on his part as would have compelled the trial court, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, to set aside any verdict returned in his favor, then the direction to find for defendant was proper." Kane v. Northern O. R. Co. 128 U. S. 91, 32 L. ed. 339, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Phenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30, 27 L. ed. 65, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1003, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Goodlett v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 122 U. S. 391, 30 L. ed. 1230, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1254; Jones v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 128 U. S. 443, 32 L. ed. 478, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Dunlap v. Northeastern R. Co. 130 U. S. 649, 32 L. ed. 1058, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 647; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cow, 145 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 829, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Gardner v. Michigan C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 349, 37 L. ed. 1107, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140. Mr. Justice Brewer, in discussing this question in Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275, very appropriately said: "It is well settled that the court may withdraw a case from them altogether, and direct a verdict for the plaintiff or the defendant, as the one or the other may be proper, where the evidence is undisputed, or is of such conclusive character that the court, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, would be compelled to set aside a verdict returned in opposition to it. . . . It is undoubtedly true that cases are not to be lightly taken from the jury, that jurors are the recognized triers of questions of fact, and that ordinarily negligence is so far a question of fact as to be properly submitted to and determined by them. . . . Hence it is that seldom an appellate court reverses the action of a trial court in declining to give a 64 L. R. A. peremptory instruction for a verdict one way or the other. At the same time the judge is primarily responsible for the just outcome of the trial. He is not a mere moderator of a town meeting, submitting questions to the jury for determination, nor simply ruling on the admissibility of testimony, but one who, in our jurisprudence, stands charged with full responsibility. He has the same opportunity that jurors have for seeing the witnesses, for noting all those matters in a trial not capable of record; and when, in his deliberate opinion, there is no excuse for a verdict save in favor of one party, and he so rules by instructions to that effect, an appellate court will pay large respect to his judgment."

It requires a more extended examination of the facts and reasonable inferences therefrom in plaintiff's favor in order to determine whether or not the court acted within the foregoing rule in taking the case from the jury. The rules of law governing this case are those relating to employer and employee. These rules are different from those which govern in cases of accidents to passengers or to strangers. In the case of an employee, "the fact of accident carries with it no presumption of negligence on the part of the employer, and it is an affirmative fact for the injured employee to establish that the employer has been guilty of negligence." And "it is not sufficient for the employee to show that the employer may have been guilty of negligence,—the evidence must point to the fact that he was." Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275. The duty that an employer owes to his employee has been extensively discussed, and the Supreme Court of the United States has enunciated the rule a number of times. In Northern P. R. Co. v. Peterson, 162 U. S. 353, 40 L. ed. 994, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 845, it is said: "The general rule is that those entering into the service of a common master become thereby engaged in a common service, and are fellow servants; and prima facie the common master is not liable for the negligence of one of his servants which has resulted in an injury to a fellow servant. There are, however, some duties which a master owes as such to a servant entering his employment. He owes the duty to provide such servant with a reasonably safe place to work in, having reference to the character of the employment in which the servant is engaged. He also owes the duty of providing reasonably safe tools, appliances, and machinery for the accomplishment of the work necessary to be done. He must exercise proper diligence in the employment of reasonably safe and competent men to perform their respective duties. And it has been held in many states that the master owes the further duty of adopting and promulgating safe and proper rules for the conduct of his business, including the government of the machinery and the running of trains on a railroad track. If the master be neglectful in any of these matters, it is a neglect of a duty which he personally owes to his employees, and, if the employee suffer damage on account thereof, the master is liable. If, instead of personally performing these obligations, the master engages another to do them for him, he is liable for the neglect of that other, which, in such case, is not the neglect of a fellow servant, no matter what his position as to other matters, but is the neglect of the master to do those things which it is the duty of the master to perform as such." This doctrine was cited, quoted, and approved in the later case of New England R. Co. v. Conroy, 175 U. S. 323, 338, 44 L. ed. 181, 188, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85. It was also said in Washington & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 135 U. S. 554, 570, 34 L. ed. 235, 241, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1049: "Neither individuals nor corporations are bound as employers to insure the absolute safety of machinery or mechanical appliances which they provide for the use of their employees. Nor are they bound to supply the best and safest or newest of those appliances for the purpose of securing the safety of those who are thus employed. They are, however, bound to use all reasonable care and prudence for the safety of those in their service by providing them with machinery reasonably safe and suitable for the use of the latter. If the employer or master fails in this duty of precaution and care, he is responsible for any injury which may happen through a defect of machinery which was or ought to have been known to him, and was unknown to the employee or servant." And the foregoing was quoted with approval in Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275. In the case of Texas & P. R. Co. v. Arohibald, 170 U. S. 665, 42 L. ed. 1188, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777, Mr. Justice White stated the law concisely and intelligibly as follows: "The elementary rule is that it is the duty of the employer to furnish appliances free from defects discoverable by the exercise of ordinary care, and that the employee has a right to rely upon this duty being performed; and that whilst, in entering the employment, he assumes the ordinary risks incident to the business, he does not assume the risk arising from the neglect of the employer to perform the positive duty owing to the employee with respect to appliances furnished. An exception to this general 64 L. R. A.

rule is well established, which holds that where an employee receives for use a defective appliance, and with knowledge of the defect continues to use it without notice to the employer, he cannot recover for an injury resulting from the defective appliance thus voluntarily and negligently used. But no reason can be found for, and no authority exists supporting, the contention that an employee, either from his knowledge of the employer's methods of business, or from a failure to use ordinary care to ascertain such methods, subjects himself to the risks of appliances being furnished which contain defects that might have been discovered by reasonable inspection. The employer, on the one hand, may rely on the fact that his employee assumes the risks usually incident to the employment. The employee, on the other, has the right to rest on the assumption that appliances furnished are free from defects discoverable by proper inspection, and is not submitted to the danger of using appliances containing such defects because of his knowledge of the general methods adopted by the employer in carrying on his business, or because by ordinary care he might have known of the methods, and inferred therefrom that danger of unsafe appliances might arise. The employee is not compelled to pass judgment on the employer's methods of business, or to conclude as to their adequacy. He has a right to assume that the employer will use reasonable care to make the appliances safe, and to deal with those furnished relying on this fact, subject, of course, to the exception which we have already stated, by which, where an appliance is furnished an employee in which there exists a defect known to him, or plainly observable by him, he cannot recover for an injury caused by such defective appliance, if, with the knowledge above stated, he negligently continues to use it. In assuming the risks of the particular service in which he engages the employee may legally assume that the employer, by whatever rule he elects to conduct his business, will fulfil his legal duty by making reasonable efforts to furnish appliances reasonably safe for the purposes for which they are intended; and, whilst this does not justify an employee in using an appliance which he knows to be defective, or relieve him from observing patent defects therein, it obviously does not compel him to know or investigate the employer's modes of business under the penalty, if he does not do so, of taking the risk of the employer's fault in furnishing him unsafe appliances. In Davidson v. Cornell, 132 N. Y. 228, 30 N. E. 573, the court said: 'It is as a general rule, true that a servant entering into employment which is hazardous assumes the usual risks of the service and those which are apparent to ordinary observation; and when he accepts or continues in the service with knowledge of the character of structures from which injury may be apprehended he also assumes the hazards incident to the situation. . . . Those not obvious, assumed by the employee, are such perils as exist after the master has used due care and precaution to guard the former against danger. And the defective condition of structures or appliances, which, by the exercise of reasonable care of the master, may be obviated, and from the consequences of which he is relieved from responsibility to the servant by reason of the latter's knowledge of the situation, is such as is apparent to his observation." The foregoing excerpt embraces practically all the law in the case under consideration, and is well supported by the decisions of numerous state courts, and we might safely rest the decision of this case on the law as stated by Justice White. In the case of the Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 387, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921, the opinion of the court was delivered by Mr. Justice Brewer, and he there quoted and approved the language of Mr. Justice Valentine in Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Moore, 29 Kan. 632, as follows: "A master assumes the duty toward his servant of exercising reasonable care and diligence to provide the servant with a reasonably safe place at which to work, with reasonably safe machinery, tools, and implements to work with, with reasonably safe materials to work upon, and with suitable and competent fellow servants to work with him; and when the master has properly discharged these duties, then at common law the servant assumes all the risks and hazards incident to, or attendant upon, the exercise of the particular employment or the performance of the particular work, including those risks and hazards resulting from the possible negligence and carelessness of his fellow servants and coemployees. And at common law whenever the master delegates to any officer, servant, agent, or employee, high or low, the performance of any of the duties above mentioned, which really devolve upon the master himself, then such officer, servant, agent, or employee stands in the place of the master, and becomes a substitute for the master,—a vice principal; and the master is liable for his acts or his negligence to the same extent as though the master himself had performed the acts or was guilty of the negligence. But at common law, where the master himself has performed his duty, the master is not liable to any one of his servants for the acts or negligence of any mere fellow servants or coemployee of such servant, where the fellow servant or coemployee does not sustain this representative relation to the master."

These cases are sufficient to establish the law defining the relations of employer and employee, the duties which the employer owes to the employee, and the test of liability when the employer has been negligent and the employee is without fault. We must now determine the rule as to what constitutes contributory negligence on the part of the employee. Here again we find the adjudications numerous and conflicting, and, without attempting to harmonize or explain them, we shall follow the rule which has met the approval of the Supreme Court of the United States in numerous well-considered cases. In Kane v. Northern C. R. Co. 128 U. S. 91, 95, 32 L. ed. 339, 341, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17, that court said: "It is undoubtedly the law that an employee is guilty of contributory negligence which will defeat his right to recover for injuries sustained in the course of his employment where such injuries substantially resulted from dangers so obvious and threatening that a reasonably prudent man under similar circumstances would have avoided them if in his power to do so. He will be deemed in such case to have assumed the risks involved in such heedless exposure of himself to danger. . . . But in determining whether an employee has recklessly exposed himself to peril, or failed to exercise the care for his personal safety that might reasonably be expected, regard must always be had to the exigencies of his position; indeed, to all the circumstances of the particular occasion." It was also held in the case of District of Columbia v. McElligott, 117 U. S. 621, 633, 29 L. ed. 946, 950, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889: "That it was the duty of an employee having knowledge of the dangerous character of the place in which he was working to exercise due diligence and care in protecting himself from harm; and if he failed to exercise such care, and exposed himself to dangers that were so threatening or obvious as likely to cause injury at any moment, he would, notwithstanding any promises or assurances of the employer to provide precautionary measures, be guilty of such contributory negligence, as would defeat his claim for injuries so received; and also that the employer is not liable in any event if the danger apprehended is so imminent or manifest as to prevent a reasonably prudent man from risking it, and the employee, possessed of such knowledge, continues his service. But in all such cases the real question to be determined is whether at the time of the accident the plaintiff was exercising such reasonable care and caution as an ordinary person would exercise under similar circumstances." In Washington & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 135 U. S. 554, 570, 34 L. ed. 235, 241, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1049, the court said: "But if the employee knew of the defect in the machinery from which the injury happened, and yet remained in the service and continued to use the machinery without giving any notice thereof to the employer, he must be deemed to have assumed the risk of all danger reasonably to be apprehended from such use, and is entitled to no recovery." In Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 665, 673, 42 L. ed. 1188, 1191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777, the court said: "Where an employee takes reckless risks with full knowledge of the danger, and injuries result, he cannot recover, for the reason that he has not exercised due care." Bunt v. Sierra Butte Gold Min. Co. 138 U. S. 483, 34 L. ed. 1031, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464. These cases seem to fairly state the law upon the question of contributory negligence on the part of an employee where negligence is alleged on the part of the employer in failing to perform a duty to such employee. The plaintiff undertook to prove negligence on the part of the company in failing to provide him a safe means of performing his work, and it is claimed that the evidence introduced by him established contributory negligence on his part. If this be true, then clearly he cannot recover. But this leads us to the inquiry as to what the state of the evidence must be to warrant the court in taking the case from the jury and holding, as a matter of law, that contributory negligence has been shown. It was observed in the case of St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Schumacher, 152 U. S. 77, 38 L. ed. 361, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 479, that where it plainly appears from the evidence that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, and there is no evidence of a wilful or intended negligence on the part of the defendant, the court may take the case from the jury. It has been held that, "as a general rule, the question of contributory negligence is one for the jury, under proper instructions by the court, especially where the facts are in dispute, and the evidence in relation to them is that from which fair-minded men may draw different inferences." Washington & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 135 U. S. 573, 34 L. ed. 235, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1049. In the last-cited case the court approves the rule stated in Daley v. American Printing Co. 150 Mass. 77, 22 N. E. 439, in a case very similar to the one at bar. That court said: But "the ground upon which the case was withdrawn from the jury is not stated. 44 L. R. A.

We cannot say, as a matter of law, that no sufficient evidence was introduced or offered of negligence on the part of the defendant, or of freedom from negligence on the part of the plaintiff. . . . If the machinery was found to be unsuitable, and if the plaintiff was within the line of his duty in attempting to adjust the belt, we cannot say that he was not entitled to go to the jury on the question of whether he was in the exercise of due care." In Kane v. Northern C. R. Co. 128 U. S. 91, '32 L. ed. 339, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16, a brakeman brought an action to recover for injuries received while climbing from a freight car which had a broken step. He knew of the dangerous condition of the step prior to the accident, and had called the conductor's attention to it. The trial court held that he was guilty of contributory negligence, and took the case from the jury, and rendered judgment for the defendant railroad company. The Supreme Court reversed this judgment, and directed the question of contributory negligence submitted to a jury, and said: "It is undoubtedly the law that an employee is guilty of contributory negligence which will defeat his right to recover for injuries sustained in the course of his employment where such injuries substantially resulted from dangers so obvious and threatening that a reasonably prudent man under similar circumstances would have avoided them if in his power to do so. He will be deemed in such case to have assumed the risks involved in such heedless exposure of himself to danger. . . . But in determining whether an employee has recklessly exposed himself to peril, or failed to exercise the care for his personal safety that might reasonably be expected, regard must always be had to the exigencies of his position; indeed, to all the circumstances of the particular occasion." In the case of Siqua City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745, the court announced the law to be that on the trial of a cause, whether the facts be disputed or undisputed, if different minds may honestly draw different conclusions from them, the case must be submitted to the jury; and we think this is the safe and sound rule. As was well said in that case: "Twelve men of the average of the community, comprising men of education and men of little education, men of learning and men whose learning consists only in what they have themselves seen and heard, the merchant, the mechanic, the farmer, the laborer,—these sit together, consult, apply their separate experience of the affairs of life to the facts proved, and draw unanimous conclusions. This average judgment thus given it is the great effort of the law to obtain.

It is assumed that twelve men know more of the common affairs of life than does one man; that they can draw wiser and safer conclusions from admitted facts thus occurring than can a single judge." It was held in the case of Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Powers, 149 U. S. 43, 37 L. ed. 642, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748, Mr. Justice Brewer speaking for the court, that "it is well settled that where there is uncertainty as to the existence of either negligence or contributory negligence the question is not one of law, but of fact, and to be settled by a jury; and this, whether the uncertainty arises from a conflict in the testimony, or because, the facts being undisputed, fair-minded men will honestly draw different conclusions from them." It was held in Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1003, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322, that it is for the judge to say whether any facts have been established by sufficient evidence from which negligence can be reasonably inferred, and it is for the jury to say whether, from those facts, when submitted to them, negligence ought to be inferred. When the facts are such that all reasonable men must draw the same conclusions from them, the case is one of law for the court, and may be taken from the jury. Gardner v. Michigan C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 349, 37 L. ed. 1107, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140. It has also been frequently stated thus: "A case should not be withdrawn from the jury unless the conclusion follows as matter of law that no recovery can be had upon any view which can properly be taken of the facts the evidence tends to establish." Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 829, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Dunlap v. Northeastern R. Co. 130 U. S. 649, 32 L. ed. 1058, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 647; Kane v. Northern C. R. Co. 128 U. S. 91, 32 L. ed. 339, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16; Jones v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 128 U. S. 443, 32 L. ed. 478, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118.

There is but one other legal proposition, we think, presented by this case. It is suggested that the relation of fellow servant existed between plaintiff in error and the night boss, who had charge of the oil mill at the time the accident occurred to the plaintiff. The question of the relation of fellow servant has no place in this case. The plaintiff seeks to recover for injuries resulting from the alleged failure of the oil company to provide reasonably safe appliances with which to do his work. The law makes it the duty of the employer to provide the employee with reasonably safe and suitable appliances with which to do his work, and the employer cannot delegate this duty to a subordinate, or relieve himself from liability by imposing the duty upon another. And in any case of injury resulting from defective or unsafe appliances the relations of fellow servant do not and cannot arise. Northern P. R. Co. v. Peterson, 162 U. S. 346, 40 L. ed. 994, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843; New England R. Co. v. Conroy, 175 U. S. 323, 44 L. ed. 181, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 755, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590; Washington & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 135 U. S. 554, 34 L. ed. 235, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1044; Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213, 25 L. ed. 612; Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454, 27 L. ed. 605, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 932; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Union P. R. Co. v. Daniels, 152 U. S. 684, 38 L. ed. 597, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756.

By a correct application of the rules of law enunciated in the authorities herein cited to the facts, and reasonable inferences in plaintiff's favor, as shown by his evidence, a correct conclusion should be reached. It seems clear that when the oil company employed the plaintiff it undertook to provide him a reasonably safe place in which to work, reasonably safe appliances, machinery, and tools with which to do his work, and reasonably competent fellow servants to assist in his work. On the other hand, the plaintiff assumed all the dangers and risks incident to his employment, as well as the risks of any enhanced dangers arising from defective appliances of which he had full knowledge, or which were so obvious as to be readily apparent. The duty of the company to provide safe appliances was measured by the hazards reasonably incident to the operation of oil-mill machinery, constructed as its mill was; and the risks assumed by the plaintiff were such as could be reasonably expected to result from the operation of such machinery and its appliances when properly constructed and properly operated. The company was required to exercise reasonable care and caution in the supplying and maintenance of its appliances furnished employees with which to perform their work, and the employee was required to exercise reasonable care and caution for his own safety, and to avoid injuries to himself. The company was not required to furnish the best or latest patterns or most modern designs of machinery or appliances, but it was bound to provide such as were reasonably safe and free from dangerous defects, and was required to exercise reasonable care and caution in the selection and in the maintenance of that character of appliances that it did provide and use. If the company, instead of erecting a foot-board for use of its employees in oiling and repairing the overhead shafting and pulleys and in adjusting the belts to the pulleys, elected to provide a ladder for such purpose, it was then its duty to exercise due care and caution in the selection of such a ladder as would be reasonably safe, and without dangerous defects which might, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, have been discovered; and the duty remained with the company continuously, so long as the ladder was so used, to see that it was reasonably suitable and satisfactory for such purpose. If the ladder was defective, if it was too weak, if it was not suitable for the purpose for which it was used at the time of the accident, then the company was chargeable with notice of such dangers or defects as shown by the evidence, as a number of the employees at divers times had informed the manager of the company of the conditions as they existed. There was evidence reasonably tending to show that the ladder was weak on one side; that when in use the weight of a person upon it had a tendency to cause it to turn to one side; that in replacing the belt the operator had to stand near the top of the ladder, and lift one end of a large belt, and in putting on the belt a considerable pressure was required, amounting, it was estimated, to from 100 to 200 pounds. To support the weight of the man and the added weight of the belt, and resist the required pressure to adjust the belt, required a sustaining capacity very largely in excess of that ordinarily required on a ladder. This ladder had been used about the mill for several months, had been used by carpenters and laborers, and had been frequently used for the purpose of putting on the belt the same as when the accident occurred. An attempt had been made to strengthen the weak side of the ladder, and a piece of a board had been nailed on, which had caused the side piece to split. It was clearly shown that the proper and suitable mode of constructing such mills was to construct a foot or running board along the shafting, with railings, so that employees required to go up to the shafting could walk upon such footboard and reach the shaft, pulleys, and belts; and that it was more hazardous to use the ladder for such purposes. But the plaintiff knew of this mode of performing this work when he took this particular employment. He had previously worked in other parts of the mill, and knew of the risk and danger of ascending this ladder for the purpose of replacing the belt in question. With full knowledge of these conditions, he took the employment, and accepted the risks incident to such work.

64 L. R. A.

He assumed such extra hazards as were to be reasonably expected from the use of the ladder in putting on the belt, but he also had a right to assume that the employer had provided a ladder which was strong enough to support his weight, and the additional force necessary to put the belt on the pulley, unless the defect or danger of the ladder breaking was so obvious and imminent as to be apparent or observable. The employee is not required to inspect machinery furnished him to work with; he is not bound to look for latent defects; nor is he chargeable with notice of defects that he might have discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence. He is only chargeable with such defects as are apparent to ordinary observation. This was expressly decided in the case of Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 665, 42 L. ed. 1188, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777, and our own court has said in Guthrie v. Swan, 5 Okla. 779, 51 Pac. 562: "There must be knowledge of the danger, or sufficient reason to apprehend it, to put a reasonable man on his guard, or there can be no contributory negligence. But, even though the person injured had reason to apprehend it, yet it does not necessarily follow that he has been guilty of contributory negligence. Thus one may voluntarily and unnecessarily expose himself or his property to a known danger without being guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law; and while, in so doing, he is held to assume all risks of injury which a careful and prudent person would apprehend as likely to flow from his conduct, yet, if injured by the negligence of another without any negligence upon his part proximately contributing to the injury, he may recover, and it is usually held a question for the jury whether he was in exercise of due care to avoid danger."

The company which procured the ladder to be made, and supplied it for the use in the room where the accident occurred, and caused it to be used in the manner that the plaintiff was using it when he was injured, was bound to know that it was suitable for this purpose. It had no right to guess or experiment with it. The duty it owed to its employee required it to exercise reasonable care, skill, caution, and judgment. It was required to know or take reasonable precautionary steps to ascertain the kind, character, and quality of the timber used in the construction of the ladder so far as it could be ascertained from examination and inspection. It was required to know that the scantlings used for the side pieces were of sufficient capacity to support the weight of the plaintiff and resist the force necessary to be used in replacing the belt. And after the ladder was "spliced," or "patched," as it was termed by the witnesses, it was the duty of the company to see that it was not weakened by the nails or cracks caused by the nails. To fail to use such reasonable care and caution at all times as was necessary to obtain such information was negligence. On the other hand, if there were defects rendering the ladder unsafe, which were of such a character as to be apparent to ordinary observation, and the plaintiff had reason to apprehend danger from such defects, then he assumed the hazard incident to such condition, and his own negligence contributed to his injury, and thereby prevents a recovery. But he was not required to know the sustaining power of the timbers, the amount of resistance required to meet and overcome the force of putting up and adjusting the belt, or how much weight the ladder was capable of supporting. He had a right to assume that the employer, in performance of its duty, had done all things reasonably necessary to provide him with a reasonably safe ladder, and to rely upon such assumption, unless the condition of the ladder itself, and what he had observed in the use of it previously, were such as would lead a reasonably careful person to believe that it was unsafe and dangerous for use in replacing the belt on the overhead pulley. If he did have such knowledge as would cause a reasonably cautious person to refrain from taking the risk under all the circumstances of the case at the time, and not regarding such knowledge he continued using the ladder, then he will not be entitled to recover for any injury resulting from the insufficiency of the ladder for the purpose used. It is not every suspicion or apprehension of danger that will warrant an employee in abandoning his post and in refusing to perform his labors. Taking the risk of apprehended danger is not necessarily negligence. There must be knowledge of danger, or knowledge of a condition which reasonably leads to a belief of danger, and this rule is different from that which controls in case of passengers, travelers, or strangers. In this case the mill was running day and night. The plaintiff and one other person were employed in the room where the "linters" and "hullers" were operated. These machines were propelled by the belt which was in turn driven by the pulley on the overhead shaft, against which it was necessary to support the upper end of the ladder in adjusting the belt. When this belt slipped off the pulley, a portion of the machines in this room were stopped, and the seed being forced into them, they became choked. It was necessary to raise the lids or doors on these machines to prevent more serious consequences. The engineer was in another room. When the belt came off the power continued, and other parts of the machinery were kept in motion. Breaking this link destroyed the effectiveness of any of the process. The plaintiff was employed to look after the operation of the machinery in this room. He had one assistant, who had not worked long at the business. He complained to the company of the hazard of adjusting the belt while standing on a ladder, and said the ladder did not seem safe. The night manager assured him the ladder was all right, and instructed him to go ahead, and further said, if it did not suit him, he would get men who would use it. With this assurance he did go on and use the ladder. Does this state of facts, under all the surrounding circumstances, show contributory negligence? Can fair-minded men arrive at only one conclusion, and that that the plaintiff recklessly and heedlessly, and without regard to his own safety, used the ladder in question? Or will some fair-minded men honestly come to the conclusion that the plaintiff acted in this case as any ordinarily careful and cautious person would be expected to act under all the circumstances? We think there is room for a diversity of honest judgment, and that the plaintiff was entitled to have the question, both of negligence of the defendant and that of contributory negligence, go to the jury. We think the case is one that comes within the rule where it is error to withdraw the case from the jury and decide the case as a question of law.

There are some suggestions in the briefs that ought to be referred to, inasmuch as a new trial must be had. It had been suggested that the law as stated in the case of Guthrie v. Swan, 5 Okla. 779, 51 Pac. 562, is controlling in this case. We do not think so. This case is governed entirely by the law as between employer and employee in such cases, and their reciprocal relations to each other. The Swan Case is controlled by the laws governing the duties of municipal corporations to pedestrians. While some of the principles stated in the Swan Case are applicable here, the controlling principle is not the same.

The plaintiff has sought in his brief to make the rule apply as stated in Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213, 25 L. ed. 612. There it was held: "There can be no doubt that, where a master has expressly promised to repair a defect, the servant can recover for an injury caused thereby within such a period of time after the promise as would be reasonable to allow for its performance, and, as we think, for an injury suffered within any period which would not preclude all reasonable expectation that the promise might be kept." But we do not think him entitled to the benefit of this rule. It is true that he testified that about a week previous to the accident he complained of the dangerous mode of performing the duty of putting on the belt, and that the officer in charge assured him that he would have a footboard put up. But this assurance was clearly revoked and repudiated by the last conversation, had only two or three days before the accident, at which time he again stated to the officer in charge that the ladder seemed unsafe, and was informed that it was sufficient, and, if he did not like it, he would get someone who would use it. In view of this last conversation, we do not think the plaintiff was still permitted to rely upon the previous promise, or to govern his conduct thereby. In order to entitle an employee to the benefit of the rule claimed, the promise to repair or remedy must have been made under such circumstances that the employee relied upon it, and continued his service upon the assurance that it would be done.

Counsel for defendant in error very confidently rely upon the case of Southern P. Co. v. Seley, 152 U. S. 145, 38 L. ed. 391, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530, where Mr. Justice Shiras, speaking for the court, said: "He knew as much about it and the risk attending its use as the master. The defendant could not be required to provide himself with other machinery, or with new appliances, nor to elect between the expense of doing so and the imposition of damages for injuries resulting to servants from the mere use of an older or different pattern. In the absence of defective construction, or of negligence or want of care in the reparation of machinery furnished by him, the master incurs no liability from its use. The general rule is that the servant accepts the service subject to the risks incidental to it, and where the machinery and implements of the employer's business are, at that time, of a certain kind or condition, and the servant knows it, he can make no claim upon the master to furnish other or different safeguards." In the Seley Case the plaintiff was employed upon a railroad as conductor. He placed his foot in a frog and was run over by the train and killed. He was familiar with frogs, the various kinds and their dangers, and took his employment assuming all the risks incidental to their use. It was shown that there was a later improved pattern of frog that was not subject to these perils. The contention of plaintiff's counsel was that it was negligence on the part of the railroad company to use these open frogs. The court cites a number of cases, all to the effect that, where the company has adopted an appliance which is suitable and in common use, it will not be charged with negligence for not adopting a later pattern. But there is nothing in the Seley Case which absolves an employer from exercising reasonable care and caution to supply reasonably safe appliances and to keep them in a reasonably safe condition. As said before in this opinion, the oil-mill company had elected to make use of a ladder to put up these belts, and the plaintiff took his employment with knowledge of such mode of doing the work; yet the oil-mill company was not absolved from providing a reasonably suitable and safe ladder, and, in the absence of direct knowledge to the contrary, the plaintiff had a right to assume that the company had done its duty, and that the ladder was reasonably suitable and safe for the work which he was required to do. The rule we have herein stated is, we think, in harmony with the law as expressed in the Seley Case. Nor is there anything herein in conflict with the law as enunciated in Chaddick v. Lindsay, 5 Okla. 616, 49 Pac. 940.

In conclusion, we are of the opinion that on account of the error of the trial court in withdrawing the case from the jury the judgment should be reversed, and cause remanded to the district court, with directions to resubmit the issues to a jury, and, unless the evidence should be substantially different, that the question of whether the defendant oil-mill company exercised proper care and caution in the selection of the ladder and keeping it in repair, and whether it was defective or reasonably sufficient to support a person while adjusting the belt in question, and whether the company exercised ordinary caution in determining such questions, and also whether, under the circumstances at the time, the plaintiff acted as an ordinarily prudent person would be expected to act, be submitted to the jury under proper instructions of the court.

The judgment is reversed, at costs of defendant in error.

All the Justices concur, except Burwell, J., who tried the case below, not sitting, and Gillette, J., absent.

RHODE ISLAND SUPREME COURT.

Mary COLLINS

v.

Alonzo HARRISON.

(.....R. I.....)

1. An employer who undertakes to furnish a domestic servant with a lodging place is bound to see that it is suitable for the purpose intended and is liable for injuries caused to the servant by sickness due to the leaky condition of the roof.
2. A domestic servant is not deprived of a right of action against her employer for sickness caused by the leaky condition of the roof of the room furnished as her sleeping apartment by the fact that she continued to occupy it after learning of its unfit condition, if she did so under his promise to repair.
3. Setting up a promise to repair as a ground for continuing service, in an action by a servant against her employer for injuries caused by an unsafe lodging place, does not render the complaint bad for duplicity, as counting upon both contract and tort.

(December 14, 1903.)

ON DEMURRER to a declaration in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries for which defendant was alleged to be responsible. Overruled.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Irving O. Hunt, for plaintiff:

The defendant, as the employer of the plaintiff, is under a duty to provide a safe and suitable place in which the plaintiff can sleep.

As a general proposition the ordinary relation of master and servant does not place upon the master the duty to provide food and lodging for his servant. But that does not mean that the master, under special contracts, or by reason of prevailing custom, cannot assume the duty to provide board and lodging for his servant.

King v. Interstate Consol. Street R. Co. 23 R. I. 583, 51 Atl. 301; Clifford v. Denver, S. P. & P. R. Co. 9 Colo. 333, 12 Pac. 219; Hyatt v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 19 Mo. App. 287; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 55; 1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. p. 304; Ryan v. Fowler, 24 N. Y. 410, 82 Am. Dec. 315.

The plaintiff did not, after having made known to the defendant the condition of the room and bed, and having received the assurances of the defendant that the roof would be repaired, assume the risk, and cannot be charged with contributory negligence.

1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. p. 372; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213, 25 L. ed. 612; Rogers v. Leyden, 127 Ind. 50, 28 N. E. 210; Smith v. E. W. Backus Lumber Co. 64 Minn. 447, 67 N. W. 358; Rice v. Eureka Paper Co. 70 App. Div. 336, 75 N. Y. Supp. 49; Cooley, Torts, 1st ed. p. 559; Hyatt v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 19 Mo. App. 287; Smith v. Tripp, 13 R. I. 152; Whalan v. Whipple (R. I.) 13 Atl. 107.

The declaration is not demurrable on account of duplicity, for the action is based on a breach of duty which the defendant owed the plaintiff, and the promise to remove the danger is inserted in the declaration to rebut the presumption that the plaintiff, by remaining in the employ of the defendant, assumed the risk of the employment.

13 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 904; Chicago & O. Coal & Car Co. v. Norman, 49 Ohio St. 598, 32 N. E. 857; Malm v. Thelin, 47 Neb. 686, 66 N. W. 650; Snowberg v. Nelson-Spencer Paper Co. 43 Minn. 532, 45 N. W. 1131.

Mr. James A. Williams for defendant.

Stiness, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff sues in an action on the case for negligence. The declaration alleges that the plaintiff was employed by the defendant as housekeeper, the defendant agreeing to provide the plaintiff with board and lodging; that the roof over the room in which the plaintiff slept was out of repair and leaked, so that the plaintiff's bed and bedding became wet and unfit to use; that the plaintiff gave notice to the defendant of the condition of her room; that she could not sleep in it; that he then promised, if she would remain in his employ, to repair the roof and provide suitable bedding; and that, relying on the promise, she remained seven days, being obliged to sleep in said room, by reason of which she became sick. The defendant demurs to the declaration, on the following grounds: (1) That the declaration does not set forth any duty which the defendant owed to the plaintiff, for which she can maintain this action. (2) That the plaintiff was not bound to remain in the house after she learned of its condition, and that she did so at her own risk, the results of which are attributable to her own act. (3) That the declaration sets forth a promise by the defendant to repair, and a breach thereof by him, thus setting forth two causes of action in the same count, which makes it bad for duplicity.

NOTE.—As to right of servant who continues work on the faith of the master's promise to remove a specific cause of danger, see also the preceding case of Neeley v. Southwestern Cotton Seed Oil Co., and cases in footnote thereto. 64 L. R. A.

The general rule is that a master is bound to provide appliances for a servant, and the term "appliances" is stated, in 1 Bailey's Personal Injuries, 1, to include machinery, apparatus, and premises. This rule is usually invoked in cases where a servant is employed in some mechanical work, but we fail to see why it is not equally applicable to a domestic servant. Wood on Master and Servant, 2d ed. p. 166, § 8, states the rule, where board and lodging are to be furnished by the employer, as follows: "So, too, he [the employer] impliedly undertakes to furnish him [the servant] with suitable lodging and good and wholesome food." Unfortunately, the case cited as authority on this point has no relation to it. Still the rule is a reasonable one, and in the line of the general duty of a master to a servant. Thus, in Ryan v. Fowler, 24 N. Y. 410, 82 Am. Dec. 315, it was held that a master was liable for injuries to a servant caused by the fall of a privy insecurely attached to the factory in which the servant was employed. In Mahoney v. Dore, 155 Mass. 513, 30 N. E. 366, it was held that an employer was liable to a domestic servant for the improper condition of an outside flight of stairs, by reason of which the servant fell and was injured. Knowlton, J., said: "The plaintiff had occasion to use these stairs frequently, as a servant of the defendant, and it was the duty of the defendant to keep them safe, so far as the exercise of reasonable care and diligence on her part would accomplish that result." See also Fitzgerald v. Connecticut River Paper Co. 155 Mass. 155, 31 Am. St. Rep. 537, 29 N. E. 464, and Clifford v. Denver, S. P. & P. R. Co. 9 Colo. 333, 12 Pac. 219.

The first ground of demurrer, as stated, is that the declaration does not set forth any duty which the defendant owed to the plaintiff, whereas the declaration explicitly sets forth that it became the duty of the defendant to furnish proper shelter, etc., on his agreement to provide the plaintiff with board and lodging. Evidently the demurrer was intended to raise the question of a legal duty, and we have so considered it. We think it was the duty of the defendant to provide suitable shelter, under the allegations of the declaration.

The declaration covers the second ground of demurrer by stating that the defendant promised to repair the leak in the roof if the plaintiff would not leave his employment. Durfee, Ch. J., said, in Kelley v. Silver Spring Bleaching & Dyeing Co. 12 R. I. 112, 34 Am. Rep. 615: "If, when the danger occurred, the plaintiff had notified the defendant of it, and had been induced to remain in his position by assurances that it should be remedied, or, as some of the cases hold, by a reasonable expectation that it would be remedied, then it would not necessarily be presumed, from his knowledge of the danger, that he had assumed the risk." In Jones v. New American File Co. 21 R. I. 125, 42 Atl. 509, it was held that the effect of a promise to remedy a defect is to raise a question of fact whether, under the circumstances, the servant is excused from taking the risk after such promise; the conditions being whether the employer had sufficient time to make the repairs, and whether, knowing the danger, the plaintiff proportionately increased his own care and precaution. King v. Interstate Consol. Street R. Co. 23 R. I. 583, 51 Atl. 301, distinguished Clifford v. Denver, S. P. & P. R. Co. 9 Colo. 333, 12 Pac. 219, on the ground that the former case did not show a promise, as was shown in the latter case. See also Stephenson v. Dunoon, 73 Wis. 404, 9 Am. St. Rep. 806, 41 N. W. 337.

The third ground of demurrer is that, as the declaration sets forth a promise, it is bad for duplicity. True, a promise is set out in the declaration, but not as a cause of action. The obvious purpose is to excuse the continuance in service, and thus to avoid a demurrer on that ground. This is not duplicity.

The defendant's demurrer to the declaration is overruled.

Douglas, J., dissenting:

"I am unable to agree with my brethren that, independently of contract, a householder owes to his domestic servant the duty of repairing a leaky roof over the room in which she is lodged. The rule which has become established for the security of workmen in manufactories where dangerous machines and instruments are used ought not, in my opinion, to be extended to the comparatively secure occupations of domestic service. The analogous rule which requires an employer to furnish his workmen with reasonably safe tools and appliances has been held not to apply to ordinary implements not naturally dangerous. As was said by Judge Miller, of the New York court of appeals, in Marsh v. Chickering, 101 N. Y. 396, 400, 5 N. E. 57, where a workman was injured by a ladder which he was using: "We have been referred to no adjudicated case which upholds the liability of a party under circumstances of the same character as those presented by the evidence here. A rule imposing such a liability in the case considered would be far-reaching, and would extend the principle stated to many of the vocations of life for which it was never intended. It is one of a just and salutary character, designed for the benefit of employees engaged in work where machinery and materials are used of which they can have but little knowledge, and not for those engaged in ordinary labor which only requires the use of implements with which they are entirely familiar." This case is cited in Gowen v. Harley, 6 C. C. A. 190, 12 U. S. App. 754, 56 Fed. 973, and Corcoran v. Milwaukee Gaslight Co. 81 Wis. 192, 51 N. W. 328; and in all of these cases a promise by the master to furnish other implements is held not to excuse the servant who had assumed the obvious risks of those which were furnished. The domestic servant takes the accommodation assigned to him as it is, and is at liberty to decline the employment if his quarters are not satisfactory. If the premises are out of repair, he assumes the obvious risk of exposure to the weather, and the liability to discomfort and disease, which is as well known to him as to the master. It seems to me unreasonable to consider that a leaky roof constitutes the chamber under it a dangerous place in any such sense as the words are used when applied to a mill or foundry filled with machinery or materials capable of inflicting the gravest injuries, and there is no such compulsion upon a domestic servant to occupy a particular room as upon a mill operative to work in a certain place upon a certain machine. It is, of course, competent for the parties to agree specially that certain accommodations shall be furnished; and if such an agreement, made upon good consideration, is broken, no doubt the innocent party may recover damages for the breach, according to the rules governing actions on contract. If the law did not impose the duty alleged, the obligation of the defendant in this case is based simply upon his promise to repair, and the plaintiff's action should have been assumpsit, not tort.

L'UNION ST. JEAN BAPTISTE DE PAW-TUCKET

v.

Thomas OSTIGUY.

(.....R. I.....)

1. A mutual benefit society cannot sue a former member for dues for nonpayment of which it has expelled him from the society.

NOTE.—For liability of member of benefit association to action for assessments, see also, in this series, Ellerbe v. Barney, 23 L. R. A. 435, and note, and Lehman v. Clark, 43 L. R. A. 648.
64 L. R. A.

2. Assessments by a mutual benefit association are not debts recoverable by action at law, where the right to the benefit is dependent on good standing in the society, and good standing depends on the payment of assessments which are always made in advance, and not to meet accrued obligations.

(November 23, 1903.)

EXCEPTIONS by defendant to rulings of the District Court for Providence County sustaining a demurrer to a plea in an action brought to recover assessments against a former member of a mutual benefit society. Sustained.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Thomas Riley, Jr., for defendant.
Mr. Hugh J. Carroll for plaintiff.

Stiness, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff, an incorporated beneficial society, whose members are subject to monthly dues, brings this action to recover dues for nonpayment of which the defendant has been stricken from the rolls of the society. The defendant pleaded the fact that he had been removed from the rolls, whereby the plaintiff had exhausted its remedy, and to this plea the plaintiff demurs. The district court of the tenth judicial district sustained the demurrer, and the defendant brings the case here on exceptions to that decision.

The simple question is whether a society can sue a member for dues after having expelled him for nonpayment. We think the question must be answered in the negative. As a general rule, when a penalty is enforced for a default it is a waiver of other remedies for the same default under the contract. The plaintiff claims, however, that the collection of past dues is a right of the society, which is unaffected by the penalty of expulsion. An obvious reply to this position is that dues are paid for the benefits and privileges of membership. So long as a member pays them he is entitled, in this respect, to remain a member. The society, in its by-laws, elects to take the forfeiture of membership in lieu of unpaid dues, because, if it can collect the dues after the forfeiture, the member would no longer be in default, and the reason for expulsion would no longer remain, yet he would stand legally expelled. Recovery of such dues at law amounts to compelling a member to perform his part without giving him the benefits of membership. Membership and liability for dues are correlative. One cannot stand without the other. It is a quasi contract. But if a contract provides for a payment of money, and in default thereof for the forfeiture of something else, an action, after forfeiture has been exacted, cannot be maintained for the money under the contract. A forfeiture which has been enforced amounts to a satisfaction of the contract.

Aside from these general considerations, there have been some decisions upon the question of a member's legal liability for assessments. Nash v. Russell, 5 Barb. 556, before beneficial societies were so numerous as now, held that a member was not liable at law for dues, nor for a note which he had given for them, because the note was not based upon a consideration of legal obligation, the payment being voluntary, or at most resting on moral obligation only. Since then societies of this kind have been recognized as of the nature of insurance companies, and in some cases membership is treated as a contract. Ellerbe v. Barney, 119 Mo. 632, 23 L. R. A. 435, 25 S. W. 384, held that a forfeiture clause did not discharge a member from past society debts or dues, his promise to pay the assessments, when called, being the consideration for his insurance as a member. It was a decision of four judges against three. The action was brought by the state superintendent of insurance, to recover assessments to pay the designated amount due on the death of a member. The superintendent had been appointed receiver of the society, and sued as such to recover money from the members at the time to pay the claims against it. The insurance in that case was treated like insurance in a mutual company, where members are liable on all losses occurring during their membership in the company, though the membership may then have ceased. Provident Mut. Relief Asso. v. Pelissier, 69 N. H. 606, 45 Atl. 562, followed Ellerbe v. Barney. McDonald v. Ross-Lewin, 29 Hun, 87, was also an assessment for a death loss which was treated as a mutual insurance contract. Palmetto Lodge No. 5, I. O. O. F. v. Hubbell, 2 Strobb. L. 457, 49 Am. Dec. 604, held that a member was liable for all dues after suspension, if the by-laws so provide. The court pointed out the distinction between a suspended and an expelled member. "According to the by-laws, a suspended member may be reinstated on paying the amount charged against him. An expelled member can be readmitted only on the terms and conditions of a new member." One under suspension was still a member and could be assessed. Com. v. Wetherbee, 105 Mass. 149, held that the issue and acceptance of a certificate, whereby the company agreed to pay a fixed sum on the death of a member, and the members also agreed to pay a fixed sum on their part to make up the amount payable on the certificate, was mutual insurance. The promises were mutual, and so, also, was the liability. The case, however, was an indictment for doing insurance business contrary to law.

On the other hand are cases which hold that an expelled member is not liable for dues and assessments in a society of this kind. Thus Lehman v. Clark, 174 Ill. 279, 43 L. R. A. 648, 51 N. E. 222, recognized the insurance feature as equivalent to mutual insurance but held that it was a unilateral contract; and, whether the payment for insurance be termed a premium or an assessment, the right of the association or company is to declare a forfeiture, and not to recover the assessment or premium in a suit. In Chicago Mut. Life Indemnity Asso. v. Hunt, 127 Ill. 257, 2 L. R. A. 549, 20 N. E. 55, the court said: "While the certificate of membership is a contract, such contract, in the absence of express stipulations to the contrary, is purely unilateral. It may be enforced against the association where the member has performed all the prescribed conditions, but none of its stipulations are enforceable against the member. If he fails to pay his assessments or dues, or does any act forbidden by the certificate of membership, the certificate becomes void, and the membership ceases. But the making of an assessment or the maturing of dues does not make the member a debtor to the association, so as to authorize it to bring a suit for its recovery in case of his neglect or refusal to pay. Payment is left wholly to his discretion." To the same effect is Re Protection L. Ins. Co. 9 Biss. 188, Fed. Cas. No. 11,444. See also 2 May, Ins. 3d ed. § 341a. This is the accepted rule in ordinary life insurance. The insured pays his premium when he takes his policy, and it is optional with him to continue or not when it expires. No company would consider that it had a right to sue for a premium after forfeiture. No wrong is done under this rule. Premiums are payable in advance, and thus the insured pays for his insurance while he has it, and then he drops it. The conditions of the society in this case are not substantially different. Dues and assessments are payable in advance. When a member ceases to pay, he has already paid for all the time for which he has had benefit. The defaulted payment is for future benefits, which he does not choose to continue. This is right and proper, and in strict analogy to other insurance. Where insurance has been procured for a fixed sum, upon mutual promises to make up the amount, there is a much more distinct contract and a clearer reason for holding one liable under it than in the present case. Here the contract is that the beneficiary shall receive from the society, in case of a death, as many dollars as there are members. The number of members is liable to vary, and the member is presumed to take notice that under the by-laws those in default will cease to be members. The payment is postponed thirty days, and the members have the same time within which to pay their assessments. The postponement of payment to the beneficiary is not for the purpose of collecting the money, because, assessments being in advance, the fund is already in hand at the time of the member's death, and the assessment thereupon becoming due is for the next death that may take place. It would seem, therefore, as if the reason for delay might be to ascertain the number of members who are in good standing at the time, as the basis on which the payment is to be made. However this may be, it shows a difference between the ordinary contract of mutual insurance to pay proportionally for all losses during membership, and advance payments upon which membership is to depend.

Another difference between a society of this kind and insurance companies proper is that benefit societies usually give a term of grace—as in this case of thirty days—within which payment can be made; while other companies, formerly at least, required payment on the anniversary of the date of the policy. The object of this term of grace, however, is apparently to enable the member to avoid expulsion, and not a provision to affect the contract; for he is in default at the expiration of the time originally fixed for payment in the by-laws, and under them he is not entitled to benefits or to the mutual aid fund while so in default. He therefore does not have benefits after default, which otherwise might be regarded as a consideration for liability for dues. See art. 24, § 2; art. 27, § 10; art. 30; art. 31, § 3; art. 33, § 2; art. 33. A term of grace accorded by a society cannot make that a debt which is not a debt, nor create an equitable liability of one member by a provision which is made for its own benefit or for the accommodation of all its members. It amounts to an extension of the time of payment within which a member may reinstate himself. We think that under the by-laws in this case assessments are not debts recoverable at law.

The exception to the ruling of the District Court sustaining the plaintiff's demurrer to the defendant's plea is sustained.
64 L. R. A.

James E. WINWARD, Admr., etc., of Frank W. Prescott, Deceased,
v.

Levi C. LINCOLN et al.

(23 R. I. 476.)

1. Transactions of a broker which become the basis of a note given by his principal, and which are performed in one state where the note is delivered under directions of the principal by telephone or letter from another state, are, for the purpose of determining the validity of the consideration for the note, to be judged by the law of the place where the broker performed them.
2. A note, valid where made, cannot be enforced in another state to whose public policy the transactions which form its consideration are contrary.
3. Provisions of a statute as to implications to be drawn from acts in connection with dealing in stocks have no application in the courts of another state, where the validity of a stock transaction is drawn in question any further than they may tend to throw light upon the validity of such transactions under the statute.
4. Actual purchases of stock by a broker are shown by a ledger indicating that, in response to an order to purchase, the broker charged the customer with the price of the stock, charged him monthly interest on the amount invested, credited dividends received from the stocks and the entry of the final closing out of the stock at different prices during the day as shares were sold, while the broker's correspondent testifies that, as to at least some of the stock, the broker actually had the shares in his possession.
5. That one ordering a broker to purchase stock for him did not intend to receive the certificates is not sufficient to show

NOTE.—Conflict of laws as to gambling and lottery contracts.

I. Gambling contracts.

a. Public policy of forum; transitory character of action, 180.

b. Governing law when public policy of forum does not interfere, 185.

II. Lottery contracts, 189.

This note is strictly confined to cases in which different elements of the contract have their situs in two or more different jurisdictions, or in which an action is brought in one jurisdiction upon a contract which has its situs in another. With the general question as to what constitutes a gambling contract, or as to the rights and remedies of the parties to such a contract, this note is not concerned, except so far as they are incidental to the question, which jurisdiction furnishes the law by which these matters are to be determined with reference to a particular contract or transaction.

I. Gambling contracts.

a. Public policy of forum; transitory character of action.

The prevailing tendency seems to be to regard that he did not intend an actual purchase by the broker on his account.

6. That one ordering a broker to purchase stocks on his account had not the means of paying for them is not conclusive evidence that a mere wagering contract was intended, where the purchaser availed himself of the broker's credit and facilities for borrowing on the stocks themselves.
7. Where upon its face a transaction for the purchase and sale of stocks between customer and broker is a genuine one, the burden of proof is upon the one attacking it, to show its falsity.
8. A transaction by which a broker, upon orders of his customer, actually purchases stocks in good faith and with the intention that they shall be delivered upon demand, is not void as a wager at common law, although the stocks are not in fact paid for by, or delivered to, the customer, who has no intention of receiving them, but are held by the broker, who either borrows or advances the purchase money upon the security of the stock, and holds them until ordered by the customer to sell them.

(January 14, 1902.)

CASE transferred by a single justice for the opinion of the full bench to determine questions which arose in an action to enforce payment of a promissory note which was alleged to be void because given in settlement of liabilities incurred in a stock gambling transaction. Judgment for plaintiff.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

statutes declaring gambling contracts and transactions illegal or void as embodying a distinctive public policy, which requires the courts of the state or country in which they are enacted to refuse to recognize or enforce any contract or transaction in violation of their terms, even though such contract or transaction may have had its situs outside of the forum, and, therefore, does not come within the direct operation of the statutes. The practical result of the adoption of this view is that a contract, in order to be upheld or enforced, must be valid, both by its proper law (i. e., by the law of its situs), and by the law of the forum, so far as the element of gambling is concerned.

Thus, a note to pay a bet on a horse race in another state, where such notes are presumed valid, and where the original note, of which the one in suit is a renewal, was given, will not be enforced in North Carolina, even if it be deemed a Virginia contract, since it is contrary to the public policy of the forum. Gooch v. Faucett, 122 N. C. 270, 39 L. E. A. 835, 29 S. E. 362.

A plea in an action upon notes, setting up that they were given in a transaction which the common law holds a gambling transaction, presents a good defense, regardless of the law of the place where the notes were made or payable. Brown v. Alexander, 29 Ill. App. 626. The notes in this case were made in Virginia, and payable in Maryland. The transactions in question took place at different points, — New York, Baltimore, Chicago, and St. Louis. The action appears to have been brought by the original holder of the notes.

This principle has been frequently applied to transactions in stocks and grain, commonly known as "options" or "futures."

The provision of the Mississippi act of 1882, that no money advanced for the purchase of "futures" shall be recovered in any court of Mississippi, prevents the maintenance of an action in that state for the recovery of advances made upon such purchases in London, even though the transactions were valid according to the law of England, and the action could have been maintained in that country. Lemonius v. Mayer, 71 Miss. 514, 14 So. 33. White v. Eason (Miss.) 15 So. 66, is to the same effect.

Contracts between a broker and his customer, a resident of New Jersey, for speculations in stocks upon margins, which do not contemplate delivery of the stock, but are in reality mere dealings in the differences between prices, so that, if made in New Jersey, they would be contrary to the provisions of the statute of that state, to prevent gaming, will not be enforced by a court of that state, although made in New York and presumably legal by the law of that state, since their enforcement would violate the plain public policy of New Jersey on the subject of gambling and betting, evinced by such statute. Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219, 48 Am. Rep. 308, Reversing 36 N. J. Eq. 48.

The rule laid down in Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219, 48 Am. Rep. 308, was restated in Pratt v. Boody, 55 N. J. Eq. 175, 35 Atl. 1113, although in this case it was held that the transactions were not gambling transactions, even as tested by the law of New Jersey.

Gist v. Western U. Tele. Co. 45 S. C. 344, 55 Am. St. Rep. 763, 23 S. E. 143, while recognizing the general principle that a contract, valid by the law of the place where it was made and is to be performed, is valid everywhere, held that contracts for the sales of "futures," on account of their immoral tendency, will not be recognized by a court of a state by whose laws they are forbidden, even if valid by the law of the state where they were made and were to be performed.

The rule laid down in Gist v. Western U. Tele. Co. 45 S. C. 344, 55 Am. St. Rep. 763, 23 S. E. 143, was applied, in Riordan v. Doty, 50 S. C. 537, 27 S. E. 939, to an action for advances by a broker in buying and selling cotton "futures" on the New York cotton exchange. The court seems to have assumed that the right to maintain the action depended upon the law of South Carolina, and there was no discussion of the question whether that law, or the law of New York, governed.

So, in Harvey v. Doty, 54 S. C. 382, 32 S. E. 501 (an action by a broker to recover for advances on account of the purchases and sales of grain for future delivery on the Chicago market), it was assumed that the rights of the parties were to be determined by the law of South Carolina; and it was held, applying that law, that a party in South Carolina, gambling in grain "futures" upon the Chicago exchange, by an agent, cannot be required, under the South Carolina statutes, to repay his agent advances made for his benefit, on the ground that such agent acted with the Chicago trader as a principal, and both had the bona fide inten-

Messrs. Edwards & Angell, for plaintiff:

The relation of principal and agent, or broker and customer, between the plaintiff's testator and the defendants, arose in Rhode Island, and transactions arising out of that relation are governed by the laws of this state.

Akers v. Demond, 103 Mass. 323; Perry v. Mount Hope Iron Co. 15 R. I. 380, 2 Am. St. Rep. 902, 5 Atl. 632; Dacey, Conf. L. p. 617; Hunt v. Jones, 12 R. I. 265, 34 Am. Rep. 635.

Marginal dealings in stock, such as were had between Prescott & Company and the defendants, are valid under the laws of Rhode Island. The relation between the broker and customer, in a marginal transaction is that of pledgeor and pledgee.

Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235; Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518, 23 Am. Rep. 80; Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25; Gillett v. Whiting, 120 N. Y. 402, 24 N. E. 790; Hatch v. Douglas, 48 Conn. 116, 40 Am. Rep. 154; Skiff v. Stoddard, 63 Conn. 198, 21 L. R. A. 102, 26 Atl. 874, 28 Atl. 104; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 457; Dos Passos, Stock Brokers & Stock Exchanges, p. 112; Jones, Pledges, § 495; Hopkins v. O'Kane, 169 Pa. 478, 32 Atl. 421.

The hypothecation or repledge of the stocks with banks to raise the purchase money in no way changes the nature of the transaction.

Skiff v. Stoddard, 63 Conn. 198, 21 L. R. A. 102, 26 Atl. 874, 28 Atl. 104; Bangs v. Hornick, 30 Fed. 97.

The plaintiff will not be barred from re-tion to deliver the grain at a specified future time.

In Parker v. Moore, 53 C. C. A. 369, 115 Fed. 799, the court said that the rule had been established in South Carolina that suits brought therein for the enforcement of any right or claim arising out of a contract for the future delivery of cotton, or the like, must be governed, as to the interpretation of the contract and the morality of the claim, by the laws of South Carolina, even though the contract was made and to be performed in another state, upon the ground that contracts which are regarded as contra bonos mores in one state cannot be recognized there, although they are regarded as valid in another state where made and to be performed. The court then said that the United States courts will follow the rules laid down by the highest court of a state in the matter of determining whether the lex loci contractus or the lex fori shall govern. It was held, in this case, however, that, even according to the law of South Carolina, the secret intention of the customer merely to speculate in the rise and fall of the market, with no intention to make delivery, did not prevent a recovery of the advances and commissions by the broker who conducted the transactions in good faith, and in the belief that an actual purchase was intended.

In Bartlett v. Collins, 109 Wis. 477, 83 Am. St. Rep. 928, 85 N. W. 703, the court held that the contract between the broker and his customer, there involved, was a Wisconsin contract, and was, therefore, subject to the direct operation of the Wisconsin statute; but the court further said that, if the contract were held to be an Illinois contract, it could not have been enforced in Wisconsin, because it is a universal principle that the courts of no state will hold valid any contract which is injurious to the public rights of its people, offends their morals, contravenes their policy, or violates public law.

The principle upon which the foregoing decisions rest was carried still further in Minzhelmer v. Doolittle, 60 N. J. Eq. 394, 45 Atl. 611, infra, where it was held that a New Jersey court of equity would not lend its aid to the enforcement of a judgment, recovered in New York by a broker against his customer, for commissions and advances on account of transactions which were mere speculations on the rise and fall of the price of cotton on the 64 L. R. A.

New York exchange, even assuming that the transactions were valid according to the law of New York.

So, it was held in Benton v. Singleton, 114 Ga. 548, 58 L. R. A. 181, 40 S. E. 811, that a court of Georgia will not entertain an action to enforce an award in favor of a customer against a broker, made in New York under a voluntary submission to arbitration of the rights of the parties arising out of a gambling transaction in cotton "futures" upon the New York exchange. It was so held, even upon the assumption that, by the law of New York, it would be no defense to a common-law award that it was based upon a gambling transaction.

In Pope v. Hanke, 155 Ill. 617, 28 L. R. A. 568, 40 N. E. 839, it was held that dealings in "futures" or "options" are so opposed to the public policy of Illinois, as declared by its Criminal Code which makes such dealings a penal offense, that a court of that state will not entertain an action upon a note given in settlement of losses incurred in such dealings, notwithstanding that the plaintiff was a bona fide purchaser of the note without knowledge of the consideration, and that, under the law of the state where the note was made and was payable, the maker could not have availed himself of the illegality of the consideration as against a bona fide purchaser, though he could as against the original holder. The opinion in this case recognizes that, ordinarily, the law of the state where a note is made and payable will govern as to the defenses available to the maker, but holds that there is an exception to the rule when it conflicts with the public policy of the forum.

In Sondheim v. Gilbert, 117 Ind. 71, 5 L. R. A. 432, 10 Am. St. Rep. 23, 18 N. E. 687, however, it was held that it was not opposed to public morals, or violative of the public policy of Indiana, to enforce payment of a commercial note made and payable in New York, in the hands of an innocent holder, although it was given for the purpose of paying or securing losses or margins on contemplated dealings in "futures" on the New York cotton exchange, the same not being invalid, for that reason, by the law of New York, in the hands of a bona fide holder without notice of the nature of the consideration. The court seems to have assumed that this would be so, even upon the covery in this suit under the laws of Rhode Island, unless the principal parties to the contract for the purchase or sale of stock did not intend that any stocks should be transferred, and such intention was known to the broker.

Barnes v. Smith, 159 Mass. 344, 34 N. E. 403; Ward v. Vosburgh, 31 Fed. 12; Dewey, Contracts for Future Delivery and Commercial Wagers; Young v. Glendinning, 194 Pa. 550, 45 Atl. 364.

Transactions of this kind are presumptively valid, and the party assailing them has the burden of proving them illegal.

Bangs v. Hornick, 30 Fed. 97; Ward v. Vosburgh, 31 Fed. 12.

In Massachusetts it is held that the relation between a broker and his customer is not that of pledgee and pledgee.

Covell v. Loud, 135 Mass. 41, 46 Am. Rep. 446; Re Swift, 105 Fed. 493.

This difference between the Massachusetts rule and the one generally adopted simply brings into importance the question of intention as affecting the legality of the transaction between the broker and his customer. If they are not pledgee and pledgee, and are treated as holding the relation of principals towards one another, the question of the intention of the customer to take the stock from the broker becomes material. The testimony, however, is not sufficiently strong to taint the transaction with illegality so as to prevent the broker from recovering under the Massachusetts decisions.

Harvey v. Merrill, 150 Mass. 1, 5 L. R. A. 200, 15 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 N. E. 49; assumption that, if the note had been made and payable in Indiana, and the gambling transactions had taken place there, it would have been unenforceable, even in the hands of a bona fide purchaser. The court, however, recognizes the principle that a contract, though valid by its proper law, will not be enforced if contrary to good morals or repugnant to the policy or positive statutes of the jurisdiction in which it is sought to be enforced; and, after commenting upon the language of the two statutes, says that they indicated such a coincidence in the policy of both states as that the courts of Indiana would not hesitate to enforce the liability of the maker of a note, such as that involved in the case at bar, in the hands of an innocent holder.

It was held in Sullivan v. German Nat. Bank (Colo. App.) 70 Pac. 162, that while, under the gaming statute of Colorado, an assignment of a negotiable instrument, in consideration of gambling losses, is invalid, even as against a subsequent bona fide indorsee, yet it is not contrary to the distinctive public policy of Colorado to apply the Texas rule upholding such an assignment in favor of a subsequent bona fide indorsee; and, accordingly, it was held that the validity, as against a subsequent bona fide indorsee, of the indorsement and assignment in Texas, in payment of gambling losses incurred there, of a certificate of deposit issued by a Colorado bank, was to be determined by the law of Texas, rather than the law of Colorado.

But, in Savings Bank v. National Bank of Commerce, 38 Fed. 800, it was held that, even assuming that an action would lie in Kansas by a second bona fide indorsee, in that state, of a certificate of deposit issued by a Missouri bank, and transferred to the first indorsee in Kansas in payment of losses incurred in a gambling game in that state,—a court of Missouri would, upon the ground of public policy, refuse to entertain the action. This decision, however, was upon the assumption that the certificate of deposit was not negotiable by the law of Missouri, where it was issued and payable, though it was by the law of Kansas, where it was transferred.

It will be observed that in the cases thus far cited in which the decision rests upon the ground of the public policy of the forum such public policy is applied merely with the result of denying any relief to either party; but in Tarleton v. Baker, 18 Vt. 9, 44 Am. Dec. 358, the court went further, and applied the public policy of the forum, with the result of granting affirmative relief to one of the parties. It was held in that case that where two residents of Vermont went into Canada for the purpose of making a wager upon the result of a presidential election the wager would be treated as illegal by a court of Vermont, without reference to the law of Canada; and it was further held that an action would lie in Vermont by one of the parties to the wager to recover the moneys from the stakeholder, the latter having been notified of the revocation of the wager before the occurrence of the event upon which it depended.

In most, at least, of the foregoing cases which have refused, upon the ground of the public policy of the forum, to entertain an action based upon a contract valid by the law of the place where made and performable, the attempt was to enforce the contract against a resident of the forum. That was true of the case of Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219, 48 Am. Rep. 308, which relied, in part, upon Bentley v. Whittemore, 19 N. J. Eq. 462, 97 Am. Dec. 671, which, in refusing, upon the ground of the public policy of the forum, to uphold an assignment for the benefit of creditors, valid by the law of another state, limited the application of the doctrine to the protection of residents and citizens of New Jersey. In Minzhelmer v. Doolittle, 60 N. J. Eq. 394, 45 Atl. 611, the defendant was a resident of New Jersey at the time she acquired the title to the property, which the complainant sought, by the suit, to have applied to the judgment recovered by him in New York upon the gambling contract, although she was not a resident of New Jersey when the suit was commenced. In reply to the contention that the refusal of the courts of New Jersey to aid such transactions arose solely out of a purpose to protect its own citizens, the court said that such refusal does not rest upon regard for the defendant, but is based on the unwillingness of the court to use the powers which were granted for the furtherance of lawful ends in aiding the schemes, the nature of which is condemned by the public policy of the state. And the court in the latter case held that the doctrine will be applied when it is apparent, from the real character

Barnes v. Smith, 159 Mass. 346, 34 N. E. 403.

A statute is not presumed to make any change beyond what is expressed in its provisions, or fairly implied in them, in the rules and principles of the common law.

Wilbur v. Crane, 13 Pick. 284.

The Massachusetts act is aimed at purely fictitious transactions where "there shall be no actual purchase or sale."

Com. v. Sylvester, 13 Allen, 247; Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch, 1, 3 L. ed. 19; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724; Grill v. General Iron Screw Collier Co. L. R. 1 C. P. 600.

This statute does not apply to a suit in Rhode Island on a Massachusetts note given in a Massachusetts stockbroker's transaction, valid under the common law of Massachusetts, and which would be valid under the law of Rhode Island.

Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 20 R. L. 466, 40 Atl. 341; Fiske v. Foster, 10 Met. 597; Re Pulsifer, 14 Fed. 247; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Frommhold, 75 Ill. App. 43; Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406, 23 L. ed. 245; Dacey, Conf. L. pp. 711 et seq.; Brown v. Thornton, 6 Ad. & El. 185.

Messrs. C. M. Van Slyck and Charles C. Mumford, for defendants:

The note was given December 21, 1895, at the office of the broker, for an amount which the broker determined from figures which were presented to him by his clerk, and, by reason of an error made by the clerk, or bookkeeper, the amount of the note was $1,500 more than it should have

of the transaction, that the enforcement thereof would violate public policy, notwithstanding that the defendant has not pleaded the defense.

It will be observed that, while it was held in WINWARD v. LINCOLN that the action would lie, that case is not opposed to the cases above cited, which declined to enforce the contracts upon the ground of the public policy, since the contract involved in that case was not invalid, even as tested by the law of the forum. The same is true of Schlee v. Guckenheimer, 179 Ill. 593, 54 N. E. 302, and Williams v. Carr, 80 N. C. 294, which also involved "future" or "option" contracts. In all three cases the implication is that, if the contract had been opposed to the law of the forum, or at least to the public policy of the forum, it would not have been enforced.

In Scott v. Duffy, 14 Pa. 18, it was held that money lent in New Jersey to bet upon a presidential election may be recovered in Pennsylvania, in the absence of proof of a law of New Jersey rendering such contract invalid. In reply to a contention that the case of Edgell v. McLaughlin, 6 Whart. 176, 36 Am. Dec. 214, had settled the law that all wagers are against sound morals and contrary to law, the court said that that case only settled the law in Pennsylvania; but then proceeded to point out that the present was not an action to recover money won on a wager, or to recover back money paid on a gaming contract; and intimates that the contract in question would not be invalid, even tested by the common-law rule prevailing in Pennsylvania.

Some of the cases, however, either hold or assume that a contract which is valid by the law of the place where it is made and performable will be enforced, though it is contrary to the statutes of the forum against gambling contracts. Thus, A. G. Edwards Brokerage Co. v. Stevenson, 160 Mo. 516, 61 S. W. 617, having held that the contract was valid according to the law of New York, assumed, without discussing the question of public policy, that it was enforceable in Missouri, notwithstanding that, if governed by the law of that state, it would have been invalid. The same is true of Hawley v. Bibb, 69 Ala. 52, and Hubbard v. Sayre, 105 Ala. 440, 17 So. 17; but in Peet v. Hatcher, 112 Ala. 514, 57 Am. St. Rep. 45, 21 So. 711, the court referred to the point, and intimated that, if the 64 L. R. A.

validity of the contract were not res judicata by a judgment recovered in another state, it might consider the question.

So, a contract for the purchase of cotton futures, made and to be performed in New York, is governed by the law of New York, and will be enforced by the courts of Georgia according to the legal status it would occupy in New York. Champion v. Wilson, 84 Ga. 184; but see Benton v. Singleton, 114 Ga. 548, 58 L. R. A. 181, 40 S. E. 811.

Thomas v. Davis, 7 B. Mon. 227, held that it was not contrary to the public policy of Kentucky to entertain an action upon a contract valid according to the law of Louisiana, by which the parties were to place a bet upon a horse race in the latter state and divide the winnings. The court admitted the principle that a court of one state is not bound by comity to enforce a contract which is against its public policy. It said, however, that the plaintiff was not seeking to recover money which he had won from defendant, but was merely seeking to recover money which the defendant had in fact received for his use and benefit. The intimation is that, if the former had been the case, the action could not have been maintained.

In Quarrier v. Colston, 1 Phill. Ch. 147, 12 L. J. Ch. N. S. 57, 6 Jur. 959, it was held that an action would lie in England to recover moneys loaned for the purpose of playing at a public gaming table in a foreign country, there being nothing to show that the games were not lawful in the country in which they were played. The court seems to have assumed that this would be true, even if the games were illegal by the law of England, though, as a matter of fact, it did not appear what games were played, and the court mentioned the fact that there was nothing to show that they would have been illegal, even in England.

A cause of action for the recovery back of the money lost, given by the law of the state in which a wagering contract was made, is transitory, and may be enforced in another state; but a law of the former state which merely gives the loser a right of action against the winner for a penalty cannot be enforced outside of the jurisdiction in which it was enacted. Flanagan v. Packard, 41 Vt. 561.

been. There was a total failure on the part of the broker to perform his promise to carry the account. This promise was the inducement which led the defendants to give the note, and the performance of the promise is a condition precedent to a recovery thereon.

Where it is the understanding of the parties in the beginning that the customer shall give orders to the broker from time to time to buy for him shares of stock, and that the broker, on receiving the orders, without buying the shares, shall be regarded as having bought them and as holding them for the customer until he shall receive the customer's order or consent to sell them, or until the customer, under the understanding, shall be obliged to submit to the broker's selling them, or rather to his being regarded as if he had sold them, at which time the difference between the then market price and the market price as it was when the orders to buy were given shall be paid by the broker to the customer if the price has risen, and by the customer to the broker if the price has fallen, the contract is really a wager masked under the simulation of a sale, or of a sale and resale, and is null and void.

Flagg v. Gilpin, 17 R. I. 10, 19 Atl. 1084; Weeden v. Wilcox, App. Div. Sup. Ct., J. T. W. 384, Ex. 2, 559, unreported; Grize-wood v. Blane, 11 C. B. 526; Jamieson v. Wallace, 167 Ill. 388, 59 Am. St. Rep. 302, 47 N. E. 762; Wagner v. Hildebrand, 187 Pa. 136, 41 Atl. 34; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 507, 28 L. ed. 229, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Rogers v. Marriott, 59 Neb. 759, 82

b. Governing law when public policy of forum does not interfere.

Whether or not the law of the forum, denouncing gambling contracts, be regarded as such a distinctive part of the public policy of the forum as to prevent the enforcement of a contract contrary thereto though valid by its proper law, it may become necessary to determine what place furnishes the proper law of the contract,—that is, what place furnishes the law that would govern in the absence of any objection based upon the public policy of the forum; since a contract which is illegal or void by its proper law will not be enforced, though it would be legal and valid according to the law of the forum.

The weight of authority seems to favor the law of the place where the contract is to be performed, rather than that of the place where it is made.

Thus, a contract made by a Chicago company through its traveling salesman, with a purchaser in Iowa, to sell coal to be delivered on the cars in Chicago, is an Illinois contract, and the validity of an option to the purchaser to take an additional quantity of coal at the price agreed upon is to be determined by the law of Illinois. Osgood v. Bauder, 75 Iowa, 550, 1 L. R. A. 655, 39 N. W. 887. The decision is expressly put upon the ground that the contract was to be performed in Illinois, and is apparently upon the assumption that the contract was made in Iowa. By the law of Illinois the option was invalid.

In Thomas v. Davis, 7 B. Mon. 227, the court assumed that the validity of a contract made in Mississippi, by which the parties were to place a bet upon a horse race in Louisiana, and to divide the winnings, was to be determined by the law of Louisiana as the law of the place of performance.

A contract made in New York, whereby one party agrees to drive the horses of the other in races which are to take place in other states for bets or stakes, is not a violation of the New York statute prohibiting races for bets or stakes, nor is it against the public policy of such state; and, in the absence of proof that such contests would be illegal by the law of the state where they were to take place, the contract may be enforced in New York. Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 532.
64 L. R. A.

Orders from parties in Illinois to their agent in New York, with reference to the buying or selling of commodities for future delivery, are governed by the law of New York, and not by the law of Illinois. Postal Tele. Cable Co. v. Lathrop, 33 Ill. App. 400. It was so held in an action against a telegraph company for damages sustained in consequence of errors in the transmission of despatches from Chicago to New York with reference to such purchases and sales.

Contracts for the future delivery of cotton, made by a commission merchant in New Orleans, and to be performed there, for his principal residing in Mississippi, are governed by the laws of the state of Louisiana, and, if valid in that state, will be enforced by the circuit court of the United States in the state of Mississippi. Lehman v. Feld, 37 Fed. 852.

The law of Massachusetts governs the interpretation of a contract made with a broker in that state for the purchase of stock on margin, and determines the nature of his ownership in the stock bought, and of his lien on the same. Re Swift, 105 Fed. 493. So far as appears, however, the contract was also performable in Massachusetts. The question seems to have been merely whether the contract was to be governed by the general principles of commercial law, or by local law.

The validity of a contract between brokers and a customer for the purchase and sales of futures, though made in Alabama, is to be tested by the law of New York, where all the acts or transactions in pursuance of it, including the advances or loans and the purchases and sales, were to be done and performed in the city of New York. Hawley v. Bibb, 69 Ala. 52. Hubbard v. Sayre, 105 Ala. 440, 17 So. 17, is to the same effect.

And in Peet v. Hatcher, 112 Ala. 514, 57 Am. St. Rep. 45, 21 So. 711, it was held that the validity of a contract made between a broker and a customer in Georgia, for the purchase and sale of cotton futures on the New Orleans exchange, was governed by the law of the state where it was to be performed; that is, by the law of Louisiana, where the purchases and sales were to be made.

Stebbins v. Leowolf, 3 Cush. 137, was an action by a broker against his customers to recover a certain amount as interest, commissions, and differences on a purchase and sale

N. W. 21; Morris v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 94 Me. 423, 47 Atl. 926; Waite v. Frank, 14 S. D. 626, 86 N. W. 645.

The contract was made in Massachusetts, and, by virtue of the statute of that state, the plaintiff is barred from recovery.

Perry v. Mount Hope Iron Co. 15 R. I. 380, 2 Am. St. Rep. 902, 5 Atl. 632; Lyons v. Coe, 177 Mass. 382, 59 N. E. 59.

Douglas, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action, commenced November 7, 1898, is brought by the administrator with the will annexed of Frank W. Prescott, who in his lifetime was a stockbroker in the city of Boston, doing business under the name of F. W. Prescott & Company, against Levi C. Lincoln and Charles H. Gorton, of Woonsocket, Rhode Island, to recover the amount of a promissory note for $1,503.21, bearing date Woonsocket, Rhode Island, December 30, 1895, made by the defendants, payable to their order, on demand, at any bank in Boston, and indorsed in blank by them. The declaration also contains the common counts for money had and received, for money laid out expended, for money lent and advanced, and for interest. The defendants plead the general issue, with affidavits of defense which set out, in substance, that the note was made without consideration; that it was given under a mistake of fact for a supposed balance of account due from the defendants to the plaintiff's intestate; that the account upon which the note was predicated represented only wagering contracts between the defendants of certain stocks made by him under the order, and for the account, of the defendant. The contracts which the broker made for his principal, and out of which his claim against them arose, were unlawful under the statute of New York, where they were made and to be performed. The decision, which is against the broker, is formally put upon the ground that the contracts were entered into in New York, were made by parties resident there, were to be performed there, and were therefore peculiarly to be governed by the rules of law of that state. This decision also seems to make the validity of the broker's contract with his principals dependent upon the law of the state where the contract by the broker with the third persons was made and to be performed; but it was probably the case, although it does not expressly so appear, that the broker's agreement with his customers was itself made and to be performed in New York.

In Champlin v. Smith, 164 Pa. 481, 30 Atl. 447, which involved the right of the broker to recover upon a note to secure advances on account of transactions on the Chicago exchange, the rights of the parties were determined by reference to the law of Illinois; but in this case the contract between the broker and the customer, as well as the contracts of purchase and sale, were made in Illinois.

In WINWARD v. LINCOLN the broker's contract with his customer was made in Massachusetts, and the transactions by him in behalf of his principal also took place in that state; but the court said, incidentally, that it was the validity of the agent's acts, not of his appointment, upon which the consideration of the note given by the customer to him depended.

A. G. Edwards Brokerage Co. v. Stevenson, 160 Mo. 516, 61 S. W. 617, was an action by a Missouri brokerage company against a resident of Missouri for advances and commissions on transactions by the former for the latter upon the New York stock exchange. Their contract was made in Missouri, and no directions were given as to where the stock should be purchased, but it was in fact purchased upon the New York stock exchange. The customer's intention was merely to speculate in the rise and fall of the market, and he never at any time intended to receive the stock. It was admitted that, if the transactions in the purchase and sale of the stock had taken place in Missouri, 64 L. R. A.

they would have been invalid under the express provisions of the Missouri statute, which declares that such intention by one party shall be sufficient to invalidate the contract; and it was further conceded that, according to the Missouri statute, the plaintiff could not recover its advances and commissions. It was held, however, that the rights of the parties were to be determined by the law of New York, where the purchases of stock were made; and that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be presumed that the common law, which allows such recovery, prevailed in that state. The court does not expressly distinguish between the contract of the broker with his customer, which was made in Missouri, and the contracts which were made in New York in pursuance of that contract; and seems to assume that the place where the contracts of purchase were made and performable furnishes the law by which the respective rights of the broker and his customer were to be determined, although their contract was made in Missouri.

A contrary conclusion was reached in Ball v. Davis, 1 N. Y. S. R. 517, upon an almost exactly similar state of facts, it being held in that case (which was an action for the recovery of the broker's advances and commissions) that, the broker's contract having been made in New York, without any specification of the place of performance, it was governed by the law of New York, notwithstanding that the transactions were conducted by the broker for his customer upon the Chicago market.

So, in Zeltner v. Irwin, 25 App. Div. 228, 49 N. Y. Supp. 337, Reversing 21 Misc. 13, 46 N. Y. Supp. 852, the court assumed that the right of plaintiff to recover back money which he had sent to defendant to be used in the purchase of futures in grain on the Chicago market was to be determined by the law of the place where their contract was made; and the question discussed was merely whether the contract was to be regarded as made in New York or Pennsylvania.

No clear distinction is made in these cases between the contract of the broker with his customer, upon one side, and the contracts of purchase and sale made by the broker in behalf of the customer with third persons, upon the other side. Such distinction was, however, expressly made and relied upon in Bartlett v. Collins, 109 Wis. 477, 83 Am. St. Rep. 928, 85 and the plaintiff's intestate upon the price of stocks, in pursuance of which settlements were agreed to be made on margins; that no stocks were actually bought and sold, and it was the intention of the parties that there should be no actual sales and deliveries; that the contract should be construed under the laws of Massachusetts, and under these laws is void.

The first claim is based upon the statement that the note in question was not given on the day of its date, but on December 21, 1895, and not in settlement of the account at all, but as an accommodation, on consideration that the plaintiff's intestate should carry the defendants' stock or account further. The testimony of the defendants upon this point is not consistent, with itself, nor with the undisputed facts in the case. They say that they went to Boston by early train on December 21st; that a consultation was had between them and the broker, which resulted in their giving a note to be used by him to raise money to be applied as a margin for carrying their account further; that it was subsequently discovered that the note represented a sum $1,500 larger than the balance really due from them; that the note then given is the note now sued upon. The defendants undoubtedly went to Boston on the 21st, as they say, and some arrangement with regard to their account was made; but we cannot believe, upon their uncorroborated testimony, that it was such as they claim. No doubt a rough statement was then made of their account, based on the closing quotations of the day before, and the proposi-

N. W. 703, which, upon its facts, was very similar to the cases just considered. It was held in the Bartlett Case that the right of a broker to recover commissions and moneys advanced under a contract made in Wisconsin, with a resident of that state, contemplating transactions in grain futures upon the Chicago exchange, was to be determined by the law of Wisconsin, upon the ground that the contract between the broker and his customer was made in Wisconsin, and that, while the transactions in the purchase and sale of "futures" were to take place in Illinois, the other acts, including the payment by the principal of all obligations incurred by his agent, were to take place in Wisconsin. The decision was referred to the general principle that, where a contract is to be partly performed in the state or country where made and partly in other states or countries, the law of the place where it was made will govern unless a clearly mutual intention is manifested that it shall be governed by the law of some other state or country.

The decision in the Edwards Case was criticised in an article in 54 Cent. L. J. 223, because of the failure of the court to make the distinction above pointed out, and because of its assumption that the place where the contracts of purchase and sale were made and to be performed furnished the law of the contract between the broker and his customer, and the opinion, in these respects, was contrasted unfavorably with the opinion in the Bartlett Case. The writer of the article referred to says: "The Missouri court entirely misapprehends the nature of the action, treating it as though it were an action by a third person against the principal on a contract made by the agent. But it was nothing of the kind; it was a suit on the contract of agency for services rendered and money expended for the principal's benefit and at his request." The writer, however, seems to have overlooked a material factor in the case. Section 3931 of the Missouri Revised Statutes of 1889 in effect declares that contracts and agreements for the purchase and sale of shares of stock, without any intention of receiving and paying for stock bought, or of delivering the stock sold, shall be illegal, and prescribes a penalty for the violation of the section. Section 3932 provides, inter alia, that any person "who shall communicate, receive, exhibit, or display in any manner, any such offer to buy or sell, or any statements or quotations of the prices of any such property, with a view to any such transaction as aforesaid [manifestly referring to the transactions contemplated by § 3931], shall, for each such offense, be deemed, and held to be, an accessory thereto, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined the same as the principal." Section 3936 provides that all contracts made in violation of the article in which the sections are included shall be considered gambling contracts, and shall be void. It is obvious that, in order to make the broker an "accessory" within § 3932, the purchases and sales must have constituted an offense within § 3931; but the purchases and sales in question did not come within the operation of that section because they were made and performable in New York, by the law of which they were valid. It would seem to follow, therefore, that the contract between the broker and his customer, though made in Missouri, was not void under § 3936. This is not to say that that contract is not, strictly speaking, governed by the law of Missouri. The question is, What is the law of Missouri as applied to this contract, in view of the fact that the contracts of purchase and sale were made in New York, and were presumably valid by the law of that state? Upon this hypothesis, there seems to be no law of Missouri which renders the contract between the broker and his customer invalid. If the purchases and sales, though made in New York, had been illegal by the law of that state, the contract between the broker and his customer might also have been held invalid and illegal, not because it came within §§ 3932 and 3936 above referred to, but because of the general principle which provides, even in the absence of a statute directed especially against the broker, that a broker who is particeps criminis in the illegal transactions cannot recover his advances and commissions. The criticism in the article referred to overlooks the fact that the contract may be governed by the law of a particular state, and yet the law of another state, operating upon transactions within that state, may have a decisive bearing upon the practical question, what the law of the former state is, as applied to the particular contract in question. Take, for instance, the supposed case (by which the writer seeks to illustrate the court's error) of a contract made in Missouri, where by one party agrees to pay the other commistion was made to give a collateral note, to be discounted and used as margin, and such a note seems to have been given. But this was not the final arrangement. The note then given was probably a time note for a round sum, and would certainly not have been dated nine days in the future. Such a note as is now produced, if postdated, could not have been offered for discount at any bank, and would have been useless for the purpose suggested by the defendants. As a matter of fact, the stocks were sold the same day. According to the time which the defendants fix for their visit, the orders to New York must have been sent while they were in the broker's office, or immediately after.

Defendant Lincoln testifies:

Q. After you had signed the note, and left Mr. Prescott's private office, where did you go?

A. We went through the outer office, and noticed the quotations on the stock—of these special stocks—at that time, which were much higher than the figures Mr. Prescott had figured them at. Then we passed on Tremont street. . . . We got on the train, and we took these figures and figured it out, and saw that Mr. Prescott had made a tremendous mistake. We came back to Woonsocket, and the first chance I got I wrote him that fact.

The other defendant testifies:

We left Mr. Prescott's office,—that is, his private office,—passed out in the corridor, and I said to Mr. Lincoln, "Let us look in the blackboard room." We looked in the blackboard room, and saw that the stocks sions and expenses for the purchase of horses, and the purchase of horses pursuant to the contract in several different states. The writer says that, according to the Missouri doctrine, the right of the agent to recover his commissions and expenses upon each lot of horses would have to be determined by the law of the state in which that particular lot is purchased, and that there would be as many applicable laws as there were different lots of horses purchased. Theoretically, such result would not follow from the adoption of the Missouri doctrine, but it may be admitted that practically such result might follow. For instance, the contract, tested by the law of Missouri, might entitle the agent to commissions on each lot of horses to which he secured an unencumbered legal title; but it is obvious that the question whether, even for the purposes of the Missouri statute, he does procure a valid and unencumbered title to a particular lot of horses, may depend upon the law of another state in which that lot is purchased. The law of Missouri determines the construction of the contract, but it may be necessary to look to the laws of other states in which transactions under the contract are conducted in order to determine whether they come within the contract as so construed.

A distinction, bearing upon the point in question, is to be observed between the Edwards Case, upon one side, and the Bartlett and Ball Cases, upon the other side. While the Wisconsin and New York statutes involved in those cases are in general terms, they seem to be sufficiently specific to invalidate the broker's contract independently of the validity or invalidity of the future transactions themselves.

When, however, the rights of the parties depend upon common-law principles, it is not so clear that the broker's contract with his customer can be declared invalid, if the transactions in the futures are conducted by him in another state, by the law of which they are valid. Thus, Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. ed. 225, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160, puts the rule which denies the right of the broker to recover his advances and commissions on account of transactions which were invalid at common law as gambling contracts, upon the ground that he is a particeps criminis when he is privy to the unlawful design of the parties, and brings them together for the very purpose of entering into an illegal contract. In this view, the illegality and invalidity of the broker's claim seem to be dependent upon the illegality and invalidity of the transactions conducted by him. If they are legal and valid by the law of the place where they take place, there seems to be no ground for saying that the broker is a particeps criminis in an illegal transaction.

In Stewart v. Schall, 65 Md. 289, 57 Am. Rep. 327, 4 Atl. 399, however, it was held that the right of a broker to recover for advances made to customers on account of purchases and sales of stock and grain was to be determined by the law of Pennsylvania (where the contract between the broker and the customers was made, and where the settlement thereunder was to be had) as comprised in the decision of that state bearing on wagering contracts within its limits, notwithstanding that the purchases and sales took place in New York.

In Ward v. Vosburgh, 31 Fed. 12, a Federal court, sitting in Wisconsin, seems to have assumed that the right of a broker to recover his advances and commissions upon account of transactions conducted by him upon the floor of the Chicago board of trade, for a resident of Wisconsin, was to be determined by the law of Illinois, because the transactions took place there. Probably the contract between the broker and the customer was also made in Illinois, though it does not expressly so appear; and, as already stated, the decision seems to be upon the ground that the transactions conducted by the broker for his customer had their situs in Illinois.

The considerations above suggested in support of the assumption by the court in the Edwards Case, that the respective rights of the broker and his customer were primarily to be determined by the law of New York, where the transactions conducted by the former for the latter took place, notwithstanding that their contract was made in Missouri, does not, in the least, militate against the right of the court to decline to enforce the broker's contract with the customer, upon the ground that it was contrary to the public policy of the forum. This, as already pointed out (supra, I. a) was an alternative ground of the decision in the Bartlett Case; and, if the Missouri supreme court had seen fit to take this ground in the Edwards Case, it might properly have denied the broker's right in which we were interested very much higher than the basis that had been told us that our account stood. . . .

Q. Did you do anything then,—go anywhere?

A. We went immediately back to Mr. Prescott's office.

Q. Together?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whom did you see when you went back to Mr. Prescott's office?

A. Mr. Prescott.

Q. What did you say to him?

A. We called his attention to the fact that the stocks were very much higher than he had given us.

Q. What did he say?

A. Mr. Prescott said: "It is all right, boys. I am glad of it. That lets us all out." We asked him if he wanted our note then. He said, "No;" that is, said: "We will keep your note, because the market fluctuates so that it is liable to go considerable lower." And that was the understanding when we left the office, that he would return the note to us provided the stocks let us out.

One circumstance the defendants agree upon with absolute certainty, viz.: That the note made on the 21st was based on the quotations of December 20th, and that these were lower than those of the 21st and afterwards. It is certain, then, that the note now sued upon is not the note given on the 21st, as it represents the exact balance shown by the broker's books after the sale of the stocks at the prices of the 21st and to recover, notwithstanding that, in its opinion, the law of New York would otherwise have been the proper law by which to determine the respective rights of the parties.

A Missouri statute declaring option sales and purchases of grain and contracts for the same criminal offenses has no extraterritorial operation, and does not apply where a telegram is sent from Missouri to a commission firm in another state to purchase grain on an option. State v. Gritzner, 134 Mo. 512, 36 S. W. 39.

New or substituted contract.

As a general principle, if an original contract is illegal and void by the law governing it, a new or substituted contract resting thereon is invalid, notwithstanding that it may have been made, and be performable, in a state by the law of which the original contract would have been valid.

There is, however, an apparent exception to this principle, as applied to a new or substituted contract for the payment of a broker's advances and commission upon account of transactions in "futures," assuming the correctness of the position taken in Alabama, that, in the absence of a statute declaring such transactions void, the broker may recover his advances and commissions, notwithstanding that the transactions are void by the common law as contrary to public policy, if the principal subsequently promises to pay them. (See Hawley v. Bibb, 69 Ala. 52; and Peet v. Hatcher, 112 Ala. 514, 57 Am. St. Rep. 45, 21 So. 711.) It will be observed that, according to this position, the new promise does not depend upon the validity or invalidity of the original contract between the broker and his customer, but upon the fact that the broker has rendered services, and incurred expenses, for the customer. Accordingly, it was held in Peet v. Hatcher, 112 Ala. 514, 57 Am. St. Rep. 45, 21 So. 711, upon the assumption that the common-law rule was in force in Georgia, that a note made and payable in that state, and a mortgage upon land in Alabama securing the same, were valid, notwithstanding that they were given for commissions and advances under a contract between a broker and his customer, which would have been governed by the law of Louisiana if that law had been proved, but to which, in the absence of such proof, the court applied the statute of 64 L. R. A.

Alabama (les fort), which declares "future" transactions, like those conducted by the broker for his customer, illegal, and prevents the broker from recovering his advances and commissions. The correctness of this decision, upon the hypothesis upon which it was rendered, depends upon the correctness of the foregoing statement of the common-law rule, and that is certainly open to question. The United States Supreme Court, in Irwin v. Willmar, 116 U. S. 499, 28 L. ed. 225, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160, referring to a case which was governed by the common law, and not by statute, after stating the general rule that a contract, the real intent of which is to speculate in the rise and fall of prices, is invalid, said: "But we are also of the opinion that, when the broker is privy to the unlawful design of the parties, and brings them together for the very purpose of entering into an illegal agreement, he is particeps criminis, and cannot recover for services rendered, or losses incurred by himself on behalf of either in forwarding the transaction." Harvey v. Mitchell, 150 Mass. 1, 5 L. R. A. 200, 15 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 N. E. 49, takes the same position. These cases are referred to merely to call attention to the fact that the common-law rule, as stated by the Alabama court, is open to question, and no attempt has been made to exhaust the authorities on the point.

In Collins v. Merrell, 2 Met. (Ky.) 163, it was held that a note executed in Kentucky, for money loaned in another state for the purpose of gaming there, was within the Kentucky statute declaring generally that every contract for the consideration of money lent for the purpose of gaming shall be void.

II. Lottery contracts.

A local statute declaring lotteries and lottery contracts void or illegal can have no direct operation upon a contract or transaction, no part or element of which had a local situs.

Thus, it has been held that a local statute forbidding the sale of lottery tickets does not apply to a sale completed in another state, where it was valid, by the mailing of a ticket in that state directed to a resident of the state enacting the statute. M'Intyre v. Parks, 3 Met. 207; Case v. Riker, 10 Vt. 482, 33 Am. Dec. 211; McNight v. Blasecker, 13 Pa. 328, infra; Hatch v. Hanson, 46 Mo. App. 323. The deci-after a further credit of a dividend of $40, payable on the 31st of December. The note made on the 21st, we think, was either returned to the defendants when the second note, which is now in suit, was made, or else was destroyed; for no trace of such paper has since come to light. We believe that the defendants, when they saw that their stocks were rising in the market on the 21st and went back into the broker's private office, consented to his selling, and afterwards, on the 30th of the month, when the account of sales was made up, gave the note now in suit. The expressions in Lincoln's letter to Prescott are consistent with this view of the facts. He says (December 24th): "Yours of 23d inst. rec'd. Mr. Gorton and myself were just about to call you up by L. D. telephone when we received your letter. We were going to say to you that, if you really desired to help us out, for you to purchase back for us the stocks sold under the excitement of the moment before they reach their old price, and upon their present low basis. Your clerk the other day made an error of $1,000 in his hurry, and the sum total as stated by him frightened us. The note given you covers amount due you and about $1,500 over that amount." And again: "We are both sorry now that the stocks were sold out, as the note given amply covered them." This is not protest against the sales as unlawfully made, but the expression of a regret at what had been sion in the last case was disapproved in Roselle v. Farmers' Bank, 141 Mo. 36, 64 Am. St. Rep. 501, 39 S. W. 272, infra; but it does not appear that the position of the appellate court upon the point in question was disapproved.

It is obvious, therefore, that a statute condemning lotteries and lottery contracts cannot affect the right to maintain an action upon a lottery contract in any state or country other than that which enacted the statute. When, however, an action is brought in the state or country which enacted the statute, the court may, upon the ground of public policy, refuse to entertain the action notwithstanding that the contract was made and performable in another state, and therefore was not within the direct operation of the statute.

Thus, in Watson v. Murray, 23 N. J. Eq. 257, it was held that, even if the partnership contracts with reference to lotteries to be conducted in other states were entered into in such other states, and were valid by the laws thereof, a court of New Jersey would decline, upon the ground of public policy of the forum, to entertain a suit based thereon. This right to refuse to enforce the contract upon the ground of public policy was also recognized in M'Intyre v. Parks, 3 Met. 207, though in that case it was held it was not contrary to the public policy of Massachusetts to enforce a mortgage assigned as collateral security for the purchase price of lottery tickets sold in New York to a resident of Massachusetts, although the vendor knew that the purchaser intended to sell them, or part of them, in Massachusetts in violation of the statute of that state.

So, Jameson v. Gregory, 4 Met. (Ky.) 363, held that notes and a mortgage given in payment for lottery tickets sold in Delaware, where such sales were authorized, might be enforced in Kentucky, notwithstanding that the vendor knew that the vendee intended to resell the tickets in Ohio, the law of which forbade the sale of such tickets, there being no stipulation in the agreement of sale that they should be resold in Ohio, or in any other place where their sale was prohibited by law.

In Case v. Riker, 10 Vt. 482, 33 Am. Dec. 311, it was held that an action could be maintained in Vermont for the purchase price of lottery tickets sold in Rhode Island, where such sale was lawful, although the vendor knew that they were to be resold in Vermont, if he was not, at the time of the sale, aware that the resale of such tickets in Vermont was prohibited by law. 64 L. R. A. -

Assuming that there is no objection, based upon the public policy of the forum, to the enforcement of a contract based upon a lottery contract if valid by its proper law, the question remains, What law determines the validity of the contract? In this connection, the rule is well established that a local statute forbidding the sale of lottery tickets applies to a local sale of a ticket in a lottery established in, and authorized by the laws of, another state or country. This is true, not only when the action is brought in the state or country which enacted the statute (Horner v. United States, 147 U. S. 449, 37 L. ed. 237, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409; Denca dem. Ridgeway v. Underwood, 4 Wash. C. C. 120, Fed. Cas. No. 11,815; Kitchen v. Greenbaum, 61 Mo. 110), but also when it is brought in another state or country,—even when it is brought in the state or country in which the lottery is established and by the law of which it is legal. Thus, the Maryland court of appeals, in Paine v. France, 26 Md. 46, held that there could be no recovery upon sales of lottery tickets in states in which such sales were forbidden by statute, notwithstanding that the lottery was established in, and authorized by the laws of, Maryland (the forum).

When the contract is made in one state or country and is performable in another, its validity, so far as it is affected by the lottery element, is governed by the law of the place of performance. Thus, the validity of a bond, conditioned for the faithful performance of duties enjoined by the law of Kentucky and authorizing the obligees to sell lottery tickets, is to be determined by the law of Kentucky, whether the bond was executed there or in New York, since, in any event, it contemplates performance there. Kentucky v. Bassford, 6 Hill, 526.

So, in Ormes v. Dauchy, 82 N. Y. 443, 37 Am. Rep. 583, the court held, upon the assumption that no advertising under the contract was to be done in New York, that a contract made in New York to advertise a lottery was not governed by the statute of New York forbidding the advertising of lotteries. The decision is upon the ground that the law of the place of performance governs.

An exception should, perhaps, be made to the rule above stated, referring the contract to the law of the place of performance, when the local statute does not, as in the case last cited, merely forbid the acts, the performance of which is called for by the contract; but, in effect, forbids the making of the contract itself. Thus, done by them all in haste; and the note covering a larger balance than was due after the 21st, and $1,500 more, was not the note now in suit. Mr. Prescott replied on the 26th, as follows: "Yours of the 24th received. I can appreciate the position you and Mr. Gorton are in, and you can rest assured that I will do everything in my power to help you out. You can understand the excitement under which everybody labored when you were in the other day. We have been in quite a number of panics, but I never saw anything like the one we had this last week, and it was natural that mistakes should be made. When our clerk figured up your account, it was figured at extremely low prices, so as to include losses and the margin required on the account. It would be better for you to come and see me personally, and explain the situation you are in. I shall probably not be in the office Saturday, but will be here the first of next week. Next Wednesday is a holiday in New York, and will be in Boston in this business. Please let me know when you think you will come up."

This is the last communication from Prescott which is in evidence, except one through his clerk of January 15th, which does not throw any light on the situation. Mr. Stonemetz, who was clerk for Prescott, testifies that the defendants came to Boston on Monday, the 30th of December, and settled their account with Prescott by giving the note Thatcher v. Morris, 11 N. Y. 437, assumed that the right to maintain an action to recover money drawn by a ticket in a Maryland lottery should be determined by the law of the place where the ticket was purchased if such law was proved; though, in the absence of such proof, it was held that the rights of the parties should be determined by the law of the forum. This case, therefore, seems to imply that the law of the place where the contract, evidenced by the lottery ticket, is made, prevails over the law of the place of performance, since the contract in question, wherever made, was apparently performable in Maryland. There is an obvious distinction bearing upon the point in question between this case and the cases last above cited. In those cases the statute of the state where the contract was made did not forbid the making of the contract, but merely forbade the doing of the acts contemplated by the contract; but a statute forbidding the sale of lottery tickets strikes at the very foundation of the contract between the purchasers and the managers of the lottery, and in effect forbids the making of any such contract.

Even when the sale of a lottery ticket was consummated in a state by the law of which it was valid, a collateral contract relating thereto may be made and performable in another state by the law of which contracts, or other transactions based on lotteries, are invalid, in which case the rights of the parties, so far as they depend on the collateral contract, are, of course, to be determined by reference to the law of the latter state.

Thus, in Roselle v. Farmers' Bank, 141 Mo. 36, 64 Am. St. Rep. 501, 39 S. W. 274 (Affirming in banc [Mo.] 35 S. W. 1135), the court held that the validity of an agreement made in Missouri, by members of a club, to hold, as a joint venture, tickets in a Louisiana lottery, was to be determined by the laws of Missouri. This was upon the ground that the agreement between the members of the club was made in Missouri, and not upon the ground that the sale was made there. As a matter of fact, the sale of the tickets seems to have been consummated in Louisiana, the tickets having been forwarded from there by express to the purchasers in Missouri.

Goodrich v. Houghton, 134 N. Y. 115, 31 N. E. 516, held that an action could not be maintained in New York, for the recovery of one half of the prize drawn by tickets in a Louisiana lottery, under an agreement made by the 64 L. R. A.

parties in New York for an equal division of the proceeds of any prize money drawn upon tickets purchased with their joint funds. This decision was upon the express assumption that the sale of tickets was completed in Louisiana, whence they were sent by express to New York, and that every part of the transaction which took place in Louisiana was perfectly valid. The decision is upon the ground that the agreement to divide was made and was performable in New York, and its validity must, therefore, be determined by the law of that state.

McNight v. Blesecker, 13 Pa. 328, was an action in Pennsylvania under an agreement made in that state for the division of the proceeds of a ticket in a Maryland lottery. The court held that there was nothing in the Pennsylvania statute for the suppression of lotteries forbidding a citizen of Pennsylvania from purchasing, or causing to be purchased, a lottery ticket in Maryland, where lotteries were authorized. It further held that the action would lie; but, so far as appears, the court determined the latter question by reference to the rule in Pennsylvania,—at least the decision upon this point was not expressly referred to the law of Maryland.

The distinction between the direct operation of a local statute upon lottery contracts having their situs within the state or country which enacted the statute, and which, therefore, furnishes its proper law, and the indirect operation of the statute which results when the court regarding the statute as declarative of a distinctive public policy, refuses to entertain an action based upon a contract made and performable in another jurisdiction and valid by the law of that jurisdiction,—is important; for, if the contract is within the direct operation of the statute, the statute must be applied when the action is brought in the state or country which enacted the same, and ought to, and generally will, be applied, even when the action is brought in another state or country. Thus, it was held in Nebraska that a note executed and payable in New York, based on a contract with reference to a lottery which was made and to be performed in New York, is governed by the law of New York. Kittle v. De Lamar, 3 Neb. 332. See also Paine v. France, 26 Md. 46.

Upon the other hand, even a court of the state or country which enacted the statute is not bound to apply it indirectly, but will be guided in this respect by general principles of comity.

G. H. P.

now in suit. The defendants both say they do not remember to have seen Prescott after the 21st, but do not positively deny that they visited Boston on the 30th. Mr. Stone-metz is strongly corroborated by the note and the account. The note was written by him and dated with the rubber stamp used in the office. If the date were not correct, it is strange that none of the parties noticed it. A statement of the account, striking a balance, was mailed to the defendants at 3:30 P. M. December 30th, as was natural if they had been in Boston and finally adjusted the matter that day. If the account were still running, the statement ordinarily would have been sent on the 31st,—the last day of the month. The statement itself contains items of interest reckoned to the 30th, which go toward determining the balance. The sale prices of the stocks are those of the 21st; but they are credited on the 23d, the next Monday, when actual deliveries and payments would be made. When the note was drawn the parties must have had these computations before them, and also had in mind the dividend of $40 payable the next day, which is deducted from the balance shown by the account. We have little doubt that the note was given on the day that it bears date, and that in settling the amount any mistake in the account on which the former note was based was properly adjusted. After the death of Prescott, which occurred January 19, 1896, the defendants renewed their complaint that there had been a mistake in the account, and they were informed that they would be given an opportunity to straighten matters out; but it does not appear that at any time since then they have made any attempt to point out the alleged mistake. There is no evidence in the case to show what the mistake was, or what is the amount of it,—only the bare assertion that the note of $1,503.21, is $1,500 larger than it ought to be.

The defense of illegality is one which merits serious consideration. Upon this issue the plaintiff contends that the transactions between the parties are to be judged by the law of Rhode Island, but that, if tried by the law of Massachusetts, they are not unlawful. The question is not without difficulty. The note is clearly a Massachusetts contract. Though dated in Woonsocket, Rhode Island, it had no validity as a promise until negotiated, and was first given such validity when delivered to the plaintiff's intestate in Boston, Massachusetts. But the consideration for it was an indebtedness growing out of transactions in Boston and New York (or in Boston alone, if no actual purchases and sales were made); and these transactions were carried on by the plain-tiff's intestate at Boston, as agent of the defendants, who lived in Woonsocket, and who gave orders to their agent by telephone or by letter from there. It is argued with plausibility that the relation of principal and agent was thus created in Rhode Island, and hence that the acts of the agent directed by the defendants in Rhode Island must be held valid, if not illegal there,—citing Perry v. Mount Hope Iron Co. 15 R. I. 380, 2 Am. St. Rep. 902, 5 Atl. 632; Hunt v. Jones, 12 R. I. 265, 34 Am. Rep. 635; Dacey, Conf. L. p. 617, title, Contracts through agents. We think the argument misinterprets the authorities quoted. The first case holds that a contract made by offer from Massachusetts, accepted by telegram from Rhode Island, was completed by the sending of the telegram. In the other case the contract was made in Rhode Island, to be performed in New York. The citation from Dacey relates to the appointment of an agent in the same country, and holds that the scope of his employment is governed by the law of that country.

Though in the case at bar the parties had some preliminary conversation together in Woonsocket, no order was given at that time and no relation of principal and agent was entered into. The plaintiff's intestate first became broker for the defendants when, in Boston, he received and accepted their first order. And in this case, also, the acts of the broker, as agent of the defendants, were performed in Massachusetts, and it is the validity of these acts, not of his appointment, upon which the consideration of the note depends. We think, therefore, that, if these dealings were not valid in Massachusetts, the note was without consideration. In the recent case of Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U. S. 461, 45 L. ed. 1183, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 845 (opinion by Mr. Justice Peckham, May 27, 1901), which is very instructive on the whole subject of wagering contracts, the complainants were residents of New York, and the transactions in question were made by their brokers in Chicago, and the court considers these transactions as governed by the law of Illinois, including Mr. Justice Harlan, who dissented from the conclusion of the majority of the court on the merits of the case. If they were valid in Massachusetts, however, yet were contrary to the public policy of Rhode Island, no recovery can be had here. As was said in Hunt v. Jones, 12 R. I. 265, 34 Am. Rep. 635: "A contract, however, may be valid by the law of both places [i. e., the place where it is made and the place where it is to be performed], and yet fail practically, if the lex fori does not permit its enforcement;" citing Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B.

301. See also Rousillon v. Rousillon, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 351, 369.

As the alleged defect in the contracts made between these parties involves the questions of public policy, we must examine these transactions with reference to the law in both states at the time they took place. in Massachusetts at this time there was in force an act (Pub. Laws 1890, chap. 437), the material provisions of which are as follows:

"Sec. 1. In this act 'securities' shall mean and include all evidences of debt or property and options for the purchase and sale thereof, shares in any corporation, joint-stock company or association, bonds, coupons, scrip, rights, choses in action, and other evidences of debt or property and options for the purchase or sale thereof. And 'commodities' shall mean and include everything movable that is bought and sold.

"Sec. 2. Whoever contracts to buy or sell upon credit or upon margin any securities or commodities, having at the time of contract no intention to perform the same by the actual receipt or delivery of the securities or commodities, and payment of the price, or whoever employs another so to buy and sell on his behalf, may sue for and recover in an action of contract from the other party to the contract, or from the person so employed, any payment made or the value of anything delivered: Provided, such other party or other person so employed had reasonable cause to believe that no intention to actually perform existed."

"Sec. 4. In any proceeding under this act, the fact that the seller or the person employing another to sell in his behalf does not own the securities or commodities at the time of the contract of sale or at the time of the giving of the order to sell, and the fact that settlements had been made without the actual delivery and receipt of the securities and commodities bought or sold or ordered to be bought or sold, shall each of them be prima facie evidence against both contracting parties and against the person employed by either of the contracting parties to make such contract in his behalf, that no intention originally existed to actually receive and deliver the subject of the contracts, and that the contracting parties, the persons employed to make such contracts and any employee of them or either of them had reasonable cause to believe that no intention to actually perform existed; and the parties liable to an action under this act shall be jointly and severally liable."

Approved June 23, 1890.

If § 2 of this act must be construed according to its literal expression, it would give to the fraudulent purchaser of any 64 L. R. A.

commodity, e. g., a barrel of flour, the right to recover of the too confiding dealer any money which he had paid on account, if he could show that he had no intention of performing his bargain by payment of the price as well as by receipt of the goods, and that the dealer had reasonable grounds for believing so, but charitably suppressed his suspicions and granted credit. We cannot believe that the Massachusetts legislature intended thus to place a premium on trover and conversion. The evident meaning of the act is to effect ostensible contracts of bargain and sale which are not really such, where one of the parties does not intend that an actual receipt or an actual delivery shall take place, and the circumstances are such that a knowledge of such intention may reasonably be imputed to the other party. The intention as to actual receipt or actual delivery is the criterion; the law imputing to the purchaser an intention to pay if he has the intention to receive. This construction is given to the statute by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts in Davy v. Bangs, 174 Mass. 238, 54 N. E. 536. That case was brought under the statute to recover the value of stocks which had been deposited with a firm of brokers as collateral security or margin for stock transactions. The plaintiff, for whom one Wiggins acted as agent with the defendants, claimed that she never intended to actually buy or sell, and that the brokers had reasonable cause to believe that no intention existed on her part to actually perform the contracts of purchase and sale which formed the transactions in question. The opinion approves the holding of the lower court that she could not recover, if either she or Wiggins intended such performance to be made either by her or by him, or by the defendants as her or his agents, and also the eighth request to rule, as follows: "That if the plaintiff intended that the defendants as her agents should receive the stocks which she ordered them to buy, delivery to them was delivery to her, and it was immaterial whether she intended to take manual possession of them." The seventh request to rule was as follows: "That the transactions would not be within the condemnation of the statute if the plaintiff ordered the defendants to buy and sell securities, and the defendants as her agents bought and received, sold, and delivered the securities, although it was agreed that the defendants should hold the stock purchased for her as security for advances made on her account, and should sell them when so ordered by the plaintiff, and account to her for the proceeds thereof." Upon this request, which was refused by the trial justice, the court says: "Assuming that the seventh request properly states the law, we think it became immaterial upon the rulings and findings of the court." It was also held in this case that it was for the plaintiff to prove, both that her intention was not to perform, and that the defendants had reasonable cause to believe so. The only other case cited in this connection is Lyons v. Coe, 177 Mass. 382, 59 N. E. 59, where it was conceded in an agreed statement that the contracts were forbidden by the statute, and the only question was whether the broker could recover from the customer as well as the customer from the broker. The material question, therefore, under the Massachusetts statute, is whether or not the defendants intended that the plaintiff's intestate should make actual purchases and sales of stocks on their behalf, and should actually receive and deliver the same, and, if not, whether the plaintiff's intestate had reasonable cause to believe their intention to be such as it was. The 4th section of the act, which prescribes certain rules of evidence, can only have application in the courts of Massachusetts on the trial of cases brought under the statute. We are only concerned here with the implication of the statute which makes void the contracts it describes. We have nothing to do with the direct provisions which grant a remedy there to one wrongdoer against another. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Frommhold, 75 Ill. App. 43; Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406, 23 L. ed. 245; Dacey, Conf. L. p. 711; Brown v. Thornton, 6 Ad. & El. 185.

The account on Prescott's ledger begins August 6, 1895, by charging the defendants for 140 shares of six different stocks at various prices, amounting in all to $10,938.75. A cash payment is credited the same day of $700. On September 4th, 60 shares of stock are charged, and on September 17th, 120 more, amounting together to $11,625, in addition to the August purchases. On September 17th is credited cash, $900; and on the 20th, $300; and on the 16th, dividend C. B. & Q., $30. The above stocks are carried forward each month, and interest is charged on the last day of each month, until December. On November 30th a charge is made of cash, $500. In October the credits are: 21st, Div. 90 St. P., $90; 29th, cash, $500. In November the credits are: 1st, cash, $400, and dividend 60 R. I., $30; 6th, cash, $400; 20th, Div. 10 Mont., $50. The December account starts with a debit balance from the previous month, $19,996.08, represented by 90 Mo. P., 10 Mont., 10 Tam., 60 C. B. & Q., 90 St. Paul, 60 R. I. The credits are: December 3d, cash, $450. 16th, Div. C. B. & Q., $60. 20th, cash, $800. 23d, 90 Mo. P., 20%, $1,856.25; 10 Mont., 60, $598.75; 10 Tam., 119, $1,187.50; 60 C. 64 L. R. A.

B. & Q. 72%, $4,357.50; 50 St. Paul, 62, $3,093.75; 60 R. I., 61, $3,652.50; 40 St. Paul, 61%, $2,470. There is a charge of interest on the 30th of $73.38, and the balance of $1,543.21 is carried forward on the 30th to the 31st. On the 31st are credited: Div. 10 Tam., $40, and bills receivable, $1,503.21,—and the account is balanced. The journal shows that the items in the ledger were entered from day to day in the regular course of business. The bookkeeper who kept the account had no suspicion that the entries did not represent real transactions. The account appears to be a record of genuine purchases and sales, and belongs to a class of evidence which is given much weight by our court, especially after the party who kept it is dead. It seems to us quite improbable that dividends would have been credited on all these stocks, and shown on the journal as received, if the stocks had not been actually purchased. These purchases are claimed to have been made in pursuance of verbal or written orders from the defendants. Some of the written communications are in evidence. August 7th Lincoln writes: "I have not received a regular notice of purchase of stocks for Gorton and Lincoln that you told me had been sent. Please send same, so that I can show it to Mr. Gorton." On September 1st he writes again: "Buy for account of Lincoln and Gorton, at lowest market price possible, tomorrow (Tuesday) morning, at opening, 30 St. Paul, 30 No. Pacific." The other orders were, it is admitted, of similar tenor. Another circumstance shown by the account seems to us remarkable, if it represented fictitious transactions. The final sale was on December 21st, entered on Monday, the 23d. There were 90 shares of St. Paul sold,—50 at 62, and 40 at 61%. If the contract had been to close out imaginary stock at market quotations, the closing quoted price for the day would have fixed the price for the whole. While considering the question of the genuineness of these dealings, we cannot ignore the fact that the sale of the New York stocks, as most of these were, is corroborated by the books of Prescott's New York correspondent, who was a member of the exchange and received orders to be executed there, and that his bookkeeper testifies that in some cases the certificates were actually forwarded by Prescott to him. There is absolutely no evidence to contradict the natural inference from these premises, and we must conclude that Prescott as a matter of fact actually bought the stocks the defendant ordered him to buy, and actually sold, as his books show.

Did the defendants intend that he should do so?

Lincoln's testimony on this point is as follows:

Q. At the time you gave the order to buy it, had you any intention— What was your intention, rather, as to taking the stock and the certificate?

A. None whatever.

Q. What was your intention with reference to taking the stock or the certificates?

A. We had no intention of taking them.

Q. What was your intention with reference to the account?

A. To be carried on a margin and held for a rise.

Q. How to be settled?

A. Pay the difference.

Gorton testifies:

Q. Now, with reference to these transactions between F. W. Prescott & Co. and yourself with Mr. Lincoln, did you receive—did you ever take out—the certificates? Were they ever sent to you, or either of you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever ask for them?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was your expectation or intention, at the time you entered into the transaction, as to having a delivery of the stock made to you?

A. We never expected to receive any.

Q. Were you engaged in the previous transaction with F. W. Prescott & Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same one that Mr. Lincoln referred to in his testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that settled,—the account closed? (No answer. Objected to. The Court: What do we care about the previous one? Defendants' Counsel: As showing what the expectation of the other party was. Question repeated.)

A. At the difference between our buying price and the selling price of the stock, which was bought on margins.

Q. What do you mean by that, "at the difference?"

A. Quoted the difference of the day of the sale from the day of the buying.

Q. You mean that was paid out in money or by check?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you take the certificates out, ever?

A. Never.

Q. Never ask for them?

A. Never.

Q. These you expected to be the same way?

A. Yes.

When we consider this testimony, it becomes evident that it proves nothing to the 64 L. R. A.

purpose. If the defendants had ostensibly bought stock of the plaintiff, and sold stock to him, then their intention to receive and deliver certificates would have been of importance. But, when they directed him to buy for their account, the question is, Did they intend that he should actually buy and receive the certificates? and, Did they intend that he should deliver certificates when they ordered him to sell? These questions the testimony does not answer. So in regard to the previous transactions. They say that these were settled by the payment of "differences." If, as we must presume, in the absence of any contradictory testimony, the former series of transactions consisted of orders to buy and sell, followed by a settlement after sale, we can conceive of no possible method of settlement except by differences,—i. e., by the agent paying his principals the balance due on their account. "If, however, the settlements were between a principal and agent, growing out of contracts made by the agent for and on account of the principal, it is apparent that any number of such settlements would have no tendency to prove that the contracts made by the agent were wagers." Dewey, Contracts for Future Delivery and Commercial Wagers, p. 217, citing Thacker v. Hardy, L. R. 4 Q. B. Div. 685, and Sawyer v. Taggart, 14 Bush, 727, 742.

The defendants urge, and some of the cases which they cite take the view, that the pecuniary inability of the defendants to pay the full price charged for the stocks bought ought to have great weight in inclining the court to believe that the intention was not to buy, but to fix a starting point for a wager. We do not find any force in this argument, particularly when the purchase is made through a broker, and the purchaser avails himself of the broker's credit and facilities for borrowing on the stocks themselves. It only indicates at the most that the customer is buying for speculation, rather than for permanent investment. Says Mr. Dewey (Contracts for Future Delivery and Commercial Wagers, p. 129): "The argument so strongly urged in these cases, that the party dealing in such enormous amounts is not able to pay for them, is without force, and has no necessary tendency to show the contracts were not bona fide. . . . These cases seem to have proceeded upon the theory that, because a man could not buy or pay for the articles he dealt in, he did not intend his contracts to be bona fide. When we consider, however, that a party buying stocks, for instance, can immediately, without any trouble and at a small interest, borrow money up to within 10 per cent, or even less, of the value of the stocks, . . . it plainly appears that the force of this argument is broken. To say a man cannot buy what he is not able to pay for is to destroy the whole credit system, and in effect it would prevent the greater part of legitimate speculation and paralyze business." In the case at bar the broker bought stocks for the defendants, advancing on their account part of the price, holding the stock as security, or pledging it, perhaps, to a third party to raise the money, as he was permitted to do by the contract. Of course, the principals could not demand or expect to receive the certificates until they should pay the whole price advanced, and before they did so they ordered sales. When these sales were made, the money which came into the agent's hands was partly his and partly theirs, and he paid them what was theirs. In short, the statute deals with two classes of cases,—one, where the party himself buys and sells; the other, where he employs another to buy and sell. When he himself buys and sells, his intention to take and deliver is important. When he employs another to buy and sell, his intention as to what the agent shall do is material. The testimony which the defendants have given here would be pertinent in the first case, but has no relevancy to the second, which is the case at bar. Thacker v. Hardy, L. R. 4 Q. B. Div. 685. Neither defendant, though strenuously invited by the questions of his learned counsel, makes the plain statement, so easy to make, if it were true, that the former differences were not determined by actual purchases and sales. It is doubtless true that the selling price was identical with the quoted price; for actual sales on the exchange are immediately reported and these reports are "quotations." And that is all that the testimony of either defendant amounts to. If they had not intended their orders to Prescott to be carried out according to their terms, one would expect them to have given some notice of that fact when they received accounts of purchases and monthly statements, including charges of interest and credits of dividends. He very clearly thought, and had reason to believe, that the orders were made in good faith. The defendants have failed to establish either fact required by the Massachusetts statute.

The question remains whether these transactions were wagering contracts, such as are held by the common law to be contrary to public policy, and which cannot, therefore, be considered a valid consideration for a promise sued upon in any court where the common law prevails. Wagering contracts in general were formerly enforceable at common law; but by statute in England, and either by statute or by the general agreement of the decisions of the courts in the United States, they are now held to be void and nonenforceable. In Rhode Island we have no statute condemning such contracts generally; but gambling and the making of many sorts of bets and wagers are made misdemeanors by statute, and the spirit of these laws makes it clear that in the opinion of the legislature public policy forbids the enforcement of all wagers by our courts, and it has been so held by this court. Flagg v. Gilpin, 17 R. I. 10, 19 Atl. 1084. "A bet or wager is ordinarily an agreement between two or more that a sum of money or some valuable thing, in contributing which all agree to take part, shall become the property of one or more of them on the happening in the future of an event at the present uncertain, or upon the ascertainment of a fact in dispute." 4 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 5; Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 539. This definition, though not exhaustive, sufficiently expresses what is meant by a wager. The essential elements of an ordinary wagering contract are (1) an agreement by one party to pay another a sum of money, or give something of value, if a certain event happens; (2) a reciprocal agreement by the second party to pay the first a sum of money, or give something of value, if a certain contrary event happens; and (3) that the events contemplated in the agreement shall be something other than the passing of a consideration between the parties. In a wagering contract upon the price of stocks, both parties assume the risk of gaining or losing. In a legitimate transaction through an agent or broker, the agent or broker assumes no risk, except that the principal may not be able to carry out his agreement. His compensation is derived from commissions on actual purchases and sales and from interest on money actually lent. The sole question in this, as in similar cases, is as to which class the transaction belongs. Nor should it be forgotten that the mere intention of either of the parties in entering into the contract, if not communicated to the other and made part of the bargain, is not the controlling circumstance to be considered. The question is, not whether the parties privately intended to enforce the agreement or to fulfil it, but, What did they bind themselves to do? This is well stated in Harvey v. Merrill, 150 Mass. 1, 6, 5 L. R. A. 200, 15 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 N. E. 49, as follows: "If, however, it is agreed by the parties that the contract shall be performed according to its terms, if either party requires it, and that either party shall have a right to require it, the contract does not become a wagering contract because one or both of the parties intend, when the time for performance arrives, not to require performance, but to substitute therefor a settlement by the payment of the difference between the contract price and the market price at that time. Such an intention is immaterial, except so far as it is made a part of the contract, although it need not be made expressly a part of the contract." When a mortgage is made to a savings bank to secure the payment of a promissory note in one year, as is customary in this state, it is rarely the intention of the mortgagor to pay the note according to its terms, or of the bank to enforce payment at the end of the year. Yet the obligation is enforceable according to the tenor of it; the intention of the parties to insist upon or waive their rights being no part or condition of the agreement which they have consented to. See also Gregory v. Wendell, 40 Mich. 432; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 507, 28 L. ed. 229, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Dos Passos, Stock Brokers and Stock Exchanges, p. 419; Lehman v. Strassberger, 2 Woods, 554, Fed. Cas. No. 8,216.

It is not unlawful to buy stocks with the intention of selling again at a profit, nor to do this through a broker, nor to allow the broker to hypothecate the stock in the meantime to raise part of the purchase money. The law does require that the stock should be in existence, and that the customer should acquire such control by the purchase as to be able to deliver the title to it, if called for, when he sells. It makes no difference whether the certificates are delivered to the customer, if his agent, the broker, acquires dominion over them. Young v. Glendinning, 194 Pa. 550, 45 Atl. 364. The bargain must contemplate the actual delivery, if desired, and the actual payment of the whole price, if demanded. It must confer on the purchaser the right to have the stock transferred to him on payment for it. If it does, it is a purchase, whether the stock is actually transferred to him or not. It is lawful for a purchaser to pay a certain agreed amount on account of a purchase of stock, as it is for a purchaser of real estate to make a partial payment and to secure the balance by a mortgage to the vendor. If the agreement between the parties does not contemplate an actual purchase, but merely a payment by one party to the other, or by the ostensible purchaser to his broker, if the stocks decrease in market value, and a payment by the broker to his customer if the price rises in the market, then, no matter what form the transaction is put in, verbally or in writing, it is merely a wager on the fluctuation of market values, and not enforceable at law.

A transaction of the former class appears in the case of Hatch v. Douglas, 48 Conn. 64 L. R. A.

116, 40 Am. Rep. 154. The plaintiffs were stockbrokers in the city of New York. The defendant ordered them "to buy say 100 shares Union Pacific stock on margin," and asked if the brokers would take "1,000 first mortgage New York & Oswego Railroad as margin." The brokers replied that they would, and at once bought the stock. Other transactions were entered into, which resulted in a loss exceeding the value of the security held. This suit was brought for the balance due. Recovery was allowed. The court in its opinion says: "Now there are in the transactions between these parties some of the elements which are usually found in a gaming contract. For instance, it is pretty evident that the parties did not contemplate that the stock should be actually transferred to the defendant; but he would have been satisfied with the receipt of the difference between the price paid and the price received, less interest and commissions, if the price advanced, and expected to pay that difference if the price declined. To that extent it was a contract for the payment of differences. But it was more than that. The defendant, through his agents, the plaintiffs, actually purchased the stock, and there was an actual delivery, not to the principal, but to the agents for the principal. . . . The most that can be said of them is that they knew that the defendant was speculating, and that they advanced him money for that purpose. But that was neither illegal nor immoral." There is a distinction between the two meanings of the word "differences." To contract with reference to the difference between market values, without making actual purchases, is wagering; but to buy at one price and sell at another, or, in the alternative, to accept or pay the difference between prices actually paid and received by an agent, is a valid transaction. In Ward v. Vosburgh, 31 Fed. 12, it is said (p. 13): "It has been of late repeatedly decided that, if the parties intend in fact to buy or sell property, to be delivered at a future time, agreed upon by them, it is not a gambling transaction, although they exercise the option of settling the difference in price, rather than make delivery of the property."

The latter class of the two we are considering is illustrated by the case of Flagg v. Gilpin, 17 R. I. 10, 19 Atl. 1084. The court says: "The case alleged in the pleas is one where it was the understanding of the parties, in the beginning, that the defendant should give orders to the plaintiff, as broker, from time to time, to buy for him shares of stock, and the plaintiff, on receiving the orders, without buying the shares, should be regarded as having bought them, and as holding them for the defendant, until he should receive the defendant's order or consent to sell them, or until the defendant, under the understanding, should be obliged to submit to his selling them, or, rather, to his being regarded as if he had sold them; at which time the difference between the then market price and the market price as it was when the orders to buy were given should be paid by the plaintiff to the defendant if the price had risen, and by the defendant to the plaintiff if it had fallen." In this case there was no evidence presented; the case coming up on demurrer to the pleas, which were thus taken to be true. They presented an unmistakable wagering contract, and the court decided that such a contract is void in Rhode Island.

The rapid fluctuations in the market price of stocks, and the ease with which transfers and hypothecations of stocks may be made, render them a favorite subject for speculation, either legitimate or otherwise; and, where there is suspicion that a given transaction in stocks is only cover for a wager, a court will very carefully scrutinize the circumstances of the case, and disregard the form, if the illegal substance appears. But the indicia of a wager upon the rise and fall in the price of stocks are no different from those of wagers upon any uncertain future event. And so lawful trading in stocks has the same characteristics as lawful trading in any commodity. Mitchell, J., in Hopkins v. O'Kane, 169 Pa. 478, 32 Atl. 421, says: "It ought not to be necessary to say again, after Peters v. Grim, 149 Pa. 163, 34 Am. St. Rep. 599, 24 Atl. 192, and other cases, that a purchase of stocks on margin is not necessarily a gambling transaction. Stocks may be bought on credit, just as flour or sugar, or anything else; and the credit may be for the whole price or for a part of it, and with security or without it. 'Margin' is security, nothing more; and the only difference between stocks and other commodities is that, as stocks are more commonly made the vehicle of gambling speculation than some other things, courts are disposed to look more closely into stock transactions, to ascertain their true character. If they are real purchases and sales, they are not gambling, though they are done partly or wholly on credit."

In the cases cited by the defendants we find nothing to invalidate the propositions of law which we have recognized. In Grise-wood v. Blane, 11 C. B. 528, 540, the court found, in the words of Mr. Justice Williams, that there was ample evidence of a mutual understanding between the plaintiff and defendant that the contract of sale was colorable only. In Wagner v. Hildebrand, 187 Pa. 136, 141, 41 Atl. 34, 36, the court says: "A purchase of stock on margin for speculation is not necessarily a gambling transaction. If it is the intention of the parties that a real purchase shall be made by the broker, although the delivery may be postponed or made to depend upon future conditions, the transaction is legal," etc. The court found in the case that no actual purchase and sale were intended. Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 507, 28 L. ed. 229, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160, holds that contracts for future delivery are valid, though the seller has not the goods at the time of the contract, if the parties intend actual delivery and receipt, and not a settlement by payment of the difference between the contract price and the market price. The case is decided on grounds not applicable to the case at bar. Rogers v. Mariott, 59 Neb. 759, 82 N. W. 21, relates to sales for future delivery, and the same discrimination is drawn between deliveries intended actually to be made and mere intended payments of differences. Morris v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 94 Me. 423, 47 Atl. 926, is a case where the contract was expressed in scrupulously legal form; but it was admitted "that 'in such a transaction or deal the method of business in the plaintiff's deal is as follows: Such trades are made on quotations only, no actual stock being in fact sold; but settlements of differences are fully made when the deals are closed as to profits and losses.' This admission," says the court, "is fatal to the plaintiff's case. It strips the transaction of the semblance of legitimate business, with which the memorandum endeavored to clothe it, and leaves it a naked bet or wager upon the rise and fall of the price of the stock, which the law terms a gambling contract, and pronounces immoral and void." Waite v. Frank, 14 S. D. 626, 86 N. W. 645, was a case of sale for future delivery. The same indications of a wagering contract were discovered as in the cases already referred to. In Jamieson v. Wallace, 167 Ill. 398, 59 Am. St. Rep. 302, 47 N. E. 762, the opinion begins by recognizing the well-settled proposition that, when the understanding of the parties is that a nominal contract of purchase and sale shall be in reality an agreement of settlement by payment of differences between market prices, the contract is a wager, and is void, and continuous: "In order to invalidate the contract, it must appear that neither party has the intention to deliver the property, and that both parties have the intention of settling the differences only." But the opinion ends by holding that under Ill. Crim. Code, § 130, which positively forbids all sales of options, the intent of the customer and the broker alone is material, and it makes no difference if the broker actually purchases the stock.

This may be so under the Illinois statute, but is opposed to the great weight of authority, when the question of the validity of a transaction between a broker and his customer is judged by the common law. If we regard the customer and the broker as principals, the real question is, not whether the customer secretly intends to receive the stock, but whether he intends to bind himself to receive it; and if we regard the broker as an agent, as he certainly is in buying, we must examine his acts and contracts as such agent. Barnes v. Smith, 159 Mass. 344, 34 N. E. 403. Where the transaction is on its face a genuine one, the burden of proof is upon the party attacking it to show its falsity. Bangs v. Hornick, 30 Fed. 97. In this case Mr. Justice Brewer says: "If the deposition of Lester was properly admitted, an actual bona fide transaction was proven; if it was improperly admitted, there is no testimony to show any wrong on the part of Lester & Company, and the law does not presume a wrong. Counsel for defendant say that it is the absolute duty of the court to denounce this transaction, unless it clearly appears that it was a valid and honest one. I think the duty of the court is precisely the reverse, and that it is the duty of the court to uphold it, unless it appears that it was an invalid and dishonest one. The defendant has given his note. The law presumes that there was a consideration, and an honest one, and, unless he has shown the contrary, he should abide by the contract he has made. Further, this is not a case where defendant, as principal on the one side, was dealing with Lester & Company as principal on the other. There was no contract of purchase or sale, real or pretended, between them. They were simply brokers, —agents to do his bidding in transactions, real or pretended, elsewhere. There is no presumption that an agent does not obey the instructions given or that he does not intend to obey them; and, it matters not what the intent or supposition of the principal may be, the law will presume that the agent obeyed the instructions that were given, and as they were given; and, if the contrary be alleged, it must be proved."

The many reported decisions on cases relating to this subject differ slightly in the fundamental principles announced, but mainly in the inferences of fact which the courts have drawn from the evidence before them. In the case at bar it is not necessary to recapitulate the evidence to support our conclusion that the transactions on which the note was based were actual purchases and sales, made by the broker in good faith upon orders given by the defendants with the intention that they should be executed. No case has been cited to us, and we have found none, where, these facts being established, the obligation has not been adjudged binding.

Judgment for plaintiff for the amount of the note, with interest from November 7, 1898, the date of the writ.

Petition for rehearing denied.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

S. H. PETTIGREW et al., Appts.,
v.
Margaret J. PETTIGREW et al.

(207 Pa. 313.)

1. A widow having by statute the primary right to administer upon the estate of her intestate husband has a right to control the interment of his body, and a waiver of the right to administer will not include a waiver of such right of control, unless it is made to do so expressly.
2. The direction of a person as to the disposal of his body after death is entitled to respectful consideration when the question comes before the court, whether it is controlling or not.

3. The duty of an executor or administrator terminates with the first interment of the body of the testator or intestate, and he has no right to a voice on the question of the removal of the remains.
4. There is no universal rule for governing the right to remove the remains of a deceased person after interment, but each case must be considered in equity on its own merits, having due regard to the interests of the public, the wishes of decedent, and the rights and feelings of those entitled to be heard by reason of relationship or association.
5. A widow should be permitted to remove the body of her deceased husband from the lot of his father, where she had consented to its burial, in order to place it upon a lot purchased by her for that purpose beside his only child, who desired it to be done, where the child and widow could not, for lack of room, be buried where the father was, and family hostility would probably prevent such course if it was physically possible.

NOTE.—As to right to control disposition of dead body, see also, in this series, note to Larson v. Chase, 14 L. R. A. 85, and the later cases of Hackett v. Hackett, 19 L. R. A. 558; Choppin v. Dauphin, 33 L. R. A. 133; Thompson v. Deeds, 35 L. R. A. 56; O'Donnell v. Slack, 43 L. R. A. 388; Wright v. Hollywood Cemetery Corp. 52 L. R. A. 621; Enos v. Snyder, 53 L. R. A. 221; and McEntee v. Bonacum, 60 L. R. A. 440.

son v. Deeds, 35 L. R. A. 56; O'Donnell v. Slack, 43 L. R. A. 388; Wright v. Hollywood Cemetery Corp. 52 L. R. A. 621; Enos v. Snyder, 53 L. R. A. 221; and McEntee v. Bonacum, 60 L. R. A. 440.

(January 4, 1904.)

A PPEAL by plaintiffs from a decree of the Court of Common Pleas for Armstrong County refusing to enjoin the removal of the remains of James Pettigrew from the lot of his father upon which he had been buried. Affirmed.

The facts as stated by the trial judge in delivering the opinion awarding the decree were as follows:

Matthew Pettigrew, in his lifetime, was the owner of a lot in the cemetery at Whitesburg, Pennsylvania. After his death he was buried there, as were also his wife and two daughters. We have no testimony as to the size of the lot. On June 17, 1900, James Pettigrew, a son of Matthew, died, leaving to survive him a widow, Margaret J. Pettigrew, the defendant in this case; Jennie Pettigrew, their child, eleven years of age at the time of her father's death; a brother, Dr. S. H. Pettigrew, and two sisters, Mrs. Sarah Sturgeon and Mrs. Martha Shoemaker, the last three mentioned being the plaintiffs in this case. James Pettigrew died suddenly, without making any provision by will as to the place of his interment. The testimony is conflicting as to whether or not the widow desired his body to be interred in the Whitesburg cemetery. Dr. S. H. Pettigrew testifies that she said she would leave it all to him, while Mrs. Pettigrew testifies that it was only her intention to bury him there temporarily. James Pettigrew was buried in the Whitesburg cemetery on June 19, 1900. His only child, Jennie Pettigrew, died on May 12, 1901, and was buried in the Elderton cemetery at Elderton, about 5 miles distant from Whitesburg. It appears from the evidence that some time after the death of James Pettigrew his widow purchased a lot in the Elderton cemetery; the date is not given; that she purchased a monument for the purpose of erecting it at Elderton cemetery; that her daughter, Jennie, had picked out the lot, and that it was her last request that she be buried there, and that her father be brought and laid beside her; that she had picked out this lot before the death of her father, and talked to him about it; and that before her death the monument was ordered with the intention of setting it up on this lot at Elderton. Shortly after the death and burial of Jennie Pettigrew in the Elderton cemetery, Margaret Pettigrew had a grave dug beside the grave of her child for the purpose of reinterring the body of James Pettigrew therein. When the plaintiffs, the brother and sisters of the deceased, learned of this, they had the present bill filed against the widow and the trustees of the Whitesburg cemetery to prevent the removal.

Messrs. McCain & Christy, for appellants:

A wife has no right or control over the body of her deceased husband after burial; the disposition of the remains of the deceased belongs thereafter exclusively to his next of kin.

Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. 293, 82 Am. Dec. 506.

Messrs. M. F. Leason and Neale & Painter, for appellees:

The right of the possession of a dead body for the purpose of preservation and burial belongs, in the absence of any testamentary disposition, to the surviving wife.

Larson v. Chase, 47 Minn. 307, 14 L. R. A. 85, 28 Am. St. Rep. 370, 50 N. W. 238.

Fox v. Gordon, 16 Phila. 185, decides that questions as to the custody and disposal of the dead are determined by such considerations of propriety and justice as arise out of the particular circumstances of the case.

A husband may remove the body of his deceased wife from one burial lot owned by him to another lot owned by him, and a court will not, upon application of a brother and sister of the deceased wife, restrain such removal by injunction without good cause.

Cooney v. Lawrence, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 79; Hackett v. Hackett, 18 R. I. 155, 19 L. R. A. 558, 49 Am. St. Rep. 762, 26 Atl. 42; Secor's Case, 10 Alb. L. J. 71; Weld v. Walker, 130 Mass. 422, 39 Am. Rep. 465; Gampfer v. Poulson & W. Cemetery Co. 19 W. N. C. 230.

Mitchell, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

When a man dies, public policy and regard for the public health, as well as the universal sense of propriety, require that his body should be decently cared for and disposed of. The duty of disposition therefore devolves upon someone, and must carry with it the right to perform. It is commonly said, being repeated from the early cases in England, where the whole matter of burials was under the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts, that there can be no property in a corpse. But, inasmuch as there is a legally recognized right of custody, control, and disposition, the essential attribute of ownership, I apprehend that it would be more accurate to say that the law recognizes property in a corpse, but property subject to a trust, and limited in its rights to such exercise as shall be in conformity with the duty out of which the rights arise. Whether, however, the rights be called "property" or not is manifestly a question of words, rather than of substance. The general subject is treated historically with great learning and ability in Re Beekman Street, 4 Bradf. 503, by the referee, Hon. Samuel B. Ruggles, whose report is a storehouse to which all subsequent discussions have resorted for materials. An exhaustive catalogue of the law literature on burials, etc., will also be found in a note to Johnston v. Marinus, 18 Abb. N. C. 75. The principal judicial decisions on the subject are Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. 293, 82 Am. Dec. 506; Fox v. Gordon, 16 Phila. 185; Pierce v. Swan Point Cemetery, 10 R. I. 227, 14 Am. Rep. 667; Hackett v. Hackett, 18 R. I. 155, 19 L. R. A. 558, 49 Am. St. Rep. 762, 26 Atl. 42; Secor v. Secor, 18 Abb. N. C. 78, note; Weld v. Walker, 130 Mass. 422, 39 Am. Rep. 465; Larson v. Chase, 47 Minn. 307, 14 L. R. A. 85, 28 Am. St. Rep. 370, 50 N. W. 238; Johnston v. Marinus, 18 Abb. N. C. 75; Renihan v. Wright, 125 Ind. 536, 9 L. R. A. 514, 21 Am. St. Rep. 249, 25 N. E. 822; O'Donnell v. Slack, 123 Cal. 285, 43 L. R. A. 388, 55 Pac. 906; Enos v. Snyder, 131 Cal. 68, 53 L. R. A. 221, 82 Am. St. Rep. 330, 63 Pac. 170; McEntee v. Bonacum (Neb.) 60 L. R. A. 440, 92 N. W. 633.

It is not necessary here to go into a general discussion of the various questions raised in the decisions. They have been reviewed with admirable clearness and accuracy by Judge Thayer in Fox v. Gordon, 16 Phila. 185, supra. But certain deductions may be drawn and put into practical shape from the cases. The right of control and disposition, whether called "property" or not, springs, as already said, from the legal duty or obligation. In Pennsylvania, as generally elsewhere, that devolves on the executor or administrator. The statute puts the duty of paying the decedent's debts out of his assets on his executor, and expressly names funeral expenses as first in the order of priority of payment. Prima facie, therefore, the duty to determine when, where, and in what manner the body shall be buried rests with the executor or administrator. But his right is not absolute, nor his judgment conclusive. The determination must rest, as said in Fox v. Gordon, 16 Phila. 185, "upon considerations arising partly out of the domestic relations . . . partly out of the sentiment, so universal, . . . that the dead should repose in some spot where they will be secure from profanation; partly out of what is demanded by society for the preservation of the public health, morality, and decency; and partly often out of what is required by a proper respect for and observance of the wishes of the departed themselves." Under the statute in Pennsylvania the right to administration belongs first to the surviving husband or widow. To such survivor, therefore, belongs the right of control of the body for interment, and a waiver of the right to administer will not include a waiver of such right of control, unless it be express and absolute. In the exigencies of business and the interests of the estate it is not unfrequently desirable that a stranger, or even a creditor, should administer; but no court would sanction a disregard by such an administrator of the wishes of a widow, or even of the next of kin, as to the place and manner of burial.

How far the decedent's own wishes, or even his specific directions, are to prevail, must be regarded as unsettled. In Williams v. Williams, L. R. 20 Ch. Div. 659, Kay, J., held that the right of custody being incident to the duty of burial which is in the executors, a man in England "cannot by will dispose of his dead body." And in a note to a report of the same case in 21 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 512, Prof. Ewell seems to approve the ruling, though he admits that it is of first impression. The case grew out of the disinterment and cremation of the body by a stranger to the family, under written directions of the deceased; and with great respect for the tribunal I cannot help thinking that the decision was unconsciously influenced by the English conservatism in regard to burial, and the attendant reluctance to countenance in any way the innovation of burning. The clear trend, I think, of the American decisions, is to the contrary, notwithstanding the apparent assent in Enos v. Snyder, 131 Cal. 68, 53 L. R. A. 221, 82 Am. St. Rep. 330, 63 Pac. 170, where the cases cited do not support the dictum. See Fox v. Gordon, 16 Phila. 185, already cited; Pierce v. Swan Point Cemetery, 10 R. I. 227, 14 Am. Rep. 667; Johnston v. Marinus, 18 Abb. N. C. 75; Secor v. Secor, 18 Abb. N. C. 78, note; O'Donnell v. Slack, 123 Cal. 285, 43 L. R. A. 388, 55 Pac. 906; Louvy v. Plitt, 16 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 155, and note by Mr. Francis Rawle. And, whether the decedent's directions are regarded as paramount or not, it is agreed in all the cases that they are entitled to respectful consideration whenever the question comes into court. In the absence of a surviving husband or widow, the wishes of the next of kin are entitled to be considered, with varying weight according to the nearness of the kinship and the personal relations between them and the decedent. A more distant relative, or even a friend, not connected by ties of blood, may have a superior right, under exceptional circumstances, to one nearer of kin, as was held in Scott v. Riley, 16 Phila. 106.

The foregoing observations relate chiefly to the first interment. A reinterment, involving a removal to another locality, stands upon a somewhat different footing, and has been the cause of most of the litigation on the subject. The duties of the executor or administrator terminate with the first interment, and on the question of removal he is not a party in interest. The controversy, if there be one, must be between next of kin. The presumption is against a change. The imprecation on the tomb at Stratford, "Curst be he that moves my bones," whether it be Shakespeare's own or some reverent friend's, expresses the universal sentiment of humanity, not only against profanation, but even disturbance. When a case comes into court, the chancellor will regard this sentiment, and consider all the circumstances in that connection.

The case of Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. 293, 82 Am. Dec. 506, has been frequently cited, and is relied on by appellant here as deciding that the rights of the next of kin are superior to those of the widow. The reporter's syllabus apparently goes that far, but it is much too broad, and is an improvident generalization from the second conclusion of the referee in Re Beekman Street, 4 Bradf. 503 (quoted by Read, J.), that the right "belongs exclusively to the next of kin." But the Beekman Street Case was a claim by next of kin to be allowed to control the removal of a body which had been buried more than fifty years, and whose removal was made necessary by the widening of a street through the churchyard. There was no widow living, and the contest was an amicable one between the next of kin and the church to determine their respective rights. The referee held that in such case the rights of the next of kin were exclusive of those of the church, and it is said (Hackett v. Hackett, 18 R. I. 155, 19 L. R. A. 558, 49 Am. St. Rep. 762, 26 Atl. 42) that he added a note to his report explaining that his use of the term "next of kin" had no reference to any rights of a surviving husband or widow. The Wynkoop Case grew out of the attempt of the widow to remove the body of Col. Wynkoop, a distinguished soldier, more than a year after it had been buried, as claimed, by her consent, with the honors of war, and in accordance with his known wishes, in the city of his home. What the case really decides is that the rights of the widow as administratrix ended with the first interment, and as to her rights as widow the court was justified "in refusing permission to a removal under the circumstances." The case is not authority for anything more.

64 L. R. A.

The result of a full examination of the subject is that there is no universal rule applicable alike to all cases, but each must be considered in equity on its own merits, having due regard to the interests of the public, the wishes of the decedent, and the rights and feelings of those entitled to be heard by reason of relationship or association. Subject to this general result, it may be laid down: First. That the paramount right is in the surviving husband or widow, and, if the parties were living in the normal relations of marriage, it will require a very strong case to justify a court in interfering with the wish of the survivor. Secondly. If there is no surviving husband or wife, the right is in the next of kin in the order of their relation to the decedent, as children of proper age, parents, brothers, and sisters, or more distant kin, modified, it may be, by circumstances of special intimacy or association with the decedent. Thirdly. How far the desires of the decedent should prevail against those of a surviving husband or wife is an open question, but, as against remoter connections, such wishes, especially if strongly and recently expressed, should usually prevail. Fourthly. With regard to a reinterment in a different place, the same rules should apply, but with a presumption against removal growing stronger with the remoteness of connection with the decedent, and reserving always the right of the court to require reasonable cause to be shown for it.

In the present case the court finds as facts that when the decedent died he left a widow and one child, his next of kin. The child died about a year afterwards, and was buried in a lot in another cemetery, purchased by the widow. The daughter, though young, appears to have had a sentiment on the subject, and desired her father to be buried with her. The decedent was buried in a lot belonging to his father's family, with the widow's consent, but whether her consent was more than for a temporary interment is disputed. Whatever may be the fact as to that, it is found by the court below that there is not room in the family lot for the burial of the daughter and the widow unless they be put in the same grave with the decedent, and the hostile feelings of the brother and sisters make it doubtful if even this privilege would be conceded. These facts more than justify the conclusion of the learned judge below that the right of the widow to remove the body to the new lot purchased by her for that purpose should not be interfered with.

Decree affirmed, at costs of appellants.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

Lillie BUSSE, by Guardian ad Litem, Respt.,
v.

Harrie ROGERS et al., Appts.

(.....Wis.....)

1. That the complainant in an action for injuries caused by the fall of an insecure timber from a lumber pile alleged that the timber was insecure because of the defective condition of the derrick by the chains of which it was partially suspended, will not prevent a recovery in case it is shown that the timber was not in the chains, nor will it prevent the introduction of evidence of other causes of insecurity, where it expressly alleges that the injury was caused by defendant's negligence and carelessness in placing and leaving the timber.
2. A finding of fact by the jury cannot be reversed by the supreme court on appeal, although it appears to be against the preponderance of evidence, if there is evidence to support it which cannot be said to be incredible, and it cannot be said that all the reasonable probabilities and inferences are against their conclusion.
3. One who, in using the street adjoining his property as part of his lumber yard, piles lumber there in an unstable manner, is liable for injuries caused by its fall upon a child who, while traveling along the street, follows its inclination to play, and attempts to climb upon the pile, and thereby causes the timber to fall.
4. The fact that at the time a child is injured by the fall of lumber wrongfully and negligently piled in a highway it has temporarily ceased to be a traveler, and turned aside to play, does not bar its right of recovery against the wrongdoer.

(February 2, 1904.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Superior Court of Douglas County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendants' negligence. Affirmed.

Statement by Winslow, J.:

This is an action to recover damages for personal injuries suffered by the plaintiff May 4, 1902, at which time she was a child of the age of about five years. At the date last mentioned, and for some time prior thereto, the defendants were copartners in the lumber business at Superior, Wisconsin, and maintained and operated a lumber yard NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to liability for injury to child by fall upon him of lumber piled in highway, see Kramer v. Southern R. Co. 52 L. R. A. 359, and Kessler v. Berger, 61 L. R. A. 611.

As to right of children to protection against dangerous condition of highway generally, see Gibson v. Huntington, 22 L. R. A. 561, and note.

64 L. R. A.

at that city, which abutted for some distance on the west side of Grand avenue, a street of that city running north and south and 100 feet in width. The evidence shows that there was no fence on the west line of Grand avenue separating the defendants' lumber yard from the street, and that there was a space of 8 feet in width between the sidewalk on the west side of Grand avenue and the line of the defendants' property, which space was, in part at least, used by the defendants for piling lumber and as part of their lumber yard. One pile of timber, composed of large square timbers from 14 to 16 feet in length and about 12 inches by 12 inches square, was piled parallel with Grand avenue, and partially, at least, upon this 8-foot space, the outermost part of the pile being about 1½ feet from the sidewalk. The testimony further tended to show that the pile of timber in question had a steplike formation toward the street, so that it could be easily climbed upon, and that upon the top of the pile there were two timbers placed in an oblique position, and so that upon a very slight application of force they would lose their equilibrium and fall toward the street. It further appears that upon May 4th aforesaid the plaintiff, with another child, came along upon Grand avenue, and stopped at this pile of timber, climbed upon it, and began running and playing upon one of the top timbers, and that the timber rolled down toward the street with the child, and inflicted some personal injuries.

A special verdict was rendered by the jury as follows:

First. Was plaintiff, Lillie Busse, injured by a stick of timber rolling or falling on her at defendants' yard May 4th last?

A. (by the Court). Yes.

Second. Were defendants chargeable with want of ordinary care in permitting the stick or sticks of timber to be in the position it or they were?

A. Yes.

Third. If you answer above question "Yes," then answer this question: Was such want of ordinary care the proximate cause of the injury?

A. Yes.

Fourth. At the time of and immediately before the accident in question, was there a timber in any manner suspended in the derrick chains?

A. No.

Fifth. How far west of the sidewalk was plaintiff when the timber started to fall on her?

A. Six and one-half feet (6½ feet).

Sixth. What was the distance from the west side of the sidewalk to the timber pile in question?

A. One foot and one half (1½ feet).

Seventh. At what sum do you assess plaintiff's damages?

A. Three hundred dollars ($300.00).

Upon this verdict judgment for the plaintiff was rendered, and the defendants appeal.

Mr. H. V. Gard, for appellants:

The evidence tending to show negligence or defective piling of timbers was not admissible under the pleadings.

Bean v. Percival Cooper Min. Co. 111 Wis. 598, 87 N. W. 465; Duval v. American Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 113 Wis. 504, 89 N. W. 482.

No other acts of negligence can be proved than those specific acts alleged in the complaint.

Pennington v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 90 Mich. 505, 51 N. W. 634; Batterson v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. 49 Mich. 184, 13 N. W. 508; Schindler v. Milwaukee, L. S. & W. R. Co. 77 Mich. 136, 43 N. W. 911; Elliott v. Carter White-Lead Co. 53 Neb. 458, 73 N. W. 948; Carter v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co. 65 Iowa, 287, 21 N. W. 607; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Foss, 88 Ill. 551; McCain v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 13 Ky. L. Rep. 809, 18 S. W. 537; Houston City Street R. Co. v. Farrell (Tex.) 27 S. W. 942; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Herring (Tex.) 36 S. W. 129.

The owner of the fee may make any use of his land within the limits of the highway which will not interfere with the use of the highway for travel, and an invasion of this unoccupied portion by a person for purposes other than travel is a trespass upon the fee.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 416; Andrews v. Youmans, 78 Wis. 56, 47 N. W. 304, 82 Wis. 81, 52 N. W. 23.

Plaintiff was a trespasser, and, assuming defendants to have been negligent in piling the timber, they are not liable for injuries to the plaintiff, a trespassing child.

Klia v. Nieman, 68 Wis. 271, 60 Am. Rep. 854, 32 N. W. 223; Schug v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 102 Wis. 515, 78 N. W. 1090.

At law the infant trespasser is liable to the landowner alike with the adult.

Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745, is the real beginning of the doctrine of liability to trespassing infants.

The question of the plaintiff's trespass was not really in this case, it having been taken out—or, at least, the court considered that it was taken out—by the admission or disclaimer of the counsel.

64 L. R. A.

Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29; Birge v. Gardiner, 19 Conn. 507, 50 Am. Dec. 261; Daley v. Norwich & W. R. Co. 26 Conn. 591, 62 Am. Dec. 413; Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 628.

Bird v. Holbrook was a spring-gun case. Lynch v. Nurdin was based on gross negligence.

Every feature of the doctrine of the Lynch Case, if it had any which could be relied on to support the Stout Case, had already been repudiated by the English court.

Hughes v. Macfie, 2 Hurlst. & C. 744; Mangan v. Atterton, L. R. 1 Exch. 339.

These cases were not overruled by Clark v. Chambers, L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 327, or Harrold v. Watney, [1898], 2 Q. B. 320.

Birge v. Gardiner, 19 Conn. 507, 50 Am. Dec. 261, involved the wrongful use of a roadway,—a private way it is true, and over his own ground, but in which plaintiff had a right to be.

Daley v. Norwich & W. R. Co. 26 Conn. 591, 68 Am. Dec. 413, is distinguishable in that in the Daley Case the negligence consisted in the manner of operating a train, and was thus active negligence. The doctrine of this case has already been repudiated by the Connecticut court.

Nolan v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 53 Conn. 461, 4 Atl. 106.

With the exception of the Daley Case, which was doubtful authority at the time, and which has since been repudiated by the Connecticut court, there was absolutely no authority for the Stout Case at the time it was decided. The rule of the latter case, if it may be said to be a rule of law, raises a duty flowing from a landowner to children where none exists towards adults.

The doctrine of the Stout Case has been unconditionally rejected in New Hampshire, New Jersey, West Virginia, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Michigan, and New York.

Clark v. Manchester, 62 N. H. 577; Frost v. Eastern R. Co. 64 N. H. 220, 10 Am. St. Rep. 396, 9 Atl. 790; Buch v. Amory Mfg. Co. 69 N. H. 257, 76 Am. St. Rep. 163, 44 Atl. 809; Turess v. New York, S. & W. R. Co. 61 N. J. L. 314, 40 Atl. 614; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Reich, 61 N. J. L. 635, 41 L. R. A. 831, 68 Am. St. Rep. 727, 40 Atl. 682; Fitzpatrick v. Cumberland Glass Mfg. Co. 61 N. J. L. 378, 39 Atl. 675; Vanderbeck v. Hendry, 34 N. J. L. 467; Uthermohlen v. Bogg's Run Co. 50 W. Va. 457, 55 L. R. A. 911, 88 Am. St. Rep. 884, 40 S. E. 410; Ritz v. Wheeling, 45 W. Va. 262, 43 L. R. A. 148, 31 S. E. 993; Dicken v. Liverpool Salt & Coal Co. 41 W. Va. 511, 23 S. E. 582; Paolino v. McKendall (R. I.) 60 L. R. A. 133, 53 Atl. 268; Bishop v. Union R. Co. 14 R. I. 314, 51 Am. Rep. 336; Holbrook v. Aldrich, 168 Mass. 15, 36 L. R.

A. 493, 60 Am. St. Rep. 364, 46 N. E. 115; Grindley v. McKechnie, 163 Mass. 494, 40 N. E. 764; McEachern v. Boston & M. R. Co. 150 Mass. 515, 23 N. E. 231; Daniels v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 154 Mass. 349, 13 L. R. A. 248, 26 Am. St. Rep. 253, 28 N. E. 283; Ryan v. Towar, 128 Mich. 463, 55 L. R. A. 310, 92 Am. St. Rep. 481, 87 N. W. 644; Charlebois v. Goebic & M. River R. Co. 91 Mich. 59, 51 N. W. 812; Hargreaves v. Deacon, 25 Mich. 1; Walsh v. Fitchburg R. Co. 145 N. Y. 301, 27 L. R. A. 724, 45 Am. St. Rep. 615, 39 N. E. 1068; McAlpin v. Powell, 70 N. Y. 126, 26 Am. Rep. 555; Murphy v. Brooklyn, 118 N. Y. 575, 23 N. E. 887; Sterger v. Van Sicklen, 132 N. Y. 499, 16 L. R. A. 640, 28 Am. St. Rep. 594, 30 N. E. 987.

Cosgrove v. Ogden, 49 N. Y. 255, 10 Am. Rep. 361, and Earl v. Crouch, 40 N. Y. S. R. 847, 16 N. Y. Supp. 770, are sometimes cited as upholding the doctrine of the Stout Case; but they have been overruled by the Walsh Case.

There is a class of states in which the doctrine of the Stout and similar cases has not been expressly rejected, but whose decisions, either by the facts themselves, or by reasoning in the opinions, repel the doctrine. In this class are: Maryland, Louisiana, North Dakota, Alabama, Virginia, Utah, and Connecticut.

Mergenthaler v. Kirby, 79 Md. 182, 47 Am. St. Rep. 371, 28 Atl. 1065; Benson v. Baltimore Traction Co. 77 Md. 535, 20 L. R. A. 714, 39 Am. St. Rep. 436, 26 Atl. 973; O'Connor v. Illinois C. R. Co. 44 La. Ann. 339, 10 So. 678; Fredericks v. Illinois C. R. Co. 46 La. Ann. 1180, 15 So. 413; Culbertson v. Crescent City R. Co. 48 La. Ann. 1376, 20 So. 902; O'Leary v. Brooks Elevator Co. 7 N. D. 554, 41 L. R. A. 677, 75 N. W. 919; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Moorers, 116 Ala. 642, 22 So. 900; Clark v. Richmond, 83 Va. 355, 5 Am. St. Rep. 281, 5 S. E. 369; Robinson v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. 7 Utah, 493, 13 L. R. A. 765, 27 Pac. 689; Nolan v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 53 Conn. 461, 4 Atl. 106; Morgan v. Hollowell, 57 Me. 375; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Williams, 69 Miss. 631, 12 So. 957; Pierce v. Whitcomb, 48 Vt. 127, 21 Am. Rep. 120.

The states which have unconditionally adopted the doctrine of the Stout Case, both in its application to turntables and other dangers, are: Kansas, Illinois, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Washington, California, and Colorado.

Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Bockovon, 53 Kan. 279, 36 Pac. 322; Gavin v. Chicago, 97 Ill. 66, 37 Am. Rep. 99; Lepnick v. Gaddis, 72 Miss. 200, 26 L. R. A. 686, 48 Am. St. Rep. 547, 16 So. 213; Whirley v. White- man, 1 Head, 610; Bates v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 90 Tenn. 36, 25 Am. St. Rep. 665, 15 S. W. 1069.

In Cooper v. Overton, 102 Tenn. 211, 45 L. R. A. 591, 73 Am. St. Rep. 864, 52 S. W. 183, however, the doctrine of the early Whirley Case was much weakened.

Malloy v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. (Cal.) 21 Pac. 525.

In a later case considerable doubt is thrown upon the wisdom of extending the doctrine beyond turntable cases.

Peters v. Bowman, 115 Cal. 345, 56 Am. St. Rep. 106, 47 Pac. 113, 598; Kopplekom v. Colorado Cement Pipe Co. 16 Colo. App. 274, 54 L. R. A. 284, 64 Pac. 1047.

There is a class of states that have adopted the rule of the Stout Case in its application to turntables, and have refused to extend it to things other than turntables. In this class are the following states: Minnesota, Missouri, Texas, Nebraska, and Georgia. The turntable cases in these states follow:

Keffe v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 21 Minn. 207, 18 Am. Rep. 393; Kolsti v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 32 Minn. 133, 19 N. W. 655; Twist v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 39 Minn. 164, 12 Am. St. Rep. 626, 39 N. W. 402; O'Malley v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 43 Minn. 289, 45 N. W. 440; Koons v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co. 65 Mo. 592; Nagel v. Missouri P. R. Co. 75 Mo. 653, 42 Am. Rep. 418; Evansich v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 57 Tex. 126, 44 Am. Rep. 586; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McWhirter, 77 Tex. 356, 19 Am. St. Rep. 755, 14 S. W. 26; Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Robertson (Tex.) 14 L. R. A. 781, 16 S. W. 1093; Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Bailey, 11 Neb. 332, 9 N. W. 50; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Krayenbuhl (Neb.) 59 L. R. A. 920, 91 N. W. 880; Ferguson v. Columbus & R. R. Co. 77 Ga. 102.

In Minnesota, while there has been no express limitation of the doctrine to turntable cases, it is a noticeable fact that in every instance in which it has been invoked in cases other than turntable cases the plaintiff has failed to recover.

Emerson v. Peteler, 35 Minn. 481, 59 Am. Rep. 337, 29 N. W. 311; Ratte v. Dawson, 50 Minn. 450, 52 N. W. 965; Kayser v. Lindell, 73 Minn. 123, 75 N. W. 1038; Dehanitz v. St. Paul, 73 Minn. 385, 76 N. W. 48.

So in Missouri.

Witte v. Stifel, 126 Mo. 295, 47 Am. St. Rep. 668, 28 S. W. 891; Schmidt v. Kansas City Distilling Co. 90 Mo. 284, 59 Am. Rep. 16, 1 S. W. 865, 2 S. W. 417; Moran v. Pullman Palace Car Co. 134 Mo. 641, 33 L. R. A. 755, 56 Am. St. Rep. 543, 36 S. W. 659; Overholt v. Vieths, 93 Mo. 422, 3 Am. St. Rep. 557, 6 S. W. 74; Williams v. Kansas City, S. & M. R. Co. 96 Mo. 275, 9 S.

W. 573; Barney v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 126 Mo. 372, 26 L. R. A. 847, 28 S. W. 1069; Curley v. Missouri P. R. Co. 98 Mo. 13, 10 S. W. 593.

In Texas the court has not only refused to extend the doctrine of the Stout Case to other than turntable cases, but it has, both by word and principle, repudiated it altogether, though not in a turntable case.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Edwards, 90 Tex. 65, 32 L. R. A. 825, 36 S. W. 430; Dobbins v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 91 Tex. 60, 38 L. R. A. 573, 66 Am. St. Rep. 856, 41 S. W. 62.

Dublin Cotton Oil Co. v. Jarrard, 91 Tex. 289, 42 S. W. 959, discloses the fact that no encouragement is given to the doctrine of the Stout Case.

In Nebraska in every instance in which the doctrine of the Stout Case has been involved in other than the turntable cases the plaintiff has failed upon the merits.

Slayton v. Fremont, E. & M. Valley R. Co. 40 Neb. 840, 59 N. W. 510; Richards v. Connell, 45 Neb. 467, 63 N. W. 915; Omaha v. Bowman, 52 Neb. 293, 40 L. R. A. 531, 66 Am. St. Rep. 506, 72 N. W. 316.

In Georgia the doctrine of the Stout Case has been limited to turntable cases.

Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Beavers, 113 Ga. 398, 54 L. R. A. 314, 39 S. E. 82.

South Carolina belongs in a class by itself, in that it has approved the abstract doctrine of the Stout Case as applied to turntables, but the cases in which it was so approved were reversed on other grounds.

Bridger v. Asheville & S. R. Co. 25 S. C. 24; Bridger v. Asheville & S. R. Co. 27 S. C. 456, 13 Am. St. Rep. 653, 3 S. E. 860.

There is a class of states often cited as upholding the doctrine of the Stout Case, wherein an examination of the cases discloses no authority whatever for it, and most all of them could with better reason be cited against it.

Indianapolis P. & O. R. Co. v. Pitzer, 109 Ind. 179, 58 Am. Rep. 387, 6 N. E. 310, 10 N. E. 70; Indianapolis v. Emmelman, 108 Ind. 530, 58 Am. Rep. 65, 9 N. E. 155; Penso v. McCormick, 125 Ind. 116, 9 L. R. A. 313, 21 Am. St. Rep. 211, 25 N. E. 156; Harriman v. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. 45 Ohio St. 11, 12 N. E. 451, 4 Am. St. Rep. 507; Bransom v. Labrot, 81 Ky. 638, 50 Am. Rep. 193; Hydraulic Works Co. v. Orr, 83 Pa. 332; Gillespie v. McGowan, 100 Pa. 144, 45 Am. Rep. 365; Rodgers v. Lees, 140 Pa. 475, 12 L. R. A. 216, 21 Atl. 399; Bottoms v. Seaboard & R. R. Co. 114 N. C. 699, 25 L. R. A. 784, 41 Am. St. Rep. 799, 19 S. E. 730.

Messrs. George C. Cooper and G. E. Dietrich, for respondent:

The moving causes of the injury may be 44 L. R. A.

one or more, and if several are set up in the complaint, and one only is proved, the complaint is sustained.

Harper v. Milwaukee, 30 Wis. 365; Duell v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 115 Wis. 516, 92 N. W. 269.

Plaintiff had a right, while waiting upon the sidewalk for another person, to play, as the evidence shows she did.

Reed v. Madison, 83 Wis. 171, 17 L. R. A. 733, 53 N. W. 547; Blodgett v. Boston, 8 Allen, 237; Gulline v. Lowell, 144 Mass. 491, 59 Am. Rep. 102, 11 N. E. 723; Hunt v. Salem, 121 Mass. 294; Bliss v. South Hadley, 145 Mass. 91, 1 Am. St. Rep. 441, 13 N. E. 352.

Though not a traveler, and though plaintiff might not for that reason have been able to recover damages against the city for any injury received on account of a defect in the highway, nevertheless, she has a cause of action against defendants for the reason that the pile of lumber, being in the street, was an obstruction to the street, and defendants were guilty of maintaining a nuisance.

Tinker v. New York, O. & W. R. Co. 157 N. Y. 318, 51 N. E. 1031; Flynn v. Taylor, 127 N. Y. 596, 14 L. R. A. 556, 28 N. E. 418; Welsh v. Wilson, 101 N. Y. 254, 54 Am. Rep. 698, 4 N. E. 633; Callanan v. Gilman, 107 N. Y. 360, 1 Am. St. Rep. 831, 14 N. E. 264; Babbage v. Powers, 130 N. Y. 281, 14 L. R. A. 398, 29 N. E. 132.

Every actual encroachment upon a highway by the erection of a fence or building thereon, or any other permanent or habitual obstruction thereof, may fairly be said to be a nuisance, even though it does not operate as an actual obstruction of public travel.

Com. v. McNaugher, 131 Pa. 55, 18 Atl. 934; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 444, note.

The right of the public to use a highway extends to the whole breadth thereof, and not merely to the part which is worked or actually traveled.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 492-493, note.

The ownership of the fee by the person creating an obstruction is no excuse for the obstruction.

Tinker v. New York, O. & W. R. Co. 157 N. Y. 312, 51 N. E. 1031; Parker v. Van Houten, 7 Wend. 145; State v. Walters, 69 Mo. 463; Langdale v. Bonton, 12 Ind. 467; Montgomery v. Parker, 114 Ala. 118, 62 Am. St. Rep. 95, 21 So. 452.

It is not unlawful, wrong, or negligent for children to play on the sidewalk.

Reed v. Madison, 83 Wis. 178, 17 L. R. A. 733, 53 N. W. 547; McGarry v. Loomis, 63 N. Y. 104, 20 Am. Rep. 510; 15 Am. &

Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 464, note; Gibson v. Huntington, 38 W. Va. 177, 22 L. R. A. 561, 45 Am. St. Rep. 853, 18 S. E. 44; Indianapolis v. Emmelman, 108 Ind. 530, 58 Am. Rep. 65, 9 N. E. 155; Chicago v. Keefe, 114 Ill. 222, 55 Am. Rep. 860, 2 N. E. 267; Straub v. St. Louis (Mo.) 14 Am. Neg. Rep. 384; District of Columbia v. Boswell, 6 App. D. C. 420; McGuire v. Spence, 91 N. Y. 303, 43 Am. Rep. 668; Kuns v. Troy, 104 N. Y. 344, 10 N. E. 442; Earl v. Crouch, 40 N. Y. S. R. 847, 16 N. Y. Supp. 770; Cosgrove v. Ogden, 49 N. Y. 255, 10 Am. Rep. 361; Bransom v. Labrot, 81 Ky. 438, 50 Am. Rep. 193.

Individuals or corporations may be liable for obstructions or defects in highways or streets for which they are responsible, even though there is no liability on the part of the town or city; but, in order to predicate such liability, the injury must result from their unlawful act, and not from defects in the highway itself.

Rea v. Jones, 3 Campb. 230; Wood, Nuisances, § 261; Hussey v. Ryan, 64 Md. 426, 2 Atl. 729, 54 Am. Rep. 772; Johnson v. Whitefield, 18 Me. 286, 36 Am. Rep. 721; Saylor v. Montesano, 11 Wash. 328, 39 Pac. 453.

The owner of machinery or other property attractive to children is liable to children wrongfully interfering with it on his own premises.

Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 745; Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29; Birge v. Gardiner, 19 Conn. 507, 50 Am. Dec. 261; Daley v. Norwich & W. R. Co. 26 Conn. 591, 68 Am. Dec. 410; Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 628; Harrold v. Watney [1898] 2 Q. B. 320; Whirley v. Whiteman, 1 Head, 610; Bates v. Nashville, O. & St. L. R. Co. 90 Tenn. 36, 25 Am. St. Rep. 665, 15 S. W. 1069; Union P. R. Co. v. McDonald, 152 U. S. 262, 38 L. ed. 434, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619; Barrett v. Southern P. R. Co. 91 Cal. 206, 25 Am. St. Rep. 186, 27 Pac. 666; O'Leary v. Brooks Elevator Co. 7 N. D. 554, 41 L. R. A. 677, 75 N. W. 919.

Winslow, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

A number of detail errors are alleged, which will be considered before proceeding to the main question on the merits of the case. First it is claimed that it was error to admit evidence showing merely defective and unstable piling of the timber, because it is said that this was not the negligence complained of in the complaint. The consideration of this objection requires some further statement of the facts. In the complaint it is alleged that the defendants maintained a large crane or derrick in their yard near the pile of timbers in question, which was used to unload cars, and which had a swinging arm and a windlass and cable to which were attached chains and hooks for lifting timbers from cars, and that "defendants piled a number of large timbers, about 14 feet long and 12 or 14 inches wide and of about the same thickness, in said yard, close to Grand avenue, so that said pile of timbers extended lengthwise with said avenue, and a few feet from said walk, and about 4 feet high; that defendants negligently and carelessly placed a large timber about 14 feet long and 12 or 14 inches wide and of about the same thickness in said chains upon the top of said pile of timbers above described, so that one end of said timber projected over said pile of timbers and slightly over said sidewalk, and negligently and carelessly allowed said timber so placed to remain partially suspended in said chains and partially supported by said pile of timbers, so that the same would upon the slightest application of force lose its position of equilibrium and fall over the edge of said pile of timbers, knowing said position and condition to be unsafe and dangerous prior to May 4, 1902, and negligently and carelessly allowed said timber to remain and be in such condition and position until the time of the injury hereinafter described, knowing such position to be dangerous." The complaint further states, in substance, that the timber in question fell upon the plaintiff "by reason of the defective machinery in said derrick, and the defective, negligent, and careless manner in which said timber was secured and placed as aforesaid, and by reason of the negligence and carelessness of defendants in so placing and leaving said timber." The defendants claim that these allegations distinctly charge that the only negligence relied on was the leaving a timber partially suspended in the chains of the defective derrick and partly supported by the pile of timbers, and that all testimony introduced by the plaintiff tending to show simply that the timber was obliquely placed on the pile in an unstable or "teetery" position was inadmissible, because this was not the negligence pleaded; and the defendants' further claim is that, the jury having found upon sufficient evidence, in answer to the fourth question of the verdict, that no timber was in any manner suspended in the derrick chains, all charges of negligence made in the complaint have been rebutted, and judgment should have been rendered upon the verdict for the defendants. We cannot accede to these propositions. In our opinion, such a construction of the complaint would be entirely too narrow and technical. It is true that the complaint charges at some length that the unstable timber was partially suspended in the derrick chains, but, after all, we think it clear that the gravamen of the charge of negligence is that the timber was left in such a position upon the pile that slight application of force would cause it to fall. One of the reasons given for the instability was that the timber hung partially in the derrick chains, and this turns out to be unfounded; but still the material fact that the timber was in some manner very insecurely placed remains, notwithstanding the fact now appears that the chains of the derrick had nothing to do with the instability. In other words, it was the instability of the timber which was the gist of the complaint, and this may well have existed even though one alleged reason for the instability was not proved.

Another contention made by appellants is that the answer to the fifth question of the special verdict should have been stricken out, because there was no credible evidence to support it. By this answer the jury found that the plaintiff was 6½ feet west of the sidewalk when the timber started to fall upon her. The significance of this finding is that it determines the fact that the plaintiff and the timber which fell were within the limits of Grand avenue when the accident happened.

Examination of the record shows that there was much evidence to the contrary of this finding, and it might well be that, were the question an original one, we should be compelled to hold that the evidence preponderates against the finding; but there was evidence which tended to support the conclusion of the jury, and we cannot say that it was incredible, nor that all the reasonable probabilities and inferences were the other way; hence we cannot reverse the ruling of the trial court upon the question.

We pass now to the main question in the case, namely, whether a verdict for the defendants should not have been directed upon the uncontradicted evidence, or, in default of such a direction, whether judgment should not have been rendered for the defendants upon the special verdict and the uncontradicted evidence. The simple facts to be considered in this connection are that a child five years of age was playing upon a pile of timber left by defendants within the limits of the street, and was injured by reason of a timber falling upon her, which had been insecurely placed upon the pile; there being evidence tending to show, and the jury having found, that the insecurity of the timber was an act of negligence on the part of the defendants. The appellants claim that the question whether the pile of timber was within the limits of the highway or not is of no moment. The traveled portion of the highway was of ample width, and was properly prepared for travel. The strip which the defendants used along the margin of their land upon which to pile lumber and timber, though within the limits of the street as dedicated, was used with the consent of the public authorities, and did in fact belong to the defendants, subject only to the easement of the public for travel; and the plaintiff was not using or attempting to use the place for travel, but for play, and hence was a trespasser. Assuming that she was a trespasser, and that the timber pile was rightfully in its position, the contention is that there can be no liability except upon the extreme theory of the doctrine of "attractive nuisances" as laid down in the line of cases generally known as "Turntable Cases." These cases are referred to in the case of Klia v. Nieman, 68 Wis. 271, 60 Am. Rep. 854, 32 N. W. 223, as "a class of cases which hold the proprietor liable for injuries resulting to children from dangerous machinery left unguarded and so exposed as to be calculated to attract their interference with it;" but they are not expressly approved or disapproved in that case, and in fact the question has never been directly considered and passed upon by this court, though the reasoning of the case cited would seem rather opposed to the doctrine than otherwise. The doctrine in these cases seems to be that by creating or leaving on one's premises a dangerous machine or thing which is especially calculated to attract children to play therewith one impliedly invites children on his premises, and is guilty of negligence, if he does not take precaution to protect such children from injury. Thomp. Neg. §§ 945-1024. This doctrine has been debated in many cases and in many courts with the result that there are many authorities supporting the doctrine in its broadest application, while many repudiate it entirely, and others give it qualified recognition, and practically limit it to railroad turntables. Appellants' counsel argue very strongly against the doctrine, and have submitted a markedly able brief reviewing the authorities on both sides of the question, and we shall direct that the citations be preserved in the report of the case. We do not, however, find it necessary to decide the question in the present case. This is not the case of an owner of land putting an attractive and lawful but dangerous machine or thing upon his own property and leaving it unguarded. It is the case of an owner placing an unlawful nuisance in the highway and leaving it unguarded. The defendants owned the land of the highway to the center line thereof opposite their premises, subject to the public easement of travel. They might doubtless temporarily obstruct the sidewalk in the transaction of their business, but they had no right to permanently store a pile of timber in the limits of the highway, even opposite their own premises. The timber was wrongfully there, even had the public authorities assumed to consent to it. It was a nuisance in fact and in law. Had a loose timber fallen from the pile by reason of sole negligent piling, and injured a traveler passing on the sidewalk, there would be little doubt of the liability of the defendants, and of the city as well, provided the danger was one which had existed long enough so that the city officials should have known it. Denby v. Willer, 59 Wis. 241, 18 N. W. 169. Does the fact that the child was not then a traveler, but had turned aside for a moment to follow a natural and childish inclination to play, entirely relieve the defendants from liability? This is the simple question presented, and it is not entirely easy of solution. In this case it appeared affirmatively by the evidence that children were accustomed to play in and about the street and the lumber yard to the knowledge of defendants, and to such an extent that the defendants had found it necessary to direct their employees not to allow children to play in the yard for fear they would get hurt. But aside from these facts the fact must also be considered that children do play in the public highways, and will doubtless continue to do so as long as child nature remains the same as it is now. The child who lags unwilling on the way to school and chases a bright-winged butterfly, or plays a game of marbles, or climbs a tempting pile of timber in the highway to play seesaw for a moment, does not thereby become an outlaw, and when injured by another's negligence he cannot be turned aside with the curt remark that he has ceased to travel, and become a trespasser, and hence can complain of no one's conduct. His natural habits and instincts must be in some way and degree recognized. This court has said that "children playing in the street are entitled to consideration." Meibus v. Dodge, 38 Wis. 300, 20 Am. Rep. 6. The child has a right in the highway. It must be recognized that he will play therein if occasion offers. Indeed, we would not have it otherwise. The man or woman who would wish to wholly stop the flow of childish spirits while on the highway, and turn the little ones into men and women before their time, must either have had no childhood of his own, or must have forgotten the fact. It would not be accurate to say that the streets are made for children to play in, but it would be equally inaccurate to say that a property owner can totally disregard the fact that children always have, and probably always will, play therein. He cannot lawfully lay anything like a trap for the child upon the highway, and escape the consequences by saying that the child would not have been injured had he confined himself to traveling exclusively. The case of Meibus v. Dodge, 38 Wis. 300, 20 Am. Rep. 6, is an illustration of the principle. In this case a man left a dog, which he knew to be ferocious, in his sleigh upon the public street, and a child passing upon the sidewalk turned aside and meddled with a whip in the sleigh, and the dog threw him down and bit him. A judgment for the plaintiff was affirmed. The contention here was that the child was committing a trespass when he meddled with the whip, and hence was entitled to no protection; but the argument was rejected, and it was said that the act of the child was one which might well be anticipated; that the child did not forfeit all claims to protection simply because he turned aside for a moment and touched the whip; and that the defendant had no right to leave a dog, which he knew to be ferocious, unsecured in the public street, where children were liable to be passing, and might be reasonably expected to indulge in such childish acts as the one in question. We regard the reasoning of the case as quite satisfactory, and, in substance, applicable to the present situation. The central idea is that children are liable always to be upon the public streets, and also are liable to turn aside from traveling and play or meddle with attractive things left thereon; that a reasonable man must bear this fact in mind, and hence may not negligently or wilfully place upon the street a dangerous animal or trap well calculated to arouse the admiration or curiosity of a child, and, when it has accomplished the natural result which might reasonably be expected, escape the consequences by saying that the injured child should not have yielded to his curiosity. It is well known that there is nothing much more attractive to children than a pile of lumber or timber, especially one which affords opportunities for a seesaw. This, according to the findings, was what the defendants placed in the street in the present case, so arranged that the heavy timbers would almost immediately fall when the childish amusement commenced. We think there was ample room for the jury to find, as they did, that the act of leaving the timber in the highway in this condition was actionable negligence, and that the result which followed was one which might reasonably have been anticipated by an ordinarily prudent man under the circumstances; and we also hold that the fact that the child turned aside from traveling to play for a brief time in the highway does not necessarily prevent a recovery, although such might be the result in an action against the city to enforce the statutory liability under § 1339, Rev. Stat. 1898.

As previously indicated, we do not decide what would be the result had it appeared that the pile of timber was not upon the street, but upon the defendant's premises; nor do we intimate any opinion thereon. In the present case the pile of timber was in the highway, and this fact must be kept in mind at all times in determining the effect of the principles laid down.

Judgment affirmed.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Clarence W. ROWLEY, Assignee, etc., of Berkman Brothers,

v.

Michael F. D'ARCY.

Michael F. D'ARCY

v.

Clarence W. ROWLEY, Assignee, etc., of Berkman Brothers,

(184 Mass. 550.)

1. A sale will be treated as made by auction where, at the time duly appointed and announced, property to which the vendor has a good title is put up and offered for sale, bids are made, and it is sold to the highest bidder, although some of the conditions which attended the sale may be unusual.

2. An auction sale by the assignee of property of an insolvent debtor is not rendered void by a combination between creditors of the estate to enhance the price by fictitious bids, which is not known to, or participated in by, the assignee.

(January 7, 1904.)

EXCEPTIONS by the purchaser at an assignee's sale to rulings of the Supreme Court for Suffolk County made during a trial of actions brought to enforce payment of the purchase price, and to rescind the sale, which resulted in a judgment requiring compliance with the contract. Overruled.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frank N. Nay and Leon M. Abbott, for the purchaser:

This sale was in all essential respects an auction sale, and subject to the rules of law governing auction sales.

Bateman, Auctions, 1st Am. ed. p. 1; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 488.

Bybidding and puffing are a fraud in the eye of the law.

Curtis v. Aspinwall, 114 Mass. 187, 19 Am. Rep. 332; Benjamin, Sales, Bennett's ed. 1899, pp. 484, 485.

It is unnecessary, as matter of law, that Rowley should have been implicated in the scheme of the conspiring creditors to enable the defendant to avoid the sale. There was evidence, introduced or tendered, sufficient to submit to the jury, that Rowley was implicated in this scheme.

Where the disposition of a party in a case must be shown, evidence relating to other acts than the one relied on in the case on trial, which tends to establish the disposition, is admissible.

Com. v. Durfee, 100 Mass. 147; Com. v. Bean, 137 Mass. 570; Com. v. Damon, 136 Mass. 448; Com. v. Jackson, 132 Mass. 19, 44 Am. Rep. 299, note; Com. v. Bradford, 126 Mass. 45; Jordan v. Osgood, 109 Mass. 461, 12 Am. Rep. 731; Fowle v. Child, 164 Mass. 210, 49 Am. St. Rep. 451, 41 N. E. 291; Haskins v. Warren, 115 Mass. 514; Lynde v. McGregor, 13 Allen, 172.

Fraud practised by a cestui que trust will void a sale honestly made by the trustee.

1 Bigelow, Fr. ed. 1888, pp. 253, 254; Cheshire v. Booe, 16 N. C. (1 Dev. Eq.) 22; Fisher v. Hersey, 17 Hun, 370; National Bank v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 159; Smith v. Harrison, 26 L. J. Ch. N. S. 412; Tyler v. Ulmer, 12 Mass. 163; Bayley v. Bryant, 24 Pick. 198.

Messrs. George R. Swasey, Clarence W. Rowley, and John S. Slater, for the assignee:

The sale was not a public auction.

Bateman, Auctions, 1st Am. ed. 1; Rea v. Taylor, M'Clel. 362, 13 Price, 636; Tyree v. Williams, 3 Bibb, 368, 6 Am. Dec. 663.

In the case at bar everybody understood that the offers, while binding upon those making them, were not binding upon the assignee. He had the right to reject any and all offers. There was no fraud. At most the evidence tended to show nothing more than merely suspicious circumstances, consistent with the plaintiff's good faith, and not sufficient to taint the transaction.

International Trust Co. v. Wilson, 161 Mass. 80, 36 N. E. 589.

Fraud is not to be presumed.

Root v. Bancroft, 8 Gray, 619; Hillyer v. Dickinson, 154 Mass. 502, 28 N. E. 905; Lilienthal v. Suffolk Brewing Co. 154 Mass. 185, 12 L. R. A. 821, 26 Am. St. Rep. 234, 28 N. E. 161.

If a contract is sought to be set aside on the ground of fraud, the burden of proof is upon the party alleging the fraud.

Story, Contr. 5th ed. § 625; Beatty v.

NOTE.—For a case in this series similar to the one above, holding that it is not contrary to public policy for persons entitled to the proceeds of an auction sale to engage a third person to run up the property to a specified price, see McMillan v. Harris, 48 L. R. A. 845, 64 L. R. A.

Fishel, 100 Mass. 448; Stewart v. Thomas, 15 Gray, 171; Baldwin v. Parker, 99 Mass. 79, 96 Am. Dec. 697; Howe v. Howe, 99 Mass. 88; Shapira v. D'Arcy, 180 Mass. 377, 62 N. E. 412.

Mere fraud of a third party which induced the purchase of goods will not give the purchaser a right to rescind the contract. If the seller is not a party to the fraud, the contract must stand.

Nash v. Minnesota Title Ins. & T. Co. 163 Mass. 574, 28 L. R. A. 753, 47 Am. St. Rep. 489, 40 N. E. 1039; Fairbanks v. Snow, 145 Mass. 153, 1 Am. St. Rep. 446, 13 N. E. 596; Root v. Bancroft, 8 Gray, 619; Martin v. Campbell, 120 Mass. 126; White v. Graves, 107 Mass. 325, 9 Am. Rep. 38; Ft. Dearborn Nat. Bank v. Carter, R. & Co. 152 Mass. 34, 25 N. E. 27.

The assignee was the vendor. He alone had authority to sell.

Pub. Stat. chap. 157, § 51; Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 36 L. ed. 732, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 887; Hunting v. Downer, 151 Mass. 276, 23 N. E. 832; McMillan v. Harris, 110 Ga. 72, 48 L. R. A. 345, 78 Am. St. Rep. 93, 35 S. E. 334.

Knowledge of facts by a creditor of an insolvent estate is not notice to the assignee.

Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 234; 1 Lewin, Tr. Flint's Notes, *234; Smith v. Hurd, 12 Met. 371, 46 Am. Dec. 690.

If an auction sale is advertised or stated to be without reserve, the secret employment by the seller of puffers or bybidders renders the sale voidable by the buyer.

3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 504, 505; Curtis v. Aspinwall, 114 Mass. 187, 19 Am. Rep. 332; Phippen v. Stickney, 3 Met. 384; Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195; Voase v. Williams, 8 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 1018; Thornett v. Haines, 15 Mees. & W. 367.

The law forbidding bybidding and puffing is limited to unreserved auction sales.

Curtis v. Aspinwall, 114 Mass. 187.

The case at bar is clearly distinguishable from the class of cases which seem to hold that auction sales may be avoided on account of puffing on the part of persons having an interest in the proceeds of the sale.

Smith v. Harrison, 26 L. J. Ch. N. S. pt. 1, p. 412; Fisher v. Hersey, 17 Hun, 370; National Bank v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 159.

In this case there was not the same relation of principal and agent; nor could the creditors have prevented any of the bidders from incurring liability if the plaintiff Rowley chose to accept the bid.

National Bank v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 159; East v. Wood, 62 Ala. 313; Brown v. Wentworth, 181 Mass. 49, 62 N. E. 984; Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 36 L. ed. 732, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 887; McMil- lan v. Harris, 110 Ga. 72, 48 L. R. A. 345, 78 Am. St. Rep. 93, 35 S. E. 334.

No matter what interest a person may have in the proceeds of the sale, or in the property which is going to be sold at public outcry, either at private auction or judicial sale, his right to become a bidder at the sale is well recognized.

Freeman v. Cooper, 14 Ga. 238; White v. Crew, 16 Ga. 416; Buckner v. Chambliss, 30 Ga. 652; Kilgo v. Castleberry, 38 Ga. 512, 95 Am. Dec. 406; Kearney v. Taylor, 15 How. 494, 14 L. ed. 787; Richards v. Holmes, 18 How. 143, 15 L. ed. 304; Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 349, 36 L. ed. 732, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 887; Blossom v. Milwaukee & C. R. Co. 3 Wall. 196, 18 L. ed. 43; Smith v. Black, 115 U. S. 308, 29 L. ed. 398, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Allen v. Gillette, 127 U. S. 589, 32 L. ed. 271, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1331; Phippen v. Stickney, 3 Met. 384; Pennsylvania Transp. Co.'s Appeal, 101 Pa. 576; Thames v. Miller, 2 Woods, 564, Fed. Cas. No. 13,860; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 328; East v. Wood, 62 Ala. 313; Williams v. Bradley, 7 Heisk. 54; Bateman, Auctions, 120, 131, 133, 136.

Braley, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The principal question in these cases is whether the defendant D'Arcy can be held to pay any further sum under a written contract of sale made between the parties, or is entitled to recover back what he has already paid, on the ground that he bought the property at auction, at which, unknown to him, fictitious bids were made to raise the price, and in consequence of which he was deceived and defrauded. As a verdict was ordered for the assignee, the evidence is to be considered in the light most favorable to this contention. It was understood by the parties to these suits that there was to be a final sale of the rights of the debtors in the property described in the contract, to be held at the office of the assignee, and at the time appointed they and other creditors of the debtors attended. The property was offered for sale by the assignee, and bids were called for, and made by different persons. And it appears that, in response to this call by the assignee, some of the creditors would bid; then the bidding would cease for a time, and they would leave the room, apparently for consultation between themselves, after which they returned, and bidding would be resumed. All the proceedings appear to have been conducted with great deliberation, and a period of four hours elapsed between the time when the property was put up and when it was sold. The conduct of the bidders and the manner of bidding do not seem to have aroused at the time any suspicion in the mind of the defendant D'Arcy that the sale was not being fairly conducted; and it is to be noted, in this connection, that during all this period his counsel was present to assist and advise him, so far as advice might be deemed necessary. Finally the successful bid or offer was made by the buyer and accepted by the assignee in writing, and this was followed by, and formed the basis of, the contract in suit. While some of the conditions that attended the sale are unusual, yet the characteristic features of a sale by auction are found. At a time duly appointed and announced, property to which the vendor had a good title is openly put up and offered for sale, bids are made, and it is sold to the highest bidder. Such a sale must be considered and treated as having been made by auction.

It was clearly the purpose of the assignee and of the creditors present, and who made bids, to realize for the property the highest obtainable price; and in good faith, by proper means, they might lawfully carry out this purpose, in order to prevent a sacrifice of the estate of the insolvent debtors. Phippen v. Stickney, 3 Met. 384, 388, 389. But a combination by them to enhance the price to be obtained by fictitious bids at a sale to be made without reserve to the highest bidder would be a fraud practised upon those who bid without knowledge of the arrangement, and give to the buyer a right to avoid the sale. Curtis v. Aspinwall, 114 Mass. 187, 19 Am. Rep. 332. From the testimony of one of the witnesses, it might be inferred that some of the bids made by the creditors, and before the final bid of the defendant D'Arcy, to whom the property was struck off, were of this character; and in his answer in the first case, which must be taken to state the position taken by him at the trial, he relies upon this bybidding to avoid the sale. But he does not aver that these puffers were employed by the assignee, or acting in his behalf, or that their conduct was known to him. He alleges that they were employed by the creditors of the estate in whose behalf the property was put up and offered for sale. His offer of proof of evidence, which was excluded at the trial, does not aid him, for, if the evidence offered had been admissible under the pleadings, and is taken most strongly against the assignee, while he might, if the offer were true, be found guilty of grave misconduct in his office, there is no statement from which it can be specifically inferred that bybidders were to be employed by him, or with his knowledge or consent allowed to bid at the auction. If the scheme outlined was to be put through, bybidding 64 L. R. A.

would have been fatal to its success, as it was not desired to enhance the price of the property to be sold, but the purpose was to enable the defendant D'Arcy to get it as cheaply as possible, provided he made certain payments to the assignee. As assignee, the plaintiff Rowley held by a good title the property of the debtors, to be properly administered, and applied in their behalf to the payment of their debts, and also represented the rights of the creditors that all the property of the debtors should be ascertained, turned into money, honestly accounted for, and paid over to them to the extent of the indebtedness proved, less the proper expenses of administration and distribution; and, in all suits and proceedings in which the estate was involved, it was his duty to appear, represent, and act for them. Upon the assignment being made to him of the property of the insolvent debtors, he was vested with an absolute title to their estate, which he could sell either by public auction, or at private sale, so as to convey a good title to the purchaser. Pub. Stat. 1882, chap. 157, §§ 46-50; Tuite v. Stevens, 98 Mass. 305; Crowley v. Hyde, 116 Mass. 589. The control of the sale was wholly in his power and under his direction, and no other person, on the evidence, could legally release any bidder from the obligation incurred by his bid. And the creditors who made the fictitious bids could not, as between themselves, provide immunity from any risk of being held personally liable for their several offers. For anything that appears in the case, each bidder could have been held by the assignee to have taken and paid for the property, if it had been struck off to him. All of the evidence is recited in the exceptions, and fails to show any misrepresentations by the assignee, or that he knew of and participated in the conduct and purpose of the creditors at any time before the final bid was made and accepted, and the written contract executed and delivered. The essential element of fraud which must be shown on the part of the vendor, or of the person who absolutely controls and directs a sale by auction in order to avoid it, is absent. And as the assignee is not shown to have either procured or assented to the fictitious bids, the sale is not voidable on the part of the buyer, and must stand. Peck v. List, 23 W. Va. 388, 48 Am. Rep. 398; National Bank v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 159-165; McMillan v. Harris, 110 Ga. 72, 48 L. R. A. 345, 78 Am. St. Rep. 93, 35 S. E. 334; Towle v. Leavitt, 23 N. H. 360, 55 Am. Dec. 195; Rigg v. Schweitzer, 170 Pa. 549, 33 Atl. 116; East v. Wood, 62 Ala. 313; Veazie v. Williams, 8 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 1018.

Exceptions overruled.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

James GILBRAITH et al., Appts.,
v.

STEWART TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Claimant of the C. F. Bielman.

(57 C. C. A. 602, 121 Fed. 540.)

No compensation can be allowed the crew as special salvors for throwing overboard a cargo of coal from a stranded vessel which has not been abandoned, although the service rendered is hazardous and perilous and results in floating the vessel so that it is brought safely into port.

(October 7, 1902.)

NOTE.—Rights of seamen as salvors.

I. Introductory, 193.

II. General salvors.

a. The general rule, 193.

b. Exceptions to the general rule.

1. Extraordinary services, 193.
2. Discharge of seamen, 196.
3. Abandonment by master, 196.
4. Recapture, 199.

III. Compensation in the nature of salvage, 200.

I. Introductory.

The term "seamen," in the title of this note, is used in the broader sense, including the master or other officers of the ship as well as the members of the crew.

II. General salvors.

a. The general rule.

It is unquestionably admitted and understood that, under ordinary circumstances, seamen may not become general salvors of their own vessel.

This rule obviously arises out of the great desirability of avoiding any tendency to separate the seamen's interest from that of his ship, and is based upon the theory that, by his contract of service, he engages, for the wages stipulated, to render any services necessary in the ship's behalf.

A literal compliance with this rule, however, under all circumstances, is not deemed desirable by the courts, whose policy is to encourage attempts for the preservation of life or property upon the water, and, therefore, a number of exceptions have grown up, upon the theory that seamen may receive salvage for acts not within their contract of service, or performed after its dissolution.

b. Exceptions to the general rule.

1. Extraordinary services.

The exception sought, in numerous cases, to be established, that seamen may have salvage for extraordinary services beyond their duty under the contract of service, is admitted, arguendo, in several instances.

Thus, it is said, obiter, in Browning v. Baker, 2 Hughes, 30, Fed. Cas. No. 2,041, that salvors may be persons having some relation to the APPEAL by libellants from a decree of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Wisconsin dismissing a libel for salvage service. Affirmed.

Statement by Grosscup, Circuit Judge:

The steamer C. F. Bielman on a voyage from Buffalo to Milwaukee, carrying a cargo of 3,000 tons of soft coal, struck and lodged September 17th, 1900, on Fisherman's shoals, 2½ miles from shore, and 15 miles from Milwaukee, the nearest port.

The crew—sixteen in number—including appellants, were under articles as hired seamen, to make the round trip from Buffalo ship, as passengers and the crew, in extraordinary circumstances.

And the faint possibility of seamen under most unusual circumstances becoming salvors is recognized by Lord Stowell, in the much quoted and cited decision, The Neptune, 1 Hagg. Adm. 227, in the following language: "I will not say that in the infinite range of possible events that may happen in the intercourse of men circumstances might not present themselves that might induce the court to open itself to their claim of a persona standi in judicio. But they must be very extraordinary circumstances indeed; for the general rule is very strong and inflexible that they are not permitted to assume that character."

So, while conceding that there may be cases in which seamen may become salvors of their own vessel the court says, in The Massasoit, 1 Sprague, 97, Fed. Cas. No. 9,260, that it may be so only in very extraordinary cases, where the services rendered are without the range of their contract, and therefore voluntary.

Arguendo, the court says in Hobart v. Drogan, 10 Pet. 108, 9 L. ed. 368, that seamen, in the ordinary course of things, in the performance of their duties, are not allowed to become salvors, whatever may have been the perils or hardships or gallantry of their services in saving the ship and cargo; but that extraordinary events may occur in which their connection with the ship may be dissolved de facto or by operation of law, or they may exceed their proper duty, in which case they may be permitted to claim as salvors.

While the exception is thus admitted by dicta or arguendo, no decisions have been found in reliance upon it, although the probability that such decisions exist is intimated in one or two instances. It may be, however, that these cases refer to decisions allowing compensation in the nature of salvage for especially meritorious services. (Infra, III.)

Thus, it is said, arguendo, in The Wave v. Hyer, 2 Paine, 131, Fed. Cas. No. 17,300, that in general seamen, pilots, and passengers cannot sustain a claim for salvage for the ordinary assistance they may have afforded a vessel in distress, it being no more than their duty but for extraordinary exertions beyond their duty such a claim has been sometimes, although very rarely, allowed, accompanied always, however, by remarks showing the extreme caution with which such a claim is admitted.

to Milwaukee, and return to some Lake Erie port, at the wage of $25 per month and board.

The steamer struck at about 11:30 P. M. September 17th. Notice having been sent to the underwriters at Milwaukee, the crew, under the direction of the captain, about 10 o'clock in the forenoon, September 18th, began to shovel the coal overboard. This however, was stopped at 6 o'clock in the evening of that day, when a schooner in tow of a tug, with forty longshoremen aboard, arrived to relieve the steamer of its cargo. About 1 o'clock on the morning of the 19th, the schooner having taken on board about 1,000 tons of coal of the steamer's cargo, left for Milwaukee, and after 8 o'clock of the same day, the crew and longshoremen continued to shovel coal from the steamer into the lake.

About 12 o'clock the longshoremen, in company with the captain, went ashore, the crew remaining on the steamer shoveling coal, until 8 o'clock in the evening, when they were taken ashore by a United States Life Saving boat which had been lying off for that purpose.

On the 20th, the weather cleared. The crew returned to the steamer and continued to throw coal overboard until noon of the 23d, when the steamer, thus lightered, floated off, and was brought into the port of Milwaukee. There is no question that during the period of the ship's peril, just described, the crew worked with unremitting industry, and that the relief of the vessel was due

And the court says, obiter, in Drew v. Pope, 2 Sawy. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 4,080, that it is evident that cases where seamen may claim salvage from their own ship are rare and exceptional, and only where they, by some extraordinary exertions or signal display of gallantry and energy, may justly be deemed to have performed services beyond those to which their contract and duty bound them, and which therefore entitled them to an additional recompense.

It appears from the statement of the facts in The Centurion, 1 Ware, 477, Fed. Cas. No. 2,554, that such of the crew, including the pilot of the wrecked vessel, as aided in the salvage, were included in the distribution thereof. Their right to do so, however, is not a question in the case; but the court says, arguendo, that pilots, or the crew of the vessel lost, are ordinarily excluded from claiming as salvors, being allowed to do so only in peculiar cases, as those of extraordinary peril or gallantry, or when their exertions pass beyond the limits of the duty properly required by law.

The difficulty arises in determining where the line of the seaman's duty under his contract ends; and there is considerable authority for the doctrine that whatever is necessary to be done for the ship's safety, within the power of the seaman, is within his duty under his contract, and that for such acts, however gallant, he has no claim for general salvage.

Thus, while not denying that it might be possible for a seaman to render a service to his ship exceeding the duty which he owes by his contract, and thereby become a salvor, the court, in The John Perkins, 21 Law Rep. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 7,380, said that no such case had ever been presented to a court in England or this country, and then declared that it was not easy to see how such a case could arise while the seaman's contract continues in force, because while he might, no doubt, sometimes judge for himself whether he will or will not do an act of great peril to save life or property, nevertheless, if he does it to guard his vessel from destruction, however great it may be, he must be deemed to be acting under his contract, and in the gallant discharge of his duty, and not as a salvor.

And so it is said in Curtis, Merchant Seamen, 290, that when mariners may be said to have exceeded their proper duty, the legal relation, being still undissolved, is certainly not capable of 64 L. R. A.

of definition apart from circumstances; and that there is much intrinsic difficulty in the question.

In Maier v. The Acorn, 3 Ware, 87, Fed. Cas. No. 10,252, seamen were allowed salvage for services performed for the benefit of their ship under the following circumstances: The vessel becoming so surrounded by ice as to endanger its safety, the master and crew, with the exception of two seamen, went on shore. These seamen, later in the day, succeeded in averting a collision with another ship, rendered imminent by the drifting of the latter toward their boat upon the breaking up of the ice. Afterward they, too, went on shore and spent the night, but in the morning, seeing that the vessel was still intact, they again went on board at the request of the master, who was injured, and remained in care of the ship for several days until the return of the master and crew. It was held that the services performed by the seamen came within the exception to the general rule that a crew cannot entitle themselves to salvage against their own vessel; that where a seaman in a time of great peril and difficulty, in a spirit of daring gallantry, performs services above what could be fairly required from the strict and proper obligation of his contract, though that may be still in force, he may be awarded salvage. The court admitted that this exception stands almost entirely on the authority of dicta occasionally thrown out by courts, and admitted that it was unable to quote any express and well-considered decision as an authority. Upon appeal, however, reported in The Acorn, 21 Law Rep. 99, Fed. Cas. No. 30, the decree of the lower court was reversed, on the ground that, while the seamen remained on their ship, they were not absolved from their contract, but were bound to do all that they alleged was done for its safety.

Some of the objections to seamen becoming salvors of their own vessel are stated in the following language in The Massasoit, 1 Sprague, 97, Fed. Cas. No. 9,260: "Salvors are mere volunteers, and very liberal compensation is awarded to them in order to invite their exertions and secure their fidelity in the laborious and oftentimes perilous service of rescuing and preserving wrecked property. Shall, then, seamen be absolved from the obligations of their contract, and from all duty of obedience to their officers, at the moment when their services may be most needed for the protection of the largely to the lightering thus accomplished. The claim urged below and here is, that they are special salvors. The district court dismissed the libel, and from that order the appeal was taken.

Argued before Jenkins, Grosscup, and Baker, Circuit Judges.

Mr. Francis Bloodgood, with Mr. W. P. Bloodgood, for appellants:

The services were supererogatory, and of so extraordinary and meritorious a character as to bring this case within the exception to the general rule, that a crew cannot be salvors of their own vessel.

Seamen cannot participate in general salvage as to their own vessel while their contract of shipment is in force, but may in special, under the requisite conditions.

Hobart v. Drogan, 10 Pet. 108, 122, 9 L. ed. 363, 368; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 94 et seq.; 2 Parsons, Shipping, pp. 264, 265; The Mary Hale, Fed. Cas. No. 9,213; Reed v. Hussey, Blatchf. & H. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 11,646; The Antelope, 1 Low. Dec. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 484; Gray v. Murray, 3 Johns. Ch. 184; The Two Catherine, 2 Mason, 319, Fed. Cas. No. 14,288; Taylor v. The Cato, 1 Pet. Adm. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 13,786; Giles v. The Cynthia, 1 Pet. Adm. 203, Fed. Cas. No. 5,424; Weeks v. The Catharine Maria, 2 Pet. Adm. 424, Fed. Cas. No. 17,351; Cartwell v. The John Taylor, Newberry Adm. 341, Fed. Cas. No. 2,482; The Wave, Blatchf. & H. 235, Fed. Cas. No.

property of the owners? Shall they be at liberty, at such a time, to devote themselves at once of their allegiance to the ship and of the character of covenanted seamen, and assume, at their option, the character of salvors, claiming its large rewards, and subject to no control? This would not only be inconsistent with the contract of hiring, but a startling violation of that principle of maritime policy which sedulously endeavors to bind up the interest of the mariner with that of the owner. It would be, not only an inducement to relax his efforts in time of difficulty and danger, but a direct temptation to cause shipwreck and disaster, that he might successfully claim the large rewards of salvage service."

The principle is regarded as well settled in Worth v. Mumford, 1 Hilt., at page 24, that a seaman cannot claim as salvor for any services rendered to preserve his ship.

It was admitted, arguendo, in Newman v. Walters, 8 Bos. & P. 612, 7 Revised Rep. 886, where a passenger was held entitled to salvage, that, if the mate, under the same circumstances, had saved the ship, he would not have been entitled to claim salvage.

So, it is said, arguendo, in The Clara, 23 Wall. 15, 23 L. ed. 150, that seamen belonging to the ship in peril cannot, as a general rule, claim a salvage compensation, not only because it is their duty to save both ship and cargo, if it is in their power, but because it would be unwise to tempt them to let the ship and cargo go into the position of danger in order that by extreme exertion they might claim salvage compensation.

In holding that a seaman may receive salvage for services rendered another boat, although that boat belonged to the same owner, the court says that the true principle is whether the services rendered were services which under his contract a seaman was bound to perform and for which he was to be remunerated by wages; and the general rule was admitted that seamen cannot recover salvage for services connected with the saving of their own ship as long as the relation of master and servants between them and the owner, with reference to that ship, continues. The Sappho, 8 Moore P. C. C. N. S. 66, 40 L. J. Prob. N. S. 47, L. R. 3 C. P. 690, 24 L. T. N. S. 795.

And in holding that stevedores who were loading a ship had no claim for salvage in assisting in extinguishing a fire on board, the 64 L. R. A.

court says, in Kidney v. The Ocean Prince, 38 Fed. 259, that their relation to the ship was not essentially different from that of a sailor or passenger, which prompts them zealously to render all possible assistance under the force of a sense of duty inhering in a pre-existing covenant, rather than as voluntary adventurers.

The one well seaman on board a ship infected with yellow fever was held not entitled to salvage on account of the extra labor cast upon him by the sickness of the rest, on the ground that he did no more than he was bound by his contract to do under such circumstances. Coffin v. The Akbar, 5 Fed. 456.

In regard to the claim of the master and crew of a schooner to be paid a certain amount as salvage because of their refusal to leave their vessel and to go on board a salving steamship, as was desired, and in working on board the schooner while she was in tow of the steamer, it was held, in The D. W. Vaughan, 9 Ben. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 4,222, that the master and crew did no more than their duty, and could not claim salvage therefor.

A seaman who shipped "for the run" from Boston to New York at a stated sum was held to have no right to recover compensation for extra services rendered by him during a storm which delayed the vessel several weeks on the voyage. The court stated that no services were rendered by the seaman beyond what were required of him by his duty to the ship; that he was bound to the hazards of the voyage, and that detention through perils and disaster of the sea are risks assumed by seamen in every shipping contract; and that no legal right arises to them from those causes, or from their extra exertions to save the vessel, to demand an increased compensation. Miller v. Kelly, Abb. Adm. 564, Fed. Cas. No. 9,577.

Dr. Lushington, in The Vrede, Lush. Adm. Cas. 322, 30 L. J. Prob. N. S. 209, says, arguendo, that a master cannot be a salvor so long as he is performing his duties as master; nor can a mariner, until his contract is at an end.

A seaman claimed salvage for a boat in which he reached shore after the burning of the vessel upon which he served as second mate, but the court dismissed the libel, saying that, as the boat appears to have saved him quite as much as he saved the boat, that account was in equilibrium. Price v. Sears, 2 Low. Dec. 553, Fed. Cas. No. 11,416.

Even ship's surgeons or pilots, who render aid

17,297; The Dawn, 1 Ware, 485; Fed. Cas. No. 3,665, 2 Ware, 126, Fed. Cas. No. 3,666; The Nippon's Crew, Brun. Col. Cas. 577, Fed. Cas. No. 10,277; The Massasoit, 1 Sprague, 97, Fed. Cas. No. 9,260; The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Fed. Cas. No. 3,939.

Extraordinary supererogatory services are those for which admiralty gives the seaman his equitable lien on the property rescued, whether part of the ship or the cargo. His lien for wages under his contract has always been confined to the vessel or parts thereof.

The Dawn, 1 Ware, 485, Fed. Cas. No. 3,665, 2 Ware, 126, Fed. Cas. No. 3,666.

Mr. George O. Markham, with Mr. Tallmadge Hamilton, for appellee:

A voluntary or exacted offer, promise, or agreement of the captain or master of a vessel to the crew by way of extra or additional compensation beyond the agreed amount of stipulated wages, made for the performance of an imperative obligation arising after the commencement of a voyage and during the prosecution thereof, creates no valid obligation of, or lien on, the vessel.

The John Perkins, 21 Law Rep. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 7,360; The Shawnee, 45 Fed. 769; Miller v. Kelly, Abb. Adm. 564, Fed. Cas. No. 9,577; The Potomac, 19 C. C. A. 151, 38 U. S. App. 219, 72 Fed. 535; 2 Parsons, Shipping, pp. 42, 43, note 1.

There was not a total loss of the vessel or cargo, nor such a loss as to warrant an to the ship in time of need outside the special services for which they are employed, have been held not entitled to salvage as for extraordinary services performed.

Thus, it was contended in Mesmer v. Suffolk Bank, 1 Law Rep. 249, Fed. Cas. No. 9,498, that a second pilot on board a steamboat wrecked in collision, who afterwards assisted in saving property therefrom, was entitled to claim as a salvor on the ground that his services were extraordinary and foreign to the line of his duty, he not being bound to the exertions, labor, and hazard which are incumbent upon ordinary seamen; but the court refused to sustain the contention on the ground that the pilot of a steamboat, being one of the ship's company, stands on a different footing than a pilot who in ordinary navigation is engaged occasionally for particular service; and that in shipwreck or destruction, on account of his intimate relation to the ship, he is bound to like exertions for preservation of life and property as if belonging to the ship's company in common navigation. Engineers or other officers belonging to the steamboat were also considered within the same rules.

And a surgeon on board a ship which had been captured, but subsequently released under a ransom bill, was held not entitled to salvage for services rendered by him after the capture and release, on the homeward voyage, on the ground that, although employed exclusively as a surgeon, he was bound to do what he could for the ship in times of danger, and was entitled to no salvage for what was merely the faithful discharge of his duty. Phillips v. McCall, 4 Wash. C. C. 141, Fed. Cas. No. 11,104.

Decisions, showing that a special or qualified salvage or recompense, or compensation in the nature of salvage, is sometimes awarded to seamen for especially meritorious services in saving the ship or cargo, are not so rare, as will be seen by reference to III., infra. The distinction between general salvage and compensation in the nature of salvage, or special or qualified salvage, although somewhat vague, seems to be mainly the difference in the comparative amount awarded, and in the fact that the allowance of the latter is very much more largely in the discretion of the court, it seeming to be considered that a slight recognition of especially gallant services, made only when considered advisable by the court, will not operate as a temptation to seamen to put their ship in danger for the sake of the recompense gained for meritorious efforts in extricating her.

2. Discharge of seamen.

Written discharges given the seamen by the master upon the wreck of their vessel were held such a dissolution of their contract as would entitle them to a reward in the nature of salvage out of goods and fragments of the wreck subsequently saved by them, notwithstanding a suspicion in the court's mind of the bona fides of the master's act, it not appearing that the seamen were parties to the fraud, if any existed. The Warrior, Lush. Adm. Cas. 476, 6 L. T. N. S. 133.

3. Abandonment by master.

There is no doubt that an abandonment, by the master, of the crew and ship operates to dissolve the seamen's contracts of service, so that for services thereafter rendered in saving the ship and cargo they may claim salvage as volunteers.

Seamen, who were attached to a ship at the time of its wreck and abandonment, and were thereafter appointed by the master to guard the property during a severe winter on an uninhabited northern coast, were held entitled to salvage for their services in that regard, on the ground that their connection with the ship in the capacity of seamen was dissolved upon its abandonment by the master and crew. Coady v. 1,200 Barrels Oil, 2 Hawaiian Rep. 34.

Seamen of a wrecked vessel were held not entitled to any reward for their services in attempting to save the ship and property on board, before the master abandoned the voyage, any further than the property saved furnished means for a payment of their wages, since their utmost exertions were due to the ship in time of peril. The court conceded, however, that when the contract ceases to be binding on the seaman, he may then become a salvor, although the voyage has not been completed. Burrmeister v. The Speedwell, 2 Hawaiian Rep. 420.

It is said, arguendo, in The Barney Eaton, 1 Bliss 242, Fed. Cas. No. 1,028, that part of a crew, who remained on board after abandonment by the master and the rest of the crew, and under such circumstances that the abandonment was justifiable, are entitled to salvage abandonment of the same to the underwriters.

Monroe v. British & F. Marine Ins. Co. 3 C. C. A. 280, 5 U. S. App. 179, 52 Fed. 777; Wallace v. Thames & M. Ins. Co. 22 Fed. 66; Bradlee v. Maryland Ins. Co. 12 Pet. 378, 397, 9 L. ed. 1123, 1131; Orient Mut. Ins. Co. v. Adams, 123 U. S. 67-76, 31 L. ed. 63-67, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 5, 22, 26.

A crew of a vessel can become salvors only after the vessel has become in fact a shipwreck in toto, without hope of recovery, and has been conclusively abandoned by all, and the crew unmistakably discharged from further service of the vessel.

Robert v. Drogun, 10 Pet. 108, 121, 9 L. ed. 363, 368; The Holder Borden, 1 Sprague, 144, Fed. Cas. No. 6,600; The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Fed. Cas. No. 3,939; The John Perkins, 21 Law Rep. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 7,360; The Potomac, 19 C. C. A. 151, 38 U. S. App. 219, 72 Fed. 535; The C. P. Minch, 61 Fed. 511, Affirmed in 20 C. C. A. 70, 38 U. S. App. 536, 73 Fed. 859.

Grosscup, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

The crew of a vessel, under articles for wages, can become general salvors only after the vessel has become a shipwreck, without hope of recovery, and the crew discharged from further service. This general doctrine is not disputed. But it is insisted that, under certain circumstances, the crew, though under articles for wages, may be compensation if they performed valuable services; that while a contract of a sailor excludes salvage compensation, it may, nevertheless, be allowed in extreme cases.

One case, The Robert & Anne, 1 Stuart Adm. Rep. 258, appears to disregard the doctrine that abandonment of the ship by the master dissolves the seamen's contracts, for the chief mate and part of the crew, who remained on board after the abandonment of the ship by the master and remainder of the crew under the belief that she was a total wreck, were denied salvage for their services in getting her off with no very great damage and proceeding with her to her destination, on the ground that their connection with the vessel was not dissolved de facto or by operation of law, and therefore they did not exceed the duty which devolved upon them under their articles to labor in the preservation of the vessel and cargo. The court says: "The seamen did their duty, and stuck to the ship, and got her off the rocks, and brought her to port; and their wages justly continued until the voyage ended. But there was nothing extraordinary in the case, and of so perilous a nature as to entitle them to compensation beyond their contract. If the ship had not been recovered, but had perished on the rocks where she was stranded, notwithstanding all the faithful and strenuous efforts of the crew, and there had been property saved, then the crew might possibly have had an equitable claim, which would have been felt by a court of admiralty, for compensation out of the property saved, for their particular services."

Considerable difficulty is encountered by the courts in determining whether the facts before them constitute an abandonment.

The elements indispensable in an abandonment, in order to so dissolve the seaman's duty toward the ship that he may become a salvor of it, were stated by Dr. Lushington, in The Florence, 16 Jur. 572, 20 Eng. L. & Eq. 607, to be, first, that the abandonment must take place at sea, and not upon a coast, for, if the ship becomes a wreck upon a coast, and the mariners escape to the shore, the contract endures to the extent, at least, that, if they successfully act as salvors, so as to save enough to pay their wages, they will be entitled to them, though not to salvage, and, if they do not so exert themselves, their wages are lost; second, the abandonment must be sine spe revertendi, as a temporary abandonment such as occurs in 64 L. R. A.

collisions from immediate fear, before the state of the ship is known, will not vacate the contract; third, the abandonment must be bona fide, for the purpose of saving life; fourth, it must be by order of the master. In this case the crew, who, having abandoned their ship by order of the master, again met it while being conveyed to England upon another boat, and, voluntarily going aboard, succeeded, with the assistance of other boats, in bringing the abandoned vessel into a port, were held entitled to salvage therefor, on the ground that the circumstances of the abandonment were such as to dissolve their contract of service with the vessel.

So, where the crew of an endangered vessel, together with some of the cargo, were taken on board another ship, and, several days after, upon again meeting with their abandoned vessel, they assisted the crew of the other ship in saving more of the cargo, they were allowed one-half share each of salvage in addition to wages until their arrival in port. Taylor v. The Cato, 1 Pet. Adm. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 13,786.

Where the master and crew, with the exception of the mate and two men, abandoned the ship when it struck upon rocks, without hope that it could by any possibility be saved, and the master urged those remaining to come with him, but they refused, being determined to stay by the ship and "see the last of her," it was held, in The Umattilla, 29 Fed. 252, that the facts showed a discharge by the master of all claim under the seamen's contracts for their further services, and, therefore, that they might claim salvage for great exertions and gallantry subsequently displayed, whereby they succeeded in getting the vessel into port. In the language of the court, it is said that, "where the master and the rest of the crew have quit- ted the ship, renouncing all hope of saving her, and some have remained, in spite of his ex- postulations and almost his commands, to con- front dangers which he declined to encounter, and by so doing have saved the ship, justice, as well as the true interests of owners and in- surers, demand that the courts should recog- nize as a legal right the seamen's claim to a liberal compensation for his supererogatory services."

A seaman's contract of service was held dis- solved, so that he might be entitled to salvage, where, after a collision, the master and all of the crew with the exception of himself got on come special salvors. Such relation arises, it is said, when the service rendered is arduous, perilous, and meritorious, and under circumstances extraordinary in character. The argument is based for authority chiefly upon a dictum of Justice Story, in Hobart v. Drogan, 10 Pet. 122, 9 L. ed. 368.

None of the cases actually decided exemplify the application of any such rule. It is needless to restate their facts in detail. In none of them was there given to the claimants more than their transportation from the place of accident to their homes, and their sustenance, or such sums as would equal their sustenance, during that interval.

board the colliding vessel which refused to delay longer in order to save him, whereupon he used his utmost exertions for the preservation of the vessel until he finally received help from shore. The Triumph, 1 Sprague, 428, Fed. Cas. No. 14,183.

The departure of the master and crew, except the mate, from their vessel after a collision, was held such an abandonment as to dissolve the contracts of the seamen, and to entitle the mate, who voluntarily remained on board, to salvage for meritorious services rendered, which resulted in the vessel's preservation. Le Jonet, L. B. 3 Adm. & Ecc. 556, 41 L. J. Prob. N. S. 95, 27 L. T. N. S. 387, 21 Week. Rep. 83, 3 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 438.

So, in Mason v. The Blaireau, Fed. Cas. No. 9,230, affirmed in 2 Cranch, 240, 2 L. ed. 266, the ship being in imminent danger of sinking, the captain and crew went on board another ship leaving one man, who, being prevented by force from getting into the first boat, afterwards refused to go in the second boat, being determined to remain on board The Blaireau, where, after doing what he could, he hoisted a signal of distress, and was found the next day by another ship which brought the damaged vessel into port. It was contended that the contract which the seaman had entered into bound him to continue his endeavors to bring the vessel into port, and that principles of general policy forbade the allowance of salvage to a mariner belonging to a ship which has been preserved; but the court held that the departure of the captain and crew from the ship discharged the remaining seaman from all further duty under his contract as far as any act whatever could discharge him, and salvage equal in amount to what was awarded the seamen of the salving vessel was granted him.

Where all hope of saving the ship, or of continuing the voyage, had been abandoned, and most of the sailors had been rescued and taken to land, it was held that those who remained should be treated, not as seamen remaining on wages, but the same as any other persons would be; and, therefore, that they might be allowed compensation as salvors for their efforts in saving a valuable part of the cargo. The Aguan, 48 Fed. 320.

But the ship's master, who superintended the saving of part of the cargo after the abandonment of the ship without hope of saving her, was held not entitled to salvage for his services, on the ground that he is the agent of the cargo as well as of the ship; and, therefore, that it is his duty to provide for the safety of the cargo so far as preservation is possible. Ibid. 64 L. R. A.

But even this, meagre as it appears, is said by counsel to be a species of special salvage, and to illustrate the principle, if not the measure, of compensation that ought to be applied to the case under consideration. The argument has not won our concurrence. We do not doubt that, under the law, pre-existing the recent legislation of Congress, freight was regarded as the mother of wages, and, upon the loss of freight, wages ceased. But though in that state of maritime law, transportation home, and sustenance during that interval, were not, in strict logic, the payment of wages, they need not, by that fact alone, be attributed to the

The pilot of a vessel greatly injured by fire was held entitled to salvage for important services rendered by him after the delivery of the ship by the captain into the hands of the master and crew of another steamboat that they might do whatever was expedient to assist her. It was held that the pilot's original contract with the boat upon which he was employed was virtually dissolved by its surrender into the possession of the salving ship. Montgomery v. The T. P. Leathers, Newberry Adm. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 9,736.

Where, upon the departure of the captain, after the wreck of his ship, to secure aid on a distant island, he liquidated the seamen's past wages, and promised them remuneration by way of salvage for all property saved after he left the wreck, to which the seamen acquiesced, it was held that their connection with the ship was dissolved, and that they might claim as salvors of the property saved, which was small in amount. Connor v. The Virginia, 2 Hawaiian Rep. 171.

But the seamen may have no salvage where it does not appear, unquestionably, that the departure of the master from the ship was without hope of recovery or return.

Thus, where the captain and crew of an endangered ship went on board a salving ship in compliance with a demand of the captain that they should do so or he would not give them his assistance, which was absolutely necessary to them, it was held, in The D. M. Hall v. The John Laud, Fed. Cas. No. 3,989, Hoff. Op. 96, that there was not such an abandonment of the ship by the master and crew without hope of recovery or of returning to her as would vacate the contract of service on the part of the seamen, so that they might be allowed salvage for services thereafter rendered in behalf of their endangered vessel. The court remarks that, if the rule of law which does not allow seamen to become salvors in the ordinary course of things, and while in the performance of their duty, whatever may have been the perils or hardships or gallantry of their service in saving the ship and cargo, has any solid foundation in true policy, the same principle demands that they should not be permitted to assume that character on the ground that their contract has been vacated, except in extraordinary cases, where their relation to the vessel has been finally and unequivocally dissolved, and where the master has permanently renounced all hope of recovering or returning to her.

And the departure of the master and crew at night from their vessel, wrecked on a rocky beach, leaving two men on the beach to keep enforcement of any doctrine recognizing special salvage. The feeling underlying these early decrees was the dictate of humanity that shrinks from leaving a shipwrecked sailor on a distant shore, and, in cases of such catastrophe, added to the obligation of the master to pay wages, the further obligation to bring his crew home. To reach such a result there existed no need to build up a doctrine of special salvage, or in other ways than the one object to be attained, break into the settled law of ship and crew.

But though the argument be accepted, the element upon which it is based is wanting in the case under consideration. There was no abandonment of the steamer Bielman. The seamen lost nothing by the loss of freight; for, under existing law, the running of their contract for wages continued. The service rendered, in lightering the vessel, was different in degree only from the usual service in boisterous weather. What appellants did plainly was within their duty as seamen, and was therefore paid for by the wages stipulated in the articles of employment.

The decree of the District Court is affirmed.

watch, was regarded as not such an abandonment sine spe recuperandi as dissolved the seamen's contracts, so that they might recover salvage for further services thereafter rendered in saving goods and materials from the ship. The Warrior, Lush. Adm. Cas. 476, 6 L. T. N. 8. 133.

So, where one of the crew of a fishing schooner remained on board because he considered it safer than to attempt to reach shore, and the rest of the crew went on shore intending and expecting to return when the gale should have abated, it was held, in The John Perkins, 21 Law Rep. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 7,860, that there was no dissolving of the contract relations of the crew which would absolve the one remaining on board from his duty as a seaman, and, therefore, that he could not claim salvage for anything which he might find necessary to do for the safety of the vessel.

And the departure of the captain and three men from a schooner which had been swung around by the wind so that it was pounding on a bar of sand and gravel was regarded by the court, in The C. P. Minch, 61 Fed. 511, as not such an abandonment of the ship as released the remaining members of the crew from their obligations under their contracts; and, therefore, they were refused compensation in the nature of salvage for skillful, rather than perilous, services, which resulted in extricating the vessel from its hazardous situation. The court stated that, even upon the assumption that the master did abandon the ship either because he was panic stricken or deliberately intended to wreck her, such conduct would not absolve the crew from their duty to the vessel. This decision is distinguished by the court from Mason v. The Blaricau, 2 Cranch, 240, 2 L. ed. 286, The Umattilla, 29 Fed. 252, and The Triumph, 1 Sprague, 128, Fed. Cas. No. 14,183 (supra, this division), where, as the court points out, the vessels were seriously injured and in imminent peril, the master and crew had deserted her, the voyage was actually broken up, no wages were received, and the libellants' services were of the most meritorious character, they having braved great dangers, suffered severe hardships, and contributed to save the ship from destruction. Upon appeal, the court, after a review of the authorities, came to the conclusion that the only cases where compensation in the nature of salvage has been awarded to seamen were where the voyage had terminated by the shipwreck of the vessel, or where she had been abandoned by all except the salvors under circumstances which showed conclusively that the abandonment was absolute, beyond hope or expectation of recovery, or where the seamen had, by the master, been unmistakably discharged from the services of the shipowner; and, the facts of the case at bar not being regarded by the court as coming within any of the classes above shown, the decree of the lower court was affirmed.

Where, after a collision, all on board left the injured boat under an apprehension that she was sinking, and many went on board the other ship, but the master and a portion of the crew remained about their ship, and, finding it did not immediately go down, entered on board again and saved a large portion of the property thereon, it was held that there was not such an abandonment of the ship by the master and crew as would change their position and character so as to entitle them to salvage as general salvors. Mesmer v. Suffolk Bank, 1 Law Rep. 249, Fed. Cas. No. 9,493.

And salvage may not be had where the master's abandonment was not the result of actual danger and in order to save life.

Thus, while admitting that seamen may be salvors of their own ship when their contract has been dissolved either voluntarily by the master or by the effect of a vis major, it was held in The Olive Branch, 1 Low. Dec. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 10,490, that the departure of the master from a fishing schooner upon its return trip, near the home port, was not sufficient to dissolve the seamen's contract; and, therefore, that their services to the ship during a storm, which soon after arose, were such, only, as were due under their contract, and for which they were not entitled to salvage.

4. Recapture.

The recapture of their ship from pirates, enemies, or belligerents, by seamen, is also held to entitle them to salvage on the ground that by the capture their contracts of service are dissolved, or at least suspended.

It is said, obiter, in The Florence, 16 Jur. 572, that by capture, whether by enemies or pirates, the seaman's contract is at once put an end to.

But the capture of a ship is stated, arguendo, in The Two Catherineas, 2 Mason, 819, Fed. Cas. No. 14,288, to work a suspension of the contracts of its seamen rather than an utter dissolution of them,—the rescue of the ship, however, by the original crew is admitted to be a meritorious case of salvage.

In regard to the situation and character of members of the crew who recaptured their vessel from captors, it is said in The Two Friends,

1 C. Rob. 271, that such an attempt is to be regarded as a perfectly voluntary act, in which each individual is a volunteer, and is not acting as a part of the crew of the ship, or in discharge of any official duty, either ordinary or extraordinary.

The cook, the steward, and the mate, who, with the aid of several passengers, succeeded in recapturing their ship from French officers and seamen who were in possession, were allowed salvage in Clayton v. The Harmony, 1 Pet. Adm. 70, Fed. Cas. No. 2,871, on the ground that the contract between the mariners and the shipowners was dissolved, or at least suspended, by the capture, so that they were under no more obligation to thus hazardingly serve the owners than the crew of another ship would be. The court further declared that the recovery of the ship and cargo from enemies was no part of the original contract of the seamen.

The master, crew, and passengers, who recaptured their ship from French captors who were in possession, were awarded one sixth of the value of the ship and cargo, as salvage, in The Walker, Stewart Vice-Adm. Rep. (Nova Scotia) 105.

And a master and boy who recaptured their ship from the possession of five Frenchmen were considered salvors, and entitled to one sixth of the value of the property saved, in The Beaver, 3 C. Rob. 292.

So, a seaman who aided the captain to recapture their vessel from French captors who were in possession was allowed salvage, in Kennedy v. Ricker, Smith (N. H.) 432, Fed. Cas. 7,705, notwithstanding a convention entered into between England and France, which, however, was not finally ratified until after the hearing of the libel for salvage. The right of salvage existing in mariners as well as strangers, in cases of rescue and recapture, was declared to be well established by judicial decision, and to be founded upon principles of justice and equity.

The captain, a seaman, and the cook, who succeeded in recapturing their ship from nine Frenchmen who were in possession of it, were allowed salvage in Brevoor v. The Fair American, 1 Pet. Adm. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 1,847. The court viewed the case as one in which great gallantry and good conduct, as well as great suffering, were exhibited and endured, and stated that salvage is not given as a mere compensation for labor and services, but is increased far beyond this claim as an incentive to stimulate others to meritorious and gallant exertions.

The mate and part of the crew, allowed to remain on board after the capture of their boat, by the governor of the Falkland Islands, were allowed salvage for recapturing and bringing home the boat, as appears from the facts in Williams v. Suffolk Ins. Co. 3 Sumn. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 17,739.

And the master of a British ship loaded with fruit, which was captured by an American privateer, and part of the fruit taken, but the remainder presented to the master on condition that he convey the crews of other prize ships to England, claimed for himself a salvage for recapture from the enemy, upon arrival in England, which was reached after a perilous voyage, and was allowed £30 and his expenses. The Sir Peter, 2 Dodson Adm. 73.

So, too, the recapture of a ship by the crew from the possession of a usurping government was held to entitle them to salvage, in Williams 64 L. R. A.

v. Suffolk Ins. Co. 3 Sumn. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 17,738.

And the capture of a ship by a belligerent was held to suspend, if not terminate, the contracts of the seamen; and, therefore, it was held that the captain and crew are entitled to salvage for the recapture of their ship from the captors; and, although the captain is part owner of the ship, he is entitled to salvage for the recapture of the cargo, since the belligerent capture which releases him as master from his duties to the ship also discharges him from his duties as a common carrier. Strout v. The Cuba, Fed. Cas. No. 13,549.

But no salvage is due on the recapture of a ship from a neutral or friendly power. Peck v. Randail, 1 John. 165.

And a crew who had rescued their ship from mutinous Malays aboard were denied the right to salvage therefor in The Governor Raffles, 2 Dodson Adm. 14, on the ground that it was their bounden duty to give every assistance in their power to quell a mutiny, or preserve or recover the possession of the goods of their employers. A distinction is made between this case and that of rescue from an enemy, because, under such circumstances, the court declares that the moment the capture is made the crew are discharged from their duty to their employers, and are no longer the crew of the vessel, but become prisoners of war.

Also the fact that a vessel was under arrest was held not to annul the master's contract in regard to her, so as to entitle him to salvage for services performed at a time when the ship was in danger. The Nebraska, 21 C. C. A. 448, 24 U. S. App. 559, 75 Fed. 598.

III. Compensation in the nature of salvage.

Although the danger of placing a salvage reward before seamen's eyes as the result of meritorious services in rescuing their ship from peril is ever in mind, the reluctance of courts to pass by unheeded any acts of genuine heroism and faithfulness in connection with extreme peril on the water has led them sometimes to award what is variously called, compensation in the nature of salvage, special or qualified salvage, days' wages, expenses home, salvage measured by wages, etc. The fact that American decisions recognize two classes of civil salvage is pointed out in Mesmer v. Suffolk Bank, 1 Law Rep. 249, Fed. Cas. No. 9,493, vis., general salvage, which is awarded to one who performs useful service to a ship in distress without any particular relation or duty thereto; and special or qualified salvage, which is awarded to seamen against property saved by their exertions from a ship to which they belonged; and that a suit under the latter class is ordinarily limited to wages due; but that it is understood to be proper for the court to award additional recompense in cases of extraordinary danger and gallantry.

This recognition by the courts of meritorious services is in no way an exception to the general rule that seamen may not become salvors of their own vessel, since general salvage and compensation in the nature of salvage are inherently dissimilar, not only as to comparative amount, but also in their relation to the applicant therefor; the former being awarded to one entitled thereto more certainly, and as a matter of right, while the granting of the latter to seamen seems to be purely discretionary with the court.

The perfectly settled right of seamen, in cases of shipwreck, to recover their wages out of the proceeds of the wreck saved by them, and in some cases an additional amount to pay the expense of their return home, was declared in The John Perkins, 21 Law Rep. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 7,360, not to change or trench upon the settled rule that a seaman acting under a subsisting contract has no standing in a court of admiralty as a salvor of his own ship.

The conclusions of the court in The Dawn, 2 Ware, 126, Fed. Cas. No. 3,666, after an exhaustive review of the Maritime Codes of most of the countries of Europe, are that in cases of distress the crew are bound to stay by the vessel and contribute their utmost exertions to save as much as possible from the wreck; that if this is done they are always entitled to full wages if enough is saved for that purpose, but, if they abandon the wreck and refuse to aid in saving it, their wages are forfeited. But the court further says that, if they do not rest satisfied with saving only what is sufficient to pay their wages, but persevere so long as the chance of saving anything remains, the law, from motives of policy, allows them, according to the circumstances and the merits of their services, a further reward in the nature of salvage, which is a general charge upon the whole mass of property saved. They may not, however, claim as general salvors, nor be entitled to be rewarded at the same liberal rate, because, were that so, a crew might be willing to see their vessel placed in danger at the risk of some personal peril to themselves, in the hope of obtaining a large reward for rescuing her; but they are to be paid a reasonable compensation pro opera et labore, and, if the disaster happens in a foreign country, it ought to be at least a sum to pay the expense of their return home. The court admits that the above conclusions have not been directly, to the full extent, sanctioned by any judicial decisions in this country, but states that the reasoning of the courts leads thereto.

The doctrine of The Dawn, 2 Ware, 126, Fed. Cas. No. 3,666, is reaffirmed in The Bowditch, 8 Ware, 71, Fed. Cas. No. 1,717, that in cases of shipwreck seamen are bound to remain by the wreck and render their best services to rescue the property from destruction; and, if this service is faithfully performed, they are entitled to their full wages out of the remains of the wreck to the time of the disaster; and that, according to the circumstances of the case, they may be entitled to an additional compensation in the nature of salvage, which would be measured by the circumstances of danger and labor which attended the service, but ought in all cases to be sufficient to pay their expenses home.

The doctrine is declared, arguendo, in Clayton v. The Harmony, 1 Pet. Adm. 70, Fed. Cas. No. 2,871, that, although seamen are bound, if possible, to save a ship and goods wrecked, or lose their wages, they are also entitled to further compensation by way of salvage; that in some countries they have daily wages by special ordinances or practice, but in all countries they are allowed more than their wages if the property saved warrants this extra claim.

The allowance to seamen of a recompense for extraordinary danger and gallantry in addition to wages seems to be considered proper, within the discretion of the court, in Mesner v. Suffolk Bank, 1 Law Rep. 249, Fed. Cas. No. 9,493, although the demand therefor should be made in connection with the suit for wages, since then all the parties and interests are before the court, and the merits of the parties are then more readily comprehended and ascertained. It appearing in the case at bar that the seamen had received wages without claim of any further demand, and that their vessel was wrecked in collision, for which there was some evidence that it was at fault, and it not appearing that the seamen were at any time in very imminent danger, their libel for salvage was dismissed.
64 L. R. A.

According to Abbott, Shipping, 790, in the colony law of Massachusetts there was a provision requiring mariners to save the vessel and goods in case of shipwreck, "out of which they shall have a meet for their hazard and pains."

The court refused to enforce an agreement made by salvors and the master of the distressed ship to pay the crew, who refused otherwise to assist, $2 a day for their services while the ship was on a reef, saying that they should be punished, instead of paid, for such insubordination, since they were bound by their articles and their duty to stand by their master as long as two planks of the ship remained together to stand on, and then, that, if the ship were at last lost, and they had behaved well, they might perhaps be entitled to some compensation for extraordinary services rendered in saving any portion of the materials and cargo. The York, 3 Adm. Rec. 821, Fed. Cas. 18,140.

Four seamen, who were discharged from a United States man-of-war in order that they might go on a whaling ship in need of assistance on account of loss of men and damage by the sea, and who did so, and remained with the ship until the end of the voyage, when they were given their discharges, having performed their duty to the entire satisfaction of the captain, were held entitled, not only to the highest rate of seamen's wages then paid, but also to an additional sum of $35 each as salvage. The Harvest, 1 Sprague, 537, Fed. Cas. No. 6,176.

After an award to salvors of a moiety of the property saved, the members of the crew were allowed extra compensation for extraordinary labor performed by them in pumping the vessel to keep her free, and for their faithfulness in the discharge of their duty in other ways during the time the ship was in danger. Anonymous, Fed. Cas. No. 430.

The services of the mate and four seamen of a wrecked vessel in crossing the Gulf in an open boat to procure assistance were held extraordinary and beyond the line of their duty, and sufficient to entitle them to compensation in the nature of salvage. One hundred dollars was awarded the mate, and $50 to each of the men. The Mary Hale, 5 Adm. Rec. 471, Fed. Cas. No. 9,213.

A case is referred to by the reporter in 1 Stuart Adm. Rep. at p. 255, as The Flora Wilson, reported in the Nautical Magazine, February, 1833, vol. 2, No. 12, p. 87, where the chief and second mates and the ship's carpenter were allowed one third of the gross proceeds of the sale of articles saved from the wreck by their meritorious services.

This compensation sometimes takes the form of days' wages,—especially for seamen's services in rescuing the cargo after a shipwreck.

Thus, seamen who were employed eight days in saving materials from their wrecked ship were allowed salvage at the rate of 5 shillings a day, in The Sillery, 1 Stuart Adm. Rep. (Lower Canada) 182, their wages having been paid in advance up to the time of the loss of the ship.

But days' wages seem to be awarded sometimes upon the theory that the shipwreck is a vis major, operating to annul the contracts of service.

Thus, it is declared in Roberts v. The Ocean Star, Fed. Cas. No. 11,908, that seamen are entitled to the reward of salvors only for very extraordinary services, in which case a small additional sum may be rightfully allowed; but that, after a total wreck, if the master and crew labor in saving the cargo, they must then be regarded, not as the crew of the lost vessel, but as the agents or servants of the shippers, and, therefore, entitled to wages by the day at the rate of their monthly wages, or other reasonable compensation.

And it was ordered in Bridge v. Niagara Ins. Co. 1 Hall, 423, that the master and seamen, after becoming disconnected from their vessel by shipwreck, were entitled to compensation as laborers, or salvors, for their services in transporting and in saving the cargo, to be allowed according to the nature of the services.

And in Reed v. Hussey, Blatchf. & H. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 11,646, extra compensation in the nature of days' wages for the time spent in laborious and perilous exertions in saving the wreck was considered properly allowable. In this case a shipwreck is regarded as a vis major, which breaks up a seaman's contract.

The crew of a whaling bark were held to have no right to salvage, but were allowed the amount coming to them, under a promise of the master that they should have days' wages if they would work faithfully in saving the property, the binding force of which promise was not disputed by the shipowner. The court says, however, in regard to the ship master's promise, that want of consideration might have been urged against it. The Antelope, 1 Low. Dec. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 484.

The question whether seamen might have their wages in the event of a shipwreck was one which long occupied the attention of courts, until it was at last settled by statutes in England and America. One theory promulgated was that, although the right to wages was lost upon the occurrence of a shipwreck resulting in the loss of freight, since "freight is the mother of wages," a new equity arose in the seamen whereby they might realize as salvage the amount due them for wages out of fragments of the wreck and cargo saved by their perseverance.

In Brackett v. Hercules, Gilpin, 184, Fed. Cas. No. 1,762, it was held that where a portion of a vessel or her cargo was saved by the meritorious exertions of the seamen, a new lien arose thereon,—the original contract being canceled, —although no freight was earned.

In Dunnett v. Tomhagen, 3 Johns. 156, an action for wages by a mariner on board a ship which was wrecked, it appearing that a few boxes of goods had been saved from the cargo, Chief Justice Kent said that the seamen might, perhaps, have had a valid lien on the goods saved for an equitable compensation in the nature of salvage, but that this gave them no right of action on the contract for wages, since freight is the mother of wages, and no freight was earned in this case because the voyage was not performed.

64 L. R. A.

Abbott, Shipping, p. 788 (*631), says that in case of shipwreck it is the duty of the seamen to exert themselves to the utmost to save as much as possible of the vessel and cargo, and that, if the cargo is saved, and a proportion of the freight paid by the merchant in respect thereof, upon principle the seamen are entitled to a proportion of their wages; and that for their labor in saving the cargo or remains of the ship, they, as well as other persons, may be entitled to a recompense by way of salvage, if the circumstances do not entitle them to wages.

The doctrine of The Isabella, 1 Stuart Adm. Rep. (Lower Canada) 281, is that, upon the occurrence of a vis major depriving seamen of their wages, they will be allowed salvage, regulated by the amount which would have been due for wages, out of the fragments and materials of the wreck saved by them.

The doctrine of The Two Catherine's, 2 Mason, 319, Fed. Cas. No. 14,288, is that the crew are not ipso facto discharged from their contract by shipwreck, and are still bound to labor for the preservation of the ship and cargo, but that their right to wages depends upon the earning of freight, so that by the very nature of the case they may be excluded from wages. If, however, they have been instrumental in preserving the property, or gathering up the fragments of the wreck, they are entitled to compensation therefor by way of salvage, and the wages they are entitled to are the measure of the salvage awarded them, except, in cases of extraordinary danger and gallantry, where life is preserved or property of great value is at stake, an additional recompense may be allowed.

A crew, in Cartwell v. The John Taylor, Fed. Cas. No. 2,482, Newberry Adm. 341, who had worked with energy and fidelity in saving the tackle and apparel of their wrecked vessel, were allowed compensation in the nature of salvage at the rate of the wages which they had been receiving, the continuance of those wages being allowed them up to the time when the tackle, furniture, and materials saved were taken into the custody of the marshal of the court. This decision is based upon the doctrine maintained by Justice Story in The Two Catherine's, 2 Mason, 319, Fed. Cas. No. 14,288, that, since freight is the mother of wages, if the ship be lost during the voyage, so that no freight is earned, the mariners lose their wages; but that, in place of that loss, they are entitled to salvage for their labor, and services in saving the wreck of the ship and cargo, or either.

But in several decisions this theory is expressly condemned as being wrong in principle and in derogation of the rule that seamen may not claim salvage out of their own vessel.

Thus, the crew of a ship which was wrecked were held entitled to compensation for their services, not merely from the time of the casualty, but for the voyage, in Daniels v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. 24 N. Y. 452; but the court stated that the compensation was as wages, and not in the nature of salvage, for the reason that an allowance to seamen as for salvage services would be less safe to shipowners than the allowance of wages, since in the latter case there is no temptation to throw the ship into situations of danger with a view to extravagant salvage.

Seamen succeeding in saving portions of the ship in case of wreck were held entitled to receive their wages as such, rather than a compensation in the nature of salvage, or salvage.

measured by quantum meruit. This decision was based on the ground, briefly, that a seaman has a right to cling to the last plank of his ship in satisfaction of his wages or part of them, and also, that any compensation in the nature of salvage to a seaman is based upon a wrong principle, tending to present a temptation to throw the ship into situations of danger. The Neptune, 1 Hagg. Adm. 227.

The court remarks, arguendo, in Giles v. The Cynthia, 1 Pet. Adm. 203, Fed. Cas. No. 5,424, that the sailors must assist in saving the ship and goods, or so much thereof as possible, so as to entitle them, by way of encouragement, to their wages out of the property saved.

The officers and crew of a whaling ship which was wrecked upon a desert island were held not entitled to salvage for rescuing a large part of the cargo of oil, and fragments and furniture from the ship, in The Holder Borden, 1 Sprague, 144, Fed. Cas. No. 6,600. This decision is based largely, however, upon the fact that in whaling voyages the compensation of a mariner is a specific share of the net proceeds; and, therefore, in taking the oil from the wreck the seamen were laboring to secure the proceeds of the voyage upon which their compensation depended, which was enhanced by every barrel ultimately saved.

In still other decisions, however, whether the compensation is regarded as wages or as salvage measured by wages is considered entirely immaterial, since there is in reality no difference, from a practical standpoint, between the two.

The court says in The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Fed. Cas. No. 3,939, Hoff. Op. 96, that seamen in case of shipwreck are bound to remain by the wreck and assist in preserving the fragments; and that, if they do so, they are entitled to their wages out of the savings; and that, whether this allowance should properly be deemed wages or a salvage compensation is but a shadowy distinction, for in practice the allowance rarely exceeds the amount which would have been earned as wages.

The question whether the compensation recognized as due seamen who have assisted in preserving fragments of the wreck is to be deemed wages earned under their contract or compensation in the nature of salvage is declared by the court in Drew v. Pope, 2 Sawy. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 4,080, to be of little practical importance, since it is admitted by those who maintain that the compensation is in the nature of salvage, that the amount to be paid is merely the wages due.

According to Reed v. Hussey, Blatchf. & H. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 11,646, the rule that seamen on a whaling voyage, who are to be compensated by a share of the proceeds of the voyages, cannot, in case of wreck, claim for salvage services, is regarded as invariable; but the voyage as a shipping adventure is regarded as ending with a shipwreck, which is a case of vis major, which breaks up the seaman's contract and deprives him of the wages agreed upon, except that there remains in him an equity proportionate to his demands under his contract, which adheres to the net proceeds of the cargo or ship which may be saved, and that it matters not whether the recompense be made in the name of wages or salvage.

In The Massasoit, 1 Sprague, 97, Fed. Cas. No. 9,260, after the ship went ashore the crew remained on the wreck performing all their duties until they were taken off by a life boat barely escaping with their lives. At the time of their rescue the owners of the ship arrived with another crew, and thus superseded the wrecked seamen in the work of saving the wreck. In holding that the seamen were entitled to wages out of the remnants of the vessel, although no freight had been earned, the court declared that it had long been a question whether in cases of shipwreck seamen were entitled to compensation in the form of wages or in the nature of salvage; that the giving of wages in such instances was opposed to the maxim that "freight is the mother of wages;" and that the giving of salvage was in opposition to the principle that seamen may not become salvors of their own vessels; that seamen, under such circumstances, were entitled to some reward for laborious and hazardous service, successfully performed, was undoubted, and therefore, although sometimes called salvage measured by the stipulated wages, sometimes quasi salvage or wages in the nature of salvage, the court stated that the practical result to which the courts generally came was that the compensation awarded should be that which the contract prescribed, and therefore, having no quality in the nature of salvage excepting that something must be saved, and being, not for voluntary, but for covenanted, service, therefore not enhanced by peril and gallantry, and not affected by the value of the property saved, provided it was not less than the amount of the wages.

The facts that in GILBRAITH V. STEWART TRANSP. CO. the ship's difficulty, though serious, was temporary, not resulting in shipwreck or abandonment, and that the seamen had engaged by the month for the sum specified, concurred to support the court's conclusion that the services rendered, however meritorious, must be considered as remunerated by the wages received; and the award of a special compensation would not have been justified; since, while a special salvage compensation is perhaps advisable under extraordinary circumstances, the general policy of the courts is to refrain from exciting in seamen an expectation of reward for the mere performance of duty, even though it be under difficult circumstances.

M. M. M.

ARKANSAS SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Arkansas, Piff. in Err.,

v.

D. F. COLLETT.

(.....Ark.....)

The repairing of a belt in a factory so as to prevent 200 hands from losing a day's work the following day is within an exception to a Sunday law permitting works of necessity on that day, where the defect was not discovered until too late to repair it on Saturday with the appliances at hand, and the owner of the mill was not negligent in not having foreseen the accident, or having appliances at hand to repair it immediately.

(February 20, 1904.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Clark County to review a judgment acquitting defendant of the charge of Sabbath breaking. Affirmed.

Statement by Riddick, J.:

In this case the defendant, D. F. Collett, was indicted by the grand jury of Clark county for Sabbath breaking by causing work and labor to be performed on Sunday. The defendant was the foreman of a large sawmill which had over 200 employees. On Saturday, the 25th day of July last, the belt for the edger of the mill got out of repair. The mill was shut down at 4:30 P. M. of that day, and the millwright and his assistant worked until after 6 o'clock to get the belt ready to put in a splice, and got it partially prepared for the splice. But to make the glue used in splicing the belt hold it was necessary to take the oil out of the belt. Gasoline was required for this purpose, and it was discovered that there was none on hand. After supper the defendant endeavored to procure the gasoline at Arkadelphia, the largest town in the county, being a place of some 3,000 inhabitants, but none could be obtained. Gasoline was obtained early the next morning, though in what way the agreed statement of facts does not show. But the agreed statement of facts shows that it is not safe to use a belt in less than eighteen hours after a splice is made, for the glue must have that time to harden. Not being able to complete the repair of the belt on Saturday night on account of the lack of gasoline, the defendant had the work completed early Sunday morning in order to give the glue the necessary time to harden so that the mill might run on Monday. It was agreed that, had this not been done, not only the sawmill, but all the other departments of the mill plant depending upon the sawmill for lumber, would have been closed down for a day, and that over 200 men would have lost a day's work and a day's wages. Under these circumstances the circuit judge to whom the case was submitted on an agreed statement of facts found that the work was one of necessity, and that the defendant was not guilty, and the state appealed.

Mr. G. W. Murphy, Attorney General, for plaintiff in error:

The agreed statement of facts showed a plain violation of the statute.

State v. Goff, 20 Ark. 289; Quarles v. State, 55 Ark. 10, 14 L. R. A. 192, 17 S. W. 269; Shipley v. State, 61 Ark. 216, 32 S. W. 489, 33 S. W. 107.

Mr. J. H. Crawford for defendant in error.

Riddick, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The only question in this case is whether the evidence was sufficient to justify the finding of the circuit judge that the work which the defendant caused to be done on Sunday was a work of necessity within the meaning of our statute forbidding work and labor to be done on the Sabbath. Leaving out the religious view of the matter, it is no doubt good public policy to require one day of rest each week, for that much rest is needed by most men; and in this age of fierce competition, if one man labors on Sunday, it tends to force other men in the same business profession to do likewise, in order to keep on even terms with him. But while for this and other reasons Sunday laws should be enforced, yet there are certain exceptions to the law forbidding work and labor on Sunday, based on reasons as sound as those upon which the law itself rests. One of these is that in a case of necessity one may labor on the Sabbath, and the defendant here undertakes to justify his act on the ground that it was a matter of necessity.

In a recent case we said that "courts in construing the term 'necessity,' as employed in these Sunday statutes [which, with certain exceptions, forbid work and labor to be performed on the Sabbath], have generally given it a liberal, rather than a literal, interpretation," and that "it is not an absolute, unavoidable, physical necessity that is meant, but rather an economic and moral necessity." Shipley v. State, 61 Ark. 219, 32 S. W. 489, 33 S. W. 107. The court in that case sustained a conviction for Sabbath breaking, where the defendant labored in operating the pumps and fans of a coal mine to prevent the accumulation of water and gas in the mine, because the proof did not show that the defendant could not, by a reasonable expense, have employed some other device to keep the water and gas out of the mine, and thus obviated the necessity of working on Sunday. So, in an earlier case, the court held that the defendant was guilty of violating the Sabbath by cutting his wheat on that day, though the same may have been wasting from overripeness. It was there said that "the husbandman should look forward to the ripening of his grain as an event which must happen, and should make such timely provision for the harvest as not to violate the Sabbath." State v. Goff, 20 Ark. 290. In neither of those cases was it a matter of necessity to work on the Sabbath, for the reason that the contingency should have been foreseen, and could have been obviated by the use of reasonable exertion or expense. But the necessity which required the work to be done on the Sabbath in this instance was not the result of natural causes which anyone should have foreseen, but was the result of an unexpected defect in the edger belt, which became known on Saturday, and made the repairs necessary. These repairs could then have been completed before Sunday but for the lack of gasoline, which the defendant tried to obtain in Arkadelphia, the nearest large town, but could not do so. The evidence, we think, justified the court in finding that the defendant was not to blame in failing to foresee that the edger band would get out of repair on Saturday, or for the failure to procure the gasoline earlier than he did, as one would reasonably suppose that gasoline could be procured in any town of 3,000 or 4,000 inhabitants.

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to what are works of necessity within the meaning of the Sunday laws, see Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wopst, 3 L. R. A. 224; Handy v. Globe Pub. Co. 4 L. R. A. 466; Com. v. Waldman, 11 L. R. A. 563; Com. v. Matthews, 18 L. R. A. 64 L. R. A.

761; Ex parte Kennedy, 51 L. R. A. 270; Arnheiter v. State, 58 L. R. A. 392; and State v. McBee, 60 L. R. A. 638.

As to Sunday labor generally, see note to Quarles v. State, 14 L. R. A. 192.

As the evidence is sufficient to support the finding that he was not to blame in either of these respects, the question we have here is not whether one can labor on Sunday in order to save work on Monday, but whether it is justifiable for a few men to work a few hours on Sunday in order to save the work and wages of a large number of men for the whole of Monday. For although it required but a small amount of work by a few men to splice this belt, yet by reason that it took eighteen hours for the glue to harden so the belt could be used after being spliced, if the work had been postponed until Monday, over 200 men would have been thrown out of work for the entire day, and would have lost their wages on that day. We are not sufficiently acquainted with sawmills to see very clearly how the breaking of an edger belt could have had such an effect upon the operation of other portions of the plant as to throw so many men out of work and cause such a loss. But, while we feel a little skeptical on that point, it is thus written in the record, both parties agreeing that this was so, and this was one of the material facts upon which the court below based its judgment. Though, under the law of this state, we have the power to reverse judgments of acquittal in prosecutions for misdemeanors and order a new trial, yet where the question is one of fact entirely we should do so only in those cases where justice clearly requires it. But under the circumstances of this case we are of the opinion that the finding of the circuit court that the work performed on Sunday was one of necessity has evidence to support it, and should be sustained.

Judgment affirmed.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

James SIMMONS, Appt.,

v.

SOUTHERN TRACTION COMPANY.

(207 Pa. 589.)

A street-car conductor in charge of an extra car, whose duties require him to run onto a single track extending beyond the termination of the double tracks of the road, which the rules of the company require to be occupied by only one car at a time, takes the risk of injury from the absence of signals at the termination of the double tracks or schedules for extra cars for giving notice when the extension is occupied by such cars.

(January 4, 1904.)

NOTE.—For volenti non fit injuria as defense to actions by injured servants, see also note to O'Maley v. South Boston Gaslight Co. 47 L. R. A. 161.
44 L. R. A.

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, No. 1, for Allegheny County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frank M. McKelvey and Joseph A. McDonald, for appellant:

Where employees are subject to dangers which the employer ought to provide against, and an accident happens to an employee from a want of proper provisions against such dangers, the employer is liable.

Pittsburgh & O. R. Co. v. Sentmeyer, 92 Pa. 280, 37 Am. Rep. 684.

Where an appliance, which evidently guards against dangers, is in general use, it is obligatory upon employers to use such device; and a failure to so use it, causing injury, or permitting such to occur, renders the employer liable.

Lehigh & W. B. Coal Co. v. Hayes, 128 Pa. 306, 5 L. R. A. 441, 15 Am. St. Rep. 680, 18 Atl. 387.

Messrs. Clarence Burleigh and James C. Gray for appellee.

Fell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff was employed as a conductor on a branch of the defendant's road which extended from Pittsburg to the borough of Sheraden. There were two tracks on most of the branch roads, but in the borough and in one or two other places there was only a single track. On the evening of the accident the plaintiff was in charge of an extra car or tripper, which ran between regular cars. While the car was on the single track in the borough, the trolley slipped from the feed wire, the car stopped, and its lights were extinguished. The plaintiff got down on the track in order to replace the trolley, and while standing back of his car he was struck and injured by the car that followed it. He had been in the employ of the company, running extra cars on this part of the road, for twenty-seven days. The streets of the borough were lighted by electricity, but an arc light near the place of the accident happened not to be burning.

In support of his contention that proper appliances had not been furnished, the plaintiff made an offer to show that, by the rules of the company, only one car was allowed to be on the single-track extension at a time; that no signal box or other appliance was placed at the end of the double track to warn motormen that the single track was occupied, and no schedule was in use for extra cars; and that signal boxes or other appliances were in general use, and were necessary to avoid accidents where schedules failed to provide for such single-track use. This offer was overruled, and a nonsuit entered. If the testimony offered had been admitted, it would not have made out a case entitling the plaintiff to go to the jury. Whatever danger there was in the use of the single track without signals was obvious, and as fully known to the plaintiff before as after the accident, and the risk was voluntarily assumed by him. In Brossman v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 113 Pa. 490, 57 Am. Rep. 479, 6 Atl. 226, a brakeman who had been employed by the railroad company for six months, and whose duties required him to be on the top of box cars, was injured by striking a bridge which was only 4 or 5 feet above the tops of the cars. Others had been injured before in this way. In holding that there could be no recovery, it was said: "When an employee, after having the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the risks of his situation, accepts them, he cannot complain if subsequently injured by such exposure. By contracting for the performance of hazardous duties, he assumes such risks as are incident to their discharge, from causes open and obvious, the dangerous character of which causes he has had opportunity to ascertain." In Fulford v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 185 Pa. 329, 39 Atl. 1115, an engineer who had been employed on the road six weeks was not allowed to recover, where his injury was caused by striking his head against the side of a bridge which was dangerously near the side of the passing cab, and 2 or 3 feet nearer than was usual in the case of the other bridges on the road. To the same effect are the decisions in Belkows v. Pennsylvania & N. Y. Canal & R. Co. 157 Pa. 51, 27 Atl. 685, and Fletcher v. Philadelphia Traction Co. 190 Pa. 117, 42 Atl. 527. In the latter case a conductor familiar with the road was killed while standing on the side step or running board of an open summer car, and engaged in putting down curtains during a thunderstorm, by being struck by a car on the other track. The tracks were only 37 inches apart, and the conductor's experience had been in running closed cars, and he had had no warning or instruction as to open cars.

The judgment is affirmed.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, NINTH CIRCUIT.

ST. LOUIS MINING & MILLING COMPANY of Montana et al., Appts.,
v.

MONTANA MINING COMPANY, Limited.

(51 C. C. A. 530, 113 Fed. 900.)

The owner of a mining claim, who has a right to pursue a vein apexing within it, beyond its side lines, is confined to operations within and upon the vein itself; and he cannot drift a tunnel from his claim into the adjoining one for the purpose of intersecting the vein in its descent.

(March 10, 1902.)

A PPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Montana enjoining them from proceeding to construct a tunnel through plaintiff's property. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Argued before Gilbert, Ross, and Morrow, Circuit Judges.

Messrs. E. W. Toole and Thomas C. Bach, for appellants:

The portion of the vein which the tunnel will intersect has its apex within the boundaries of, and runs lengthwise with, the side lines of the St. Louis mining claim.

The plaintiff in error is the owner thereof on its dip beyond the side line of the St. Louis claim within the planes referred to.

Montana Min. Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. 42 C. C. A. 415, 102 Fed. 430.

There is no allegation in the pleadings that the work done in extending the tunnel results in any irreparable injury to the complainant. In so far as the extension of the Transcontinental tunnel is concerned, this injunction should be reversed, or so modified as to permit the plaintiff in error to mine and operate through said tunnel all that portion of the vein, lode, or ledge apexing inside of the vertical planes referred to in the answer.

We must go to the description of the premises contained in the grant to ascertain what passes by the patent, as this can in no way be enlarged or curtailed by the action of the Land Department in the conveyance of the premises granted.

Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 28 L. ed. 321, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 584, 34 L. ed. 1068, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Francœur v. Newhouse, 40 Fed. 618.

NOTE.—As to right to follow vein or lode on its dip beyond the surface lines of the location, see, in this series, Parrot Silver & Copper Co. v. Heinze, 53 L. R. A. 491, and note; also Atax Gold Min. Co. v. Hilkey, 62 L. R. A. 555, 64 L. R. A.

If there was any ambiguity as to what was intended to be granted, the eminent propriety of leaving this barren underground region common, instead of exclusive, property, is patent to anyone having a fair conception of practical and economical mining.

The tunnel of defendant is being constructed for development purposes, and the right to extend it upon the unappropriated public domain is conceded by § 2323, 2 Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426).

Montana v. Clark, 42 Fed. 626; Leadville Min. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 4 Morrison Min. Rep. 380, Fed. Cas. No. 8,158; Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & Smelting Co. 118 U. S. 196, 30 L. ed. 98, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1177.

It required an express grant in order to confer the right to hold and use mines.

New Orleans v. United States, 10 Pet. 662, 9 L. ed. 573; United States v. Castillero, 2 Black, 17, 17 L. ed. 360; 1 Bl. Com. 295; 1 Greenleaf's Cruise, Real Prop. 38.

By U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1425), a grant is made to a locator of the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface of the land within the lines of his location, and all veins, lodes, or ledges the tops or apexes of which are inside of such surface location, and confers upon him the right to follow such veins or lodes in their course downward laterally inside of the end lines of the location, even though they may so far depart from a perpendicular as to enter beneath the surface location of another.

The issuance of the patent to defendant mining company in this case is conclusive evidence of the grant contained in the section of the statute referred to, and is conclusive evidence that the patentee, or his grantors, had, in all respects, complied with the law in making the location and securing the exclusive right to the possession and enjoyment of the surface and veins, lodes or ledges, included within the lines of its location, but of no others. It is not claimed or pretended that the projection of the tunnel has, or will, interfere with the surface, or injure any vein, lode, or ledge having its top or apex in complainant's claim.

Montana Min. Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. 42 C. C. A. 415, 102 Fed. 430; Freeman, Cotenancy & Partition, § 435; Canfield v. Ford, 28 Barb. 339, Affirming 10 How. Pr. 473.

Messrs. W. E. Cullen, E. C. Day, and W. E. Cullen, Jr., for appellee.

Gilbert, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

The St. Louis Mining & Milling Company is the owner of the St. Louis lode mining claim, and the Montana Mining Company, Limited, the appellee, is the owner of the Nine Hour lode mining claim, which adjoins the St. Louis claim on the east. The appellants were proceeding to drift a tunnel 260 feet underground horizontally from the St. Louis claim eastward, and into the Nine Hour claim, for the purpose of reaching and mining a lode which had its apex in the St. Louis claim, and which they had the right to pursue on its downward course, as it passed with its dip to the eastward out of their side line into the Nine Hour claim. It was stipulated that the tunnel, if projected in the course in which it was being drifted, would reach the vein or lode which had its apex within the St. Louis claim, and that in the course of its progress there would be encountered no other vein, lode, or ledge. At the suit of the owner of the Nine Hour claim, the circuit court enjoined the appellants from proceeding further with said tunnel. From that decree the present appeal is taken.

The case involves the interesting question whether the owner of a mining claim, who has the right to pursue beyond the side lines of his claim a vein or lode which has its apex within his own claim, is confined in his right to operations within or upon the vein itself, and is without authority to otherwise enter the adjoining claim. The appellants contend that a patent for a mining claim by its terms conveys only the surface of the claim, together with all veins, lodes, or ledges having their tops or apices within the surface boundaries thereof, and that the granting words of the appellee's patent circumscribe the right of the grantee thereof to the precise estate granted, and that, since the mining law confers the general right to explore and purchase the mineral lands of the United States, the appellants, in this instance, have the right to explore within the Nine Hour claim, and thereby to reach their own property, so long as they interfere with no right granted to the owners of the latter claim. It is true that the statute (U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322 [U. S. Comp Stat. 190], p. 1425), and the patents thereupon issued, confer upon the locators of mining claims in terms only "the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of their locations, and of all veins, lodes, and ledges throughout their entire depth, the top or apex of which lies inside of such surface lines extended downward vertically, although such veins, lodes, or ledges may so far depart from a perpendicular in their course downward as to extend outside the vertical side lines of such surface locations;" and that the statute further specifies that such locators, notwithstanding their extralateral rights, shall have no authority to enter upon the surface of a claim owned or possessed by another. But the appellants must find in the same statute the full measure of their own right. What are the rights that are given by the patent to the owners of the St. Louis claim? They are given the right of possession of the surface and of everything within their own claim, except the veins or lodes therein which may have their apices in the surface of another claim, so as to give the owner of the latter extralateral rights, and they are given the right to follow outside of their side lines and into adjoining claims all veins or lodes which have their apices in their own claims, so as to confer extralateral rights. This is their right, and no more. There is no warrant for saying that they have any general right of exploration within land of an adjoining patented claim, whether upon or below the surface. The right of exploration is given for the purpose of making discovery of mineral. Of what avail would be the right of exploration if no benefit could be obtained from discovery made thereby? The ground covered by a subsisting, valid mineral location is open to exploration only by the owner thereof. The statute gives the appellants the right to follow the vein which they were seeking to reach by the tunnel, but it confers upon them no right to approach it from any point other than from the vein or lode itself. The mining laws, as we construe them, grant to a mineral locator more than the mere right to the surface of his claim and to the veins or lodes which have their apices therein. The statute (§ 2319 [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424]) declares "the lands" in which valuable mineral deposits are found to be open to occupation and purchase; and § 2325 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1429) provides that "a patent for any land claimed and located for valuable deposits may be obtained in the following manner." These provisions tend to indicate that the patent when issued is a grant of land with all the rights incident to common-law ownership. The reason for specifying in the description of the grant the "veins, lodes, and ledges" is for the purpose of defining what is granted in addition to the land; namely, the right to pursue such veins, lodes, and ledges extralaterally in case they depart from the perpendicular and extend beyond the side lines of the claim. This view is in accord with the trend of all the decisions to which our attention has been directed. In Parrot Silver & Copper Co. v. Heinze, 25 Mont. 139, 53 L. R. A. 491, 87 Am. St. Rep. 386, 64 Pac. 326, the supreme court of Montana held, in substance, that the owner of a mining claim is prima facie the owner of a vein or lode found at a depth of 1,300 feet within the vertical planes of the lines of his own claim, and that that presumption would prevail until it was shown that the vein had its outcrop in the surface of some other located claim in such a way as to give to the owners of the latter the right to pursue it on its downward course. The court said: "Upon a valid location of a definite portion of land is founded the right of possession. The patent grants the fee, not to the surface and ledge only, but to the land containing the apex of the ledge. The right to follow the ledge upon its dip between the vertical planes of the parallel end lines extending in their own direction, when it departs beyond the vertical planes of the side lines, is an expansion of the rights which would be conferred by a common-law grant." Of similar import is State ex rel. Anaconda Cop- per Min. Co. v. District Court, 25 Mont. 504, 65 Pac. 1020.

In Doe v. Waterloo Min. Co. 54 Fed. 935, Judge Ross said: "Except as modified by the statute, no reason is perceived why one who acquires the ownership or possession of such lands should not hold them with and subject to the incidents of ownership and possession at common law."

In Consolidated Wyoming Gold Min. Co. v. Champion Min. Co. 63 Fed. 540, Judge Hawley said: "Hands off of any and every thing within my surface lines, extending vertically downward, until you prove that you are working upon and following a vein which has its apex within your surface claim."

We find no error in the decree of the Circuit Court. The decree is affirmed.

Affirmed by Supreme Court of United States May 2, 1904.

COLORADO SUPREME COURT.

CLIPPER MINING COMPANY, Piff. in Err.,

v.

ELI MINING & LAND COMPANY et al.

(29 Colo. 377.)

1. The rejection by the Land Department of an application for a patent for a placer mining claim for the reason that there was not such a showing by the applicant as entitled him to a patent is not conclusive against the validity of the claim in a subsequent proceeding before the courts to establish it against subsequent locations of lode claims.

2. An entry upon a placer location to prospect for unknown lodes is a trespass, and no valid title to a lode claim can be initiated thereby, unless the placer owner has abandoned his claim, waives the trespass, or is estopped to complain of it.

On Rehearing.

3. Leave to file a supplemental record in support of a petition for rehearing will not be granted to bring up proceedings of the trial court which occurred subsequent to the final judgment, if the matters were all within the knowledge of the plaintiff in error before the original bill of exceptions was approved and signed.

(Steele, J., dissents.)

(April 8, 1902.)

ERROR to the District Court for Lake County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to establish title to a mining location. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas, Bryant, & Lee, with Messrs. Hall & Babbitt, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. John M. Maxwell, John A. Ewing, Charles Cavender, and Walter W. Davis for defendants in error.

Campbell, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error (defendant below) owns four lode mining claims, situate in Lake county, called the "Capital," "Clipper," "Congress," and "Castle" lodes, and the defendants in error (plaintiffs below) own the "Searl" placer mining claim, within the boundaries of which these lode claims are located. The present controversy relates to the territory thus in conflict. The placer was the prior location, and was made in the year 1877. The plaintiff in error having made application in the Land Office for patent of its lode mines, the defendants in error filed therein an adverse claim, and within the statutory time brought this action in the district court of Lake county to enforce it. The plaintiffs rely upon a prior location of the conflicting territory as part of their placer claim. The complaint is in the ordinary form in actions of this character. After a general denial of the material allegations of the complaint, the answer sets up four separate defenses, all of which grow out of the following facts, which, in varying language, are set up in each defense: On the 12th of December, 1877, A. D. Searl and others located the Searl placer, and on the NOTE.—As to lodes or veins within placer claims, see also, in this series, Mt. Rosa Min. Mill. & Land Co. v. Palmer, 50 L. R. A. 289, and note.

5th of July, 1878, applied for a patent therefor. Numerous protests were made against it, and on the 10th of November, 1882, an amended application was filed, against which protests were likewise made, upon the ground that the same was not placer ground, and was only valuable for lode claims, or town site purposes. The Land Department ordered a special investigation to ascertain the character of the ground and the good faith of the applicant. The special agent declared that the land was not placer ground, and on the strength of his report a hearing was ordered before the local land office of the district, the result of which was a dismissal of the application; for it was not then made to appear, as a present fact, that the ground was distinctively valuable for mining purposes, or that the applicant had made the improvements required by statute. This ruling was affirmed by the commissioner of the Land Office, and in turn by the Secretary of the Interior. Twelve days after the latter's decision, the grantors of defendant company entered upon the ground within the boundaries of the placer location, and thereafter located thereon the lode claims in question. The special defenses sought to be interposed were substantially: First, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover, because, upon the previous application for a patent of the Searl placer, there was a decision of the Land Department that the ground included within its boundaries was not placer ground, and the attempted location was for that reason void, and such decision was res judicata of the present controversy; second, assuming the existence of a prior valid placer location, nevertheless defendant, prior to the time patent was asked, went upon the placer surface area, and made locations of lode claims, which were then and theretofore known to exist, and, therefore, in law, the same were a part of the unappropriated public domain, and subject to location as lode claims. There was a replication by plaintiffs, denying the new and special matters of defense, and upon the issues thus joined, in a trial to the court without a jury, the findings were that the Searl placer was duly located as required by law in the year 1877, and thereafter the annual labor had been performed as the statute provides, and that defendant's grantors had discovered the lode claims within the boundaries, and subsequent to the location, of the Searl placer. Based upon these findings of fact, the conclusion of law was drawn that a prior location of a placer carries with it the exclusive right of possession of the surface included within the exterior boundaries, and a prospector might not enter thereupon and prospect for, or discover, a lode claim before application for the placer patent is made, unless by abandonment the placer claimant has lost his rights; and, there being no evidence of such loss, it was accordingly held that the acts of defendant in entering upon the valid subsisting placer location did not initiate any right whatever. Judgment was therefore entered in favor of the owner of the placer location, and to reverse it this writ of error is prosecuted.

1. It is insisted by plaintiff in error that the Land Department, with which is intrusted the determination of such questions, has declared this placer location void, because not on placer ground, and that such determination is decisive of the present controversy. It is unquestionably the law that findings of fact by the Land Department as to matters within its jurisdiction are conclusive upon the courts whenever a collateral attack is made upon them. They may, in a proper proceeding, be impeached for fraud or mistake, but not in actions like the present. This rule, however, has no application to the facts in this record. The application for a patent to the placer was rejected, but there was no decision that the ground in question was not placer ground, but merely that, as a then present fact, there was not such a showing by the applicant as entitled him to a patent. Amended applications for a patent of a mining claim are permissible under the practice in the Land Department. There was no attempt finally or definitely to determine that the ground was not placer ground, or that the location was void; and to that effect are its own decisions, as will be seen by reference to the official reports. 7 Copp. Landowner, 36; Re Searl Placer, 11 Land Dec. 441; Re Clipper Min. Co. 22 Land Dec. 527. In the last case, the Secretary of the Interior, in speaking of the contention made in this very case, says: "The judgment of the Department in the Searl Placer Case went only to the extent of rejecting the application for patent. The department did not assume to declare the location of the placer void, as contended by counsel, nor did the judgment affect the possessory rights of the contestant to it." See also Clipper Min. Co. v. Searl, 29 Land Dec. 137. Indeed, the question as to the character of the land sought to be appropriated by claimants under the public land laws is reserved,—unless under the law referred to some court,—and may be passed upon by the Department until patent issues. Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030. This court in Beals v. Cone, 27 Colo. 473, 83 Am. St. Rep. 92, 62 Pac. 948, held that a decision of the Land Department like the one in question is equivalent to nothing more than a judgment as of nonsuit, and not conclusive upon the Department itself, or upon the parties. An additional reason why the plea of res judicata cannot be sustained is that in the former proceeding the parties are not the same as those in the present action.

2. The principal question involved is much more important and difficult of solution. In discussing this feature of the case, it must be considered as established that the Searl placer was an existing valid location at the time of the attempted location of the lode claims. We make this statement, as counsel for plaintiff in error themselves admit that such issue was present in the case, and was determined by the trial court upon conflicting evidence, and, as bearing upon this point, they make no question but that the same was rightly determined. The question, therefore, is presented whether, and, if so, in what circumstances, one may, before application for a patent of a prior valid placer location is made, go upon the same for the purpose of prospecting the ground, and thereafter make a location of a lode claim based on a discovery thereafter and thus made of a vein or lode therein. In Aurora Lode v. Bulger Hill & N. Gulch Placer, 23 Land Dec. 95, it was held by the Secretary of the Interior that the discovery and location of a placer mining claim establishes in the owner the right to the possession of the superficial area within its boundaries for all purposes connected with, and incident to, the use and operation of the same as a placer mining claim, but that such location does not operate to give the right of possession to known veins or lodes within its limits, or preclude the right of discovery and location thereof by others. It was also held that a judicial award of the right of possession to an adverse placer claimant, as against a lode applicant, does not preclude subsequent departmental inquiry upon the allegation of the lode claimant that the placer claim embraced known lodes or veins, where it appears that such question was not at issue before the court for determination by its judgment. This case was referred to with approval by this court in Mt. Rosa Min. Mill. & Land Co. v. Palmer, 26 Colo. 56, 50 L. R. A. 289, 77 Am. St. Rep. 245, 56 Pac. 176. In the latter case the facts were that lode claims were known to exist, and were also duly located within the limits of a previously located placer claim before patent of the latter was applied for. A patent for the placer having been issued in such circumstances, it was held that, inasmuch as the applicant did not at the time mention the lode claims, or claim them by virtue of lode locations, they were excluded from the grant of his patent; and, as it further appeared that the locators of these lode claims went upon the placer ground, and made locations upon veins known to exist before the application for patent was made, the conclusion was that the patentee of the placer could not recover possession of the lode claims, for they were properly located. The court said that in making them no right of the placer owner was invaded, and that their validity was not affected by the fact that they were made within the surface boundaries of a prior placer location. For the purposes of the case, it must have been assumed as true that when the entry by the locators of the lode claims was made the lodes themselves were known to exist. If the facts of the case at bar were the same as those in the Mt. Rosa Case, we would, under its doctrine, be obliged to reverse the judgment; but they are essentially different, in at least one particular, to which we shall hereafter refer. But, before passing to that, we notice the contention of defendants in error that in Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co. 27 Colo. 1, 50 L. R. A. 209, 83 Am. St. Rep. 17, 59 Pac. 607, 618, we have virtually held that one who has made a valid location of a placer claim has for all purposes exclusive right of possession thereto, so long as he complies with the law, and that the territory embraced therein is not subject to adverse location by a claimant of the same ground, under a subsequent lode location, though the lode is known to exist before application for patent is made. Our decision in this case was not intended to qualify the doctrine established in the Mt. Rosa Case. In the Calhoun Case, where a lode location was involved, we were not considering, as was true in the Mt. Rosa Case, the kind or extent of possession which follows a valid location of a placer claim. What was said in the Calhoun Case was true as applied to a lode claim, for the right of possession of the lode claim includes the entire surface area. In the Mt. Rosa Case, however, wherein were defined the rights of a placer claimant, we said that a placer location gives a qualified possession of the ground located; that is to say, it confers upon the owner the exclusive right of possession of the surface area for all purposes incident to the use and operation of the same as a placer mining claim, and all unknown lodes or veins, but does not give the right of possession to known veins within its limits. It is obvious that the facts of the case in hand do not bring it within the principles laid down in the Mt. Rosa Case. If, in the case at bar, the lode claims were known to exist at the time of the entry of defendant's grantors upon the Searl placer, under the decision in the Mt. Rosa Case the entry was not unlawful; but if, on the contrary, the veins were then unknown, by the same decision the right of possession of this ground belonged to the owners of the placer location. Their right of possession included these unknown veins, and the entry for prospecting was a trespass, and no title could thereby be initiated. As the evidence was not brought up in the bill of exceptions, we must assume, in support of the judgment below, that the proof was against the defendant upon this point. Indeed, the specific finding of the trial court that defendant's grantors went upon plaintiffs' prior existing placer location and discovered and located lodes therein involves the finding that the lodes were unknown at the time of the entry; for if they were known, they were not discovered by the prospectors, but were already subject to location by them, and if then unknown, the placer owner was entitled to their exclusive possession, and entry upon them by others constituted a trespass, and could not initiate title. Our conclusion, therefore, is that one may not go upon a prior valid placer location to prospect for unknown lodes, and get title to lode claims thereafter discovered and located in this manner and within the placer boundaries, unless the placer owner has abandoned his claim, waives the trespass, or by his conduct is estopped to complain of it. If the trial court intended to rule that in no circumstances may one, before application for a patent of a placer claim, go upon the ground within its exterior boundaries for the purpose of locating a lode, it went too far; yet, as general language in an opinion must be taken in connection with the facts of the particular case, the ruling here should be limited to the facts disclosed by the record, and no prejudicial error was committed. For, under the authorities, a prospector may not enter upon a prior placer location for the purpose of prospecting for, or locating, unknown lodes or veins; and, to uphold the judgment, we must presume that the evidence before the trial court showed that the veins or lodes upon which defendant's grantors based their locations were unknown when they entered upon the Searl placer for the purpose of prospecting. The mere fact, then, that the judgment may have been based upon a legal proposition—too broadly stated as a universal rule—that in no case may a location of a lode claim be made within the boundaries of a prior valid placer location,—a legal conclusion which, as we have said, is only partially right,—is not, under the facts of this case, sufficient to work a reversal; for certainly a lode location may not thus be made except of a known lode. Though a prospector may believe that within the limits of a placer location a lode may exist, and by development work be disclosed, he has not the right to enter thereupon for the purpose of exploiting the ground to confirm his belief.

The judgment is affirmed.

A petition for rehearing having been filed, the following response was handed down March 3, 1902:

1. After the petition of plaintiff in error for a rehearing was presented, it asked leave to file a supplemental record to bring up proceedings in the district court which occurred subsequent to final judgment, in which, for the first time, alleged errors of that tribunal are called to our attention. These proceedings were attacked by motions below, upon which the rulings were against plaintiff in error. The objections and exceptions thereto were not preserved by a bill, as required by our practice, and for this reason alone they might now be disregarded. But, in addition to this, some of the matters embodied in the supplemental transcript were within the knowledge of plaintiff in error at and prior to the trial below, and all of them before the original bill of exceptions was approved and signed by the trial judge, and long before the original transcript was lodged in this court. They were, therefore, as well known to plaintiff in error before the cause was argued and submitted in this court, and before the original opinion was handed down, as they were when this application was made. It is clear that the request should be denied. Our practice precludes a party, upon a petition for a rehearing, to raise new questions. Lamar Canal Co. v. Amity Land & Irrig. Co. 26 Colo. 370, 77 Am. St. Rep. 261, 58 Pac. 600; Orman v. Ryan Bros. 25 Colo. 383, 55 Pac. 168; Water Supply & Storage Co. v. Larimer & W. Irrig. Co. 24 Colo. 322, 46 L. R. A. 322, 51 Pac. 496.

2. The petition for a rehearing is based upon three propositions: (a) The court erred in holding that the Secretary of the Interior, in the matter of the protest against Searl's application for a patent, did not decide that the ground was not placer ground, and that said judgment of the Land Department was not conclusive; (b) there was error in holding that, as matter of fact, the evidence in the court below did not show that the lode claims located by the plaintiff in error were known lodes at the time of the location, and that there was further error in holding that a lode location cannot be made within the limits of an existing placer location except upon a known lode or vein; (c) the court misconstrued the effect of the decisions in the cases of Aurora Lode v. Bulger Hill & N. Gulch Placer, 23 Land Dec. 95; and Mt. Rosa Min. Mill. & Land Co. v. Palmer, 26 Colo. 56, 50 L. R. A. 289, 77 Am. St. Rep. 245, 58 Pac. 176.

(a) We can add nothing under this head to what is contained in the foregoing opinion. No authority is cited, and no argument now made, which were not before us upon the original hearing. The authorities already referred to clearly refute the position of plaintiff in error. The decision of the Land Department in the case at bar was precisely the same in principle as that considered in the case of Beals v. Cone, 27 Colo. 473, 83 Am. St. Rep. 92, 62 Pac. 948; and plaintiff in error concedes that, if this court still adheres to the doctrine of that case, as it does, the present contention falls. In this connection we may add that, if the position of plaintiff in error is sound, it has no standing in this court; for the first decision ever made by the Land Department with respect to the mineral character of the Searl placer was in favor of the placer claimant in a contest between him and a town-site claimant. See 7 Copp, Landowner, 36. Such being the first decision of the Land Department, if, as plaintiff in error contends, it is res judicata as to the mineral character of the placer claim, the controversy is ended, and plaintiff in error cannot reopen that question.

(b) Where in the original opinion it is intimated that plaintiff in error admits that the trial court rightly determined that the Searl placer was an existing valid location at the time of the attempted location of the lode claims, it was not our intention to say that the admission was voluntary, but only that the finding having been made upon conflicting evidence, under the established rule in this jurisdiction the plaintiff in error, as well as the court, for the purposes of this review, is concluded by it. The transcript does not purport to contain all of the evidence. The abstract recites that certain evidence was introduced in behalf of the plaintiffs tending to establish their cause of action, and certain other testimony in behalf of the defendant to establish its defenses. In such circumstances, we cannot investigate to ascertain on which side the preponderance of the evidence is. Indeed, there has never been any serious contention that the findings of fact of the trial court were not sustained by the evidence. In the case of Fanny Rawlings Min. Co. v. Tribe, 29 Colo. 302, 68 Pac. 284, it was said: "Appellate courts must assume, in the absence of specific and unambiguous findings of fact to the contrary, that the lower court intended to find those facts which are responsive to the issues made by the pleadings, and essential to the judgment rendered." Let this rule be applied to the case at bar. The defendant alleged, and the plaintiffs denied, that the lode claims were known to exist before application for a placer patent. The findings were that the locators of the lode claim had not the right to go upon the territory included within the placer location for the purpose of prospecting and locating lodes. Possibly we have not hitherto made sufficiently prominent the fact that a patent for the placer was applied for long before an attempt was made to locate the lode claims,—the original application in the year 1878 or 1879, the exact date being immaterial. An amended application was made in the year 1882, which was rejected by the Secretary of the Interior in November, 1890, and it was not until after this last date that the locators of the lode claims made an entry upon the placer location. It may be true, as counsel for plaintiff in error says, that a belief existed in Leadville that this territory was underlaid with mineral; but, so far as we are able to determine, there does not seem to have been any knowledge of that fact, so far as the territory in controversy is concerned, until after the entry by defendant's grantors. At all events, the application for a placer patent was made eleven or twelve years before the alleged right to the lode claims was initiated. Before it can be said that a lode is known to exist, there must be actual knowledge, as distinguished from supposition or surmise. Sullivan v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 143 U. S. 431, 36 L. ed. 214, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555. And, in order to uphold the judgment, we shall assume, as very properly we may, that the trial court, as a matter of fact, found that the lodes were not known to exist until after the application for a patent was made. Indeed, we do not see what other finding could possibly be made when it is considered that the locators of the lode claims did not enter upon the placer claim to prospect until years after its owners had applied for a patent. And, for aught that appears to the contrary,—which is the contention of defendants in error in argument,—the lodes may have been discovered and their existence thus first become known only by sinking a shaft to a depth of several hundred feet beneath the surface, and that the entry by the lode locators was forcible and against the will of the placer claimant.

(c) Counsel insists that we have misconstrued the decisions in the cases of the Aurora Lode and the Mt. Rosa Company, upon which we commented in the former opinion. We have given attentive consideration to their argument in that behalf, and, after carefully rereading the opinions, are satisfied that we have not misconceived their effect. In the syllabus of the Aurora Case it is said that the location of a mining claim "does not operate to give title or right of possession to veins or lodes within its limits, or preclude the right of discovery and location thereof by others." This language seems to be taken substantially from what is said in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior at page 101 of the official report. The statement, removed from its proper setting, may be broad enough to include unknown, as well as known, veins or lodes; but, considered, as it should be, in connection with the context, it is clear that the Secretary intended it to apply only to known lodes, for he expressly says, in speaking of the general rule, if the veins or lodes were "not known to exist at that date [i. e., when patent for placer claim is applied for], the placer patent will carry the title to them." This can mean nothing else than that, if lodes or veins are not known to exist within the limits of a placer location at the time when patent for the latter is applied for, they belong to the placer claimant, and one may not thereafter make an entry upon the placer claim for the purpose of discovering and locating them. But if the decision of the Secretary of the Interior in this case can, by any canons of construction, be considered authority for the contention of plaintiff in error here, that a prospector may, without restriction, within the limits of a prior valid placer claim, prospect for, and thereafter lawfully locate, lodes not known to exist at the time of the application for a placer patent, its binding effect would seem to be overcome by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Bennett v. Harkrader, 158 U. S. 441, 39 L. ed. 1046, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863, and in many other decisions of that and other courts. The learned counsel for plaintiff in error were permitted, amici curiæ, to file a brief in the Mt. Rosa Case, and we then had the benefit of their learning and research, and the record in the case at bar was before us when that opinion was prepared by Mr. Justice Goddard. It was with full knowledge of the issues herein, and as particularly applicable to the argument of this plaintiff in error made in that case, which is the same as it is here, that the following language found on page 61, 26 Colo. page 296, 50 L. R. A., page 250, 77 Am. St. Rep., and page 178, 56 Pac., was used: "While we recognize to its full extent the rule that precludes the initiation of a right through a trespass upon the lawful possession of another, we think, under the established facts in this case, appellant is not in a position to invoke its protection. The lodes in question were known to exist prior to the application for patent, and, appellant not having taken the necessary steps to obtain them, they were open to location by others at the time they were located by the grantors of appellee. In making the locations, no right of appellant was invaded, and their validity, therefore, is in no way affected by the fact 64 L. R. A.

that they were made within the surface boundaries of a prior placer location." We then had in mind, as we do now, the distinction between the facts of that case and the case at bar. There it was unquestioned that the lode claims were known to exist within the limits of the placer location before an application for patent for the latter was made. In the case at bar, as we have seen, the findings of fact of the trial court, which upon this review are conclusive upon us, are that the lode claims were not known to exist until long after the application for the placer patent was filed. The distinction is vital, and the rule in the two cases is different. In Del Monte Min. & Mill. Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. 171 U. S. 55, 43 L. ed. 72, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, the court, in making answer to questions certified to it by the United States circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit, said that "the lines of a junior-lode location may be laid within, upon, or across the surface of a valid senior location for the purpose of defining for or securing to such junior location underground or extralateral rights not in conflict with any rights of the senior location." And this answer, plaintiff in error now contends, is authority for its contention to which we have just referred. With this we cannot agree. Mr. Justice Brewer, who wrote the opinion in that case, expressly recognizes the fact that no rights can be initiated as the result of a trespass, and on page 79, 171 U. S., page 82, 43 L. ed., and page 904, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep., says that the form in which the question is put excludes any impairment or disturbance of the substantial rights of the prior locator; and he quotes with approval the statement from 1 Lindley, Mines, § 363, that "a subsequent locator may not invade the surface territory of his neighbors and include within his boundaries any part of a prior valid and subsisting location. But conflicts of surface area are more than frequent." While the learned judge was speaking of lode claims, the principle is just as applicable to a placer claim, to the extent of the surface rights which belong to it. So long, therefore, as lode claims are not known to exist within the limits of the prior placer claim at or before the time of the application for placer patent, it is unlawful for one to go within its limits for the purpose of prospecting for, and with the hope of discovering and locating, them.

The application to file a supplemental record and the petition for a rehearing, are each denied.

Steele, J., dissents.

Affirmed by Supreme Court of United States, May 2, 1904.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

DEACONESS HOME & HOSPITAL, Appt.,
v.

Amelia BONTJES.

(207 Ill. 553.)

1. A decree enjoining the operation of a hospital in a building during the continuance of its relative proximity to complainant's residence, and of the present internal and external construction of the building, sufficiently corresponds with a prayer that defendant be enjoined from further operating the hospital.
2. Equity will not wait for the determination of the fact of nuisance in an action at law before enjoining the operation of a hospital in close proximity to a private residence, where the evidence clearly shows that it not only destroys the peace, quiet, and comfort of those living in the residence, but seriously and injuriously affects their health, and occasions irreparable injury.
3. A hospital will not be permitted to be conducted in such proximity to a private residence that the sights, sounds, and smells which are a necessary part of its operation become an intolerable nuisance to those dwelling in the residence.
4. That the persons responsible for the management of a hospital were not aware that it was being conducted so as to be a nuisance to adjoining property owners is no objection to the granting of an injunction against its operation in such manner.

(February 17, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Appellate Court, Second District, affirming a judgment of the Circuit Court for Peoria County enjoining the operation of a hospital. Affirmed.

Statement by Scott, J.:

Mrs. Amelia Bontjes, a widow, bought a half lot, 50 feet wide and 323 feet deep, upon a bluff in a residence district in the city of Peoria, at a cost of over $5,000, and in 1894 built thereon a dwelling house, which she has ever since occupied as her home. She also built a barn. She expended about $13,000 in improvements. Her family consists of herself, her daughter, her daughter's husband, and their little child. When she bought this tract and built her house thereon, the lot next east, 100 feet wide, had upon it a brick house, designed for and occupied by a private family. Its main rooms and most of its windows faced west. Mrs. Bontjes built her house with the rooms and windows mainly on the east side. Thus the living apartments and most of the windows of the two houses face each other. There is a space of 30 or 35 feet between the two houses, 2 or 3 feet of which is owned by Mrs. Bontjes and the rest is part of the lot on which the brick house stands. Next to the brick house is a walk by which to pass between the front and rear of those premises, and between that walk and Mrs. Bontjes's lot line is a driveway for teams and carriages, used in connection with the brick house, and the only means of access to the brick house for conveyances. The front of each lot is occupied by a terraced slope to the street, which is nearly 100 feet below. In October, 1898, a corporation was organized under the laws of this state, named the "Deaconess Home & Hospital of the Central Illinois Conference," having its office and principal place of business at Peoria. Its purpose was declared to be "to establish and maintain a Deaconess home and hospital in co-operation with the Methodist Episcopal Deaconess Society," and "to provide for and carry on all the varied religious, educational, humane, and philanthropic work which may properly come within the province of such an organization, in accordance with the discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States." In November, 1898, the society purchased the brick residence and the lot on which it stood for $12,000, and established there a Deaconess home. In the spring of 1900 it made some changes in the interior of the building, and on May 24, 1900, it opened there a hospital for the care and treatment of the sick and injured, which it has ever since maintained. On November 1, 1900, Mrs. Bontjes filed a bill in the court below to enjoin the Deaconess Home from further carrying on and operating said home and hospital. The facts which she claimed entitled her to that relief are set out at length in the bill. The defendant answered, admitting some allegations and denying others. The cause was referred to a master to take and report proofs, with his conclusions of law and fact. The proofs were taken from January to May, 1901. The master's report was in favor of complainant. Defendant filed objections thereto, which the master overruled. The report was filed in court, and defendant filed exceptions thereto. The court did not act directly upon these exceptions, but entered a decree finding the facts in detail, ending with the conclusion that defendant's hospital is a private nuisance, and ought to be abated; that the equities are with the complainant, and she has no adequate remedy at law. It was decreed that defendant be permanently restrained from carrying on or operating a hospital in the building on defendant's said premises "during the continuance of the relative proximity of the complainant's said residence and the building of defendant heretofore used on its said lot as a hospital, and of the present internal and external construction of defendant's said building." This is an appeal by defendant from said decree.

NOTE.—As to right to recover damages for erection of smallpox hospital near private property, see, in this series, Frazer v. Chicago, 51 L. R. A. 308.

For injunction against maintenance of pest house, see Baltimore v. Fairfield Improv. Co. 40 L. R. A. 494.
64 L. R. A.

From the time the hospital was opened till the testimony was closed the hospital had been run at substantially its full capacity. During the first ten months it had 150 to 160 patients. The barn back of the brick house was made an annex to the hospital to increase its capacity. From complainant's living rooms, up stairs and down, the operations of the hospital were often visible day and night. What was said in the operating room during an operation in summer time, when the windows were necessarily open, was often heard in the bedrooms in complainant's house. The inmates of complainant's house, looking from its rooms, saw patients in the hospital entirely nude and others partially disrobed while surgical and other operations were being performed upon them. They saw surgical instruments, naked human limbs held aloft, and a fountain syringe used upon patients. They saw the bedding changed under patients too ill to be removed from the bed. They heard moans and groans, and patients crying and vomiting. When surgical operations took place at night, they were performed under a bunch of six electric lights, which made complainant's rooms opposite light enough to read by, unless the reflection was excluded by keeping the shades down, which was not practicable in warm weather, when ventilation made it necessary to keep complainant's windows open. Soiled and bloody bandages and other unsightly articles from the sickroom were deposited in a receptacle in the back yard, and afterwards taken out by a scavenger in such a way as to make the sight offensive. Whenever a patient died or recovered, the mattress, quilts, and sheets and the rubber cloth used on the patient's bed were ventilated in the back yard near complainant's yard, and in full view. As defendant's barn or annex was only 50 feet from the hospital proper, the space for such ventilation was limited. This airing of bedding was of daily occurrence. The odor of iodoform and other drugs from the hospital pervaded complainant's house, passing through the open windows in the summer time and through the cold-air duct in the winter; this effect being afterwards obviated for the winter by taking in the cold air for the furnace from a different side of the house. Ambulances conveying sick patients or persons injured in accidents came in over the driveway at all hours of the day and night, passing close to complainant's living rooms and bedrooms. Physicians were daily driving in over that driveway, hitching their horses there, and frequently driving away late at night or in the early hours of the morning, after attending patients and performing surgical operations. If it was warm weather, complainant's windows were necessarily open, and also the hospital windows, and the sounds connected with the receipt and handling of persons seriously hurt or very ill, both outside and also inside the hospital, would very often be heard in complainant's house. From time to time coffins were brought to the hospital, and afterwards removed with dead bodies in them. This was generally done at night, in which case complainant and her family were usually awakened by the noises and aware of the cause. It has, however been done several times during the mealtime, and the ambulance would be but a few feet from complainant's dining room. Sometimes the dead patient was not removed in a coffin, but on a litter, the form showing through a cloth laid over the body. Patients who had sufficiently recovered to take exercise were caused to walk back and forth between the houses, attended and supported by a nurse. In such cases sometimes the patient was wrapped in a blanket or the head was bandaged. In very warm weather patients were brought out and placed on the front porch or in the front yard, and placed in easy chairs and hammocks. The nurses fanned the patients, and administered medicines to them, and took their temperature, in the front yard. Women about to be confined, and who had come to the hospital for confinement, sat upon the front porch in hot weather, clad in loose garments. These uses by defendant of its front yard and porch precluded complainant and her family from using her adjoining front yard and porch, and especially were they debarred from entertaining their guests and callers upon her front yard and porch. We have not stated all the offensive details given in complainant's proof, but only an outline thereof. Defendant's proof did not overcome the case thus made. Two persons who have at different times acted as superintendent of the hospital testified they were unable to see how some of those things could have occurred, and that some others must have arisen from disobedience of rules by attendants, and officers of defendant expressed their desire to do what they reasonably could to avoid giving offense, but no substantial attempt was made to deny the main specific facts detailed in complainant's proof. The events and incidents we have referred to greatly disturbed the comfort and nerves and sleep of the inmates of complainant's home, and she and her family were greatly annoyed and distressed in mind. Complainant was deprived of the ordinary use and enjoyment of her property. In the main these sights and sounds and smells were not abnormal, but were the usual and necessary accompaniments of a busy hospital, conducted with a view to the proper treatment of persons who are in great pain and distress.

The foregoing statement of the facts of this case appears in the opinion of the appellate court herein, and such statement has been adopted by us. It further appears that typhoid fever and erysipelas were treated at this hospital, and the medical evidence was to the effect that these diseases were contagious, and might be contracted in the Bontjes residence when the windows of the hospital were open and the wind was blowing from that direction. It further appears that both appellee and her daughter were made sick and nervous by the sights, sounds, odors, and influences to which they were subjected by this institution; that neither was able to regain her health at home, but both were obliged to go elsewhere for several weeks to recover. The appellate court affirmed the decree rendered on the circuit, and the case comes to this court by a further appeal.

Messrs. Sheen & Miller and Winslow Evans, for appellant:

Courts of equity leave the question of nuisances and their damages to courts of law, except where the injury is irreparable or permanent, and results from a wrongful act.

Wahle v. Reinbach, 76 Ill. 322; Barrett v. Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Asso. 159 Ill. 391, 31 L. R. A. 109, 50 Am. St. Rep. 168, 42 N. E. 891.

Where not a nuisance per se the nuisance must be admitted, or irreparable injury alleged and clearly proved.

Oswald v. Wolf, 129 Ill. 200, 21 N. E. 839.

The injury complained of must be permanent or continuous, and such as cannot be prevented except by injunction.

Nelson v. Milligan, 151 Ill. 467, 38 N. E. 239.

The use of property, to be a nuisance, must 64 L. R. A.

be unwarrantable, unreasonable, or unlawful, and must result in injury to another.

Laflin & R. Powder Co. v. Tearney, 131 Ill. 326, 7 L. R. A. 262, 19 Am. St. Rep. 34, 23 N. E. 389.

A person cannot obtain relief in court against an injury that might be prevented by that person's own effort.

Hartford Deposit Co. v. Calkins, 186 Ill. 104, 57 N. E. 863; Kramer v. Northern Hotel Co. 185 Ill. 612, 57 N. E. 847.

A jury trial is generally allowed in cases of alleged nuisances where they are not nuisances per se.

Dunning v. Aurora, 40 Ill. 481.

Most of the matters complained of as a nuisance are not subjects of judicial cognizance.

N. K. Fairbank Co. v. Nicolai, 167 Ill. 248, 47 N. E. 360.

The relief prayed and that granted do not correspond, and must do so to be valid.

Dorn v. Geuder, 171 Ill. 362, 49 N. E. 492.

Relief by injunction will be denied where it is doubtful if the injury complained of will be permanent.

Robb v. La Grange, 158 Ill. 21, 42 N. E. 77.

Special injury is the gist of an action concerning a nuisance, and it must be alleged and clearly proved.

McDonald v. English, 85 Ill. 236.

Special damages do not relate to degree, but to a different kind from those sustained by the public.

Chicago v. Union Bldg. Asso. 102 Ill. 380, 40 Am. Rep. 598; East St. Louis v. O'Flynn, 119 Ill. 200, 59 Am. Rep. 795, 10 N. E. 395.

Failing to speak when fairness and good conscience require it will estop, when to do so would operate unjustly.

Lloyd v. Lee, 45 Ill. 280; Nichols v. Murphy, 36 Ill. App. 205.

Mr. James A. Cameron for appellee.

Scott, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The first assignment of error to which our attention is called is that the relief granted does not correspond with the relief prayed in the bill. The prayer is that the defendant be "restrained and enjoined from further operating and carrying on said home and hospital." By the decree it is permanently restrained from carrying on and operating a hospital in the building which it now occupies "during the continuance of the relative proximity of the complainant's said residence and the building of the defendant heretofore used . . . as a hospital, and of the present internal and external construction of the defendant's said building." The relief granted is not as extensive as that prayed, but is not inconsistent therewith, and that granted is with in the prayer of the bill, and the decree is therefore sustained by the bill.

It is then urged that, as the hospital is not a nuisance per se, its operation cannot be enjoined until there has first been a determination by the verdict of a jury in an action at law that it is a nuisance. From the evidence in this case it is clear and certain that the hospital conducted by appellant is a private nuisance. It not only destroys the peace, quiet, and comfort of those living in the residence of appellee, but likewise seriously and injuriously affects their health, and occasions irreparable injury, within the meaning of the law. Under these circumstances equity will interfere by injunction, without waiting for a determination of the question of the existence of the nuisance in an action at law. Wahle v. Reinbach, 76 Ill. 322; Dierks v. Highway Comrs. 142 Ill. 197, 31 N. E. 496. If there is such contrariety of evidence that there remains a substantial doubt whether a nuisance exists, the question should first be determined in a suit at law. Oswald v. Wolf, 129 Ill. 200, 21 N. E. 839. In this case, however, there is no evidence which tends to show that a nuisance does not exist. The most that can be said for the evidence offered by appellant is that it indicates that the wrong is not of so serious a character as complainant charges, and that it may be lessened somewhat by certain precautions which appellant is willing to use hereafter. The proposed measures would not result in an entire removal of the nuisance. It is said that a screen may be erected between the two properties, and that the windows of the hospital may be kept closed and the curtains drawn on the side next the property of appellee. It is manifest that in the summer time the windows must be opened and the curtains drawn aside in both buildings for ventilation, and it is equally apparent that the screen would not prevent the cries of the suffering, the moans of the dying, and other offensive noises being heard in the home of the appellee; nor would such an obstruction entirely prevent the transmission of the smell of iodoform, ether, and other offensive substances; nor would the annoyance resulting from the frequent visits of the hearse and the ambulance to the hospital be materially lessened by the proposed precautions. The work in which appellant is engaged is philanthropy of the highest order, but the law will not permit it to be conducted in such a manner that it becomes an intolerable nuisance to those who are in no wise responsible for its location and operation.

44 L. R. A.

The statement is made that appellee had the power in her own hands, by mere request to those who were operating the hospital, to prevent the injury complained of; and it is insisted that she failed to speak when fairness and good conscience required her to make her objections known to the hospital authorities, and that she is therefore estopped to now seek the aid of a court of equity. Without stopping to consider at all this proposition of law, it is sufficient to say that the argument is based upon a misapprehension of the evidence. Prior to the establishment of the hospital, appellee objected to its location in the building in question. She made these objections known to persons who were raising money by subscription to set the hospital on its feet, and offered a donation if it was located elsewhere. From the testimony of Mr. Walter Wyatt, secretary of the board of trustees of appellant, it appears that complaint was made to him by Cameron, the attorney for appellee, prior to the beginning of this suit, of the manner in which the institution was conducted. Wyatt, in substance, invited this litigation by stating to the attorney that he saw no way out of the matter except to bring suit. Wyatt, however, reported the complaint to the trustees who took no action except to direct the superintendent to conduct the hospital in such a manner that there would be no complaint from anyone. This direction bore no practical fruit. The trustees testified that they did not know that the hospital was being conducted in a manner so offensive to those in the home of appellee; that, had they known of the condition of affairs, they would have minimized the evil as far as possible. This is no answer to the complaint. They were responsible for the management of the institution, and it was their duty to see that it was conducted in such a manner that the lawful rights of others were not infringed. From the evidence before us, this difficulty seems to come about from the fact that the grounds occupied by appellant are wholly inadequate in extent for the operation of a hospital of the character there conducted.

The judgment of the Appellate Court will be affirmed.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

CINCINNATI TOBACCO WAREHOUSE COMPANY, Appl.,

v.

J. T. WEBSTER, Trustee, etc., of Leslie &
Whitaker, et al.

(.....Ky.....)

The sale by a receiver of the assets of an insolvent commission company will pass a claim for repayment of advances made to a produce buyer to enable him to procure produce to be shipped to the company for sale, together with a lien which had been expressly given by contract upon the property shipped to secure the advances.

(January 29, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Harrison County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover the proceeds of certain tobacco which had been sold under an order of the assignee of a produce buyer, and which were claimed by the successor of a commission merchant who had made advances upon it. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.
Mr. J. J. Blanton for appellant.

Barker, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Leslie & Whitaker resided in Harrison county, Kentucky, and were engaged in the business of buying and selling tobacco for speculation. The Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company was a Kentucky corporation, doing business in Cincinnati, Ohio. During the years 1898, 1899, and 1900 these parties had a contract between them by which the corporation advanced money to the firm from time to time, as they required it, which was invested in the purchase of tobacco, and then consigned to the corporation at its business place in Cincinnati for sale, with the express agreement that the corporation was to have a lien upon the tobacco so purchased, and the debt for advances, commissions, insurance, etc., should be paid out of the proceeds of the sales when made. Under this agreement the corporation, from August 31, 1899, to September 12, 1900, advanced Leslie & Whitaker the sum of $5,080.23, and during the same period of time they purchased and consigned, under the contract, 83 hogsheads of tobacco, all but 13 of which had been sold, and the proceeds applied to the extinguishment of the consignee's debt for advancements, at the time this controversy arose. Before the sale of the 13 hogsheads of tobacco above mentioned, and which are in controversy here, the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company became seriously involved financially, if not insolvent, and proper proceedings were had in the circuit court of Kenton county, by which it was placed in the hands of a receiver, and afterwards the receiver was authorized to and did sell at public auction in solido all of its assets, whether real, personal, or mixed, for the sum of $1,500,000, the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company becoming the purchaser at the sum named. This sale was confirmed by the court, and the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company, which seems to have been organized for this express purpose, stepped into the shoes of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company, taking up the business of the latter, and carrying it forward without commercial jar or jostle, as if no change had occurred. About this time, or shortly thereafter, Leslie & Whitaker became involved, and made a general assignment of all their property to W. T. Lafferty, of Harrison county, Kentucky, for the benefit of their creditors. The assignee, ascertaining that there were 13 hogsheads of tobacco belonging to his assignors, unsold, in the warehouse of the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company, ordered it sold. In accordance with this direction, the tobacco was sold, realizing the sum of $950. Afterwards certain creditors of Leslie & Whitaker set on foot such proceedings in bankruptcy that the firm were adjudged to be bankrupt under the United States bankruptcy act, and their assets passed into the hands of appellee J. T. Webster, as trustee, for the benefit of their creditors. After qualifying, the trustee instituted this action to recover of appellant the proceeds of the sale of the 13 hogsheads of tobacco which were sold under the order of the assignee, as above stated. This sum, amounting to $950, is the matter in controversy here. The question is one of law, there being no disputed questions of fact.

There is no dispute or question as to the regularity of the legal proceedings by which the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company purchased all of the assets of whatever kind of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company; as to the amount or time of the advancements made by the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company to Leslie & Whitaker; nor as to the fact that the tobacco shipped under the contract realized a sum insufficient to pay the amount of the advancement by $350. But it is contended by appellee that the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company did not acquire, by its purchase, the benefit of the contract existing between the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company and Leslie & Whitaker, or the lien which the latter had, under the express contract, on all the tobacco shipped for the payment of all the advancements made; that the lien of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company was a personal one, which did not pass by operation of law under the sale, and that, therefore, the 13 hogsheads of tobacco remaining unsold after the transfer by the court are to be considered as a matter separate and apart from the old contract, and that out of the proceeds appellant was entitled only to collect and receive its commission, drayage, insurance, etc., and had no right to apply it to the extinguishment of the unpaid balance originally due the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company. On the contrary, appellant contends that, having purchased at the sale by the receiver of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company all its assets, including the chose in action due from Leslie & Whitaker, consisting of the unpaid balance for the advancements made to them, it also acquired the lien under the contract, and with it the right to apply the proceeds of the sale of all the tobacco, including the 13 hogsheads, to extinguish the debt. If this can be done, there will still be a balance due appellant of $350. Upon trial of the case in the court below the learned chancellor entered the following judgment: "It appears further from this record that the whole of the tobacco bought by Leslie & Whitaker was delivered by them to the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company prior to the appointment of a receiver, and prior to the sale by decree of court of its effects. There can therefore be no question but that the factor's lien of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company was a complete lien, perfected by reducing the tobacco to possession. The only question in this case, then, is, Does the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company, by reason of its purchase at decretal sale of the demand of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company against Leslie & Whitaker (they being no parties to that suit, and not obtaining their consent), succeed to the rights of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company as against them or their general creditors, they having become bankrupt before a sale of the tobacco by the defendant (appellant)? Or, stating it more succinctly, does the purchase by defendant defeat or discharge the lien? It seems from the authorities that a lien of this character 'is a purely personal privilege, and can only be set up by the person to whom it accrued, and that he cannot assign his claim, so as to enable the assignee to set up the lien as a ground of claim or defense to an action for the property or its value as against the general owner.' The court holds that these transactions by which defendant (appellant) obtained the debt and the property destroyed the lien, and it is not available to the defendant in this action." It will be observed that the trial judge placed some stress upon the fact that the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company obtained its legal position with reference to the assets of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company without the knowledge or consent of Leslie & Whitaker. If this be important, we think the record shows conclusively that Leslie & Whitaker recognized the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company as the successor of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company, and as lawfully assuming and carrying out the latter's contract with them. Five of the hogsheads of tobacco in question were shipped to and received by the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company after it became the successor of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company; and Leslie & Whitaker received from it, upon request, the sum of $269 with which either to purchase tobacco or to pay for tobacco already purchased under the original contract. It seems to us that these facts, under all the circumstances of this case, would go very far towards establishing a ratification by Leslie & Whitaker of the transfer by the receiver of the insolvent corporation to appellant, if it were required to take that view in order to uphold appellant's lien in question; but we do not think this is necessary. It is true that the authorities hold that a common-law lien is a personal privilege, and not transferable by the assignment of the debt which it secures; but we think the court below erred in assuming that the lien of appellant is a common-law lien. Common-law liens arise by implication of law, and not by express contract. The lien here is an equitable one, growing out of the express contract between Leslie & Whitaker on the one part and the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company on the other, by which it was agreed that the latter should have a lien on the tobacco for all the advances made by it to the former, and which appellant claims passed to it by the assignment. Jones, in his work on Liens, very elaborately describes the difference between common-law and equitable liens, and in § 63, in describing equitable lien, says: "Where in terms the parties agree that one making advances for the purchase of merchandise to be shipped to him shall have a lien upon the same, the lien arises upon the purchase of the merchandise before it is consigned to the creditor. The lien in such case attaches to the merchandise purchased and in the hands of the debtor at the time of his bankruptcy, and may be asserted against the debtor's assignee in bankruptcy. Judge Story said that the possession of the property by the debtor was not a badge of fraud, or against the policy of the law, or in any manner to be deemed inconsistent with the just rights of his general creditors; and therefore the agreement to give a lien or equitable charge was binding upon the property in the hands of the assignee." In § 982, Id., it is said: "A common-law lien is not a proper subject of sale or assignment, for it is neither property nor is it a debt, but a right to retain property as security for a debt." And in § 983, still speaking of common-law liens: "A lien is a purely personal privilege, and can only be set up by the person to whom it accrued. He cannot assign his claim, so as to enable the assignee to set up the lien as a ground of claim or defense to an action for the property or its value as against the general owner." In § 991, however, the author says: "An equitable lien reserved by express agreement passes by an assignment of the debt it was created to secure. Such a lien does not depend upon possession, as does a common-law lien." The case of Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 28 L. ed. 1075, was in all respects similar in principle to the case at bar. There a merchant advanced money to a tanner with which to purchase hides to be manufactured into leather, under this agreement: "And it is further agreed that all the skins, whether green, in process of tanning, tanned, or tanned and finished, shall be considered as security for the refunding, with interest, of all the moneys advanced [him] by the party of the second part, and that all the skins shall be insured for their full value in good companies only." The tanner, after receiving large advances, became insolvent, and in the contest between his assignee and the merchant as to the lien of the latter on certain hides and leathers the Supreme Court said: "It was decided in Gregory v. Morris, 96 U. S. 619, 24 L. ed. 740, that the legal effect of such a contract is to create a charge upon the property, not in the nature of a pledge, but of a mortgage. Such a lien is good between the parties without a change of possession, even though void as against subsequent purchasers in good faith without notice and creditors levying executions or attachments; and, if followed by a delivery of possession, before the rights of third persons have intervened, it is good absolutely. Nor can it be reasonably doubted that this equitable lien was capable of enforcement. If Bayer [the tanner] had, in disregard and violation of his agreement, undertaken to divert the skins, whether in a finished or unfinished state, to some other and unauthorized use, it would have been in fraud of the rights of Hauselt [the merchant], and a court of equity would not have hesitated by an injunction to prevent the commission or continuance of the wrong. Bayer would, under such circumstances, be treated by a court of equity as a trustee fraudulently dealing with and misappropriating trust property, and Hauselt would be protected in his rights as owner of a beneficial interest in the property entitled to the enjoyment of the specific fruits of the agreement." In Brooks v. Staton, 79 Ky. 174, it is said by this court: "Manifestly, there is an equity in one who advances money on the agreement and faith that certain property shall be intrusted to him as a security which does not pertain to a general creditor, or to one who extends credit without reference to any particular fund or property as security. From the moment the advances are made there is an inchoate right in or to the property on the faith of which the advance was made, and this right becomes complete if the creditor with reasonable diligence pursues his right by reducing the property to possession before any other equity has intervened. Such contracts, when the money has been advanced, and before delivery of possession, are partly executed and partly executory. The delivery of possession completes the contract; and if, at the time the contract was entered into and the advances made, the parties acted in good faith, and there was no insolvency, and no design to prefer one creditor to another, the act of possession, when there are no intervening equities, relates back, and the contract is a unit from the time it was entered into and the advances made." This case was approved in a later case of Cook v. Brannin, 87 Ky. 101, 7 S. W. 877. In the case of Stahl v. Lowe, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 210, 38 S. W. 862, it was held that a transaction similar to the one involved in the case at bar created an equitable lien; and in the case of Atchison v. Jones, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 259, 1 S. W. 403, it was held: "A firm to which tobacco had been consigned for the purpose of securing advances made by them thereon, having made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, their assignee had the right to hold the tobacco for the purpose of securing the advances against the assignee of the con-signor, who, subsequent to the consignment, had also made an assignment for the benefit of creditors." The Cyclopædia of Law & Procedure, volume 4, p. 69, title, Assignments, states the rule thus: "In the absence of any stipulation . . . in the contract of assignment concerning the securities or other incidents, an unqualified assignment of a chose in action carries with it, as an incident to the chose, all securities held by the assignor as collateral to the claim, and all rights incidental thereto, and vests in the assignee the equitable title to such collateral securities and incidental rights. . . . As the right to the chose and its incidents pass to the assignee thereof, so does the right to the remedies which the assignor had for the enforcement of the same." In the case of Summers v. Kilgus, 14 Bush, 449, it was said: "The assignment of a debt carries with it a vendor's or mortgage lien, by which the debt is secured. This has been so often decided by this court as to render the citation of authority unnecessary."

NOTE.—For a case in this series holding that a factor's lien for commissions and expenditures is personal to him, and not transferable, see Barnes Safe & Lock Co. v. Bloch Bros. Tobacco Co. 22 L. R. A. 850.
64 L. R. A.

There is a vast difference between the narrow, rigid, personal right to merely retain possession of personal property until payment, which is known as a common-law lien, and an equitable lien arising by express contract between the parties, and which the needs of commerce render absolutely necessary in order to facilitate modern dealing between man and man. It requires no profound examination of the subject to realize how hopelessly crippled would be the industries and resources of the whole state if the farmer, the manufacturer, and the dealer could not obtain the aid of the capitalist in the advancement of their business: or that this aid very largely, if not wholly, depends on the ability of the borrower to make the lender secure by a lien on the specific product of the industry involved in the enterprise. The lien involved in this action is not the common-law lien of the factor for advancements, but an equitable lien, created by express contract. Sometimes these liens resemble each other very closely, and sometimes both statutory and equitable liens coincide, and are identical with, or declaratory of, common-law liens. When this happens, the latter are superseded by the former, for, although their forms and terms may resemble, the consequences which flow from their existence, as in the case at bar, are often divergent. Appellant, as assignee of the chose in action purchased at the receiver's sale, became invested thereby with the right to enforce the equitable lien which secured its payment to the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company.

Wherefore the judgment is reversed, with directions to dismiss the petition.

LOUISIANA SUPREME COURT.

George MUNTZ, Appt.,

v.

ALGIERS & GREYNA RAILWAY COMPANY et al.

(.....La.....)

- *1. A railroad corporation, by its very incorporation under the laws of the state, assumes as one of its primary obligations that it shall operate the road under such conditions as to properly secure the safety of the general public.
2. It is liable for injuries to persons caused by the wrongful or negligent operation of the cars upon the road, whether operated by itself or by another corporation to which it had leased it.

(November 30, 1903.)

*Headnotes by NICHOLLS, Ch. J.

NOTE.—As to liability of lessor of railroad for injuries caused by negligence of lessee, see also, in this series, Caruthers v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 44 L. R. A. 737, and note, and Harden v. North Carolina R. Co. 55 L. R. A. 781.
64 L. R. A.

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, Division A, in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged negligent killing of his minor child. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. P. F. Hennessey and W. J. Hennessey, for appellant:

A street railroad company cannot, unless authorized by the authority granting the franchise, lease or transfer its road and franchise with the right to exercise and operate the same, so as to escape liability for torts committed by the drivers or those in charge of the cars, even though the lessor has no control over the driver or employee by whose negligence the injury is inflicted. The lessee in that case will be regarded as the agent of the lessor, and the lessor will be responsible for all negligence of the lessee, including torts.

Middlesex R. Co. v. Boston & C. R. Co. 115 Mass. 347; Abbott v. Johnstown, G. & K. Horse R. Co. 80 N. Y. 30, 36 Am. Rep. 572; Wyman v. Penobscot & K. R. Co. 46 Me. 162; Freeman v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 28 Minn. 444, 10 N. W. 594; Braslin v. Somerville Horse R. Co. 145 Mass. 67, 13 N. E. 65; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 259, 41 Am. Rep. 221.

Railroads or street railways have no authority, unless authorized by legislative authority or general laws, to lease their franchises to another corporation or person, and such lease is ultra vires.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 837, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 30 L. ed. 83, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094; Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Brown, 17 Wall. 445, 21 L. ed. 675; York & M. Line R. Co. v. Winans, 17 How. 30, 39, 15 L. ed. 27, 30; Whitney v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co. 44 Me. 362, 69 Am. Dec. 102; Taylor, Corp. §§ 131, 132; Com. v. Smith, 10 Allen, 455, 87 Am. Dec. 672; Chicago & R. I. R. Co. v. Whipple, 22 Ill. 106; East Boston Freight R. Co. v. Eastern R. Co. 13 Allen, 422; 5 Thomp. Corp. § 5884; Macon & A. R. Co. v. Moyes, 49 Ga. 355, 15 Am. Rep. 678; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Sherman, 22 Ohio St. 411.

Mr. Frank E. Rainold, for appellees:

Actions ex delicto are purely statutory in this state.

A corporation is unquestionably liable for the acts of its servant, and it seems equally axiomatic that it is not liable for the carelessness or negligence of the servant of another corporation.

McConnell v. Lemley, 48 La. Ann. 1438, 34 L. R. A. 609, 55 Am. St. Rep. 319, 20 So. 887; Hart v. New Orleans & O. R. Co. 4 La. Ann. 262; Thompson v. Dotterer, 105 La. 37, 29 So. 483.

It is sufficient to find that the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company has nothing at all to do with the operation of the road, in order to exonerate it from liability.

McDonald v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 1440, 17 So. 873; Pierce, Railroads, 283, 284; Mahoney v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co. 63 Me. 68; Ditchett v. Spuyten Duyvil & P. M. R. Co. 67 N. Y. 425; Norton v. Wiswall, 26 Barb. 618; Virginia Midland R. Co. v. Washington, 86 Va. 629, 7 L. R. A. 344, 10 S. E. 927; 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 785.

Nicholls, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff brought suit in the parish of Orleans against the Algiers & Gretna Street Railway Company (or the Algiers, 64 L. R. A.

McDonoughville, & Gretna Street Railway Company) and the Jefferson Street Railway Company, seeking to recover from them in solido the sum of $15,000, with legal interest. The grounds upon which this demand was based are: That the defendants were corporations organized under the laws of Louisiana, and doing business as common carriers of passengers in the parish of Orleans, conjointly and separately operating horse cars between the parish of Jefferson and the fifth district of the parish of Orleans. That on or about the 27th of December, 1901, about 7 o'clock in the evening, in Goldsborough, parish of Jefferson, Idelia May Muntz, the minor child of the plaintiff, aged about twelve years, was knocked down and run over by a car owned and operated by the defendants, so that her neck and limbs were broken and skull fractured, besides suffering other severe injuries, from which, after the most intense agony, she died shortly thereafter. That her death was caused by the fault and gross negligence of defendants, and by the fault and negligence of the driver in charge of the car which ran over and killed her, because the defendants failed to provide their car with proper lights, and with proper appliances and means to give signals and warning of the approach of the car. That the track upon which defendants' car was operated was of a narrow gauge, and laid on the public road, and his child was lawfully thereon, and did not know and was not warned of the approach of the car by which she was knocked down and killed, and received no warning either by the car or the driver thereof, and after she was knocked down and run over by the car the driver never stopped it, but continued on his journey to the terminal of the road in Gretna; and the said driver, if he had been attending to his duties, could have seen the child and have prevented the act which caused her death, but neglected to do so; and the car was running at an unlawful rate of speed through the town when it ran down, mangled, and killed his child. That the space between the tracks of the railway was generally used by the public as a foot passage, and the child's injuries and her resulting death were not caused by any fault on her part, and her injuries and death were caused directly and solely by the fault and gross negligence of defendants and their employees and agents.

The Jefferson railway excepted that the court was without jurisdiction ratione personæ, as its domicile was in the parish of Jefferson, where the trespass complained of was alleged to have occurred. The exception was sustained, the suit as to that company was dismissed, and no appeal was taken.

from the judgment. The Algiers & Gretna Railway Company excepted to the petition: First. Because the court was without jurisdiction, and, should the exception be overruled, that the petition was contradictory, self-destructive, and the allegation in the petition that the Algiers railway company and the Jefferson Street Railway Company were "conjointly and separately operating horse cars" was without sense and meaning; that, as a matter of fact, plaintiff was in possession of full knowledge concerning its relation to the street railway in question; that it leased out said roadbed and tracks to Thomas Pickles on the 7th of March, 1903, and the cars of said road never belonged to it; that Thomas Pickles died, and his heirs sublet said road to Peter Meid on the 27th of August, 1897, by notarial act before Frank E. Rainold, notary; that on the 23d of January, 1899, he leased the same to Anthony Rubrich, and Anthony Rubrich, by notarial act of the 29th of April, 1899, sold his rights in and to the lease to the Jefferson railway company; that plaintiff knew that the Jefferson railway company was alone operating the road; that the petition disclosed no cause of action, because the driver through whose carelessness it was alleged the accident occurred was not and never had been in the employ of the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company.

It was subsequently agreed between plaintiff's attorneys and the attorney of the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company that "the exception to the jurisdiction and the formal exception of no cause of action were waived," and the attorney for the latter named company "agreed to try the issue whether that company was lessor, and whether, as lessor, it could be held in any manner for the accident, as raised by his second exception."

Evidence was accordingly heard on these issues. The district judge sustained the second ground of exception filed by defendant, and rendered judgment in its favor and against the plaintiff, dismissing his suit. Plaintiff appealed.

The act by which the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company was incorporated was not in the record. Mr. Rainold, as witness, states it was incorporated on the 11th of February, 1882, by act before Samuel Flower, notary public; that the original franchise to run a street railroad in Algiers was given, he thought, to a syndicate of about fifteen persons, whom he named; and that they transferred their right to the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company.

There is no direct evidence in the record showing how or from whom and when that company acquired, or claimed to have acquired, otherwise than through its act of 64 L. R. A.

incorporation, the right to operate a railway for transporting freight and passengers outside of the limits of the city of New Orleans beyond and into the parish of Jefferson and over its roads; but there is copied into the transcript an ordinance of the police jury of the parish of Jefferson (but with nothing showing the date of its passage) granting to the same parties, who were named by Mr. Rainold as composing the syndicate to whom the city of New Orleans had made its grant, and to their successors, transferees, and assigns, the right of building and operating from Algiers, in the parish of Orleans, to the parish line of Jefferson, a track of railroad for the transportation of passengers and freight from Harvey's canal, into the parish of Jefferson, to the lower line of that parish. However this may be, there is no doubt that the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company claimed to have in some way acquired such a right, inasmuch as on the 7th of March, 1893, by act before Frank E. Rainold, it leased for ten years to Thomas Pickles, who was one of the parties named as forming the syndicates referred to, "all the franchises of the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company, including its roadbed, and the right to operate a railway for transporting freight and passengers between the town of Gretna, in the parish of Jefferson, and the fifth district of the city of New Orleans, formerly known as Algiers, and the tracks as laid between said terminals."

On the 27th of August, 1896, by act before Rainold, Mrs. Henrietta Cook Pickles, wife of Alexander M. Halliday, and Mrs. Josephine E. Harvey, widow of Robert S. Harvey, the heirs of Thomas Pickles, leased the same property, under the same description, to Peter Meid, and, additionally, "the stables and real estate situated on Bouny street, in the fifth district of New Orleans," together with the cars then used in the operation of said Algiers & Gretna railway, which numbered five, and the entire equipment of the road, for the term of five years, to begin on the 10th day of September, 1897, and to end on the 9th day of September, 1902. The lessors simultaneously sold and transferred to the lessee the horses and mules—seventeen in number—they used in the operation of the Algiers & Gretna company.

On the 23d of January, 1899, by act before Rainold, notary, Peter Meid leased to Anthony Rubrich until the 9th day of September, 1902, the same property, under the same description, which was leased by the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company to Thomas Pickles; also the stables and real estate in McDonoughville, in the parish of Jefferson; also all the cars used, at the time of this lease to Rubrich, in the operation of the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company, and the entire equipment of the road.

On the 29th of April, 1899, by act before Rainold, notary, Anthony Rubrich sold and transferred to the Jefferson railway company "all the rights which he acquired by reason of the notarial contract executed before Rainold, notary, on the 23d of January, 1899, to which contract Peter Meid, Anthony Rubrich, Ella Mills, Mrs. Josephine E. Harvey, and Mrs. A. M. Halliday were parties."

The Jefferson railway company was incorporated by notarial act before Rainold, notary, on the 4th of April, 1899. The purposes for which it was incorporated were declared to be: "To acquire by lease the right to operate and maintain a railway system between Algiers, in the parish of Orleans, and Gretna, in the parish of Jefferson; to operate and maintain between said terminals for the transportation of passengers and freight; and more especially to acquire all the right of Anthony Rubrich under the contract made by him with Peter Meid and Mrs. A. M. Halliday and Mrs. Josephine E. Harvey, which contract was executed before Frank E. Rainold, notary public, on the 23d of January, 1899; and that this corporation shall have the right to acquire such franchises, privileges, and property, both movable and immovable, as shall be necessary for its business or incidental thereto."

Gretna and McDonoughville are unincorporated villages, situated in the parish of Jefferson, the latter between Gretna and the upper line of the city of New Orleans. The accident occurred in a street of McDonoughville. At the time of the accident the only property owned by the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company were its franchise and the road tracks of the road between Algiers and Gretna. The railroad between Algiers and Gretna was being operated at that time by the Jefferson railway over the roadbed and tracks of the Algiers & Gretna company under its lease, but the car which ran over the child belonged to it, and the driver in charge of the same was one of its employees.

The theory upon which the Algiers & Gretna company claims to have been released from responsibility in the premises is that, under the laws of Louisiana, the franchises and property of a railroad company can be mortgaged and sold, and that the rights granted by the city of New Orleans and by the police jury of the parish of Jefferson to the syndicates mentioned—and which rights that company acquired—were by their express terms assignable in character, and that, being such, the company had the right to make the lease it did; that by so leasing it was released from all obligations resulting from the negligent operation of the road, the leasing company being alone responsible. They cite in support of their position articles 2317 and 2679 of the Civil Code; Pierce, Railroads, 283, 284; 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 785; Mahoney v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co. 63 Me. 68; Ditchett v. Spuyten Duyvil & P. M. R. Co. 67 N. Y. 425; Norton v. Wiswall, 26 Barb. 618; Virginia Midland R. Co. v. Washington, 86 Va. 629, 7 L. R. A. 344, 10 S. E. 927; Hart v. New Orleans & O. R. Co. 4 La. Ann. 262; McDonald v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 1440, 17 So. 873; McConnell v. Lemley, 48 La. Ann. 1438, 34 L. R. A. 609, 55 Am. St. Rep. 319, 20 So. 887; Thompson v. Dotterer, 105 La. 37, 29 So. 483; Farmer v. Myles, 106 La. 333, 30 So. 858; Goodwin v. Bodow Lumber Co. 109 La. 1050, 34 So. 74. The plaintiff refers to Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 1120; York & M. Line R. Co. v. Winans, 17 How. 30, 15 L. ed. 27; Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Brown, 17 Wall. 445, 450, 21 L. ed. 675, 678; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1-39, 32 L. ed. 837-846, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Wyman v. Penobscot & K. R. Co. 46 Me. 162; Middlesex R. Co. v. Boston & O. R. Co. 115 Mass. 347; Braslin v. Somerville Horse R. Co. 145 Mass. 64, 13 N. E. 65; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 258, 276, 41 Am. Rep. 221; Com. v. Smith, 10 Allen, 455, 87 Am. Dec. 672; Chicago & R. I. R. Co. v. Whipple, 22 Ill. 105; Abbott v. Johnstown, G. & K. Horse R. Co. 80 N. Y. 27, 36 Am. Rep. 572; Freeman v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 28 Minn. 444, 10 N. W. 594; Macon & A. R. Co. v. Mayes, 49 Ga. 355, 15 Am. Rep. 678.

Referring to the authorities cited by the parties in 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 784, 785, under the title Railroads, we find that different rules have been adopted in different jurisdictions as to the effect upon the legal liability of a railroad company, which had made a lease of its road, for the negligent operation of the same by its lessee. The first rule and the line of decisions supporting it are found on page 784 of that work under the heading, Negligent operation by lessee—(aa) Rule holding lessor liable.

The second rule and decisions supporting it, on page 785, under the heading (bb) Rule denying liability of lessor.

Under the first of these headings it is said: "There is a sharp conflict of authority as to whether the lessor of a railroad is liable for injuries to persons or property caused by the wrongful or negligent acts or omissions of the lessee in the operation of the road, as distinguished from the nonperformance of a duty which the lessor's charter or the general law imposes primarily on the lessor. There is one line of decisions holding that the proper operation of the road so as to avoid injury to third persons is one of the duties imposed by the charter of the proprietary company, and that it cannot escape such duty and the corresponding liability by leasing its road to another, but that the lessor is liable to any person who may be injured by the negligence or wrongful act of the lessee in operating the leased road, unless the charter or statute authorizing the lease exempts the lessor from such liability. The theory of these cases is not that the lessee is to be regarded as the agent or servant of the lessor, but that public policy forbids a railroad company thus to divest itself of its legal responsibility without legislative authority."

Under the second heading it is said: "Opposed to the rule just stated is a line of cases holding that legislative authority to lease a railroad implies an exemption of the lessor from liability for the acts of its lessee, and that when a company had leased its road, and the lessee is in exclusive possession and control under the lease, no liability attaches to the lessor for any negligent or wrongful conduct of the lessee or its servants whereby third persons are injured."

We have said that the act of incorporation is not in the record, but the whole course taken in the case justifies us in assuming that it is a street railroad company created legally by notarial act for the purpose of constructing and operating a railroad for the transportation of freight and passengers for the public benefit from Gretna, in the parish of Jefferson, to that portion of the city of New Orleans, parish of Orleans, lying on the right bank of the Mississippi river, known as "Algiers."

When the incorporators of that corporation availed themselves of the general law to create that corporation, they acquired for the corporation so created certain legal rights and privileges. They also bound the corporation to the performance of certain acts, and subjected it and its property to certain duties and obligations in behalf of the general public. The corporation so created became bound to an acquisition of a right of way, and the construction thereon over it of a roadbed and tracks, and the operation of cars upon the same, under such conditions as to properly secure the safety of the general public. It became subjected as a quasi public corporation to just and 64 L. R. A.

proper legal control and regulation. These were primary obligations on its part, resulting directly ipso facto from its incorporation; and from those obligations towards the public it could not free itself purely at its own will by contracts made with third parties. It might be true that, so long as the corporation remained entirely inactive, it could not be forced into the active performance of these duties by way of mandamus, and that the remedy for non-user would be by way of forfeiture through the state authorities; but when it took action under its act of incorporation—acquired a right of way, constructed a roadbed and track upon it, and placed the railroad into active operation—it placed itself in a position where it could no longer deal with matters as it might itself think proper, in disregard of the primary obligations which it had come under at and by its creation and in favor of the general public. The various acts of acquisition of property and secondary franchises by the corporation, in necessary aid of the purposes and objects of its creation, impressed upon the rights and property and secondary franchises so acquired, in favor of the general public, certain rights which it was not free to of itself set aside or disregard. The corporation, through these acquisitions, became owner of the property; but by the very tenure of the character of this ownership the public, as well as itself, acquired an interest therein. Its ownership was not in one sense an absolute ownership, giving the corporation an unrestricted power of use and disposition, but an imperfect ownership, where the power of use and disposition was held in check and controlled by the rights of the general public and the obligations of the corporation.

The right of a corporation to acquire property in aid of the objects of the incorporation is not a criterion of the right of the corporation to use and dispose of it. Where the rights of property are successively acquired in aid of the objects of the corporation, they become fused, consolidated, or merged into an entirety to carry out the public purposes for which they were acquired, and the corporation is not permitted thereafter, at its own mere volition, to separate them and to divert them from those purposes.

Defendant's argument that, because the law allows the property and franchises of a corporation to be mortgaged, and to be sold in foreclosure of the mortgage, it must be taken to have authorized the leasing of the same by the corporation, as the power to mortgage is much the broader and more extensive power of the two, and the maxim. that the less is included in the greater applies, is not well founded. The two powers are not in the same line, but are distinct from each other, and it is error to reason from that standpoint. Besides, the precise circumstances under which the property and franchises are authorized to be mortgaged are fixed, and there existed no such condition of things in this case as would have authorized a mortgage, still less a lease.

Defendant urges that the rights which it acquired by transfer from the syndicates were by their terms and on their face assignable, and in leasing the road they simply exercised a right granted in their act of purchase of the rights. It is true that, in so far as the city of New Orleans and the police jury of the parish of Jefferson were concerned, they each agreed that the rights and privileges which they consented to in favor of the original grantees could and should pass to their assigns and successors. Possibly the city of New Orleans and the parish of Jefferson might be held to that consent, but we are not dealing now with what both or either of those corporations would have the right to object to in the premises. Again, the consent of the city and the parish of Jefferson that the grant of a right of way for a railroad through the streets of Algiers should inure to the benefit of the assignees or successors of the original grantee contemplated that all of the rights and franchises of the road should pass as an entirety, and in the interests of the public, to those assigns or successors. They agreed to the transmissibility of their consent to them, but not to a divisibility of the franchises. The franchises, rights, and obligations of the Algiers & Gretna Railway Company as a quasi public railroad were not created by the action of the police jury of the parish of Jefferson. Neither the city of New Orleans nor the police jury of Jefferson could alter rights and obligations which sprang from and were fixed by the lawmakers. The effect of the doctrine contended for by the defendant would be to permit six persons, created a corporation with special rights and privileges, but subjected to special duties and obligations to the public, after acquiring property and placing itself in position to carry out its functions, itself to free the corporation and its property from all liability to the public, and abandon the performance of any of its duties, while owning its franchises and property, by the simple process of making a lease to third parties by a contract which would confer upon the corporation rights against its lessee which would prime any to be acquired by third parties for torts committed by the lessee through the faulty and negligent operation of the road. No such result could have been intended by the legislature. Rights transmissible or assignable quoad one of the parties to a contract are not necessarily so as to the other.

It is a general rule that when a person, whether natural or artificial, has come under obligations to a third person, he cannot free himself from the same by contract by delegating to another the performance of these obligations, and changing debtors. The present action is not one by which a party holding contractual relations with a lessee seeks to extend the obligations of his contract beyond the person with whom he has contracted over to the lessor, but one ex delicto brought by a third party who, prior to the injuries received complained of, was a stranger to the lessee.

In the case of McConnell v. Lemley, 48 La. Ann. 1438, 34 L. R. A. 609, 55 Am. St. Rep. 319, 20 So. 887, cited by defendant, there was no corporation involved. The issue was whether a private individual, owning a building which he had leased, could be held responsible for damages caused by the acts of the lessee. The owner of the building is liable to the public under certain circumstances, and when so liable he is not released from liability by reason simply of the property being (at the time that damage complained of was received) under lease. In that case the court was of opinion that the damages received were not due to a violation of the lessor's primary obligation. Had they been, a different result would have been reached. A private individual's obligation to the public is much more restricted than is that of a public railroad corporation. Goodwin v. Bodcaw Lumber Co. presented questions different from those raised here. That company was not a public railroad corporation, but a lumber company owning a logging track road used only in connection with its own business. It did not lease, but sold outright, a part of its property which it did not care any longer to retain the ownership of. Some of the stockholders were inclined to convert the private railroad into a public one by the procuring of public railroad franchises; others were not inclined to do so. The result was that the road in question, being the private property of the corporation, was sold to certain of the stockholders as individuals, who thereupon organized as a public railroad corporation, and were operating it as such when the accident complained of occurred.

We are of the opinion that the judgment appealed from is erroneous, and for the reasons herein assigned it is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed that said judgment be, and the same is, hereby annulled, avoided, and reversed, and that the cause be reinstated on the docket of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, and this cause be remanded to that court for further proceedings according to law.

Petition for rehearing denied January 18, 1904.

Dominick FROELICHER

v.

OSWALD IRON WORKS, Limited.

(.....La.....)

- *1. Acts which disturb physical comfort to an injurious extent may be restrained by the interposition of the courts.
- *2. An offensive occupation cannot be carried on to the very great annoyance of the one dwelling immediately near.
- *3. No one has the right to use his own land so as to render that about him in any degree useless. His enjoyments must have reference to the rights of others.
- *4. To the extent needful to prevent extreme annoyance, the decree as heretofore rendered by the district court is by the supreme court affirmed.

(November 30, 1903.)

CROSS-APPEALS from a decree of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, Division E, enjoining defendant from annoying plaintiff by the conduct of its business; plaintiff appealing from so much of the decree as failed entirely to enjoin the conducting of the business at its present location; and defendant appealing from so much as awarded damages against it. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry L. Lazarus, with Messrs. Herman Michel and David Sessler, for plaintiff:

The law applicable to the case at bar is admirably summed up in the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas.

3 Sutherland, Damages, p. 394; State ex rel. Denis v. King, 105 La. 731, 30 So. 101; State ex rel. Violet v. King, 46 La. Ann. 79, 14 So. 423; New Orleans v. Lambert, 14 La. Ann. 244; Blanc v. Murray, 36 La. Ann. 162;

* Headnotes by BREAU, J.

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to right to injunction or damages because of injury or discomfort caused by noise, smell, or smoke, see Gainesville, H. & W. R. Co. v. Hall, 9 L. R. A. 298; Bohan v. Port Jervis Gaslight Co. 9 L. R. A. 711, and cases in note thereto; People v. Detroit White Lead Works, 9 L. R. A. 722; Wylie v. Elwood, 9 L. R. A. 726; Powell v. Bentley & G. Furniture Co. 12 L. R. A. 53, and note; Jones v. Erie & W. Valley R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 758; Sperb v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 20 L. R. A. 752; Frost v. Berkeley Phosphate 64 L. R. A.

Story, Eq. Jur. § 924; Milhau v. Sharp, 28 Barb. 228; Doolittle v. Broome County, 18 N. Y. 160; Fuselier v. Spalding, 2 La. Ann. 773; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 108 U. S. 317, 27 L. ed. 739, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 719; Tilton v. New Orleans City R. Co. 35 La. Ann. 1074; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1036; Fish v. Dodge, 4 Denio, 311, 47 Am. Dec. 254; Bradley v. Gill, Lut. pt. 1, p. 29; Elliotson v. Feetham, 2 Bing. N. C. 134; Scott v. Firth, 10 L. T. N. S. 241; Gullick v. Tremlett, 20 Week. Rep. 358; Robertson v. Campbell, 13 F. C. (Sc.) 61; Johnston v. Constable, 3 Dunlop, B. & M. 1263; Cooper v. North British R. Co. 35 Jur. 295; 1 Macph. 499; Kinloch v. Robertson, Keane Sel. Dec. 175; Eaden v. Firth, 1 Macph. (Sc.) 573; Roskell v. Whitworth, 19 Week. Rep. 804; High, Inj. §§ 772, 773.

Messrs. Solomon Wolf and Robert O'Connor, for defendant:

Two things essential to general prosperity and happiness are, useful trades whereby people are supplied with things necessary in life, and healthful and peaceable dwellings; and the structures for habitation and trade cannot well be remote from one another. Here, therefore, are two interests traveling to the one ultimate goal, yet in constant conflict during the journey; and the courts, in administering justice between them, necessarily request each to lay aside something of what pertains to convenience and comfort; yet they permit each to stand so far on its own rights as not to be destroyed.

Bishop, Non-Contr. Law, § 418.

An act or use of property, to constitute a nuisance, must violate some legal right, either public or private, and must work some material annoyance, inconvenience, or injury, either actual or implied, from the invasion of the right. The mere fact that it is unpleasant, annoying, or unsightly will not be sufficient.

Wood, Nuisances, § 568; St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping, 11 H. L. Cas. 642, 35 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 66, 11 Jur. N. S. 785, 12 L. T. N. S. 776, 13 Week. Rep. 1083; Rockwood v. Wilson, 11 Cush. 221.

A suit to enjoin the maintenance of a building or manufactory which it is claimed interferes with private rights must be brought with the utmost promptness and diligence.

Co. 26 L. R. A. 693; Austin v. Augusta Terminal R. Co. 47 L. R. A. 755; Chicago, G. W. R. Co. v. First M. E. Church, 50 L. R. A. 488; Louisville R. Co. v. Foster, 50 L. R. A. 813; Hill v. McBurney Oil & Fertilizer Co. 52 L. R. A. 398; and Louisville & N. Terminal Co. v. Jacobs, 61 L. R. A. 188.

As to power of municipality to control smoke as nuisance, see St. Louis v. Edward Heltzberg Packing & Provision Co. 39 L. R. A. 551, and note.

Mondie v. Toledo Plow Co. 6 Ohio N. P. 294; McCann v. Strang, 97 Wis. 551, 72 N. W. 1117; Roscoe Lumber Co. v. Standard Silica Cement Co. 62 App. Div. 421, 70 N. Y. Supp. 1130; Jones v. McCleary Mfg. Co. Rap. Jud. Quebec, 18 C. S. 130; Robins v. Dominion Coal Co. Rap. Jud. Quebec, 16 C. S. 195; Romer v. St. Paul City R. Co. 75 Minn. 211, 74 Am. St. Rep. 455, 77 N. W. 825; Farrell v. New York Steam Co. 23 Misc. 726, 53 N. Y. Supp. 55; Leonard v. Hotel Majestic Co. 17 Misc. 229, 40 N. Y. 1044; Culver v. Rogan, 15 Ohio C. C. 228; Hafer v. Guynan, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 21; Fisher v. Lakeside Park Hotel & Amusement Co. 4 Ohio N. P. 329; Harvey v. Consumers' Ice Co. 104 Tenn. 583, 58 S. W. 316; Dubos v. Dreyfous, 52 La. Ann. 1117, 27 So. 663; Fischer v. Sanford, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 435; Ladd v. Granite State Brick Co. 68 N. H. 185, 37 Atl. 1041; Harper v. Standard Oil Co. 78 Mo. App. 338; Hughes v. General Electric Light & P. Co. 107 Ky. 485, 54 S. W. 723; McMenomy v. Baud, 87 Cal. 134, 26 Pac. 795; Southard v. Morris Canal & Bkg. Co. 1 N. J. Eq. 518; Hulme v. Shreve, 4 N. J. Eq. 116; Tichenor v. Wilson, 8 N. J. Eq. 197; Sprague v. Steeres, 1 R. I. 247; Hieskell v. Gross, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 430; Vick v. Rochester, 46 Hun. 607; Gaunt v. Fynney, L. R. 8 Ch. 8, 42 L. J. Ch. N. S. 122, 27 L. T. N. S. 569, 21 Week. Rep. 129; Doellner v. Tynan, 38 How. Pr. 176; Huckenstine's Appeal, 70 Pa. 108, 10 Am. Rep. 669; Powell v. Bentley & G. Furniture Co. 34 W. Va. 804, 12 L. R. A. 53, 12 S. E. 1085; Straus v. Barnett, 140 Pa. 111, 21 Atl. 253; Penrose v. Nixon, 140 Pa. 45, 21 Atl. 364.

Breaux, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiff brought this suit to enjoin the defendant company from continuing its works at the present place, because the noise made and the smoke and the odor are a nuisance to the neighborhood, and it prevents plaintiff and his family from enjoying their home, which is situated near defendant's plant. He also asks for damages because of the asserted noise in the sum of $2,500.

Plaintiff's home is situated at the corner of Morgan and Seguin streets, in the Algiers portion of New Orleans, and here he has resided about twelve years in a large, two-story frame house, worth about (plaintiff avers) $4,000. He occupies the lower portion of the building in connection with his saddlery business, and resides in the upper story.

Petitioner also avers, substantially, that property in the locality in which this property is located has depreciated of late in value in consequence of the asserted nuisance, which will be specially referred to later in our opinion. He also avers that the use of his property for business or residence is injured and destroyed.

Plaintiff's complaint, further, is that defendant has erected, upon property adjacent to his own, machine shops and boiler works; that defendant's predecessor bought property adjacent to his own from Charles With-erup, who, under an ordinance of the city council, was permitted to carry on the work of blacksmith thereon, and that defendant, taking advantage of this permit, erected large machine shops, to the injury of plaintiff, and to his discomfort and that of his family; that defendant, the successor of those by whom these improvements were erected, sought from the city council the grant of a privilege to operate their shops; that this application met with the serious opposition from owners, residents, in the immediate vicinity, which resulted in their protesting by petition addressed to the council against that which they said "would prove an intolerable nuisance to the residents in the vicinity."

The application to the council was denied. Plaintiff avers this refusal among other things pertaining to the claim he sets up.

The allegations of plaintiff are complete enough, and contained all that was needful to admit testimony offered.

Defendant sought to meet plaintiff's suit by averring that its business is no more noisy or otherwise irksome than any other business conducted in the vicinity of plaintiff's residence that it avoids noises of all kinds as much as possible; that night work is rarely done at its shops. The premises are kept clean and in perfect order, and the sheet-iron work it does is the best answer to plaintiff's contention that there are offensive odors on the premises.

Defendant's works front on Patterson street. Its shops do not extend from that street to the rear of plaintiff's lot, although its lot does adjoin that of plaintiff both in the rear of plaintiff's lot and on the side. There is a vacant space between these (defendant's) shops and plaintiff's property. Occasionally, in putting up boilers and tanks, this open space has been used or occupied in working on iron. Defendant also owns the lot alongside of plaintiff's lot, and there, also, it was found more spacious and commodious for the work in the open air in putting boilers, tanks, and in hammering sheets of iron. The noises produced by hammering on the sheets of iron used in boilers, tanks, and other works are doubtless loud and harsh, particularly when the hammering is done outside of the shops. Defendant has a boiler producing steam it uses in its shops. In addition, it uses a forge for heating heavy sheets of iron before they are put in the machine that curves them, and in the yard they use two portable forges to heat rivets.

Plaintiff has cause to complain. He was obliged to close his windows in summer when work was done in the lot adjacent to and alongside of his house, to keep out the vapor or steam from the outdoor furnace. It had been an obstacle to his opening his window. He had to endure the heat of summer without sufficient ventilation from his windows. There was complaint of vibration felt, and that at night he and his family did not enjoy desired rest and quiet. The noise and smoke were doubtless offensive, and there is no question but that too much noise and smoke are a nuisance. It is true that only an exceptional noise and disturbance are actionable. Still it is certain that acts which greatly disturb physical comfort may be enjoined, to the extent that they are injurious. An offensive and tortious occupation cannot be carried on to the great annoyance and grave discomfort of the one dwelling near. It must, however, be very serious. While it may, perhaps, not be necessary for it to greatly injure health, it is sufficient if it greatly lessen and impair the enjoyment and happiness of home.

There is a test in matter of nuisance which the following question suggests: Is the discomfort one of mere fastidiousness or extreme refinement, as is sometimes seen, or does the nuisance interrupt the average comfort to which the individual has the right? We do not refer to the very nice manner of living, but rather to a simple life, with the ordinary comforts. Considered in this light, plaintiff falls within the category of those who have a right to have an annoying noise abated, sufficient for peace and comfort to which the family ordinarily is entitled. The theory to which some of the evidence tends cannot have our support to the extent asked. It has the appearance of being slightly extreme. That plaintiff has become irritable, he says; that members of his family have become fretful, owing to the harsh noise; that there have been moments of slight infelicity in the family, as words are not heard or are misunderstood. Part of all this has the appearance of some exaggeration growing out, in all probability, of the noisome situation in which plaintiff was placed. Plaintiff and some of his witnesses affirmed that, owing to the vibration and the consequent jarring, the house is not entirely in plumb; the foundations are unsettled; the windows do not shut as formerly; even the china and crockery move when on the table; and other ailments and troubles mentioned by these witnesses cannot all be laid at the door of the defendant. There is evidence that the vibratory movements of the earth at the particular place are not as imagined, and the odors as noxious as plaintiff evidently thought. There is smoke, but not enough to constitute nuisance as injurious as claimed. It is conclusively shown, we think, that the noise is at times very great, and this presents the serious issue. The noise produced caused actual physical discomfort. The plaintiff is entitled to solid comfort, and, to that extent that this is interrupted, relief should be afforded; but the injury must be real, and not fanciful. To the degree that it is real, there is ground for complaint,—no further.

It is true, plaintiff's home is in the commercial and residential district. He is a harness maker, and must, in the nature of things, accommodate himself to his surroundings, provided, always, that the necessities of active industry do not become unbearable. No one has a right to use his own (not even those engaged in the most industrious and worthy enterprises) so as to injure others about him. The use and enjoyment must have reference to the rights of others. Whatever may be the condition in the neighborhood in which plaintiff lives, he should not be subjected to unendurable noise at his home, which he has occupied for years. A number of industrious mechanics at work in the open air, constructing boilers or tanks, or hammering sheet iron, may raise a noise, as in this case, that cannot be endured by those living immediately near. The evidence has at least served to prove, as relates to defendant, that its workmen are very industrious. The noise from their work has been in the nighttime, and sometimes even on Sundays, to an unendurable extent, the testimony shows.

We have noted that defendant has improved machinery; that he has sought to lessen the noise. Part of the up-to-date machines consists of a pneumatic calker for calking the boilers. The sounds from this machine are not in murmuring and suppressed tones. We gather from the testimony that it is very little less noisy than the hammering with hand on the boiler. Besides, there is considerable hammering done still, in putting up a boiler or tank. "Pandemonium at large" is the impression created after reading the testimony of some of the witnesses,—particularly that of plaintiff and the member of his family who also testified. We do not think it is as bad as they imagine, but there remains enough for complaint. We are not hasty in arriving at the conclusion that the noise should be, to some extent, abated. The noises of industrial enterprises are not frequently characterized as nuisances. None the less, it must be held a nuisance when extreme and tortious.

Mr. Bishop, in his Non-Contract Law, § 418, has stated the idea with great force and clearness, looking to the interest of useful trade and occupation, on the one hand, and the convenience and comfort of the family, on the other. "Two things," says the author, "essential to general prosperity and happiness, are useful trades, whereby people are supplied with things necessary in life, and healthful and peaceful dwellings. . . . The courts, in administering justice between them, necessarily require each to lay aside something of what pertains to mere convenience and comfort, yet they permit each to stand so far on its own rights not to be destroyed." From this point of view, we think that the purposes the law intends will have been secured by affirming the judgment of the district court. We are not willing to go further. At the same time, we do not think, after serious consideration, that the plaintiff is entitled to less.

The amount of damages allowed was $500, in addition to restraining the defendant from carrying on noisy work on lots 15 and 16 of the plot in evidence. We think this judgment does justice between the parties. The demand of plaintiff for an amendment of the judgment on appeal is rejected. We are not of the opinion that the damages should be assessed at a higher amount, nor that the restraint should go further than before expressed.

For these reasons, the judgment is affirmed.

Petition for rehearing denied February 1, 1904.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT.

UKIAH CITY, Appt.,

v.

UKIAH WATER & IMPROVEMENT COMPANY, Respt.

(.....Cal.....)

Here acceptance of and payment for the service of a water company in furnishing water for general fire purposes are not sufficient to establish a contract on the part of the water company to compensate the municipality for loss of property by fire for the extinguishment of which the company negligently failed to furnish water, although the service was undertaken in compliance with a demand therefor by the municipality.

(February 10, 1904.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the Superior Court for Mendocino County granting a new trial after judgment in its favor in an action brought to recover the value of property destroyed by fire because of the alleged neglect of defendant to furnish water for its extinguishment. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Seawell & Pemberton and J. C. Raddock, for appellant:

This action is maintained by the plaintiff town, and not by a taxpayer and private consumer of water.

The contract is directly between the town and the water company, and the town was paying the water company the water rates established at the very time the property of plaintiff was consumed and destroyed through the carelessness and wilful neglect of defendant, and in violation of its contract with said town.

The destruction of property of a private consumer ought not to be without a remedy for the owner against the person or water company which has ruthlessly occasioned the loss. But if there was a contract between the town and the water company, then there was a privity of contract between them, though there be no privity between a consumer of water or taxpayer therein and the water company. To hold that a water company, under such circumstances, is not liable would confer upon it an immunity not enjoyed by any person or other corporation.

Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 124 N. C. 328, 46 L. R. A. 513, 70 Am. St. Rep. 598, 32 S. E. 720; Lenzen v. New Braunfels, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 335, 35 S. W. 341; 5 Thomp. Corp. §§ 6357, 6358.

The spirit and letter of our Code and our reformed procedure should, on the propositions involved in this action, cause the law of this state to follow the law as established by the judicial tribunals of Kentucky, of North Carolina, and of Louisiana.

Paducah Lumber Co. v. Paducah Water Supply Co. 89 Ky. 340, 7 L. R. A. 77, 25 Am. St. Rep. 536, 12 S. W. 554, 13 S. W. 249; Duncan v. Owensboro Water Co. 12

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to liability of water company for loss by fire due to lack of adequate water supply, see Howson v. Trenton Water Co. 23 L. R. A. 146, and note; 64 L. R. A.

House v. Houston Waterworks Co. 28 L. R. A. 532; Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 46 L. R. A. 513; and Middlesex Water Co. v. Knappman Whiting Co. 49 L. R. A. 572.

Ky. L. Rep. 35, 12 S. W. 557; Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 124 N. C. 328, 46 L. R. A. 513, 70 Am. St. Rep. 598, 32 S. E. 720; Planters' Oil Mill v. Monroe Waterworks & Light Co. 52 La. Ann. 1243, 27 So. 684; New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co. 18 C. C. A. 519, 30 U. S. App. 749, 72 Fed. 227.

A county or city may not be liable for failure to keep a highway in proper repair, but, when that duty is delegated to a corporation which is given a franchise to collect toll as recompense for so doing, that company has always been held responsible for breach of the duty.

Canton, C. & H. Turnp. Co. v. McIntire, 105 Ky. 185, 48 S. W. 980; Henderson & C. Gravel-Road Co. v. Cosby, 103 Ky. 182, 44 S. W. 639; Lebanon & P. Turnp. Road Co. v. Purdy, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 612, 37 S. W. 588; Evans v. New Brunswick & C. Turnp. Co. 69 N. J. L. 3, 34 Atl. 985; Washington, C. & A. Turnp. Co. v. Case, 80 Md. 86, 30 Atl. 571; Kreider v. Lancaster, E. & M. Turnp. Co. 162 Pa. 537, 29 Atl. 721; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 341, 342, and notes.

The measure of damages is the amount which will compensate the party aggrieved for all detriment proximately caused by the breach of contract, or which, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result therefrom, or the amount which will compensate for all detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not.

C. C. 3300, 3333; Crow v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 130 Cal. 309, 62 Pac. 562, 1058.

A private individual or corporation dealing with a municipality may be bound by an implied or oral contract, and is estopped from denying the validity of the contract, after accepting and while retaining the consideration and benefit thereof.

American Waterworks Co. v. State, 46 Neb. 194, 30 L. R. A. 447, 50 Am. St. Rep. 610, 64 N. W. 711; Crow v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 130 Cal. 309, 62 Pac. 562, 1058.

On rehearing.

It could not be doubted that, if the city buildings were destroyed by fire through failure of defendant to furnish water for their protection, as provided by the contract, the city could recover.

Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 124 N. C. 328, 46 L. R. A. 513, 70 Am. St. Rep. 598, 32 S. E. 720; New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co. 18 C. C. A. 519, 30 U. S. App. 749, 72 Fed. 227; Paducah Lumber Co. v. Paducah Water Supply Co. 89 Ky. 340, 7 L. R. A. 77, 25 Am. St. Rep. 536, 12 S. W. 554, 13 S. W. 64 L. R. A.

249; Duncan v. Owensboro Water Co. 12 Ky. L. Rep. 35, 12 S. W. 557.

Mr. W. S. Goodfellow also for appellant.

Messrs. McGarvey & Bledsee, for respondent:

The damages alleged in the complaint are too remote to constitute any cause of action against this defendant.

Anderson v. Taylor, 56 Cal. 132, 38 Am. Rep. 52; Friend & T. Lumber Co. v. Miller, 67 Cal. 467, 8 Pac. 40.

It is not claimed by plaintiff that the fire originated by reason of the negligence of defendant. The whole claim for damages is based upon a surmise of what citizens, firemen, and officers of plaintiff could or would have done under certain conditions after the fire started.

Proximate cause is defined to be, "that which, in a natural and continuous sequence unbroken by any new cause, produces that event, and without which that event would not have occurred.

Shearm. & Rēdf. Neg. 4th ed. § 26; Taylor v. Baldwin, 78 Cal. 522, 21 Pac. 124; Oakland Bank of Savings v. Murfey, 68 Cal. 462, 9 Pac. 843; West Mahanoy Twp. v. Watson, 116 Pa. 344, 2 Am. St. Rep. 604, 9 Atl. 430; Western R. Co. v. Mutch, 97 Ala. 194, 21 L. R. A. 316, 38 Am. St. Rep. 180, 11 So. 894; Pendleton v. Cline, 85 Cal. 143, 24 Pac. 659; Durgin v. Neal, 82 Cal. 598, 23 Pac. 133, 375.

Remote results produced by intermediate sequence of causes are beyond the reach of any just and practicable rule of damages.

Martin v. Deetz, 102 Cal. 68, 41 Am. St. Rep. 151, 36 Pac. 368.

How can it be said, as matter of law or fact, that plaintiff's loss was the direct, natural, ordinary result of the negligence complained of?

James v. James, 58 Ark. 157, 41 Am. St. Rep. 95, 23 S. W. 1099; Henry v. Southern P. R. Co. 50 Cal. 182.

The measure of damages, if defendant were liable at all, would be the value of the water failed to be furnished under the alleged contract, and the complaint does not allege, and there was no proof of, the value of such water.

Britton v. Green Bay & Ft. H. Waterworks Co. 81 Wis. 48, 29 Am. St. Rep. 856, 51 N. W. 84; Fowler v. Athens City Waterworks Co. 83 Ga. 219, 20 Am. St. Rep. 315, 9 S. E. 673; Foster v. Lookout Waterworks Co. 3 Lea, 42; Nickerson v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. 46 Conn. 24, 33 Am. Rep. 8.

A contract can only be made, in California, by a municipal corporation, by ordinance or resolution in the manner required by law.

Zottman v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 97, 81 Am. Dec. 107, note; Los Angeles Gas Co. v. Toberman, 61 Cal. 199; Wallace v. San José, 29 Cal. 186; McCoy v. Briant, 53 Cal. 247; Nicolson Pavement Co. v. Painter, 35 Cal. 699; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 235.

Henshaw, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was instituted by the town of Ukiah City to recover damages against the defendant water company for the destruction of plaintiff's property by fire, the liability of defendant being predicated upon its negligence, and upon the breach of its contract with the plaintiff for supplying water in its supply pipes and fire hydrants under sufficient pressure for effective use. A general demurrer was interposed to the complaint and overruled. The defendant answered, and trial was had, resulting in a verdict of the jury, under the instructions of the court, in favor of the plaintiff. The defendant moved for a new trial, which motion was granted, and plaintiff appeals from this order.

The learned judge of the trial court expressed his views upon granting the motion for a new trial in the following language:

"The case presents the novel question as to the extent of liability on the part of one engaged in the business of furnishing water appropriated for sale, rental, and distribution, to a municipality, to which it has undertaken for a consideration to furnish water for the extinguishment of fires within the municipal limits, the property of which has been destroyed by fire by reason of the failure of such person to furnish water under a sufficient pressure at the time of the breaking out of the fire, such failure being due to negligence on the part of such person. It cannot be seriously disputed that the evidence adduced on the trial of this case warranted the jury in finding the facts to be as embodied in the above proposition,—at least as to a portion of the property destroyed by fire. It appeared that defendant corporation was at the time of the fire, July 16, 1899, and for more than six years immediately preceding that time, engaged in the town of Ukiah City in the carrying on of the business or employment for which it was incorporated, viz., the maintenance and operating of waterworks in said town, and the furnishing to said town and its inhabitants of pure, fresh water for all purposes. It further appeared that, at the time the defendant commenced business, hydrants for fire purposes were connected with its mains and pipes at various places in the streets of said town, in such a manner that there was no way to shut water out of the hydrants except by shutting off the mains. That these hydrants, which, according to the testimony of witness Smith, were owned by plaintiff, have ever since been maintained and used by the town almost solely for the extinguishment of fires, and that in each of the ordinances passed from year to year by the trustees of plaintiff, fixing the rates to be charged for water furnished the town and its inhabitants, a provision has been made for fire hydrants, the ordinance in force July, 1899, providing, among other charges against the town for water for municipal purposes: 'For fire hydrants each per month, $1.00;*' that for the whole time defendant has at regular intervals presented its bills against plaintiff for water furnished, and has always included in said bills a charge for the hydrants connected with its pipes, at the rate fixed by the ordinance in force, the bill rendered for the period covering the fire charging for 36 hydrants from June 1st to September 1st, at $1 per month; and that all of these bills have been paid by plaintiff. The foregoing is substantially the only evidence as to a contract.

"In ruling upon the demurrer to the complaint, I stated that I had not been referred to, nor did I know of, any statute or rule of law that would, independent of contract, make the defendant liable on the facts stated in the complaint; in other words, that the mere fact that a corporation was engaged in the business of furnishing water appropriated for sale, rental, and distribution would not place upon it the obligation of having constantly on hand a sufficient quantity of water available for use by the town for the extinguishment of fires, for the failure to observe which it would be liable to the municipality for the value of municipal property destroyed by reason of such failure. Further thought has satisfied me that there can be no question as to the correctness of these views, that something additional is essential to the creation of such a liability, and that, if there be any such liability here, it must arise from contract.

"A contract for furnishing water to the plaintiff town by defendant for the purpose of extinguishing fires in said town is, however, alleged in the complaint. I am unable to concur in the views of learned counsel for defendant,—that no contractual relation is shown by the evidence. It is true that no written contract covering the time of the fire is shown; but no particular form is prescribed by the statute for such contracts, and the evidence forces the conclusion that at the time of the fire the same relations existed between the town and the defendant as to the furnishing of water for general fire purposes as ordinarily exist between the private consumer and the water company as to water for domestic purposes. Where a private property owner demands of a water company that it connect its system with his residence, and tenders the rate prescribed by the town ordinance for the water to be supplied, and the company complies with his demand, as it is required by law to do, it can hardly be denied that a contractual relation is established between the parties, the company, on its part, undertaking to furnish water to the consumer so long as he may desire it and pays the established rates therefor, or at least to use all reasonable efforts to furnish it, for I hardly think that the company would be held bound, in the absence of an express undertaking, to do more than to exercise ordinary care in the management of its business. Doubtless, too, a water company is required, upon proper demand by the municipality, to furnish water to the municipality for the extinguishment of fires that may arise therein, at the established rates, and when, in pursuance of such requirement, it undertakes the service, a contractual relation is established, and the company is bound to continue the service it has undertaken. No formal written contract seems to be required by our statute to establish this relationship between the municipality and the company. That the plaintiff town, through its board of trustees, required this service for general fire purposes on the part of defendant, and that defendant undertook the same, and was actually employed therein at the time of the fire, is, in my judgment, fully shown by the evidence. If this be so, it was incumbent on the defendant, in order to fully perform its undertaking, to use ordinary care to have a supply of water, adequate for the extinguishment of fires that might arise in the town, constantly available at the various hydrants.

"Whether or not such obligation on the part of the company would carry with it any liability for the value of municipal property destroyed by fire, by reason of its failure to perform the service required of it, is another question; and this precise question does not appear to have ever been decided. The evidence clearly shows that whatever the relationship between plaintiff and defendant was, so far as the furnishing of water for fire purposes is concerned, it was entered into by the town in the execution of the power conferred upon it to provide protection against fire for the benefit of all the inhabitants, and there is nothing to indicate that the protection of any specific property was contemplated. In providing for a water supply for general fire purposes, a municipality exercises the same character of functions that it does when it provides fire engines and other apparatus for the extinguishment of fires, or when it employs policemen or watchmen for the protection of its inhabitants against crime. Where, in the exercise of this power, it establishes or acquires its own system of waterworks, and undertakes to itself provide an adequate supply, it is settled beyond controversy that the city is not liable to its citizens whose property is destroyed by fire, for failure to provide an adequate supply, the power vested in the city being in its nature legislative and governmental, requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion. Patch v. Covington, 17 B. Mon. 722, 66 Am. Dec. 186; Vanhorne v. Des Moines, 63 Iowa, 447, 50 Am. Rep. 750, 19 N. W. 293; Tainter v. Worcester, 123 Mass. 311, 25 Am. Rep. 90; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Keeseville, 148 N. Y. 46, 30 L. R. A. 660, 51 Am. St. Rep. 667, 42 N. E. 405; Mendel v. Wheeling, 28 W. Va. 233, 57 Am. Rep. 665; Wheeler v. Cincinnati, 19 Ohio St. 19, 2 Am. Rep. 368; Brinkmeyer v. Evansville, 29 Ind. 187; Black v. Columbia, 19 S. C. 412, 45 Am. Rep. 785; Foster v. Lookout Waterworks Co. 3 Lea, 42. See also Sievers v. San Francisco, 115 Cal. 654, 56 Am. St. Rep. 153, 47 Pac. 687. Where, instead of acquiring its own system and attempting to itself provide the water for such purpose, it contracts with a water company to furnish such service, thus making such company practically the agent or employee of the city, the many decisions of the appellate courts of other states are practically unanimous in holding, upon apparently the soundest reasoning, that the water company is not liable at the suit of a third person whose property was destroyed by fire, by reason of its failure to supply sufficient water to the town for such purpose. Becker v. Keokuk Waterworks, 79 Iowa, 419, 18 Am. St. Rep. 377, 44 N. W. 694; Davis v. Clinton Waterworks Co. 54 Iowa, 59, 37 Am. Rep. 185, 6 N. W. 126; Britton v. Green Bay & Ft. H. Waterworks Co. 81 Wis. 48, 29 Am. St. Rep. 856, 51 N. W. 84; Ferris v. Carson Water Co. 16 Nev. 44, 40 Am. Rep. 485; Beck v. Kittanning Water Co. (Pa.) 11 Atl. 300; Nickerson v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. 46 Conn. 24, 33 Am. Rep. 1; Fowler v. Athens City Waterworks Co. 83 Ga. 219, 20 Am. St. Rep. 313, 9 S. E. 673; Atkinson v. Newcastle & G. Waterworks Co. L. R. 2 Exch. Div. 441; Foster v. Lookout Waterworks Co. 3 Lea, 42; Eaton v. Fairbury Waterworks Co. 37 Neb. 546, 21 L. R. A. 653, 40 Am. St. Rep. 510, 56 N. W. 201; Fitch v. Seymour Water Co. 139 Ind. 214, 47 Am. St. Rep. 258, 37 N. E. 982; Mott v. Cherryvale Water & Mfg. Co. 48 Kan. 12, 15 L. R. A. 375, 30 Am. St. Rep. 267, 28 Pac. 989;

Housmon v. Trenton Water Co. 119 Mo. 304, 23 L. R. A. 146, 41 Am. St. Rep. 654, 24 S. W. 784.

"The rulings in these cases are generally to the effect that there is no privity of contract between the water company and a citizen which will support the action, and that the contracting company cannot be charged with a greater liability than the city itself. Only two appellate courts have held otherwise,—those of Kentucky and North Carolina. The North Carolina ruling (Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 124 N. C. 328, 46 L. R. A. 513, 70 Am. St. Rep. 598, 32 S. E. 720), was based on the opinion of the Kentucky court in Paducah Lumber Co. v. Paducah Water Supply Co. 89 Ky. 340, 7 L. R. A. 77, 25 Am. St. Rep. 536, 12 S. W. 554, 13 S. W. 249, and, as there was in that case a private contract between the plaintiff and the water company, the opinion consists principally of dicta. It is true that the question does not appear to have been presented to our supreme court, but I can see no reason to doubt the correctness of the rule approved by the great weight of authority.

"If such be the true rule, and if the defendant be liable here, the only property in the town specifically protected by such a contract for water for general fire purposes, and the only property for loss of which a recovery could be had in an action for damages based on a breach of such contract, is the property of the municipality itself. Doubtless a water company may so bind itself by contract with a person to furnish him water for the extinguishment of fires as to render itself liable for the value of property of such person destroyed by fire by reason of its failure to furnish him a sufficient supply of water. See New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. Meridian Waterworks Co. 18 C. C. A. 519, 30 U. S. App. 749, 72 Fed. 227; Knappman Whiting Co. v. Middlesex Water Co. 64 N. J. L. 240, 49 L. R. A. 572, 45 Atl. 692; Paducah Lumber Co. v. Paducah Water Supply Co. 89 Ky. 340, 7 L. R. A. 77, 25 Am. St. Rep. 536, 12 S. W. 554, 13 S. W. 249. It may be assumed here that it is within the power of a municipality, as a property owner, to enter into such a contract with a water company for the protection of the property which it owns as a legal individual; but it certainly needs something more than evidence showing an accepted service for general fire purposes to establish such a contract, and the evidence here shows nothing more. The distinction between the powers conferred on municipal corporations for public purposes and for the general public good, and those conferred for private corporate purposes, is clearly marked by the decisions. See Spring- 64 L. R. A. field F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Keeseville, 148 N. Y. 46, 30 L. R. A. 660, 51 Am. St. Rep. 667, 42 N. E. 405. In providing protection against fire to its inhabitants, the municipality exercises a power conferred solely for the general public good, and from the exercise of which the municipality, as a property owner, derives the same incidental benefit that every other property owner does, no more, no less. Yet in each there is a contractual relation. The bar to such a recovery in each case is that the contract was not for the protection of any particular property or person, but was for general benefit of all the property and persons within the municipal limits, and was entered into by the town as a public agency, solely for that purpose, and in the exercise of its power to furnish such general protection. I cannot escape the conclusion that the relations between plaintiff and defendant, as shown by the evidence, are susceptible of no other construction, that the defendant assumed no obligation regarding plaintiff's property different from that assumed by it regarding all of the other property within the town, and that the plaintiff, as a property owner, is without right of action."

These views and the conclusions expressed are hereby adopted as the views and conclusions of this court. A consideration of the cases presented by appellant to this court, which cases were not before the learned judge of the trial court, do not in any wise serve to shake the soundness of the conclusions which he there expressed. Paducah Lumber Co. v. Paducah Water Supply Co. charged upon an express contract, whereby, for the granting of a franchise for forty years, the water company agreed, with other things, for the benefit of the inhabitants of the town and their property, to maintain "two pumping engines each having capacity to force into the standpipe 2,000,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours, and to keep a head of water sufficient to throw from any eight of the hydrants, simultaneously and for five consecutive hours at any one period of time, streams through 50 feet of hose 100 feet high." A recovery was sought for the breach of the express terms of this contract. Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 124 N. C. 328, 46 L. R. A. 513, 70 Am. St. Rep. 598, 32 S. E. 720, was in principle identical with the Paducah Case, which it cites with approval. There, too, it was alleged that the defendant company contracted to furnish said city with pure and wholesome water for the use of its citizens and of force at all times sufficient to protect the inhabitants of the city against loss by fire, and, further, to erect and maintain reservoirs, water towers, pump houses, and other appurtenances and attachments necessary or expedient for the proper conducting and carrying on said waterworks so as to supply at all times the greatest protection against fire, and to maintain "a pressure of water for fire purposes sufficient to throw six streams of water from six hydrants to a vertical height of 100 feet in still air, each stream being taken from one hydrant and with 100 feet of hose and a 1-inch ring nozzle; and the said companies shall constantly, day and night, except from unavoidable accidents, keep all the said hydrants supplied with water for fire service, and shall keep them in good order for said service." In Planters' Oil Mill v. Monroe Waterworks & Light Co. 52 La. Ann. 1243, 27 So. 684, a franchise and grant for thirty years had been made by the city with the defendant company under this express contract: "To supply and have ready at all times for use in pipes and hydrants erected on the premises by plaintiff as a precaution against fire, water in sufficient quantity and with a specified force of pressure sufficient to serve the purpose of the extinguishment of fires." The supreme court, dealing with the facts of the case, declared that the municipality is not liable in damages where it has a contract with a private company which fails adequately to meet its obligations, but that it is not so clear that the private company making such contract and failing to meet its duties thereunder may not be held answerable to the citizen for loss he sustains in consequence of such failure. In each of these cases it will be observed that the court was dealing with contracts whereby the water companies, for valuable concessions and exclusive privileges, had agreed to do and to maintain certain specific things by way of protection from fire, and the gravamen of the charge against each and all of the companies was that they had violated their contract in failing to do the particular things for the doing of which they had expressly contracted. The broad distinction between those cases and the one at bar is, as pointed out in the opinion of the trial judge, that there is no express covenant in the contract between this plaintiff and this defendant, and the security to plaintiff's property was only the same security which, in the exercise of its governmental functions, the plaintiff had obtained for the whole town.

The only other cases cited by appellant are Kentucky cases following the decision in the Paducah Lumber Co. Case, 89 Ky. 340, 7 L. R. A. 77, 25 Am. St. Rep. 536, 12 S. W. 554, 13 S. W. 249, and the case of Watson v. Needham, 161 Mass. 404, 24 L. R. 64 L. R. A.

A. 287, 37 N. E. 204. In this last case an action by a citizen against the town, which itself was supplying the water, was upheld, but that was under a doctrine at variance with the established rule in this state, which denies a right of action against a municipality for damages occasioned by the negligence of its officials or employees. Huffman v. San Joaquin County, 21 Cal. 426; Chope v. Eureka, 78 Cal. 591, 4 L. R. A. 325, 12 Am. St. Rep. 113, 21 Pac. 364; Sievers v. San Francisco, 115 Cal. 655, 56 Am. St. Rep. 153, 47 Pac. 687.

The order appealed from is therefore affirmed.

We concur: McFarland, J.; Lorigan, J.

Petition for rehearing in banc denied. March 11, 1904.

Beatty, Ch. J., dissents.

Leah J. KATZ, Exrx., etc., of Marcus Katz, Deceased, et al., Appts.,

v.

Margaret D. WALKINSHAW, Respnt. }

(.....Cal.....)

1. Water percolating from mountain slopes to the valley, where it reaches an impervious barrier, and is held under an impervious stratum of earth, so that, when the latter is perforated, the pressure from above causes artesian wells, cannot be regarded as a water course so as to confer riparian rights upon owners of the surface.
2. The owner of a portion of a tract of land which is saturated below the surface with an abundant supply of NOTE.—Correlative rights in percolating waters.

When the question of the rights in subterranean waters first came before the courts they hesitated, apparently because of the seeming difficulty of formulating any rules which would be adequate to regulate rights in such waters, to attempt to lay down any rules whatever, and held generally that the water was a part of the land, and that each landowner could do with it what he chose. See note to Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 19 L. R. A. 92. It will be at once perceived that this method of dealing with the question recognized only the doctrine that might, or in this instance opportunity, made right, and refused absolutely to recognize any correlative rights whatever in underground water. This method, however, was wholly inadequate to meet the necessities of the case, and almost from the beginning exceptions began to be made to the general rule as above stated. By referring to the note in 19 L. R. A. 92, it will be seen that an exception almost as old as the rule was that, if the water was flowing in a definite percolating water cannot remove water from wells thereon for sale, if the remainder of the tract is thereby deprived of water necessary for its profitable enjoyment.

On Rehearing.

3. A nonsuit should not be granted if enough of the facts which are set forth in the complaint are established by the evidence, without substantial conflict, to constitute a good cause of action, although other allegations are not proved.

4. The fundamental principles of right and justice on which the common law is founded, and which its administration is intended to promote, require that a different rule should be adopted whenever it is found that, owing to the physical features and character of a state, and the peculiarities of its climate, soil, and products, the application of a given common-law rule tends constantly to cause injustice and wrong, rather than the administration of justice and right.

(November 7, 1902.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Superior Court for San Bernardino County in favor of defendant in an action to enjoin the diverting of water from an artesian belt to the injury of plaintiffs' property. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Messrs. C. C. Haskell, Rolfe & Rolfe, and H. C. Rolfe, for appellants:

The water need not flow on the surface in a visible stream, "nor need it flow in a defined channel underground as a solid body of moving water of any particular dimensions, in order to constitute a water course."

Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 622, 57 Pac. 585.

The evidence showing that plaintiffs' wells were deprived of water by the flow of defendant's wells was overwhelming. Being so deprived, the inference is irresistible that defendant's wells draw from the same channel; the same rules applied to it as applied to surface streams, and not the rule giving the landowner a right to use or destroy the water at his pleasure. Moreover, it will be seen that there was no right to foul or pollute the underground water to the injury of a neighbor, and that some courts held that a landowner would not be permitted to interfere with his neighbor's use of the water merely out of malice. In addition to the cases there referred to upon the question of malice, attention is called to Springfield Waterworks Co. v. Jenkins, 62 Mo. App. 74, and Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. 514, 84 Am. Dec. 511. So, in Wyandot Club v. Sells, 6 Ohio N. P. 64, it was held that the owner of lands, the waters of a spring on which are wrongfully diverted by one who does the act maliciously, is entitled to punitive damages; and in Burke v. Smith, 69 Mich. 380, 8 L. R. A. 184, 37 N. W. 838, Judge Morse, for the purpose of determining the effect of maliciously cutting off light and air, assumes that there would be a liability for maliciously interfering with a water supply. In jurisdictions where the absolute right to cut off percolating water prevails, however, the court holds that the motive with which it is done is immaterial. Thus, in Bradford v. Pickles [1895] A. C. 587, 64 L. J. Ch. N. S. 759, 11 Reports, 286, 73 L. T. N. S. 353, 44 Week. Rep. 100, 60 J. P. 3, Affirming [1895] 1 Ch. 145, [1894] 8 Ch. 54, it was held that the fact that one, in intercepting percolating water, acted without a bona fide attempt to improve his own land, but maliciously with intention to injure his neighbor and to induce him to compensate him for refraining from doing so, does not make the one committing the act liable.

Referring again to the note in 19 L. R. A. it is seen that the doctrine of absolute right was held not to extend to permitting the landowner to appropriate underground water if the effect was to draw it by percolation from a surface stream; and the New Hampshire court intimated that the rules governing the rights in underground waters should be made more definite and certain to the extent of holding that there was a correlative right in such waters, so that each landowner must make a reasonable use of his right, and that his neighbor had a right to object to an unreasonable or excessive use of the water.

Within the past few years, and since the note above referred to was published, the courts have taken long strides toward bringing the question of percolating water within the domain of law and order. The New Hampshire doctrine is the only one which can be recognized by any courts purporting to be governed by principles of right and justice. The mere fact that the source and course of water which is found percolating beneath the surface of the ground are not known is no reason why the courts should refuse to apply to such water definite rules so far as it is possible to apply them, the same as to other species of property; and in actual practice the application of rules recognizing correlative rights and confining each landowner to a reasonable use of the water is not difficult.

Upon this question the courts are not embarrassed by any fixed common-law rule which was adopted by the statutes enacting the common law, so that they are at liberty to adopt the rule which is most in accord with principles of right and justice and with the general analogies of the law. The first case dealing with underground water as such was decided in 1840 (Hammond v. Hall, 10 Sim. 552, 4 Jur. 694), and the English court did not hold that the water might be exhausted for commercial purposes by one landowner to the injury of his neighbors until 1860, in New River Co. v. Johnson, 2 El. & El. 435, 29 L. J. Prob. N. S. 93, 6 Jur. N. S. 374, 1 L. T. N. S. 295, 8 Week. Rep. 179; so that the courts in this country are not bound by English precedents, and the general statements of courts and text writers that the landowner has absolute title to the water found beneath the soil are mere crude generalities which have not been generally followed in the settlement of rights between adjoining landowners.

KATZ V. WALKINSHAW and BARCLAY V. ABRAHAM are good illustrations of the tendency of the modern decisions, and are the outcome of the application to the subject of percolating waters of the rules applied in dispensing jus-stream of water which is admitted by the answer to supply plaintiffs' wells.

Burroughs v. Saterlee, 67 Iowa, 396, 56 Am. Rep. 350, 25 N. W. 808; Willis v. Perry, 92 Iowa, 297, 26 L. R. A. 124, 60 N. W. 727.

Where a surface stream of water sinks beneath the surface, and, passing through the soil, no matter for how long a distance, reappears again, thence flowing on the surface, such a stream is a continuous stream throughout its course.

Case v. Hoffman, 64 Wis. 438, 20 L. R. A. 40, 54 N. W. 796; Strait v. Brown, 16 Nev. 317, 40 Am. Rep. 497; Saddler v. Lee, 66 Ga. 45, 42 Am. Rep. 62; Herriman Irrig. Co. v. Butterfield Min. & Mill. Co. 19 Utah, 453, 51 L. R. A. 930, 57 Pac. 537; Vineland Irrig. Dist. v. Azusa Irrig. Co. 126 Cal. 486, 46 L. R. A. 820, 58 Pac. 1059; Bartlett v. O'Connor (Cal.) 36 Pac. 513; McClellan v. Hurdle, 3 Colo. App. 430, 33 Pac. 280; Keeney v. Carillo, 2 N. M. 480.

The growth of trees in this arid country is indicative of an underground supply of water.

Hale v. McLea, 53 Cal. 578.

Where there is a channel either below or above the surface of the ground, in which there is a well-defined flow of water, the owner of the land through which it passes can only make a reasonable use of the water.

tice between parties disputing as to other property rights.

Even in England, where the rule has seemed to be that each landowner may do what he will with percolating water, Lord Wensleydale, in Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 387, 29 L. J. Exch. N. S. 81, 5 Jur. N. S. 873, 7 Week. Rep. 685, says that, according to reason and law,—Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas,—it seems right to hold that a landowner ought to exercise his right to use percolating water in a reasonable manner, with as little injury to his neighbor's rights as may be; and he suggests that it is not a reasonable use to pump water from a well to supply a municipal corporation at a distance, which would have no right to the use of the water because of ownership of the soil in which it was found, in such a way as to cause a diminution of the flow of water in a neighboring river.

In accordance with that suggestion, the New York court has held that the draining of land of a private owner by a city pumping works, which exhausts from all the ground thereabout the natural supply of underground or subterranean water, and thus prevents the raising on it of crops to which it was and would be peculiarly adapted, or destroy such crops after they are grown or partly grown, renders the city liable to the landowner for the damages he sustains, and entitles him to an injunction against the continuance of the wrong. Forbell v. New York, 164 N. Y. 522, 51 L. R. A. 695, 79 Am. St. Rep. 666, 58 N. E. 644. Affirming 47 App. Div. 371, 61 N. Y. Supp. 1005; Westphal v. New York, 34 Misc. 684, 70 N. Y. Supp. 1021.

64 L. R. A. /

Brown v. Kistler, 190 Pa. 499, 42 Atl. 885; Bathgate v. Irvine, 126 Cal. 135, 77 Am. St. Rep. 158, 58 Pac. 442; Case v. Hoffman, 84 Wis. 438, 20 L. R. A. 40, 54 N. W. 795; Gould, Waters, 263.

One may drain his own land, or do anything that will benefit it; but he cannot do this in such a way as to injure his neighbor's land.

Suett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439, 9 Am. Rep. 281; Bassett v. Salisbury Mfg. Co. 43 N. H. 569, 82 Am. Dec. 184; Bartlett v. O'Connor (Cal.) 36 Pac. 513; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721; Greenleaf v. Francis, 18 Pick. 117; Herriman Irrig. Co. v. Butterfield Min. & Mill. Co. 19 Utah, 453, 51 L. R. A. 930, 57 Pac. 537.

One may not pollute water flowing underground.

Good v. Altoona, 162 Pa. 493, 42 Am. St. Rep. 840, 29 Atl. 741.

There is consistently an inconsistency in the rule which gives to an owner of the land the usufruct of a stream which exists as a right ex natura, and yet vests in another, in his search after underground water, the right to destroy the stream absolutely.

Smith v. Brooklyn, 18 App. Div. 340, 46 N. Y. Supp. 147; Forbell v. New York, 27 Misc. 12, 56 N. Y. Supp. 790.

On rehearing.

If there were any lack of sufficient de-

So, in Willis v. Perry, 92 Iowa, 297, 26 L. R. A. 124, 60 N. W. 727, it was held that a city is liable for diminishing the supply of water in a private well, so as to leave an insufficient quantity for domestic purposes, by sinking wells and pumping therefrom a municipal water supply.

So, a railroad company will not be permitted to sink a well upon land procured for that purpose, and then pump from it water for the use of its shops and engines to such an extent that the water stratum is exhausted, and the wells of surrounding proprietors dried up. East v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 77 S. W. 646.

So, one owner will not be permitted to waste the water to the injury of his neighbor. Stillwater Water Co. v. Farmer, 89 Minn. 58, 60 L. R. A. 875, 93 N. W. 907.

A use for natural purposes takes precedence over artificial ones. Willis v. Perry, 92 Iowa, 297, 26 L. R. A. 124, 60 N. W. 727.

But, as between artificial uses, neither landowner has a right to precedence. The right of the landowner is limited to use of the water for the benefit of his own property, and, in case he attempts to remove the water from the land for sale, he cannot complain if the supply is diminished by others who make a like use of it. Merrick Water Co. v. Brooklyn, 32 App. Div. 454, 53 N. Y. Supp. 10.

A few recent decisions by courts misled by the general statements that the water is a part of the soil and may be used by the landowner at his pleasure, have held that injury to a neighbor by any use which one might make of the percolating water found upon his own prop-scription of the water, about the identity of which there is no dispute, flowing in plaintiffs' wells, such lack of description is amply supplied by the defendant, who alleges in her answer that the water taken is percolating water, and not water of a well-defined underground stream.

Hunt v. Davis, 135 Cal. 35, 66 Pac. 957; Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 61, 65 Pac. 139; Johnson v. Polhemus, 99 Cal. 246, 33 Pac. 908; Sandford v. Flint, 24 Mich. 26; Dayton v. Dayton, 68 Mich. 437, 36 N. W. 209; Rankin v. Newman, 107 Cal. 609, 40 Pac. 1024, 41 Pac. 304; Hegard v. California Ins. Co. (Cal.) 11 Pac. 594.

A defective description of property in a complaint may be cured by the answer.

Vantilburgh v. Hamilton, 2 Mont. 413; Willis v. Lockett (Tex. Civ. App.) 26 S. W. 419; Hines v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 95 N. C. 437, 59 Am. Rep. 250; 4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 608.

Even though this flow and stream of water be by percolation, defendant has no right to take it, thereby depriving plaintiffs of the natural flow of water in their wells, and convey it to, and use it upon, lands "through or to which said underground stream does not flow."

In adjudicating upon the rights of parties to percolating water the rule Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas has been almost universally applied by the courts of the United States where the party interfering with percolating water did not commit the act in the reasonable use of his own land.

Where knowledge of the underground stream is certain the same rules apply to it as to surface streams.

Collins v. Chartiers Valley Gas Co. 131 Pa. 146, 6 L. R. A. 280, 17 Am. St. Rep. 791, 18 Atl. 1012.

An adjoining proprietor has no right to add pressure to the natural percolations of the soil. He is charged with the natural and anticipated consequences of his own acts.

Murphy v. Gillum, 73 Mo. App. 490; Everett v. Hydraulic Flume Tunnel Co. 23 Cal. 225.

Harmful percolations cannot be forced into a neighbor's land.

Parker v. Larsen, 86 Cal. 236, 21 Am. St. Rep. 30, 24 Pac. 989.

One who drains his lands so as to injure another without benefit to himself will be restrained from so doing.

Bartlett v. O'Connor (Cal.) 36 Pac. 513; Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 533, 52 Am. Dec. 356; Greenleaf v. Francis, 18 Pick. 117; Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. 514, 84 Am. Dec. 513; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721; Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439, 9 Am. Rep. 276.

erty gives the latter no cause of action. Thus, in Wilson v. New Bedford, 108 Mass. 261, 11 Am. Rep. 352, there is a dictum to the effect that one landowner may draw from his property water to supply a large community, although he thereby takes water which would naturally come to the property of his neighbor to its benefit.

So, in Clarke County v. Mississippi Lumber Co. 80 Miss. 535, 31 So. 905, it was held that a landowner had a right, in the prosecution of his business, to drive a well on his property, and by means of suction obtain therefrom water to supply ponds for mill logs, although he thereby exhausts and dries up the well belonging to the county.

And the Wisconsin court pushes the doctrine to the extent of holding that a landowner has a right to sink a well on his land and use the water therefrom as he chooses, or allow it to flow away, regardless of the effect of such use on his neighbor's wells; and such right is not affected by malicious intent. That decision is opposed to good morals, good sense, and all common-law principles which are applicable to analogous subjects. The principle governing modern affairs of life is that common property is to be conserved and preserved for the good of the greatest number, and that one man, merely because he has access to the common supply, will not be permitted wantonly to waste or destroy the common property to the injury of others desiring to make use of it.

Controversies are likely to arise with respect to the right to use water for commercial purposes, or to waste or destroy it, only in localties where there is an unusual quantity because of the geological formation or peculiar local conditions. In such cases there is invariably found to be a basin or reservoir, like a vast underground lake, with impervious sides and bottom covered with a loose stratum of earth which the water saturates. There is no reason why the same rule should not be applied to such a lake as to one on the surface. Every landowner who has access to it has a right to make a reasonable use of the common supply to meet his own needs; and, so far as he does so, his neighbor must accommodate himself to the effect of such use. But the moment that he begins to make an excessive or artificial use of the water, or to waste it, the neighbor has a right to complain. See Farnham, Waters, § 938. That is the rule of Katz v. Walkinshaw and Barclay v. Abraham, and of the better considered cases above cited.

In application of the doctrine of Katz v. Walkinshaw, the California court has held that a riparian owner cannot intercept percolating water so as to diminish the flow of a surface stream, and put it to a use which the stream itself could not be applied to. McClintock v. Hudson, 141 Cal. 275, 74 Pac. 849. And that the owner of land has a right to make only a reasonable use of water percolating therein for the benefit and enjoyment of his land, and cannot make an excavation in his land so as to divert the flow of water from other land, where the diversion is not for the benefit of his own property. Cohen v. La Canada Land & Water Co. (Cal.) 76 Pac. 47.

H. P. F.

The rule of "so use your own as not to injure another" is extended and applied to all cases where the percolating water is taken for an unreasonable use, and what is reasonable depends upon the facts surrounding the case.

Smith v. Brooklyn, 18 App. Div. 340, 46 N. Y. Supp. 147; Forbell v. New York, 47 App. Div. 371, 61 N. Y. Supp. 1006; Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439, 9 Am. Rep. 281; Bassett v. Salisbury Mfg. Co. 43 N. H. 569, 82 Am. Dec. 184; Herriman Irrig. Co. v. Butterfield Min. & Mill. Co. 19 Utah, 453, 51 L. R. A. 930, 57 Pac. 537.

Mr. G. H. Gould as amicus curiae.

Mr. Byron Waters, for respondent:

The evidence not only fails to show that a water course exists, but affirmatively shows that the waters constituting the sources of all the wells are percolating waters, neither having nor flowing within any known, defined channel, bed, or banks.

Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299; Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 616, 19 L. R. A. 92, 30 Pac. 783; Gould v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 641, 52 Am. St. Rep. 201, 44 Pac. 319; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585.

Messrs. Houghton & Houghton, amici curiae, in support of petition for rehearing:

The cause of action stated in the plaintiffs' complaint purports to be a diversion by the defendant of waters from a natural underground or subsurface stream of water flowing in known and well-defined channels. This cannot be supported by evidence which would warrant a judgment in favor of the plaintiffs, based upon their rights to water which was percolating or seepage water as distinguished from a stream of water.

Wilson v. Ward, 26 Colo. 39, 56 Pac. 573.

A recovery cannot be had upon a cause of action not set out in the complaint, but developed by the proofs.

Mondran v. Gouz, 51 Cal. 151; Reed v. Norton, 99 Cal. 617, 34 Pac. 333; Riverside Water Co. v. Gage, 108 Cal. 240, 41 Pac. 299; Rudel v. Los Angeles County, 118 Cal. 281, 50 Pac. 400; Nelson v. Lemmon, 10 Cal. 50; Wallace v. Farmers' Ditch Co. 130 Cal. 578, 62 Pac. 1078; Murdock v. Clarke, 59 Cal. 683; Davis v. Pacific Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 127 Cal. 312, 57 Pac. 764, 59 Pac. 698; Schirmer v. Drexler, 134 Cal. 134, 66 Pac. 180.

In the absence of evidence as to the source of subterranean waters, they are presumed to be formed by the ordinary percolations of water in the soil.

Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299; Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 618, 19 L. R. A. 92, 30 Pac. 783; Metcalfe v. Nelson, 8 S. D. 89, 59 Am. St. Rep. 748, 65 N. W. 911; Clarke County v. Mis- issippi Lumber Co. 80 Miss. 535, 31 So. 905; Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Cline, 37 Fla. 586, 33 L. R. A. 376, 63 Am. St. Rep. 268, 20 So. 780; Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Asso. v. Asbury Park, 40 N. J. Eq. 447, 3 Atl. 168.

The burden of proving, in a given case, that subterranean waters flow in a known and well-defined channel, is cast upon him who claims rights in and to such waters as so flowing.

Gould v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 645, 52 Am. St. Rep. 201, 44 Pac. 319; Herriman Irrig. Co. v. Keel, 25 Utah, 96, 69 Pac. 724; Wheelock v. Jacobs, 70 Vt. 162, 43 L. R. A. 105, 67 Am. St. Rep. 670, 40 Atl. 41; Elster v. Springfield, 49 Ohio St. 99, 30 N. E. 274; Springfield Waterworks Co. v. Jenkins, 62 Mo. App. 81.

Percolating water cannot be regarded as a water course when it is percolating through sand or gravel within limits not at all defined by anything appearing upon the surface or made to appear by investigation beneath the surface.

Meyer v. Tacoma Light & Water Co. 8 Wash. 144, 35 Pac. 601; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585; Clarke County v. Mississippi Lumber Co. 80 Miss. 535, 31 So. 905; Wheelock v. Jacobs, 70 Vt. 162, 43 L. R. A. 105, 67 Am. St. Rep. 661, 40 Atl. 41; Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. 514, 84 Am. Dec. 511; Bloodgood v. Ayers, 108 N. Y. 400, 2 Am. St. Rep. 443, 15 N. E. 433; Lyde's Appeal, 106 Pa. 626, 51 Am. Rep. 542; Crescent Min. Co. v. Silver King Min. Co. 17 Utah, 451, 70 Am. St. Rep. 810, 54 Pac. 244; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294; Deadwood C. R. Co. v. Barker, 14 S. D. 558, 86 N. W. 619; Gould, Waters, & 281.

The fact that the flow of one well diminishes the flow of adjacent wells does not prove that their common source of supply is an underground stream.

Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Asso. v. Asbury Park, 40 N. J. Eq. 447, 3 Atl. 168; Taylor v. Welch, 6 Or. 199; Cole v. Bacon, 63 Cal. 571; Clarke County v. Mississippi Lumber Co. 80 Miss. 535, 31 So. 905.

It has become a rule of property in this state that there are no correlative rights as to underground percolating waters,—that a landowner has an absolute property in, and dominion over, all waters percolating in the soil owned by him usque ad infernos.

Vineland Irrig. Dist. v. Azusa Irrig. Co. 126 Cal. 486, 46 L. R. A. 820, 58 Pac. 1059; Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299; Cross v. Kitts, 69 Cal. 217, 58 Am. Rep. 558, 10 Pac. 409; Huston v. Leach, 53 Cal. 262; Painter v. Pasadena Land & W. Co. 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539; Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 615, 19 L. R. A. 92, 30 Pac. 783; Gould v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 639, 52 Am. St. Rep. 201, 44 Pac. 319.

The doctrine of prescription is not applicable to percolating waters.

Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 310, 10 Am. Rep. 299; Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 615, 19 L. R. A. 94, 30 Pac. 783; Wheelock v. Jacobs, 70 Vt. 162, 43 L. R. A. 105, 67 Am. St. Rep. 661, note, 40 Atl. 41; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 300; Elster v. Springfield, 49 Ohio St. 99, 30 N. E. 274; Springfield Waterworks Co. v. Jenkins, 62 Mo. App. 80; Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 541, 52 Am. Dec. 352; Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 370, 29 L. J. Exch. N. S. 81, 5 Jur. N. S. 873, 7 Week. Rep. 685.

The rule of stare decisis should be enforced.

Re Dorris, 93 Cal. 611, 29 Pac. 244; Smith v. McDonald, 42 Cal. 484; Redmond v. Peterson, 102 Cal. 595, 41 Am. St. Rep. 204, 36 Pac. 923; People v. Logan, 123 Cal. 414, 56 Pac. 56; Angus v. Plum, 121 Cal. 608, 54 Pac. 97; Butes v. Relyea, 23 Wend. 340; Reed v. Owenby, 44 Mo. 206.

Rights in and to oil and natural gas are determined by the same principles as define the rights in and to percolating waters.

People's Gas Co. v. Tyner, 131 Ind. 277, 16 L. R. A. 443, 31 Am. St. Rep. 433, 31 N. E. 59; Westmoreland & C. Natural Gas Co. v. De Witt, 130 Pa. 235, 5 L. R. A. 731, 18 Atl. 724; Kier v. Peterson, 41 Pa. 357; Funk v. Haldeman, 53 Pa. 229; Stoughton's Appeal, 88 Pa. 198; Hail v. Reed, 15 B. Mon. 479; Gould, Waters, § 291, p. 549.

Percolating waters are not the subject of property, "except while in actual occupancy," they belong to the owner of the land, and are part of it, so long as they are on or in it, and are subject to his control; but when they escape, and go into other land, or come under another's control, the title of the former is gone.

People's Gas Co. v. Tyner, 131 Ind. 277, 16 L. R. A. 443, 31 Am. St. Rep. 433, 31 N. E. 59; Westmoreland & C. Natural Gas Co. v. De Witt, 130 Pa. 235, 5 L. R. A. 731, 18 Atl. 724; Kinnaird v. Standard Oil Co. 89 Ky. 473, 7 L. R. A. 451, 25 Am. St. Rep. 545, 12 S. W. 938.

As no correlative rights exist between proprietors of adjacent lands with respect to percolating waters, the doctrine of sic utero tuo, which presupposes the existence of a legal right which can be injuriously affected, has no application in the determination of the right to use such waters.

Acton v. Blundell, 12 Mees. & W. 324, 13 L. J. Exch. N. S. 289; Brown v. Illius, 27 Conn. 84, 71 Am. Dec. 49; Chatfield v. Wilson, 28 Vt. 49, 31 Vt. 358; Harwood v. Benton, 32 Vt. 724; Wheelock v. Jacobs, 70 Vt. 164, 43 L. R. A. 105, 67 Am. St. Rep. 659, 64 L. R. A.

40 Atl. 41; Phelps v. Nowlen, 72 N. Y. 39, 28 Am. Rep. 93; Saddler v. Lee, 66 Ga. 45, 42 Am. Rep. 62; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555; Mizell v. McGowan, 120 N. C. 134, 26 S. E. 783; Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. 514, 84 Am. Dec. 511; Strait v. Brown, 16 Nev. 321, 40 Am. Rep. 497; Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 541, 52 Am. Dec. 352.

Interference with percolating waters is damnum absque injuria.

Gould, Waters, §§ 282 et seq.; Acton v. Blundell, 12 Mees. & W. 324, 13 L. J. Exch. N. S. 289; Alexander v. United States, 25 Ct. Cl. 87; United States v. Alexander, 148 U. S. 186, 37 L. ed. 415, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529; Copper King v. Wabash Min. Co. 114 Fed. 992; Bruening v. Dorr, 23 Colo. 195, 35 L. R. A. 640, 47 Pac. 290; Wilson v. Ward, 26 Colo. 39, 56 Pac. 573; Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 533, 52 Am. Dec. 352; Brown v. Illius, 25 Conn. 593, 27 Conn. 84, 71 Am. Dec. 49; Greenleaf v. Francis, 18 Pick. 117; Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Cline, 37 Fla. 586, 33 L. R. A. 376, 53 Am. St. Rep. 262, 20 So. 780; Warmack v. Brownlee, 84 Ga. 196, 10 S. E. 738; Davis v. Afong, 5 Hawaiian Rep. 216; Edwards v. Haeger, 180 Ill. 99, 54 N. E. 176; New Albany & S. R. Co. v. Peterson, 14 Ind. 114, 71 Am. Dec. 60; Taylor v. Fickas, 64 Ind. 167, 31 Am. Rep. 114; Hougan v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 35 Iowa, 558; Emporia v. Soden, 25 Kan. 588; Kinnaird v. Standard Oil Co. 89 Ky. 473, 7 L. R. A. 451, 25 Am. St. Rep. 545, 12 S. W. 938; Chase v. Silverstone, 62 Me. 175, 16 Am. Rep. 419; Chesley v. King, 74 Me. 164, 43 Am. Rep. 569; Wilson v. New Bedford, 108 Mass. 261, 11 Am. Rep. 352; Davis v. Spaulding, 157 Mass. 431, 19 L. R. A. 102, 32 Atl. 650; Upjohn v. Board of Health, 46 Mich. 549, 9 N. W. 845; Springfield Waterworks Co. v. Jenkins, 62 Mo. App. 74; Mosier v. Caldwell, 7 Nev. 363; Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Asso. v. Asbury Park, 40 N. J. Eq. 447, 3 Atl. 168; Keeney v. Carillo, 2 N. M. 495; Ellis v. Duncan, 21 Barb. 230; Goodale v. Tuttle, 29 N. Y. 459; Pixley v. Clark, 35 N. Y. 520, 91 Am. Dec. 72; Delhi v. Youmans, 45 N. Y. 362, 6 Am. Rep. 100; Bliss v. Greeley, 45 N. Y. 671, 6 Am. Rep. 157; Johnstown Cheese Mfg. Co. v. Veghte, 69 N. Y. 16, 25 Am. Rep. 125; Phelps v. Nowlen, 72 N. Y. 39, 28 Am. Rep. 93; Barkley v. Wilcox, 86 N. Y. 140, 40 Am. Rep. 519; Bloodgood v. Ayers, 108 N. Y. 400, 2 Am. St. Rep. 443, 15 N. E. 433; Mizell v. McGowan, 120 N. C. 134, 26 S. E. 783; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 300; Elster v. Springfield, 49 Ohio St. 100, 30 N. E. 274; Disette v. Lowrie, 6 Ohio N. P. 392; Wyandot Club v. Sells, 6 Ohio N. P. 64; Taylor v. Welch, 6 Or. 199; Brosnan v. Harris, 39 Or. 148, 54 L. R. A. 628, 87 Am. St. Rep. 649, 65 Pac. 867; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721; Kier v. Peterson, 41 Pa. 357; Stoughton's Appeal, 88 Pa. 198; Westmoreland & C. Natural Gas Co. v. De Witt, 130 Pa. 235, 5 L. R. A. 731, 18 Atl. 724; Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. 514, 84 Am. Dec. 511; Coleman v. Chadwick, 80 Pa. 81, 21 Am. Rep. 93; Lybe's Appeal, 106 Pa. 626, 51 Am. Rep. 542; Williams v. Ladew, 161 Pa. 283, 41 Am. St. Rep. 891, 29 Atl. 54; Brown v. Kistler, 190 Pa. 499, 42 Atl. 885; Buffon v. Harris, 5 R. I. 243; Metcalf v. Nelson, 8 S. D. 89, 59 Am. St. Rep. 746, 65 N. W. 911; Sullivan v. Northern Spy Min. Co. 11 Utah, 441, 30 L. R. A. 186, 40 Pac. 709; Crescent Min. Co. v. Silver King Min. Co. 17 Utah, 451, 70 Am. St. Rep. 810, 54 Pac. 244; Herriman Irrig. Co. v. Keel, 25 Utah, 96, 69 Pac. 719; Chatfield v. Wilson, 28 Vt. 49, 31 Vt. 357; Harwood v. Benton, 32 Vt. 724; Miller v. Black Rock Springs Improv. Co. 99 Va. 747, 86 Am. St. Rep. 924, 40 S. E. 27; Meyer v. Tacoma Light & Water Co. 8 Wash. 144, 35 Pac. 601; Case v. Hoffman, 100 Wis. 314, 44 L. R. A. 728, 72 N. W. 390, 74 N. W. 220, 75 N. W. 945; Huber v. Merkel, 117 Wis. 355, 62 L. R. A. 589, 94 N. W. 354.

Messrs. M. B. Kellogg, Otis & Gregg, Howard Surr, Frank H. Short, Platt & Bayne, and Henley C. Booth also as amici curiæ.

Temple, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal is taken from a judgment of nonsuit entered against plaintiffs on motion of defendant. The action was brought to enjoin defendant from drawing off and diverting water from an artesian belt which is in part on or under the premises of plaintiffs, and to the water of which they have sunk wells, thereby causing the water to rise and flow upon the premises of plaintiffs, and which they ever had constantly so flowed for twenty years before the wrong complained of was committed by defendant. The water is necessary for domestic purposes, and for irrigating the lands of plaintiffs, upon which there are growing trees, vines, shrubbery, and other plants, which are of great value to plaintiffs. All of said plants will perish, and plaintiffs will be greatly and irreparably injured, if the defendant is allowed to divert the water. These facts are admitted, and further that defendant is diverting the water for sale, to be used on lands of others distant from the saturated belt from which the artesian water is derived. The plaintiffs contend that this subsurface water constitutes an underground stream, and that plaintiffs are riparian thereto, and as such riparian owners they are seeking relief in this case. The defendant denies that she is taking or diverting water from an underground stream or water course, and alleges that all the water which rises in the artesian wells on her premises, and which she is selling, is percolating water, and is parcel of her premises, and her property. In effect, therefore, while denying that she is doing any act of which plaintiffs can complain, she really only denies that she is diverting water from an underground water course, and asserts her right to dispose of the water in the manner alleged, because it is percolating water, not confined to a definite water course. The court sustained that proposition, and for that reason granted defendant's motion for nonsuit.

The so-called artesian belt includes several square miles of territory. It is a large accumulation of earth upon the base of very high mountains, and is composed of detritus of varying quantity and material, with no regular stratification. Wells have been sunk at least to the depth of 750 feet, but no bed rock has been found. It has quite an incline from the mountain, and is from 700 to 1,500 feet above sea level. Mr. F. C. Finkle, a civil engineer, was the chief witness for the plaintiffs, and testified both as to facts palpable to the senses and as an expert. He says the saturated land is fed: First, by the underflow from the numerous ravines, canyons, and streams which enter the valley from the mountains; and, secondly, by the rain and flood water upon, and absorbed upon, the slope, and between the artesian belt and the mountains. This water, percolating down into the soil, and constantly pressed forward by water accumulating, finally gets under partially impervious earth, where it is held under sufficient pressure to create the artesian belt. The banks of this supposed subsurface stream, the witness thought, were on the west "a cemented dyke, which runs through the valley, and the eastern boundary of it is the clay bank or dyke at the south side of the Santa Ana river." Within these limits, many ravines enter from the mountains, some of them carrying at times great quantities of water, much of which had been appropriated and carried off in pipes or cemented aqueducts. It is evident that, if there is any flow to this underground body of water thus held under pressure, it is by percolation. The witness stated that the process was the same the world over. The lower lands are saturated from above. "It is done by saturation from the rainfalls and the floods, and percolation through voids in the soil." It is quite manifest that this body (if it can be so styled) of percolating water cannot be called an underground water course to which riparian rights can attach, unless we are prepared to abolish all distinction between percolating water and the water flowing in streams with known or ascertainable banks, which confine the water to definite channels. All rain water which falls upon the hills and mountain sides which does not flow off at once, as surface water, is absorbed and percolates down in the same way to the valley below. No doubt, limits can be found to every such flow, as in this case. The distinction is well established and, in some respects, different rules of law applied to the two cases. The plaintiffs, therefore, cannot establish their claims upon the theory of an underground water course to which they are riparian.

But appellants contend that, though they are not riparian to an underground water course, and although the saturated belt carries only percolating water, still they are entitled to the injunction prayed for. The defense, conceding that the water held in the earth is percolating water, relies upon certain decisions which assert and apply literally the maxim, Cujus est solum, ejus est usque ad inferos, and that water percolating in the ground, or held there in saturation, belongs to the landowner as completely as do the rocks, ground, and other material of which the land is composed, and therefore he may remove it and sell it, or do what he pleases with it. He cites authority for the proposition: Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299; Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 616, 19 L. R. A. 92, 30 Pac. 783; Gould v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 641, 52 Am. St. Rep. 201, 44 Pac. 319, and Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585.

It is obvious at once that the analogy between the right to remove sand and gravel from the land for sale, and to remove and sell percolating water, is not perfect. If we suppose a saturated plain, one may remove and sell the sand and gravel from his land without affecting or diminishing the sand and gravel on the lands of his neighbors. If the water on his lands is his property, then the water in the soil of his neighbors is their property. But when he drains out and sells the water on his land, he draws to his land and also sells water which is the property of his neighbor. And the effect is similar in other respects. By pumping out the water from his lands, he can, perhaps, deprive his neighbors of water for domestic uses, and in fact render their land valueless. In short, the members of the community, in the case supposed, have a common interest in the water. It is necessary for all, and it is an anomaly in the law if one person can for his individual profit destroy the community, and render the neighborhood uninhabitable.

We have derived our law, in respect to subterranean waters, as in other respects, mostly from England, but in regard to this matter the first cases are quite modern.

Even yet the text-books on water rights have but little to say upon the subject of percolating water. Such law as has been made upon the subject comes from countries and climates where water is abundant, and its conservation and economical use of little consequence, as compared with a climate like southern California. The learned counsel for appellants state in their brief that water at San Bernardino is worth $1,000 per inch of flow. Percolating water or water held in the earth is the main source of supply for domestic uses and for irrigation, without which most lands are unproductive. It is also stated that speculators are seeking to appropriate the percolating water by getting title to some part of a watershed or slope, and by running canals and tunnels, and by sinking to obtain water for sale. It is asserted that the lands naturally made moist by percolating water are very productive, and were first settled upon, and have been most highly improved; and he asks whether these lands are to be converted into deserts because speculators may pump and carry away to some distant locality the subsurface waters which rendered the land fertile. Certainly no such case as this has come before a court or could well exist in England or in the eastern states.

It is often asserted that Acton v. Blundell, 12 Mees. & W. 324, 13 L. J. Exch. N. S. 289, decided in exchequer chamber in 1843, was the first case in England in regard to percolating water. This shows how unimportant, relatively, the subject is in England. It was an action for damages occasioned by working a coal mine on adjoining land, which interfered with water which was flowing underground to plaintiff's spring. The court instructed the jury "that, if the defendants had proceeded and acted in the usual and proper manner in the land for the purpose of working and mining a coal mine therein, they might lawfully do so." This instruction was held to be correct, and that is the real force and effect of the decision. But the chief justice pointed out some respects in which the right to water flowing in an open visible stream differs from an underground flow by percolation. The main difference, so far as concerns the question under consideration, was that percolation was occult, the regulation of which was a difficult matter. One who disturbed the course of percolating water by digging upon his own land could not tell whether he would drain his neighbor's well, nor could the person injured demonstrate that such was the cause of the injury. So, too, when one diverts water from a visible stream, the fact and the effect are at once known, while as to percolating water its course may be obstructed or changed without the intent to do so, and without knowing that such would be the effect of what was done. His lordship, the case being one of first impression, quotes a passage from a civil-law writer to the effect that, when one digging upon his own land drains his neighbor's well, such neighbor has no cause of action, si non animo vicini nocendi, sed suum agrum meliorem faciendi, id fecit. His lordship, however, although the case did not require it, disregarded the qualifications found in the civil law, and held that the case was not governed by law which applies to flowing streams, "but that it rather falls within that principle which gives to the owner of the soil all that lies beneath the surface; that the land immediately below is his property, whether it is solid rock, or pervious ground, or venous earth, or part soil and part water; that the person who owns the surface may dig therein, and apply all that is there found to his own purposes at his free will and pleasure; and that if, in the exercise of this right, he intercepts or drains off the water collected from underground springs in his neighbor's well, this inconvenience to his neighbor falls within the description of damnum absque injuria, which cannot become the ground of an action." This statement has been frequently quoted, both in England and in this country, and has been generally adopted as a correct statement of the law upon the subject. In Aceton v. Blundell, as has been said, the working of a mine upon an adjoining estate drained certain springs on plaintiff's land. It would have been sufficient to defeat plaintiff's action to have said that the working of a coal mine in a proper manner is a reasonable use of land, and that it was without malice, or an intent to injure plaintiff. It is a general rule—in fact, a universal principle of law—that one may make reasonable use of his own property, although such use results in injury to another. But the maxim, Cujus est solum, ejus est usque ad inferos, furnishes a rule of easy application, and saves a world of judicial worry in many cases. And perhaps in England and in our Eastern states a more thorough and minute consideration of the equities of parties may not often be required. The case is very different, however, in an arid country like southern California, where the relative importance of percolating water and water flowing in definite water courses is greatly changed. And it seems to me a great mistake is made in supposing that, if the plenary property of a landowner in percolating water is denied, the alternative is to apply to such water all the rules which apply to the use of water flowing in water courses having defined channels. The entire argument for what may be called the "cujus est solum doctrine" consists in showing that some recognized regulation of riparian rights would be inapplicable. It is said, for instance, that the law of riparian rights requires each proprietor to permit the water to flow as it was accustomed to flow. Apply this rule to subsurface water, and no one could drain his land, for he thereby prevents the water from flowing as it was accustomed to flow by percolation to his neighbor. The common-law method in the supposed case would be to apply the principle to the new case, although some judge-made rule as to how it shall be applied might stand in the way. The principle is clearly applicable. A riparian owner may not divert the water, because he would thereby injure his neighbors who have equal rights in the stream. Still he may take a reasonable amount from the stream for domestic purposes, and that may equal the entire flow, although he thereby injures his neighbors. It is a question of reasonable use, and that applies both to the land of the person disturbing the percolation and to adjoining land. He may cultivate his land, and for that purpose ordinarily may drain it, and plow it or clear it from forests, although all these operations may affect the flow of water to the lower proprietor, both in the water course and by percolation. He was allowed to become the owner for those purposes, and with the understanding that all other proprietors have the same right to use their land. The maxim, Sic utere, etc., plainly applies as between such proprietors, very much as it does between different riparian proprietors upon the same stream. The title to all land is held subject to this maxim. Such ownership is "but as an aggregation of qualified principles, the limits of which are prescribed by the equality of rights, and the correlation of rights and obligations necessary for the highest use of land by the entire community of proprietors." Thompson v. Androscoggin River Improv. Co. 54 N. H. 545.

Proprietary rights are limited by the common interests of others,—that is, to a reasonable use; and such use one may make of his land, though it injures others. This proposition is generally recognized, but for some reason has not always been recognized by the courts when considering the subject of percolating water, although all rights in respect to water are peculiarly within its province. This rule of reasonable use answers most effectually the main argument against recognizing any modification of the cujus est solum doctrine as applied to percolating water, although in a majority of the cases which are claimed as authority against the rule of reasonable use the court takes pains to note that the act which disturbs the percolating water was in using the land in the usual manner, and without the intent of injuring a neighbor. Among the English cases, Chasemore v. Richards was most carefully considered. The village of Croyden was situated upon an extensive plain near the head waters of the river Waundale, and a goodly portion of the permanent flow of the river came by percolation from this plain. The village had caused a large well to be dug about a quarter of a mile from the river, and was pumping from it 500,000 or 600,000 gallons of water daily for the use of the town. Plaintiff was a riparian proprietor upon the river below, and had a mill which was operated by the waters of the river. The pumping naturally diminished the flow, and prevented the use of the mill as efficiently as before. All the facts were admitted or found to exist. The case was first decided in exchequer chambers in favor of the defendant, Mr. Justice Coleridge dissenting. 2 Hurlst. & N. 168. The dissenting opinion presents the doctrine of reasonable use. The case was taken to the House of Lords. 7 H. L. Cas. 349, 29 L. J. Exch. N. S. 81, 5 Jur. N. S. 873, 7 Week. Rep. 685. There the case was most elaborately and ably argued, and the view in regard to reasonable use was fully presented. A case was made, and the opinion of the judges was solicited. The judges held unanimously for the defendant, sustaining fully the cujus est solum doctrine, without qualification, and this was affirmed by the House. The matter mainly discussed, however, was the plaintiff's claim that he had a prescriptive right to the water. The court held that riparian rights are not derived by prescription, but the right to the water is ex jure naturæ. This settled the main contention, and little more was said, except to refer to the cases in which the rights to percolating waters are discussed. Lord Wensleydale, however, who had doubts, pronounced an opinion which seems to me in accord with the views I am trying to express.

The doctrine of reasonable use has been recognized in many cases in the United States,—impliedly in most, as I have stated, but expressly in some. Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721, is one of these, and is remarkable in that the court states as strongly as possible, and with approbation, the cujus est solum doctrine. It is even said that the opposite doctrine (applying to such water the rule as to riparian rights) would amount to total abrogation of the rights of property. It is said one could not clear or cultivate his land or build a house without interfering with percolating water, and, even if rights were admitted to exist, the difficulty of enforcing them would be insurmountable. I think I have shown that the admitted right to a reasonable use of the land and of the water answers all these objections. To my mind, this is so obvious that I can but wonder that such objections have ever troubled the judiciary. And yet, notwithstanding this insistence upon the rule which apparently ignores all equities of others than the owner of the soil in which the water is found, the court felt obliged to, and did, in unequivocal words, declare that the use of it must be reasonable. The proprietor may make a reasonable use of his own land, although in so doing he obstructs or changes the percolation of water to or from his neighbor's land. But by far the most satisfactory case upon the subject is Bassett v. Salisbury Mfg. Co. 43 N. H. 569, 82 Am. Dec. 179. That was a most elaborately considered case, and this precise question is discussed with a fullness and ability which I am not so vain as to think I could improve upon. I would like to transcribe the entire argument, but, as it is accessible to the profession, I need only say I adopt it in full. The decision was approved in Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439, 9 Am. Rep. 276. Smith v. Brooklyn, 18 App. Div. 340, 46 N. Y. Supp. 141, was in some ways a counterpart of Chasemore v. Richards. The city of Brooklyn constructed, in Queens county, culverts, aqueducts, reservoirs, and conduits, and dug deep trenches to intercept percolating waters, and further sunk, in the process, earth wells, and put in pumps to obtain the water with which the soil, which it owned, was saturated. It thus procured for the use of the city a large amount of water. Plaintiff owned a farm, distant from these waterworks about 2,400 feet. Upon the land was a small brook, in which he had placed a dam, which he used for purposes of boat-building and for cutting ice. The brook had carried water all the year round. The operations of the defendant rendered this brook entirely dry, and deprived the plaintiff of his income. Here is a case like that of the village of Croyden. Defendant intercepted percolating water upon its own land before it had reached a water course. It did not drain water from a defined stream, but the water was prevented from reaching the stream, which was thereby as effectually destroyed as it could have been by draining the water from it. Judge Hatch, who wrote the opinion in the appellate division of the supreme court, begins by quoting the prevailing doctrine in regard to percolating water, from Pisley v. Clark, 35 N. Y. 520, 91 Am. Dec. 72: "An owner of the soil may divert percolating water, consume, or cut it off with impunity. It is the same as land, and cannot be distinguished in law from land." He says this proposition must be admitted, but nevertheless a case cannot be found in this country "where the right has been upheld in the owner of land to destroy, a stream, a spring, or a well upon his neighbor's land, by cutting off the source of its supply, except it was done in the exercise of a legal right to improve the land, or make some use of the same in connection with the enjoyment of the land itself." I have italicized the last clause, as it contains the qualification found in the civil law, upon which the English rule is professedly based, and expresses the principle for which I contend. The learned judge admits that the English cases go further, but says that the American cases have not gone further. The learned court gives a concise statement of the reasons given by the English courts for not applying to percolating water the same principle which governs the right of riparian proprietors, and agrees with Justice Coleridge and Lord Wensleydale that they are insufficient. The court recognized the right of the landowner to percolating water, but says the right must be exercised with reference to the equal right of others in their land. He says one may as well claim the right to tunnel into his neighbor's land and take out valuable minerals, as to drain from it water which is also parcel of it, for sale. The peculiar nature of the property which enables one to take it by drainage does not justify the taking, save in the usual and reasonable use of his own land,—in other words, for the proper use and betterment of his own property. Allusion is made in the opinion to the rule, inconsistent with the onus est solum doctrine, that you cannot do anything on your land which will drain water from a visible stream or natural pond upon the land of another. In Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar, L. R. 6 Ch. 493, Lord Hatherley said: "You have a right to all the water which you can draw from the different sources which may percolate underground, but that has no bearing at all on what you may do with regard to water which is in a defined channel, and which you are not to touch. If you cannot get at the underground water without touching the water in a defined surface channel, I think you cannot get at it at all." It is well said that this decision cannot stand with Chasemore v. Richards, 2 Hurlst. & N. 168, even though the court may say that it can. If a landowner owns the water percolating in his soil, as he does the rock, minerals, and earth, why may he not take it in such a case? And what difference is there in destroying a stream or natural pond by drawing water from it through percolation, or by preventing it from flowing into the stream? The effect is the same, and knowledge of the inevitable effect of the act is the same. And this rule would prevent a landowner from draining a marsh, or even from clearing or cultivating his land, when these operations would tend to increase the percolation from a stream or natural pond upon a neighbor's land. This is one of the main arguments in support of the doctrine of Adon v. Blundell, 12 Mees. & W. 324, 13 L. J. Exch. N. S. 289. It seems here strangely to lose its force, as does also another reason for that rule,—that when doing such acts the landowner could not reasonably anticipate the injury as probable. The court expressly applies the doctrine, sic utere tuo, to the case, and affirms the judgment against the city. In the appellate court this judgment was affirmed. 160 N. Y. 357, 45 L. R. A. 664, 54 N. E. 787. It is there treated, however, as a draining of water from plaintiff's brook and pond. Judge Hatch, in the supreme court, expressly states that defendant simply prevented the water from reaching the brook on plaintiff's farm. Perhaps either view may be taken of the facts. There was an immense saturated plain, composed of porous earth. Defendant's wells extended lower down than the bottom of the pond. The stream and pond, and all the springs, wells, and streams in the neighborhood, have been dry ever since the operations of the defendant. Since the water was first drained out, surely there has been no percolation from the stream. This circumstance makes the case more like that in hand. Here was a vast quantity of water held in the soil, which constituted the common supply of many people. The defendant, pumping from wells on its own land, and taking only percolating water, exhausted this common supply. The court held that it could not be. The reasons would have been much more forceful had the case risen in an arid climate like San Bernardino. But this question was completely put at rest, so far as the state of New York is concerned, by the case of Forbell v. New York, 164 N. Y. 522, 51 L. R. A. 695, 79 Am. St. Rep. 666, 58 N. E. 644. It was a suit by another plaintiff to restrain the same operations considered in Smith v. Brooklyn. Here there was no visible stream or pond on plaintiff's land. His injury was merely that the level of the water held in the soil was lowered, to his injury. In stating the case the court said: "The defendant [city] makes merchandise of the large quantities of water which it draws from the wells that it has sunk upon its 2 acres of land. The plaintiff does not complain that any surface stream or pond or body of water upon his land is thereby affected, but does complain, and the courts below have found, that the defendant exhausts his land of its accustomed and natural supply of underground or subsurface water, and thus prevents him from growing upon it the crops to which the land was and is peculiarly adapted, or destroys such crops after they are grown or partly grown." This statement shows a striking similarity of the issues made in that case to those involved here. The court proceeds to state the usual doctrine in regard to percolating water, and approves the doctrine for the cases in which it is properly applicable. No doubt, the land proprietor owns the water which is parcel of his land, and may use it as he pleases, regard being had to the rights of others. It is not unreasonable that he should dig wells in order to have the fullest enjoyment and usefulness of his estate, or for pleasure, trade, or whatever else the land as land may serve. "But to fit it up with wells and pumps of such pervasive and potential reach that from their base the defendant can tap the water stored in the plaintiff's land, and in all the region thereabout, and lead it to his own land, and, by merchandising it, prevent its return, is, however reasonable it may appear to the defendant and its customers, unreasonable as to the plaintiff and the others, whose lands are thus clandestinely sapped, and their value impaired." Counsel for the plaintiff in that case contended that, since plaintiff owned the percolating water in his own soil, the unlawful draining of it away by the defendant was a trespass committed on his land. This contention was sustained both in the supreme court and in the court of appeals. The court further indorsed the opinion of Judge Hatch in Smith v. Brooklyn, from which I have made quotations. If the principle announced in these cases prevails here, the order granting a nonsuit, and the judgment entered thereon, must be reversed. It does not require a reversal of the rule laid down in Acton v. Blundell, which has been so often cited and indorsed, but only a holding that in certain cases there should be added the element of reasonable use, having reference both to the land belonging to the party who has disturbed the movement of percolating water and to adjoining land, and to land sensibly affected by such acts. Whatever the English rule may be, the American cases either recognize the application of the rule of sic utere tuo to the subject, or they are cases in which it was wholly unnecessary to consider that subject. Such are the California cases. In the case of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585, the question might have been raised, and in the trial court, it may be, was, and in some of the instructions the rule laid down in Acton v. Blundell is asserted without qualification. Still this court was not called upon to, and did not, consider any such question. I think it clear that the American cases do not require us to hold that the maxim, Sic utere tuo, does not limit the right of the landowner to the use of subsurface water, but, on the contrary, all the cases in which the question has been discussed held or admit that such maxim should limit such right where justice requires it. Such, I think, is the proper rule.

It follows that the court erred in granting the nonsuit, and the judgment is therefore reversed, and a new trial ordered.

We concur: Beatty, Ch. J.; McFarland, J.; Van Dyke, J.; Harrison, J.; Henshaw, J.

After a rehearing Shaw, J., handed down the following additional opinion:

A rehearing was granted in this case for the purpose of considering more fully, and by the aid of such additional arguments as might be presented by persons not parties to the action, but vitally interested in the principle involved, a question that is novel, and of the utmost importance to the application to useful purposes of the waters which may be found in the soil.

Petitions for rehearing were presented, not only on behalf of the defendant, but also on behalf of a number of corporations engaged in the business of obtaining water from wells and distributing the same for public and private use within this state, and particularly in the southern part thereof. Able and exhaustive briefs have been filed on the rehearing. The principle decided by the late Justice Temple in the former opinion, and the course of reasoning by which he arrived at the conclusion, have been attacked in these several briefs and petitions with much learning and acumen. It is proper that we should here notice some of the objections thus presented.

It is urged in the first place that the decision goes beyond the case that was before the court; that the pleadings stated a cause of action solely for the diversion of water from an alleged underground stream, and that, therefore, there was no occasion for a discussion of the principles governing the rights to waters of the class usually denominated "percolating waters." The proposition is not tenable. The complaint, in substance, states that the plaintiffs had wells upon their respective tracts of land, from which water flowed to the surface of the ground; that the water was necessary for domestic use and irrigation on the lands on which they were situate; that the defendant, by means of other wells and excavations upon another tract of land in the vicinity, prevented any water from flowing through the plaintiffs' wells to their premises; and that this was done by drawing off the water through the wells of the defendant, taking it to a distant tract, and there using it. If the principle is correct that the defendant cannot thus, and for this purpose, take from the plaintiffs' wells the percolating waters from which they are supplied, then no further allegations were necessary, and the averment that the water constituted part of an underground stream may be regarded as surplusage. The complaint was thus treated in the opinion of Justice Temple, and he properly considered the question whether or not, eliminating the surplus allegation that there was an underground stream, the complaint stated a cause of action which was sustained by the evidence. The fact that the court below supposed that the existence of a stream of water was necessary to make the diversion of the water an actionable wrong does not limit this court to the same view, if it be erroneous. If enough of the facts which are set forth in the complaint are established by the evidence, without substantial conflict, to constitute a good cause of action, then the nonsuit should not have been granted, although other allegations are not proved.

Many arguments, objections, and criticisms are presented in opposition to the rules and reasoning of the former opinion. It is contended that the rule that each landowner owns absolutely the percolating waters in his land, with the right to extract, sell, and dispose of them as he chooses, regardless of the results to his neighbor, is part of the common law, and as such has been adopted in this state as the law of the land by the statute of April 13, 1850 (Stat. 1850, p. 219, chap. 95), and by § 4468 of the Political Code, and that, consequently, it is beyond the power of this court to abrogate or change it; that the question comes clearly within the doctrine of stare decisis; that the rule above stated has become a rule of property in this state, upon the faith of which enormous investments have been made, and that it should not now be departed from, even if erroneous; that, even if the question were an open one, the adoption of the doctrine of correlative rights in percolating waters would hinder or prevent all further developments or use of underground waters, and endanger or destroy developments already made, thus largely restricting the productive capacity and growth of the state, and that, therefore, a sound public policy and regard for the general welfare demand the opposite rule; that the doctrine of reasonable use of percolating waters would require an equitable distribution thereof among the different landowners and claimants who might have rights therein; that this would throw upon the courts the duty and burden of regulating the use of such waters and the flow of the wells or tunnels, and that this would prove a duty impossible of performance; and, finally, that, if this rule is the law as to percolating waters, it must for the same reason be the law with regard to the extraction of petroleum from the ground, and, if so, it would entirely destroy the oil development and production of this state, and for that reason also that it is against public policy, and injurious to the general welfare.

The idea that the doctrine contended for by the defendant is a part of the common law adopted by our statute, and beyond the power of the court to change or modify, is founded upon a misconception of the extent to which the common law is adopted by such statutory provisions, and a failure to observe some of the rules and principles of the common law itself. In Crandall v. Woods, 8 Cal. 143, the court approved the following rule, quoting from the dissenting opinion of Bronson, J., in Starr v. Child, 20 Wend. 159: "I think no doctrine better settled than that such portions of the law of England as are not adapted to our condition form no part of the law of this state. This exception includes, not only such laws as are inconsistent with the spirit of our institutions, but such as are framed with special reference to the physical condition of a country differing widely from our own. It is contrary to the spirit of the common law itself to apply a rule founded on a particular reason to a case where that reason utterly fails." This quotation was subsequently approved by the New York court of appeals. People ex rel. Loomis v. Canal Appraisers, 33 N. Y. 461. The same doctrine was followed in the case of English v. Johnson, 17 Cal. 116, 76 Am. Dec. 574. In Pennsylvania and West Virginia, under similar statutes, it was held that only such parts of the common law as were applicable to the local situation of the particular state were in force (Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. 484, 4 Am. Dec. 463; Powell v. Sims, 5 W. Va. 4, 13 Am. Rep. 629), and this is the rule in all the states upon the question, irrespective of statutory adoption. Com. v. Knowlton, 2 Mass. 534; State v. Rollins, 8 N. H. 560; Pierce v. State, 13 N. H. 542; Currier v. Perley, 24 N. H. 223; Dennett v. Dennett, 43 N. H. 499; Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. 144, 7 L. ed. 374; Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 659, 8 L. ed. 1080; Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 391. The true doctrine is that the common law by its own principles adapts itself to varying conditions, and modifies its own rules so as to serve the ends of justice under the different circumstances,—a principle adopted into our Code by § 3510, Civ. Code: "When the reason of a rule ceases, so should the rule itself." This is well stated in Morgan

v. King, 30 Barb. 16: "We are not bound to follow the letter of the common law, forgetful of its spirit; its rule, instead of its principle. A rule of law applicable to the fresh-water streams of England may be wholly inapplicable to fresh-water streams in this country of the same nature and character, because of different capacity, or because the adjoining country may furnish a commerce for them unknown in England, and yet be subject to the same principle. If so, the common law modifies its rules upon its own principles, and conforms them to the wants of the community, the nature, character, and capacity of the subject to which they are to be applied." In Beardsley v. Hartford, 50 Conn. 542, 47 Am. Rep. 677, the court says: "It is a well-settled rule that the law varies with the varying reasons on which it is founded. This is expressed by the maxim, Cessante ratione, cessat ipsa lex. This means that no law can survive the reasons on which it is founded. It needs no statute to change it; it abrogates itself. If the reasons on which a law rests are overborne by opposing reasons, which, in the progress of society, gain controlling force, the old law, though still good as an abstract principle, and good in its application to some circumstances, must cease to apply or to be a controlling principle to the new circumstances." Accordingly, in many instances in this country, in states where the common law is held to be in force, some of its rules are held to be not applicable to the conditions different from the place of its origin. Connolly v. Goodwin, 5 Cal. 221; Rickett v. Johnson, 8 Cal. 36; United States v. McCarthy, 21 Blatchf. 469, 18 Fed. 89; Bovard v. Kettering, 101 Pa. 185; Heywood v. Shreve, 44 N. J. L. 96; Green v. Lister, 8 Cranch, 249, 3 L. ed. 552; Cole v. Lake Co. 54 N. H. 286; Pettingill v. Rideout, 6 N. H. 454, 25 Am. Dec. 473; Boston & W. R. Corp. v. Dana, 1 Gray, 97; Lindsley v. Coats, 1 Ohio, 243; Stoeber v. Whitman, 6 Binn. 420; Dawson v. Coffman, 28 Ind. 223; Wagner v. Bissell, 3 Iowa, 496; Reaume v. Chambers, 22 Mo. 54; Seeley v. Peters, 10 Ill. 130; Collins v. Chartiers Valley Gas Co. 131 Pa. 143, 6 L. R. A. 230, 17 Am. St. Rep. 791, 18 Atl. 1012 (in which case this same doctrine of the absolute ownership in percolating water was modified); Harris v. Harrison, 93 Cal. 676, 29 Pac. 325, and Wiggins v. Muscupiabe Land & Water Co. 113 Cal. 182, 32 L. R. A. 667, 54 Am. St. Rep. 337, 45 Pac. 160 (in which last-mentioned cases the common law respecting riparian rights was said to have been modified in this state to suit our peculiar conditions.) Whenever it is found that, owing to the physical features and character of this state, and the peculiarities of its climate, soil, and productions, the application of a given common-law rule by our courts tends constantly to cause injustice and wrong, rather than the administration of justice and right, then the fundamental principles of right and justice on which that law is founded, and which its administration is intended to promote, require that a different rule should be adopted,—one which is calculated to secure persons in their property and possessions, and to preserve for them the fruits of their labors and expenditures. The question whether or not the rule contended for is a part of the common law applicable to this state depends on whether it is suitable to our conditions under the rule just stated.

It is necessary, therefore, to state the conditions existing in many parts of this state, which are different from those existing where the rule had its origin. In a large part of the state, and in almost all of the southern half of it, particularly south of the Tehachapi range of mountains, aside from grains, grasses, and some scant pasturage, there is practically no production by agriculture except by means of artificial irrigation. In a few places favored by nature crops are nourished by natural irrigation, due to the existence underneath the ordinary soil of a saturated layer of sand or gravel; but these places are so few that they are of no consequence in any general view of the situation. Irrigation in these regions has always been customary, and under the Spanish and Mexican governments it was fostered and encouraged. Even in the earlier periods of the settlement of the country after its acquisition by the United States, and while the population was sparse and scattered compared to the present time, the natural supply of water from the surface streams, as diverted and applied by the crude and wasteful methods then used, was not considered more than was necessary. As the population increased, better methods of diversion, distribution, and application were adopted, and the streams were made to irrigate a very much larger area of land. While this process was going on, a series of wet years augmented the streams, and still more land was put under the irrigating systems. Recently there has followed another series of very dry years, which has correspondingly diminished the flow of the streams. After this period began it was soon found that the natural streams were insufficient. The situation became critical and heavy loss and destruction from drouth was imminent. Still the population continued to increase, and with it the demand for more water to irrigate more land. Recourse was then had to the underground waters. Tunnels were constructed, more artesian wells bored, and finally pumps driven by electric or steam power were put into general use to obtain sufficient water to keep alive and productive the valuable orchards planted at the time when water was supposed to be more abundant. The geological history and formation of the country is peculiar. Deep borings have shown that almost all of the valleys and other places where water is found abundantly in percolation were formerly deep canyons or basins, at the bottoms of which anciently there were surface streams or lakes. Gravel, boulders, and, occasionally, pieces of drift-wood have been found near the coast far below tide level, showing that these sunken-stream beds were once high enough to discharge water by gravity into the sea. These valleys and basins are bordered by high mountains, upon which there falls the more abundant rain. The deep canyons or basins in course of ages have become filled with the washings from the mountains, largely composed of sand and gravel, and into this porous material the water now running down from the mountains rapidly sinks, and slowly moves through the lands by the process usually termed "percolation," forming what are practically underground reservoirs. It is the water thus held or stored that is now being taken to eke out the supply from the natural streams. In almost every instance of a water supply from the so-called percolating water, the location of the well or tunnel by which it is collected is in one of these ancient canyons or lake basins. Outside of these, there is no percolating water in sufficient quantity to be of much importance in the development of the country, or of sufficient value to cause serious litigation. It is usual to speak of the extraction of this water from the ground as a development of a hitherto unused supply. But it is not yet demonstrated that the process is not in fact, for the most part, an exhaustion of the underground sources from which the surface streams and other supplies previously used have been fed and supported. In some cases this has been proved by the event. The danger of exhaustion in this way threatens surface streams as well as underground percolations and reservoirs. Many water companies, anticipating such an attack on their water supply, have felt compelled to purchase, and have purchased, at great expense, the lands immediately surrounding the stream or source of supply, in order to be able to protect and secure the percolations from which the source was fed. Owing to the uncertainty in the law, and the absence of legal protection, there has been no security in titles to water rights. So great is the scarcity of water under the present demands, and conditions that one who is deprived of water which he has been using has usually no other source at hand from which he can obtain another supply.

64 L. R. A.

The water thus obtained from all these sources is now used with the utmost economy, and is devoted to the production of citrus and other extremely valuable orchard and vineyard crops. The water itself, owing to the tremendous need, the valuable results from its application, and the constant effort to plant more orchards and vineyards to share in the great profits realized therefrom, has become very valuable. In some instances it has been known to sell at the rate of $50,000 for a stream flowing at the rate of 1 cubic foot per second. Notwithstanding the great drain on the water supply, the economy in the distribution and application, and the much larger area of land thereby brought under irrigation, there still remain large areas of rich soil which are dry and waste for want of water. This abundance of land, with the scarcity and high price of water, furnish a constant stimulus to the further exhaustion of the limited amount of underground water, and a constant temptation to invade sources already appropriated. The charms of the climate have drawn, and will continue to draw, immigrants from the better classes of the eastern states, composed largely of men of experience and means, energetic, enterprising, and resourceful. With an increasing population of this character, it is manifest that nothing that is possible to be done to secure success will be left undone, and that there must ensue in years to come a fierce strife first to acquire and then to hold every available supply of water.

It is scarcely necessary to state the conditions existing in other countries referred to to show that they are vastly different from those above stated. There the rainfall is abundant, and water, instead of being of almost priceless value, is a substance that in many instances is to be gotten rid of rather than preserved. Drainage is there an important process in the development of the productive capacity of the land, and irrigation is unknown. The lands that from their situation in this country are classed as damp lands would in those countries be either covered by lakes or would be swamps and bogs. If one is deprived of water in those regions there is usually little difficulty in obtaining a sufficient supply near by, and at small expense. The country is interlaced with streams of all sizes from the smallest brooklet up to large, navigable rivers, and the question of the water supply has but little to do with the progress or prosperity of the country.

It is clear, also, that the difficulties arise ing from the scarcity of water in this country are by no means ended, but, on the contrary, are probably just beginning. The application of the rule contended for by the defendant will tend to aggravate these difficulties, rather than to solve them. Traced to its true foundation, the rule is simply this: That, owing to the difficulties the courts will meet in securing persons from the infliction of great wrong and injustice by the diversion of percolating water if any property right in such water is recognized, the task must be abandoned as impossible, and those who have valuable property acquired by and dependent on the use of such water must be left to their own resources to secure protection for their property from the attacks of their more powerful neighbors, and, failing in this, must suffer irretrievable loss; that might is the only protection.

"The good old rule
Sufficeth them, the simple plan,
That they should take who have the power,
And they should keep who can."

The field is open for exploitation to every man who covets the possessions of another, or the water which sustains and preserves them, and he is at liberty to take that water if he has the means to do so, and no law will prevent or interfere with him, or preserve his victim from the attack. The difficulties to be encountered must be insurmountable to justify the adoption or continuance of a rule which brings about such consequences.

The claim that the doctrine stated by Mr. Justice Temple is contrary to all the decisions of this court is not sustained by an examination of the cases. The decisions have not been harmonious, and in many of them what is said on this subject is mere dictum. A brief review of the cases will demonstrate this to be true. In Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299,—the first case on the subject,—it was not necessary for the court to say anything at all with respect to the right of a landowner to complain of a diversion of percolating waters. McCue's predecessor had made a ditch leading from a spring on his land, across a tract of land belonging to Hanson's predecessor, and terminating upon another tract, also owned by McCue's predecessor, through which ditch he conducted water from the spring across the Hanson tract to his other land. This ditch, in its course over Hanson's land, leaked water in such quantities that it collected into a stream, which Hanson used for irrigation. This was the only foundation for the right which Hanson had or claimed to the water. The court properly held that he had no right to the waste water, and that McCue was not bound to continue to maintain the artificial stream for Hanson's benefit, but could, by any means he chose, change the use of the spring and the course of the ditch. The fact that the change was made by intercepting the percolating water which fed the stream was not material to the case, and all that is said as to the right to do so is dictum. The opinion, however, does, though unnecessarily, announce and approve the doctrine contended for by the respondent here. Huston v. Leach, 53 Cal. 262, decides only that the phrase "waters of said springs" in the decree of the court meant defined streams running into or issuing from the springs, and did not include the percolations which fed the springs. Hale v. McLea, 53 Cal. 578, referred to a well-defined, though very small, underground stream, flowing through fissures in the rocks, and has no relation to ordinary percolating water. The court held that the defendant could not cut off the entire stream, and at most could only use a reasonable portion thereof as an upper riparian owner. In Cross v. Kitts, 69 Cal. 217, 58 Am. Rep. 558, 10 Pac. 409, the court, in its opinion, again by way of dictum, announces the doctrine that the owner of the soil is the absolute owner of the percolating water therein; but the decision is against this doctrine. It is a case of the court announcing one doctrine and deciding the contrary. The plaintiff, through a grant from defendant's predecessor, owned a right to take water on defendant's mining claim by means of a tunnel which served to collect the percolating water into a small stream of two miner's inches, which flowed out of the tunnel, and was conducted by pipes to plaintiff's premises. This court decided that the defendant had no right to cut off the percolations which fed the stream issuing from the tunnel, although this was done in the legitimate work of mining his own land. The decision is in direct conflict with the dictum in Hanson v. McCue, and is in accord with the principles laid down by Justice Temple. It can only be distinguished upon the ground that the defendant was estopped by the grant of his predecessor to use the land so as to destroy the water right granted,—a distinction which is not mentioned or referred to in the opinion. The distinction made in the opinion, and upon which the decision in Cross v. Kitts is based, is that when percolating waters are gathered into a defined stream by means of a tunnel, the stream is property, and, as such, it is protected by law from injury or destruction by the diversion of such percolating water before it reaches the tunnel. There can be no distinction in law or reason between a stream consisting of percolating waters gathered together by means of a tunnel and one gathered by means of an artesian well. Therefore the case supports Justice Temple's conclusion. The only point bearing upon the case at bar that was decided in Painter v. Pasadena Land & W. Co. 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539, is that the right of the owner of land to the water percolating therein may be reserved in a grant of the land, and that this right to such reserved water may subsequently be transferred. It does not touch the question of the extent of the right of the landowner to such water, as against the adjoining proprietors or others claiming rights in it. In Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 616, 19 L. R. A. 92, 30 Pac. 783, the decision was put upon the ground that the excavation of defendant, which caused the diversion of percolating water of which plaintiff complained, was made upon defendant's own land for the purpose of obtaining the water for the better use of the land, which it was held he had a right to do, although it destroyed the spring or stream claimed by the plaintiff. The dictum of Hanson v. McCue was approved. The decision seems to be in conflict with Cross v. Kitts, although the latter case is not mentioned. In Gould v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 639, 52 Am. St. Rep. 201, 44 Pac. 319, the court below found that the tunnel complained of gathered and discharged a stream of water of which all except 1.43 miner's inches was gathered from percolating waters in the sandstone, which did not come from the channel of the natural stream. It was this excess only which was in issue. The finding that it was percolating water was held to be conclusive upon the appellate court. It appeared that some of the percolating water thus developed would, if not interrupted, have reached the natural stream. The court adopts and approves the dictum of Hanson v. McCue, and holds that the plaintiff had no legal right to enjoin a diminution of the natural stream caused by a diversion of percolating water before it reached the channel. In Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 622, 57 Pac. 585, an instruction of the court below stating the dictum of Hanson v. McCue was criticised by the appellants, not for the reason that it restated that doctrine, but upon the ground that it did not class as percolating waters all such water as might be found in the sand or soil underneath the bed of a stream or adjacent thereto. So far as it restated the doctrine of Hanson v. McCue, it was favorable to the appellants, and therefore they did not object to that part of it. The court held that it was not subject to criticism on the ground that it did not properly define percolating waters. The decision, however, cannot be taken as an approval of the doctrine of Hanson v. McCue. In so far as that doctrine was stated, it being favorable to appellants, it was not presented for consideration to the appellate court. The objection of the appellants and the point considered by the appellate court was that the instruction departed from the rule quoted in Hanson v. McCue. Inasmuch as the writer of this opinion was also the writer of the instruction under consideration, it may be proper to say that he did not give the instruction because he approved that part of it restating the doctrine of Hanson v. McCue. The instruction was given because an instruction embodying that doctrine had been requested by the appellants in the case, and the respondents, the plaintiffs, believing that it would not materially affect the verdict, consented that that part should be given in substance, rather than take the chances of a reversal of the case should the supreme court hold its refusal to be erroneous. The remarks of the court in Vineland Irrig. Dist. v. Azusa Irrig. Co. 126 Cal. 494, 46 L. R. A. 820, 58 Pac. 1057, giving the ordinary definition of percolating waters, and stating the rule contended for by the defendant as applying thereto, call for no discussion. The court was referring to this solely for the purpose of giving the proper meaning to the word "percolating" as used in the findings, and to show that the word was not there used to designate waters which were not a part of the subterranean stream under consideration. In Bartlett v. O'Connor (Cal.) 30 Pac. 513, the defendants, with the intent to injure the plaintiff, attempted to reclaim their lands by drawing off the percolating water through an artificial ditch away from the natural stream. It appeared that this could have been done as well by deepening the natural channel of the stream. It was held to be an unlawful diversion. This comprises all the cases on the subject.

Excluding the cases in which the statement of the doctrine of absolute ownership is dictum, and looking to what has been actually decided, we have remaining only Cross v. Kitts, holding that the owner of a mining claim, whose predecessor had granted a stream made up of percolating water collected by means of a tunnel, could not, even in the ordinary mining of his own land, interfere with the flow of the percolating water to the tunnel; Southern P. R. Co. v. Dufour, holding that a landowner can divert, for use on his own land, percolating water which feeds a spring rising on the land, and flowing to an adjoining owner, although the diversion destroys the spring; Bartlett v. O'Connor, holding that such a diversion cannot be made in the process of draining the land for reclamation, where the draining and reclamation can be accomplished by another mode without diminishing the stream, and the mode used is adopted with the intention to injure the lower proprietor, and Gould v. Eaton, declaring, in effect, that percolation water may be prevented from reaching a natural stream to the injury of a riparian owner, although the percolations are neither taken for use on the land where the diversion is made, nor in the use or reclamation of the land, but for use on other land distant from both the stream and the percolations. In view of this conflicting and uncertain condition of the authorities, it cannot be successfully claimed that the doctrine of absolute ownership is well established in this state. It is proper to state that in all the opinions which have so readily quoted and approved the supposed common-law rule that injuries from interference with percolating waters were too obscure in origin and cause, too trifling in extent, and relatively of too little importance as compared to mining industries and the wants of large cities, to justify or require the recognition by the courts of any correlative rights in such waters, or the redress of such injuries, there has been no notice at all taken of the conditions existing here, so radically opposite to those prevailing where the doctrine arose. It is also to be observed that in some instances in the eastern states, mentioned in the former opinion in this case, the injustice from the diversion of percolating waters has been so glaring and so extensive that the court there was compelled to depart from its previously decided cases and recognize the rights of adjoining owners.

We do not see how the doctrine contended for by defendant could ever become a rule of property of any value. Its distinctive feature is the proposition that no property rights exist in such waters except while they remain in the soil of the landowner; that he has no right, either to have them continue to pass into his land as they would under natural conditions, or to prevent them from being drawn out of his land by an interference with natural conditions on neighboring land. Such right as he has is therefore one which he cannot protect or enforce by resort to legal means, and one which he cannot depend on to continue permanently or for any definite period.

It is apparent that the parties who have asked for a reconsideration of this case, and other persons of the same class, if the rule for which they contend is the law, or no law, of the land, will be constantly threatened with danger of utter destruction of the valuable enterprises and systems of waterworks which they control, and that all new enterprises of the same sort will be subject to the same peril. They will have absolutely no protection in law against others having stronger pumps, deeper wells, or a more favorable situation, who can thereby take from them unlimited quantities of the water, reaching to the entire supply, and without regard to the place of use. We cannot perceive how a doctrine offering so little protection to the investments in and product of such enterprises, and offering so much temptation to others to capture the water on which they depend, can tend to promote developments in the future, or preserve those already made; and, therefore, we do not believe that public policy or a regard for the general welfare demands the doctrine. An ordinary difference in the conditions would scarcely justify the refusal to adopt a rule of the common law, or one which has been so generally supposed to exist; but where the differences are so radical as in this case, and would tend to cause so great a subversion of justice, a different rule is imperative.

The doctrine of reasonable use, on the other hand, affords some measure of protection to property now existing, and greater justification for the attempt to make new developments. It limits the right of others to such amount of water as may be necessary for some useful purpose in connection with the land from which it is taken. If, as is claimed in the argument, such water-bearing land is generally worthless except for the water which it contains, then the quantity that could be used on the land would be nominal, and injunctions could not be obtained, or substantial damages awarded, against those who carry it to distant lands. So far as the active interference of others is concerned, therefore, the danger to such undertakings is much less, and the incentive to development much greater, from the doctrine of reasonable use than from the contrary rule. No doubt there will be inconvenience from attacks on the title to waters appropriated for use on distant lands made by persons who claim the right to the reasonable use of such waters on their own lands. Similar difficulties have arisen and now exist with respect to rights in surface streams, and must always be expected to attend claims to rights in a substance so movable as water. But the courts can protect this particular species of property in water as effectually as water rights of any other description.

It may, indeed, become necessary to make new applications of old principles to the new conditions; and, in view of the novelty of the doctrine and the scope of argument, it is not out of place to indicate to some extent how it should be done, although otherwise it would not be necessary to the decision of the case. The controversies arising will naturally divide into classes. There will be disputes between persons or corporations claiming rights to take such waters from the same strata or source for use on distant lands. There is no statute on this subject, as there now is concerning appropriations of surface streams; but the case is not without precedent. When the pioneers of 1849 reached this state, they found no laws in force governing rights to take water from surface streams for use on nonriparian lands. Yet it was found that the principles of the common law, although not previously applied to such cases, could be adapted thereto, and were sufficient to define and protect such rights under the new conditions. The same condition existed with respect to rights to mine on public land, and a similar solution was found. Kelly v. Natoma Water Co. 6 Cal. 108; Conger v. Weaver, 6 Cal. 557, 65 Am. Dec. 528; Eddy v. Simpson, 3 Cal. 253, 68 Am. Dec. 408; Hill v. Newman, 5 Cal. 446, 63 Am. Dec. 140; McDonald v. Bear River & A. Water & Min. Co. 13 Cal. 233. The principles which, before the adoption of the Civil Code, were applied to protect appropriations and possessory rights in visible streams, will, in general, be found applicable to such appropriations of percolating waters, either for public or private use, and will suffice for their protection as against other appropriators. Such rights are usufructuary only, and the first taker who with diligence puts the water in use will have the better right. And in ordinary cases of this character the law of prescriptive titles and rights and the statute of limitations will apply. In controversies between an appropriator for use on distant land and those who own land overlying the water-bearing strata, there may be two classes of such landowners,—those who have used the water on their land before the attempt to appropriate, and those who have not previously used it, but who claim the right afterwards to do so. Under the decision in this case the rights of the first class of landowners are paramount to that of one who takes the water to distant land; but the landowner's right extends only to the quantity of water that is necessary for use on his land, and the appropriator may take the surplus. As to those landowners who begin the use after the appropriation, and who, in order to obtain the water, must restrict or restrain the diversion to distant lands or places, it is perhaps best not to state a positive rule. Such rights are limited, at most, to the quantity necessary for use, and the disputes will not be so serious as those between rival appropriators. Disputes between overlying landowners, concerning water for use on the land, to which they have an equal right, in cases where the supply is insufficient for all, are to be settled by giving to each a fair and just proportion. And here again we leave for future settlement the question as to the priority of rights between such owners who begin the use of the waters at different times. The parties interested in the question are not before us.

64 L. R. A.

In addition there are some general rules to be applied. In cases involving any class of rights in such waters preliminary injunctions must be granted, if at all, only upon the clearest showing that there is imminent danger of irreparable and substantial injury, and that the diversion complained of is the real cause. Where the complainant has stood by while the development was made for public use, and has suffered it to proceed at large expense to successful operation, having reasonable cause to believe it would affect his own water supply, the injunction should be refused, and the party left to his action for such damages as he can prove. Fresno Street R. Co. v. Southern P. R. Co. 135 Cal. 202, 67 Pac. 773; Southern California R. Co. v. Slauson, 138 Cal. 342, 94 Am. St. Rep. 58, 71 Pac. 352. If a party makes no use of the water on his own land or elsewhere, he should not be allowed to enjoin its use by another who draws it out, or intercepts it, or to whom it may go by percolation, although perhaps he may have the right to a decree settling his right to use it when necessary on his own land, if a proper case is made.

The objection that this rule of correlative rights will throw upon the court a duty impossible of performance—that of apportioning an insufficient supply of water among a large number of users—is largely conjectural. No doubt cases can be imagined where the task would be extremely difficult, but, if the rule is the only just one,—as we think has been shown,—the difficulty in its application in extreme cases is not a sufficient reason for abandoning it and leaving property without any protection from the law.

It does not necessarily follow that a rule for the government of rights in percolating water must also be followed as to underground seepages or percolations of mineral oil. Oil is not extracted for use in agriculture, or upon the land from which it is taken, but solely for sale as an article of merchandise, and for use in commerce and manufactures. The conditions under which oil is found and taken from the earth in this state are in no important particulars different from those present in other countries where it is produced. There is no necessary parallel between the conditions respecting the use and development of water and those affecting the production of oil. Whether, in a contest between two oil producers concerning the drawing out by one of the oil from under the land of the other, we should follow the rule adopted by the courts of other oil-producing states, or apply a rule better calculated to protect oil not actually developed, is a question not before us, and which need not be considered.

With regard to the doctrine of reasonable use of percolating waters, we adhere to the views expressed in the former opinion.

The judgment of the court below is reversed and a new trial ordered.

We concur: Beatty, Ch. J.; McFarland, J.; Van Dyke, J.; Henshaw, J.; Lorigan, J.

Angellotti, J., concurring:

I concur in the judgment and in the views expressed in the opinion of Mr. Justice Temple on the former decision of this case as to the application of the doctrine of reasonable use to percolating waters. When properly applied, it appears clear to me that such doctrine will serve to protect the rights of the owner of realty, rather than impair them.

I also concur generally in the views expressed by Mr. Justice Shaw in the majority opinion as to the same subject-matter; but several important questions are discussed that are not necessary to a decision of this case, and as to which the opinion herein cannot hereafter be considered as authority. As to such matters I refrain from expressing any opinion.

Petition for second rehearing denied December 28, 1903.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

James BARCLAY

v.

Wilson ABRAHAM, Impleaded, etc., Appt.

(.....Iowa.....)

1. The burden of showing the existence of an underground stream of water is upon the one asserting the right to its use.
2. The mere fact that the excessive flow of water from one well interrupts that of several others does not tend to point out the location, course, or even the existence, of a subterranean stream.
3. A landowner has a right to make such beneficial use of water from underground reservoirs in the improvement of his estate as he may choose.
4. There is no right to draw water from a common underground reservoir merely for the purpose of wasting it, to the injury of other landowners having equal rights to use and means of access to it, or of maliciously depriving them of its beneficial use.

(October 30, 1903.)

A PPEAL by defendant, Abraham, from a judgment of the District Court for Boone County enjoining him from wasting water from a flowing well. Affirmed.

Statement by Ladd, J.:

Plaintiff is owner of S. $\frac{1}{4}$ S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 10, and N. $\frac{1}{4}$ N. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 15, township 82 N., of range 25 W. of the fifth P. M. The defendant owns the N. $\frac{1}{4}$ S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 10. A run, known as "Big Creek,"

NOTE.—Upon the question of the correlative rights in percolating waters, see note to preceding case of Katz v. Walkinshaw.

64 L. R. A.

nearly north and south, passes through both farms to the south. Following the trend of this creek for 3 or 4 miles in a northwesterly and southeasterly direction, and about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile wide, flowing wells are obtained at a uniform depth, considering the elevation of the surface. The plaintiff has lived some time on his south 80 at about the center of this district, and several years ago sunk one of the first wells near his house, somewhat above the level of the creek. Later two other wells were sunk, one in the valley of the creek in the north 80, and the other about 30 rods from his barn, to which an underground pipe was extended to a tank at the barn. In July, 1901, the defendant Abraham put down a 3-inch well on his farm near the south line, close to the creek, to which he dug a ditch, and allowed the water to flow unrestrained through the creek to the land below. This resulted in stopping the flow of water from plaintiff's wells at his house and near the barn. In pursuance of a temporary writ of injunction, the flow of defendant's well was reduced to $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch, whereupon water again flowed from plaintiff's well. Upon final hearing the injunction was made permanent, and defendant appeals.

Messrs. W. W. Goodykoontz and Crooks & Snell, for appellant:

Underground streams are divided into two distinct classes: Those whose channels are known and defined, and those unknown and undefined.

Kinney, Irrigation, §§ 48, 49; Deadwood C. R. Co. v. Barker, 14 S. D. 558, 86 N. W. 619.

Percolating waters are those that pass through the ground beneath the surface, without a definite channel. Percolating waters and those whose sources are unknown belong to the realty in which they are found. It is presumed that a well or spring is supplied by percolating waters, unless it appears that the same is supplied by a defined flowing stream.

Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299; Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Asso. v. Asbury Park, 40 N. J. Eq. 447, 3 Atl. 168; Mosier v. Caldwell, 7 Nev. 363; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721.

The presumption of law is that underground water is percolating water and the property of the man who finds it, unless it clearly and plainly appears that it is a defined, flowing stream, and has the characteristics of such a stream upon the surface of the ground.

Hougan v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 35 Iowa, 558, 14 Am. Rep. 502; Case v. Hoffman, 100 Wis. 314, 44 L. R. A. 728, 72 N. W. 393, 74 N. W. 220, 75 N. W. 945; Chase v. Silverstone, 62 Me. 175, 16 Am. Rep. 419; Acton v. Blundell, 12 Mees. & W. 335.

Mr. Charles Whitaker for appellee.

Ladd, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The particular district within which flowing wells may be obtained at a depth varying from 100 to 200 feet is 3 or 4 miles in length by about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile in width, following the direction of the creek. Within this area there are at least 11 wells which are now or have been flowing above the earth's surface. That of plaintiff, near his barn, is 152 feet deep. The well sunk by defendant is only 107 feet deep, but on ground about as much lower as the difference. Its casings are 3 inches in diameter, and the flow, when interrupted, has the effect of stopping the flow of plaintiff's well and of several others. It is located near the south line of defendant's land, from which the water runs in the creek, and, save that necessary for about 30 head of cattle, is without benefit to him or anyone else. The water in excess of a stream $\frac{1}{2}$ inch in diameter, to which extent the district court directed him to restrain the flow, is absolutely wasted, and so done without excuse. True, he pretended that the entire flow was essential to prevent clogging with sand or gravel, but the evidence shows conclusively that this was less likely with the smallest available exit. Again, he pretended to have in contemplation the elevation to his tenant's house, across the 80 acres, up some 40 feet, of water for domestic use by the operation of a hydraulic ram. But the extent of his 64 L. R. A.

preparation therefor was the reading of a circular from some manufacturing company. There was no proper showing that the flow permitted would be inadequate for this purpose, and it conclusively appears that it had nothing to do with his insistency upon utterly wasting the waters his neighbors so much needed. Indeed, the record indicates strongly his object was to maliciously cut off the water supply of a well owner rather than plaintiff. In the light of these facts, it is not very important that we determine whether the water was supplied by percolation through the soil or a well-defined subterranean stream. If the latter, of course the water might not thus be diverted. Hougan v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 35 Iowa, 558, 14 Am. Rep. 502; Burroughs v. Saterlee, 67 Iowa, 396, 56 Am. Rep. 350, 25 N. W. 808; Willis v. Perry, 92 Iowa, 297, 26 L. R. A. 124, 60 N. W. 727. But the presumption obtains that such waters are percolating waters, unless shown to be supplied by a stream of known and defined channel. Gould, Waters, §§ 280, 281; Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299; Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Cline, 37 Fla. 586, 33 L. R. A. 376, 53 Am. St. Rep. 262, 20 So. 780; Metcalf v. Nelson, 8 S. D. 87, 59 Am. St. Rep. 746, 65 N. W. 911; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721; Huber v. Merkel, 117 Wis. 355, 62 L. R. A. 589, 94 N. W. 354. And it follows that the burden of proof is upon those asserting right to waters below the surface, on the ground that they flow in a defined and known channel, to establish the existence of such channel. Black v. Ballymena Twp. Ir. L. R. 17 Eq. 459; Huber v. Merkel, 117 Wis. 355, 62 L. R. A. 589, 94 N. W. 354. It is to be observed that the mere existence of the channel is not enough; its location must be known or reasonably ascertainable. Lybe's Appeal, 106 Pa. 626, 51 Am. Rep. 542; Collins v. Chartiers Valley Gas Co. 131 Pa. 143, 6 L. R. A. 280, 17 Am. St. Rep. 791, 18 Atl. 1012, where the court concludes that it is clear, "from the principles and the reasoning of all the cases, that the distinction between rights in surface and in subterranean waters is not founded on the fact of their location above or below the ground, but on the fact of knowledge, actual or reasonably acquirable, of their existence, location, and course." And in Black v. Ballymena Twp. Ir. L. R. 17 Eq. 459: "So far the law on the subject is clear; but a difficulty appears still to exist as to the application of this rule by reason of the use of the word 'known' in connection with the word 'defined,' and it does not seem to have been sufficiently laid down as yet what the nature or extent of the knowledge is which must be proved to exist in order to constitute the riparian relation. It cannot mean that a channel should be visible throughout its course, which would be an impossibility, from the very fact of its being subterranean. In considering this question, the knowledge required cannot be reasonably held to be that derived from a discovery in part by excavation exposing the channel, but must be a knowledge by reasonable inference from existing and observed facts in the natural, or, rather, the pre-existing, condition of the surface of the ground. The onus of proof lies, of course, on the plaintiff claiming the right, and it lies upon him to show that, without opening the ground by excavation, or having recourse to abstruse speculations of scientific persons, men of ordinary powers and attainments would know, or could with reasonable diligence ascertain, that the stream when it emerges into light comes from and has flowed through a defined subterranean channel." Surface indications of a stream are discussed in Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Cline, 37 Fla. 586, 33 L. R. A. 376, 53 Am. St. Rep. 262, 20 So. 780, where surface depressions extended on either side of a spring; in Hale v. McLea, 53 Cal. 578, where a line of bushes usually found nowhere except over water courses extended from a spring on adjoining land. See also Saddler v. Lee, 66 Ga. 45, 42 Am. Rep. 62; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721; valuable note to Wheelock v. Jacobs, 67 Am. St. Rep. 665. In the instant case surface indications do not aid in locating a stream below. The mere fact that the excessive flow from one well interrupted that of several others did not tend to point out the location, course, or even existence, of a subterranean river, or smaller water course. Taylor v. Welch, 6 Or. 199. A similar result would be as likely to occur when the supply is derived from water filtrating through the soil until caught in a stratum of sand and gravel lying between impervious layers of other material. See Huber v. Merkel, 117 Wis. 355, 62 L. R. A. 589, 94 N. W. 354. Indeed, the fact that large quantities of sand and gravel are drawn up when the level at which water is found is reached strongly sustains the latter view. But we need go no farther than to say there is nothing in the record to overcome the presumption that the supply of the entire district is percolating water. If a stream $\frac{1}{2}$ mile wide, it could scarcely be affected by the small outlets afforded by these wells. If a number of narrower streams flow beneath the surface, the location of none has been pointed out, nor appears to be ascertainable. Chase v. Silverstone, 62 Me. 175, 16 Am. Rep. 419; Taylor v. Welch, 6 Or. 199; Greencastle v. Hasseltt, 23 Ind. 189; 64 L. R. A.

Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. 514, 84 Am. Dec. 511; Gould v. Eaton, 111 Cal. 639, 52 Am. St. Rep. 201, 44 Pac. 319.

This being true, there is no doubt but defendant had the right to make such beneficial use of the water in the improvement of his land as he might choose. But it does not follow that he had the right to draw from this reservoir within the earth wherein nature had stored water in large quantities for beneficial purposes merely to waste or carry out a design to injure those having equal access to the same supply. Decisions to the effect that percolating waters are to be treated the same in law as the land in which found, and may be diverted, consumed, or cut off with impunity, without liability for interfering or destroying the supply, are numerous in this country and England,—too numerous for citation; but see Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721; Bradford v. Pickles [1895] A. C. 587, and Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294. In the last of these cases the principle underlying the right to such waters, and the reasons upon which it rests, were thus stated: "In the absence of express contract and of positive authorized legislation, as between proprietors of adjoining lands, the law recognizes no correlative rights in respect to underground waters percolating, oozing, or filtrating through the earth; and this mainly from considerations of public policy: (1) Because the existence, origin, movement, and course of such waters, and the causes which govern and direct their movements, are so secret, occult, and concealed that an attempt to administer any set of legal rules in respect to them would be involved in hopeless uncertainty, and would be, therefore, practically impossible; (2) because any such recognition of correlative rights would interfere, to the material detriment of the commonwealth, with drainage, and agriculture, mining, the construction of highways and railroads, with sanitary regulations, building, and the general progress of improvement in works of embellishment and utility." An examination of the authorities, however, indicates that they proceed upon the theory that the right thereto relates to the beneficial use of the land, and is connected with its enjoyment for the purposes of agriculture, mining, trade, improvement, and the like. This thought is emphasized by the dicta in many decisions to the effect that percolating waters may not be extracted from the earth to the injury of others merely to gratify malice. Thus, in the leading case of Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 528, 64 Am. Dec. 721, the court declared that "neither the civil law nor the common law permits a man to be deprived of a well or spring or stream of water for the mere gratification of malice. The reason is that water, like air, is of such a nature that no one can have an exclusive right in it. In the process of evaporation and condensation it is sent in refreshing showers all over the earth. In its descent to the ocean it necessarily passes from one to the other, and is intended for the benefit of all. The right of each is more or less dependent upon that of his neighbor." See also Greenleaf v. Francis, 18 Pick. 119, where it was held that an owner may dig a well in any part of his land, even though the water in his neighbor's well be diminished, but with this limitation, that in doing so he is not actuated by a malicious intent to deprive his neighbor of water without benefit to himself. The right being conceded, possibly the intent with which exercised would be immaterial. On this point the authorities are in conflict. See Chesley v. King, 74 Me. 164, 43 Am. Rep. 569; Huber v. Merkel, 117 Wis. 355, 62 L. R. A. 589, 94 N. W. 354. The important intimation to which we wish to direct attention is that with respect to the beneficial use. Indeed, a decided tendency to depart from the strict rules of the common law with respect to percolating waters in the adjustment of modern conditions is manifest in recent decisions. In the well-considered case of Stillwater Water Co. v. Farmer, 89 Minn. 58, 60 L. R. A. 875, 93 N. W. 907, the supreme court of Minnesota held that subsurface water might not be drained from his land by an owner merely to pour it into a sewer, when this resulted in depriving a company of the supply from which it furnished the people of a city. There the plaintiff supplied water for domestic purposes to the people of the city of Stillwater from a spring about which it had constructed a wall some 6 feet in diameter. This was within a few feet from the boundary line between the company's and Farmer's land. Near this line, and not more than 10 feet from the center of the spring, Farmer excavated a trench, and placed in it a 10-inch tile drain connected with the city sewer. As a result percolating waters were drawn away from the spring, where they would naturally have gone, materially affecting the supply of water in the spring. Thereupon the company made a change in the outlet and in the mains to guard against such loss; whereupon Farmer began to lay his tile at a lower level, commencing at the sewer. A temporary injunction was granted, and in a well-considered opinion the court held that defendant might not even collect percolating waters merely to squander them to the detriment of his neighbor. The theory of the decision is that, while ownership of the soil extends to the center of the earth, it is somewhat restrained by the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas. The court directs attention to the fact that in nearly every case where the right to collect or divert percolating waters has been upheld this has been for some beneficial purpose, and pertinently suggests that there is no good reason for not applying the doctrine of correlative rights in such a case, and that such application will not interfere with proper improvement of land, but tend to promote the general welfare of all citizens alike. The rule approved is thus stated: "Except for the benefit and improvement of his own property or for his own beneficial use, the owner of land has no right to drain, collect, or divert percolating waters thereon, when such acts will destroy or materially injure the spring of another person, the waters of which spring are used by the general public for domestic purposes. He must not drain, collect, or divert such waters for the sole purpose of wasting them. Briefly stated, a landowner must not collect and wantonly waste percolating waters, which would otherwise be, or have theretofore been, appropriated by his neighbor for the general welfare of the people."

The doctrine of correlative rights between landowners respecting the appropriation and use of percolating waters has been broadly applied in New Hampshire (Bassett v. Salisbury Mfg. Co. 43 N. H. 569, 82 Am. Dec. 179; Sweet v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439, 9 Am. Rep. 276), where the court declared that no good reason could be given why it should not be applicable in all cases where the rights of owners of adjoining lands to collect and use percolating waters are in apparent, though not real, hostility. The courts of New York seem to have held that the owner of land may not sink wells on his own land from which, by the use of pumps of potential force and reach, he may drain the percolating waters from the premises of his neighbors to their injury, merely for the purpose of merchandising the water to consumers distant from the land. Forbell v. New York, 164 N. Y. 522, 51 L. R. A. 695, 79 Am. St. Rep. 666, 58 N. E. 644. In that case it was said: "In the absence of contract or enactment, whatever it is reasonable for the owner to do with his subsurface water, regard being had to the definite rights of others, he may do. He may make the most of it that he reasonably can. It is not unreasonable, so far as it is now apparent to us, that he should dig wells, and take therefrom all the water that he needs, in order to the fullest enjoyment and usefulness of his land as land, either for purposes of pleasure, abode, productiveness of soil, trade, manufacture, or for whatever else the land as land may serve. He may consume it, but must not discharge it to the injury of others. But to fit it up with wells and pumps of such pervasive and potential reach that from their base the defendant can tap the water stored in the plaintiff's land, and in all the region thereabout, and lead it to his own land, and by merchandising it prevent its return, is, however reasonable it may appear to the defendant and its customers, unreasonable as to the plaintiff and the others whose lands are thus clandestinely sapped, and their value impaired." The opinion seems to be grounded upon the notion that extracting the water by force constituted a trespass, and the court, apparently in recognizing a departure from previous decisions, added: "We more readily conclude to affirm because the immunity from liability which defendant claims violates our sense of justice. It seems to pervert just rules to unjust purposes. It does wrong under the letter of the law, in defiance of its spirit." Smith v. Brooklyn, 18 App. Div. 340, 46 N. Y. Supp. 141, is referred to approvingly. In that case, upon full consideration, the court declared that, while waters might be extracted from the depths for the reasonable use or improvement of the land, the law will not allow this to be done for some purpose unconnected with the use, improvement, or enjoyment of the land itself to the detriment of adjoining owners. See same case on appeal, 160 N. Y. 357, 45 L. R. A. 664, 54 N. E. 787. It is not necessary to go to this extent in order to sustain the decree in this case. The water from defendant's well, in excess of that allowed him by the court, fell to the earth, and immediately flowed from his land on that of a neighbor below. He proposed to draw the percolating waters, not to supply the people of a great city, but to waste without advantage to anyone. In principle the case is like that of Stillwater Water Co. v. Farmer, 89 Minn. 58, 60 L. R. A. 875, 93 N. W. 907, and we are inclined to approve the doctrine therein announced. A contrary conclusion would permit defendant by allowing his well to flow at full capacity, not only to stop plaintiff's well, but every other well in the neighborhood, and this without the slightest benefit to himself. Indeed, this is precisely what he has threatened if interfered with. May one man thus waste the waters stored by nature for the community, and wantonly deprive it of their use? Are the courts powerless to remedy such a wrong? The supreme court of Wisconsin seems to have so held. Huber v. Merkel, 117 Wis. 355, 62 L. R. A. 589, 94 N. W. 354. A distinction between an injury to the quality of the neighbor's land, as in Forbell v. New York, 164 N. Y. 522, 51 64 L. R. A.

L. R. A. 695, 79 Am. St. Rep. 666, 58 N. E. 644, and to the enjoyment of its use, is suggested; but this is not substantial. See also Hague v. Wheeler, 157 Pa. 324, 22 L. R. A. 141, 37 Am. St. Rep. 736, 27 Atl. 714. Certainly no good reason can be found for allowing the owner of land to draw subsurface water therefrom merely to waste, when this results in draining like water from his neighbor's land, to his detriment in its use and enjoyment. Water moves so readily from one place to another that any definite portion of it cannot be said to be the property of the owner of the soil until in some way reduced to control. The water flowing in defendant's well may have been from plaintiff's land or that of some other well owner a moment previous. In this respect it differs from minerals beneath the surface, and is more like natural gas, which may not be allowed to escape by a landowner, when not made use of, to the detriment of his neighbors. Ohio Oil Co. v. State, 150 Ind. 698, 60 N. E. 1124, 177 U. S. 190, 44 L. ed. 729, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576. Possibly he may waste that on his own land, if he can do so without draining water from his neighbor's. But the source of the supply of percolating waters can seldom be determined, and this is one of the main reasons for permitting its free appropriation by the owner of the soil. A different rule would undoubtedly restrict the use and improvement of land. But the prevention of carrying the water from the land of the owner for the purposes of commerce or waste cannot retard the improvement of the land itself, and there is no just ground for tolerating such diversion when the direct result is to deprive the adjoining landowners by the incidental drainage of their land of a supply of water from the same natural reservoir. This would be extracting the subterranean water from the adjoining land to its injury, without any counter benefit to the land through which taken, and presents a stronger case for the interference of a court of equity than Forbell v. New York. There the drainage rendered the adjoining land unfit for the growth of water cresses, which had formerly been raised upon it; here it destroyed the water supply essential for its customary use and enjoyment. There the drainage was to secure water to distribute to the inhabitants of a great city for profit; here the object was to turn it into a creek to flow unused in any way down to another's land below. The soundness of some of the reasoning of the Forbell Case may well be doubted. The exertion of the force there was in the removal of the subterranean waters in the city's land, and the only suction occasioned was by emptying a cavity into which the water naturally drained from the surrounding country. It is at least exceedingly doubtful whether this constituted trespass. In a lesser degree this happens whenever the sinking of one well has the effect of drying up another. The doctrine of Smith v. Brooklyn, that the free use of such waters is limited to the improvement, use, and enjoyment of the land from which taken, and cannot be carried away for the purposes of commerce or waste, to the injury of the premises of an adjoining owner, has the better reason for its support. But we need not go this far, even to sustain the decree of the district court, as in the case at bar the owner derived no benefit from the sale or use of the water. As said, the case is in principle like Stillwater Water Co. v. Farmer, 89 Minn. 58, 60 L. R. A. 875, 93 N. W. 907. The doctrine there announced is in harmony with good morals. It interferes with no valuable right of the defendants. It shields from destruction property rights of great value belonging to the plaintiff and others. It goes no farther than to say that a landowner may not collect, drain, or divert waters percolating through the earth merely to carry from his own land for no useful purpose, when such action on his part will have the effect of materially injuring or destroying the well or spring of another, the waters of which are devoted to some beneficial use connected with the land where found. It applies in principle the doctrine of correlative rights to the control of subsurface waters whenever the appropriation proposed is unconnected with the use, enjoyment, or improvement of the land from which taken.

Affirmed.

Deemer, J., concurs in result.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Fred MARTELL

v.

James N. WHITE et al.

(.....Mass.....)

An action will lie on behalf of a quarry owner against members of a voluntary association of dealers in stone of which he is not a member who enforce a by-law of the association imposing a fine upon members who deal with those who are not members, so that members who desire to deal with nonmembers are coerced from doing so, to the ruin of the business of the quarry owner.

(March 1, 1904.)

EXCEPTIONS by plaintiff to rulings of the Superior Court for Norfolk County directing a verdict in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged wrongful destruction of plaintiff's business. Sustained.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles W. Bartlett and Elbridge R. Anderson for plaintiff.

Messrs. James E. Cottoer and John W. McAnarney, for defendants:

A combination among persons merely to regulate their own conduct is within allowable competition, and is lawful, although others may be indirectly affected thereby.

Vegetahn v. Guntner, 167 Mass. 92, 35 L. R. A. 722, 57 Am. St. Rep. 443, 44 N. E. 1077.

It is not unlawful "for any number of persons, without an unlawful object in view, to associate themselves together and agree that they will not work for, or deal with, certain men or classes of men, or work under a certain price, or without certain conditions."

Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 14, 8 Am. Rep. 287; Com. v. Hunt, 4 Met. 111, 38 Am. Dec. 346; Bowen v. Matheson, 14 Allen, 499; Snow v. Wheeler, 113 Mass. 179; Boston Glass Mfg. Co. v. Binney, 4 Pick. 425.

The object and purposes of the defendants' association were lawful, and the defendants' conduct justifiable. There was no evidence of any threat or intimidation of NOTE.—For boycott or combinations by dealers to injure rivals, see also, in this series, Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Assn. 21 L. R. A. 837; Jackson v. Stanfield, 23 L. R. A. 588; Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. 27 L. R. A. 416; Macauley v. Tierney, 37 L. R. A. 455; Brewster v. C. Miller's Sons Co. 38 L. R. A. 505; Hartnett v. Plumbers' Supply Assn. 38 L. R. A. 194; Doremus v. Hennessy, 43 L. R. A. 797; Boutwell v. Marr, 48 L. R. A. 803; Bailey v. Master Plumbers' Assn. 46 L. R. A. 561; Ertz v. Produce Exchange, 48 L. R. A. 90; Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated 64 L. R. A.

Press, 48 L. R. A. 568; Gatzow v. Buening, 49 L. R. A. 475; Ertz v. Produce Exchange, 51 L. R. A. 825; Hawarden v. Youghogheny & L. Coal Co. 53 L. R. A. 828; West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 56 L. R. A. 804; Brown v. Jacobs Pharmacy Co. 57 L. R. A. 547; and state ex rel. Durner v. Huegin, 62 L. R. A. 700.

As to validity of combinations to create monopoly or control prices, see John D. Parks & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Assn. 62 L. R. A. 632, and note thereto.

the plaintiff, or that the defendants influenced, or attempted to influence, the conduct of any person other than a member of the association, or did anything else than enforce, against members, the by-laws and regulations of the association. There was no coercion of its members. As was said in Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis, 54 Minn. 223, sub nom. Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso. 21 L. R. A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119: "It was wholly a matter of their own free choice which they preferred,—to trade with the plaintiff, or to continue members of the association."

Bowen v. Matheson, 14 Allen, 499; Vegetahn v. Guntner, 167 Mass. 92, 35 L. R. A. 722, 57 Am. St. Rep. 443, 44 N. E. 1077; Plant v. Woods, 176 Mass. 492, 51 L. R. A. 339, 79 Am. St. Rep. 330, 57 N. E. 1011; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor [1892] A. C. 25; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis, 54 Minn. 223, sub nom. Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso. 21 L. R. A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; Maconley Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L. R. A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; Cote v. Murphy, 159 Pa. 420, 23 L. R. A. 135, 39 Am. St. Rep. 686, 28 Atl. 190; Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 1; Payne v. Western & A. R. Co. 13 Lea, 507, 49 Am. Rep. 666.

This association had a legal right to form, to adopt measures for the mutual protection and benefit of its members, and, for such purposes, to regulate the acts of its members within the scope and scheme of the association.

Com. v. Hunt, 4 Met. 111, 38 Am. Dec. 346; Snow v. Wheeler, 113 Mass. 179.

Hammond, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The evidence warranted the finding of the following facts, many of which were not in dispute: The plaintiff was engaged in a profitable business in quarrying granite and selling the same to granite workers in Quincy and vicinity. About January, 1899, his customers left him, and his business was ruined, through the action of the defendants and their associates. The defendants were all members of a voluntary association known as the Granite Manufacturers' Association of Quincy, Massachusetts, and some of them were on the executive committee. The association was composed of "such individuals, firms, or corporations as are, or are about to become, manufacturers, quarriers, or polishers of granite." There was no constitution, and, while there were by-laws, still, except as herein-after stated, there was in them no statement of the objects for which the association was formed. The by-laws provided, among other things, for the admission, suspension, and expulsion of members, the election of officers, including an executive committee, and defined the respective powers and duties of the officers. One of the by-laws read as follows: "For the purpose of defraying, in part, the expense of the maintenance of this organization, any member thereof having business transactions with any party or concern in Quincy or its vicinity, not members hereof, and in any way relating to the cutting, quarrying, polishing, buying, or selling of granite (hand polishers excepted) shall for each of said transactions contribute at least $1, and not more than $500. The amount to be fixed by the association upon its determining the amount and nature of said transaction." Acting under the by-laws, the association investigated charges which were made against several of its members that they had purchased granite from a party "not a member" of the association. The charges were proved, and, under the section above quoted, it was voted that the offending parties "should respectively contribute to the funds of the association" the sums named in the votes. These sums ranged from $10 to $100. Only the contribution of $100 has been paid, but it is a fair inference that the proceedings to collect the others have been delayed only by reason of this suit. The party "not a member" was the present plaintiff, and the members of the association knew it. Most of the customers of the plaintiff were members of the association, and after these proceedings they declined to deal with him. This action on their part was due to the course of the association in compelling them to contribute as above stated, and to their fear that a similar vote for contribution would be passed, should they continue to trade with the plaintiff. The jury might properly have found, also, that the euphemistic expression, "shall contribute to the funds of the association," contained an idea which could be more tersely and accurately expressed by the phrase "shall pay a fine," or, in other words, that the plain intent of the section was to provide for the imposition upon those who came within its provisions of a penalty in the nature of a substantial fine. The bill of exceptions recites that "there was no evidence of threats or intimidation practised upon the plaintiff himself, and the acts complained of were confined to the action of the society upon its own members." We understand this statement to mean simply that the acts of the association concerned only such of the plaintiff's customers as were members, and that no pressure was brought to bear upon the plaintiff, except such as fairly resulted from action upon his customers. While it is true that the by-law was not directed expressly against the plaintiff by name, still he belonged to the class whose business it was intended to affect, and the proceedings actually taken were based upon transactions with him alone, and in that way were directed against his business alone. It was the intention of the defendants to withdraw his customers from him, if possible, by the imposition of fines upon them, with the knowledge that the result would be a great loss to the plaintiff. The defendants must be presumed to have intended the natural result of their acts. Here, then, is a clear and deliberate interference with the business of a person, with the intention of causing damage to him, and ending in that result. The defendants combined and conspired together to ruin the plaintiff in his business, and they accomplished their purpose. In all this, have they kept within lawful bounds? It is elemental that the unlawfulness of a conspiracy may be found either in the end sought, or the means to be used. If either is unlawful, within the meaning of the term as applied to the subject, then the conspiracy is unlawful. It becomes necessary, therefore, to examine into the nature of the conspiracy in this case, both as to the object sought and the means used.

The case presents one phase of a general subject which gravely concerns the interests of the business world, and, indeed, those of all organized society, and which in recent years has demanded and received great consideration in the courts and elsewhere. Much remains to be done to clear the atmosphere, but some things, at least, appear to have been settled; and certainly at this stage of the judicial inquiry it cannot be necessary to enter upon a course of reasoning or to cite authorities in support of the proposition that, while a person must submit to competition, he has the right to be protected from malicious interference with his business. The rule is well stated in Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555, 564, in the following language: "Everyone has a right to enjoy the fruits and advantages of his own enterprise, industry, skill, and credit. He has no right to be protected against competition, but he has a right to be free from malicious and wanton interference, disturbance, or annoyance. If disturbance or loss come as a result of competition, or the exercise of like rights by others, it is damnum absque injuria, unless some superior right by contract or otherwise is interfered with. But if it come from the merely wanton or malicious acts of others, without the justification of competition or the service of any interest or lawful purpose, it then stands upon a different footing." In a case like this, where the injury is intentionally inflicted, the crucial question is whether there is justifiable cause for the act. If the injury be inflicted without just cause or excuse, then it is actionable. Bowen, L. J., in Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598, 613; Plant v. Woods, 176 Mass. 492, 51 L. R. A. 339, 79 Am. St. Rep. 330, 57 N. E. 1011. The justification must be as broad as the act, and must cover, not only the motive and the purpose, or, in other words, the object sought, but also the means used.

The defendants contend that, both as to object and means, they are justified by the law applicable to business competition. In considering this defense, it is to be remembered, as was said by Bowen, L. J., in Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598, 611, that there is presented "an apparent conflict or antinomy between two rights that are equally regarded by the law, —the right of the plaintiffs to be protected in the legitimate exercise of their trade, and the right of the defendants to carry on their business as seems best to them, provided they commit no wrong to others." Here, as in most cases where there is a conflict between two important principles, either of which is sound, and to be sustained within proper bounds, but each of which must finally yield, to some extent, to the other, it frequently is not possible by a general formula to mark out the dividing line with reference to every conceivable case, and it is not wise to attempt it. The best and only practicable course is to consider the cases as they arise, and, bearing in mind the grounds upon which the soundness of each principle is supposed to rest, by a process of elimination and comparison to establish points through which, at least, the line must run, and beyond which the party charged with trespass shall not be allowed to go.

While the purpose to injure the plaintiff appears clearly enough, the object or motive is left somewhat obscure, upon the evidence. The association had no written constitution, and the by-laws do not expressly set forth its objects. It is true that from the by-laws it appears that none but persons engaged in the granite business can be members, and that a member transacting any business of this kind with a person not a member is liable to a fine, from which it may be inferred that it is the idea of the members that, for the protection of their business, it would be well to confine it to transactions among themselves, and that one, at least, of the objects of the association is to advance the interests of the members in that way. The oral testimony tends to show that one object of the association is to see that agreements made between its members and their employees, and between this association and similar associations in the same line of business, be kept and "lived up to." Whether this failure to set out fully in writing the object is due to any reluctance to have them clearly appear, or to some other cause, is, of course, not material to this case. The result, however, is that its objects do not so clearly appear as might be desired; but, in view of the conclusion to which we have come as to the means used, it is not necessary to inquire more closely as to the objects. It may be assumed that one of the objects was to enable the members to compete more successfully with the others in the same business, and that the acts of which the plaintiff complains were done for the ultimate protection and advancement of their own business interests, with no intention or desire to injure the plaintiff, except so far as such injury was the necessary result of measures taken for their own interests. If that was true, then, so far as respects the end sought, the conspiracy does not seem to have been illegal.

The next question is whether there is anything unlawful or wrongful in the means used, as applied to the acts in question. Nothing need be said in support of the general right to compete. To what extent combination may be allowed in competition is a matter about which there is as yet much conflict, but it is possible that, in a more advanced stage of the discussion, the day may come when it will be more clearly seen, and will more distinctly appear in the adjudication of the courts, than as yet has been the case, that the proposition that, what one man lawfully can do, any number of men, acting together by combined agreement, lawfully may do, is to be received with newly disclosed qualifications, arising out of the changed conditions of civilized life and of the increased facility and power of organized combination, and that the difference between the power of individuals, acting each according to his own preference, and that of an organized and extensive combination, may be so great in its effect upon public and private interests as to cease to be simply one of degree, and to reach the dignity of a difference in kind. Indeed, in the language of Bowen, L. J., in the Mogul S. S. Case, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 616: "Of the general proposition that certain kinds of conduct not criminal in any one individual may become criminal if done by combination among several, there can be no doubt. The distinction is based on sound reason, for a combination may make oppressive or dangerous that which, if it proceeded only from a single person, would be otherwise; 64 L. R. A.

and the very fact of the combination may show that the object is simply to do harm, and not to exercise one's own just rights." See also opinion of Stirling, L. J., in Giblan v. National Amalgamated Labourers' Union [1903] 2 K. B. 600, 621. Speaking generally, however, competition in business is permitted, although frequently disastrous to those engaged in it. It is always selfish, often sharp, and sometimes deadly. Conspicuous illustrations of the destructive extent to which it may be carried are to be found in the Mogul S. S. Case, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 616, and in Bowen v. Matheson, 14 Allen, 499. The fact, therefore, that the plaintiff was vanquished, is not enough, provided that the contest was carried on within the rules allowable in such warfare. It is a right, however, which is to be exercised with reference to the existence of a similar right on the part of others. The trader has not a free lance. He may fight, but as a soldier, not as a guerilla. The right of competition rests upon the doctrine that the interests of the great public are best subserved by permitting the general and natural laws of business to have their full and free operation, and that this end is best attained when the trader is allowed, in his business, to make free use of these laws. He may praise his wares, may offer more advantageous terms than his rival, may sell at less than cost, or in the words of Bowen, L. J., in the Mogul S. S. Case, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 615, may adopt the "expedient of sowing one year a crop of apparently unfruitful prices, in order, by driving competition away, to reap a fuller harvest of profit in the future." In these and many other obvious ways he may secure the customers of his rival, and build up his own business to the destruction of that of others; and, so long as he keeps within the operation of the laws of trade, his justification is complete. But from the very nature of the case, it is manifest that the right of competition furnishes no justification for an act done by the use of means which in their nature are in violation of the principle upon which it rests. The weapons used by the trader who relies upon this right for justification must be those furnished by the laws of trade, or at least must not be inconsistent with their free operation. No man can justify an interference with another man's business through fraud or misrepresentation, nor by intimidation, obstruction, or molestation. In the case before us the members of the association were to be held to the policy of refusing to trade with the plaintiff by the imposition of heavy fines, or, in other words they were coerced by actual or threatened injury to their property. It is true that one may leave the association if he desires, but if he stays in it, he is subjected to the coercive effect of a fine, to be determined and enforced by the majority.

This method of procedure is arbitrary and artificial, and is based in no respect upon the grounds upon which competition in business is permitted, but, on the contrary, it creates a motive for business action inconsistent with that freedom of choice out of which springs the benefit of competition to the public, and has no natural or logical relation to the grounds upon which the right to compete is based. Such a method of influencing a person may be coercive and illegal. Carew v. Rutherford, 108 Mass. 1, 8 Am. Rep. 287.

Nor is the nature of the coercion changed by the fact that the persons fined were members of the association. The words of Munson, J., in Boutwell v. Marr, 71 Vt. 1, 9, 43 L. R. A. 803, 805, 76 Am. St. Rep. 746, 751, 42 Atl. 607, 609, are applicable here: "The law cannot be compelled, by any initial agreement of an associate member, to treat him as one having no choice but that of the majority, nor as a willing participant in whatever action may be taken. The voluntary acceptance of by-laws providing for the imposition of coercive fines does not make them legal and collectible, and the standing threat of their imposition may properly be classed with the ordinary threat of suits upon groundless claims. The fact that the relations and processes deemed essential to a recovery are brought within the membership and proceedings of an organized body cannot change the result. The law sees in the membership of an association of this character both the authors of its coercive system and the victim of its unlawful pressure. If this were not so, men could deprive their fellows of established rights, and evade the duty of compensation, simply by working through an association."

In view of the considerations upon which the right of competition is based, we are of opinion that, as against the plaintiff, the defendants have failed to show that the coercion or intimidation of the plaintiff's customers by means of a fine is justified by the law of competition. The ground of the justification is not broad enough to cover the acts of interference in their entirety, and the interference, being injurious and unjustifiable, is unlawful. We do not mean to be understood as saying that a fine is of itself necessarily, or even generally, an illegal implement. In many cases it is so slight as not to be coercive in its nature; in many, it serves a useful purpose to call the attention of a member of an organization to the fact of the infraction of some innocent regulation, and, in many, it serves as an extra incentive to the performance of some absolute duty or the assertion of some absolute right. But where, as in the case before us, the fine is so large as to amount to moral intimidation or coercion, and is used as a means to enforce a right not absolute in its nature, but conditional, and is inconsistent with those conditions upon which the right rests, then the coercion becomes unjustifiable, and taints with illegality the act.

The defendants strongly rely upon Bowen v. Matheson, 14 Allen, 499; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor [1892] A. C. 25; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis, 54 Minn. 223, sub nom. Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso. 21 L. R. A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119; Macaulay Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L. R. A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; and Cote v. Murphy, 150 Pa. 420, 23 L. R. A. 135, 39 Am. St. Rep. 686, 28 Atl. 190. In none of these cases was there any coercion by means of fines upon those who traded with the plaintiff. Inducements were held out, but they were such as are naturally incident to competition,—for instance, more advantageous terms in the way of discounts, increased trade, and otherwise. In the Minnesota case there was among the rules of the association a clause requiring the plaintiff to pay 10 per cent, but the propriety or the legality of that provision was not involved. In Bowen v. Matheson, it is true that the by-laws provided for a fine, but the declaration did not charge that any coercion by means of a fine had been used. A demurrer to the declaration was sustained upon the ground that there was no sufficient allegation of an illegal act. The only allegation which need be noticed here was that the defendants "did prevent men from shipping with" the plaintiff, and as to this the court said: "This might be done in many ways which are lawful and proper, and, as no illegal methods are stated, the allegation is bad." This comes far short of sustaining the defendants in their course of coercion by means of fines. As to the other cases cited by the defendants, it may be said that, while bearing upon the general subject of which the present case presents one phase, they are not inconsistent with the conclusion to which we have come. Among the authorities bearing upon the general subject, and having some relation to the questions involved in this case, see, in addition to those hereinbefore cited, Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 116, 21 L. ed. 394; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Doremus v. Hennessy, 176 Ill. 608, 43 L. R. A. 797, 802, 68 Am. St. Rep. 203, 52 N. E. 924, 54 N. E. 524; Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 184 Ill. 438, 48 L.

R. A. 568, 75 Am. St. Rep. 184, 56 N. E. 822; State v. Stewart, 59 Vt. 273, 59 Am. Rep. 710, 9 Atl. 559; Olive v. Van Patten, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 630, 25 S. W. 428; Barr v. Essex Trades Council, 53 N. J. Eq. 101, 30 Atl. 881; Jackson v. Stanfield, 137 Ind. 592, 23 L. R. A. 588, 36 N. E. 345, 37 N. E. 14; Bailey v. Master Plumbers, 103 Tenn. 99, 46 L. R. A. 561, 52 S. W. 853; Brown v.

Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. 115 Ga. 429, 57 L. R. A. 547, 90 Am. St. Rep. 126, 41 S. E. 553; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 476, L. R. 21 Q. B. Div. 544, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598, [1892] A. C. 25.

For the reasons above stated, a majority of the court are of opinion that the case should have been submitted to the jury.

Exceptions sustained.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

PEOPLE of the State of Michigan
v.

Steven S. HULBERT, Plff. in Err.

(181 Mich. 156.)

1. The fact that a lower riparian proprietor upon a lake decides to use the water for drinking and cooking purposes does not render the reasonable use of the lake by upper proprietors for bathing purposes unlawful, although such use has a tendency to render the water less desirable for drinking and cooking purposes.
2. An upper riparian owner cannot, through the police power, be denied the right to bathe in a lake because a municipality takes its water supply therefrom.

(June 24, 1902.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Calhoun County to review a judgment convicting defendant of committing a nuisance by polluting the water of a lake from which was taken a water supply for a municipal corporation. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George W. Mechem, with Mr. Steven S. Hulbert, in propria persona:

Goguwac is an inland lake, and the shore ownership carries with it (unless expressly reserved) ownership to the center of the lake.

Grand Rapids Ice & Coal Co. v. South Grand Rapids Ice & Coal Co. 102 Mich. 236, 25 L. R. A. 815, 47 Am. St. Rep. 516, 60 N. W. 681; Butler v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. 85 Mich. 246, 24 Am. St. Rep. 84, 48 N. W. 569.

A riparian proprietor on this lake has a right to the use of the water as it comes to him, for domestic, agricultural, pleasure, and manufacturing purposes, with due regard to the improvements of the day in hydraulics, and due regard to the like use by other riparian owners above and below him.

Riparian rights depend upon the ownership of land which is contiguous to, and touches upon, the water; and it is upon that land, and within reasonable limits, that the water must be used.

Gould, Waters, pt. 2, chap. 6; Ulbricht v. Eufaula Water Co. 86 Ala. 587, 4 L. R. A. 572, 11 Am. St. Rep. 72, 6 So. 78; Dumont v. Kellogg, 29 Mich. 420, 18 Am. Rep. 102; Hazeltine v. Case, 46 Wis. 391, 32 Am. Rep. 715, 1 N. W. 66.

A riparian owner has the right to use the water of a river for the purposes of his farm, and to carry on his business on his land, whatever it may be, to irrigate his land, to water his cattle, to wash his sheep, or for his aquatic fowls, to bathe in for health, or to sail upon for pleasure, etc.; in fine, to put the water which washes his bank to whatever use his pleasure or his business may prompt.

Gould v. Hudson River R. Co. 6 N. Y. 551; Stevens v. Paterson & N. R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 532, 3 Am. Rep. 269; Lewis, Em. Dom. ed. 1888, § 79, p. 85.

Any injury to the property of an individual, which deprives the owner of the ordinary use of it, is equivalent to the taking, and entitles him to compensation.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 675; Ronayne v. Loranger, 66 Mich. 373, 33 N. W. 840; Forster v. Scott, 136 N. Y. 584, 18 L. R. A. 543, 32 N. E. 976; Grand Rapids Boom Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308.

The city of Battle Creek obtains the right to take water from lake Goguwac by reason of the provisions of the charter given to it by the state.

Local Acts 1887, pp. 417, 418.

And this is the only way in which it has the right, viz., by taking it as "a public use."

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 597.

A city is not a riparian proprietor in the NOTE.—The above case is a unique application of the well-established rule that each riparian owner has a right to make such reasonable use of the water flowing past his property as he can without materially injuring the rights of his neighbor. See note to Barnard v. Shirley, 41 L. R. A. 737.

For the cases upon the question as to the right of the legislature to protect a municipal water supply, see note to State v. Griffin, 41 L. R. A. 177, and Farnham, Waters, § 137a. 64 L. R. A. sense of being permitted, by the mere fact of shore ownership, to draw water and sell to its inhabitants miles away.

Emporia v. Soden, 25 Kan. 588, 37 Am. Rep. 265; Ulbricht v. Eufaula Water Co. 86 Ala. 587, 4 L. R. A. 572, 11 Am. St. Rep. 72, 6 So. 78; Dumont v. Kellogg, 29 Mich. 421, 18 Am. Rep. 102; Haupt's Appeal, 125 Pa. 211, 3 L. R. A. 536, 17 Atl. 436; Smith v. Rochester, 92 N. Y. 463, 44 Am. Rep. 393; Hall v. Ionia, 38 Mich. 493.

A city has no more right to invade, or cause the invasion of, private property than an individual.

Rice v. Flint, 67 Mich. 401, 34 N. W. 719; Stock v. Jefferson Twp. 114 Mich. 357, 38 L. R. A. 355, 72 N. W. 132; Dwight v. Hayes, 150 Ill. 273, 41 Am. St. Rep. 367, 37 N. E. 218.

Respondent had the absolute right to control, on his 45 feet frontage out to the center of the lake, who shall sit in a boat on the water over that land and hunt or fish, or who shall navigate any kind of craft on, over, or across the water flowing over that land.

Hall v. Alford, 114 Mich. 165, 38 L. R. A. 205, 72 N. W. 137; Sterling v. Jackson, 69 Mich. 497, 13 Am. St. Rep. 405, 37 N. W. 845; Marsh v. Colby, 39 Mich. 626, 33 Am. Rep. 439; Lincoln v. Davis, 53 Mich. 375, 51 Am. Rep. 116, 19 N. W. 103.

The injury complained of by the city must be to its rightful use.

Messersmidt v. People, 46 Mich. 437, 9 N. W. 485; Gould, Waters, & 544; Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Chesebro, 74 Mich. 466, 42 N. W. 66; Marquette, H. & O. R. Co. v. Probate Judge, 53 Mich. 226, 18 N. W. 788; Sheldon v. Kalamazoo, 24 Mich. 385.

Police power is a regulation, not a taking, and not a confiscation; and the moment the act passes beyond mere regulation, and attempts to deprive the individual of his property under pretense of regulation, then the act becomes one of eminent domain, and is subject to the obligations and limitations which attend an exercise of that power.

Re Cheesebrough, 78 N. Y. 232; Grand Rapids v. Powers, 89 Mich. 94, 14 L. R. A. 498, 28 Am. St. Rep. 276, 50 N. W. 661; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Sanborn v. People's Ice Co. 82 Minn. 43, 51 L. R. A. 829, 83 Am. St. Rep. 401, 84 N. W. 641; Forbell v. New York, 164 N. Y. 522, 51 L. R. A. 695, 79 Am. St. Rep. 666, 58 N. E. 644.

Mr. O. S. Clark, for defendant in error:

Every holder of property, however absolute and unqualified may be his title, holds it under the implied liability that his use of it may be so regulated that it shall not be injurious to the equal enjoyment of others, 64 L. R. A.

nor injurious to the rights of the community.

Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 84; People v. Smith, 108 Mich. 527, 32 L. R. A. 853, 62 Am. St. Rep. 715, 66 N. W. 382; Champer v. Greencastle, 138 Ind. 339, 24 L. R. A. 768, 46 Am. St. Rep. 390, 35 N. E. 14; Davock v. Moore, 105 Mich. 120, 28 L. R. A. 783, 63 N. W. 424.

One who contributes to the contamination of the water in a stream is guilty of the nuisance caused thereby.

McClain, Crim. Law, ¶ 1175; State v. Smith, 82 Iowa, 423, 48 N. W. 727; Douglas v. State, 4 Wis. 387; Seacord v. People, 121 Ill. 623, 13 N. E. 194.

It is a public nuisance to contaminate water in a well.

McClain, Crim. Law, ¶ 1170; State v. Taylor, 29 Ind. 517.

It is a nuisance to pollute the waters of a stream used to supply drinking water to a community.

Wharton, Crim. Law, 10th ed. 1477; Com. v. Webb, 6 Rand. (Va.) 726; Stein v. State, 37 Ala. 123; State v. Wheeler, 44 N. J. L. 88; State v. Griffin, 69 N. H. 1, 41 L. R. A. 177, 76 Am. St. Rep. 139, 39 Atl. 260.

The police power is that inherent and plenary power which enables the state to restrain or prohibit all things hurtful to the comfort, safety, or welfare of society.

Meadowcroft v. People, 163 Ill. 56, 35 L. R. A. 176, 54 Am. St. Rep. 447, 45 N. E. 303; People v. Smith, 108 Mich. 527, 32 L. R. A. 853, 62 Am. St. Rep. 715, 66 N. W. 382.

Nothing can be of greater concern to the community than a sufficient supply of wholesome water.

Elliott, Mun. Corp. ¶ 91; Smith v. Nashville, 88 Tenn. 464, 7 L. R. A. 469, 12 S. W. 924; State v. Struper, 5 N. J. L. J. 115.

The right of the public residing along a river to take water for domestic, sanitary, and fire purposes is paramount to those of the owners of water power.

Elgin v. Elgin Hydraulic Co. 85 Ill. App. 182.

The exercise of police power must become wider, more varied, and more frequent with the progress of society.

Boston & M. R. Co. v. York County, 79 Me. 386, 10 Atl. 113; State v. Griffin, 69 N. H. 1, 41 L. R. A. 177, 76 Am. St. Rep. 139, 39 Atl. 260; State v. Noyes, 30 N. H. 279; State v. Campbell, 64 N. H. 402, 10 Am. St. Rep. 419, 13 Atl. 585; Bancroft v. Cambridge, 126 Mass. 438; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 138, 21 L. ed. 932; Powell v. Com. 114 Pa. 265, 60 Am. Rep. 350, 7 Atl. 913.

The question of whether or not acts injurious to the public health shall be prohibited is wholly one for the legislature.

Tiedeman, Pol. Power, ¶ 426; Sohier v. Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 1; State v. Campbell, 64 N. H. 402, 10 Am. St. Rep. 419, 13 Atl. 585; State v. Marshall, 64 N. H. 549, 1 L. R. A. 51, 15 Atl. 210; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636.

Although restriction and limitation upon the use of one's property, whereby he is deprived of any beneficial use of the same, may be, and often does become, oppressive, and in very many instances results in making valuable holdings, both real and personal, entirely valueless, it will not prevent the exercise of police power.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Ballentine v. Webb, 84 Mich. 38, 13 L. R. A. 321, 47 N. W. 485; People v. Detroit White Lead Works, 82 Mich. 479, 9 L. R. A. 722, 46 N. W. 735; Cleveland v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 20 N. J. Eq. 205; Robinson v. Baugh, 31 Mich. 290.

The police power of the state extends in the direction of so regulating the use of private property, or of so restraining personal action, as manifestly to secure or tend to the comfort, prosperity, and protection of the community.

People v. Ewer, 141 N. Y. 129, 25 L. R. A. 794, 38 Am. St. Rep. 788, 36 N. E. 4; State v. Heinemann, 80 Wis. 253, 27 Am. St. Rep. 34, 49 N. W. 818; Crawfordville v. Braden, 130 Ind. 149, 14 L. R. A. 268, 30 Am. St. Rep. 214, 28 N. E. 849; People v. McCune, 14 Utah, 152, 35 L. R. A. 396, 46 Pac. 658; State v. Freeman, 38 N. H. 426.

One has no vested right in the general laws of his country which entitles him to insist that any one of them shall remain unchanged for his benefit.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 351; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 134, 24 L. ed. 77, 87.

The police power extends to the protection of the lives, the health, and the property of the community, against the injurious exercise by any citizen of his own rights.

Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 1115; Russell, Pol. Power, 35; Bancroft v. Cambridge, 126 Mass. 441.

Messrs. Horace M. Oren, Attorney General, and Jesse M. Hatch, also for defendant in error:

The city is not a trespasser.

The owner of property must so use it as not to interfere with the rights of his neighbor.

Champer v. Greencastle, 138 Ind. 339, 24 L. R. A. 768, 46 Am. St. Rep. 390, 35 N. E. 14; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1166; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 84; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 714, 4th ed. 9, 570, 720; 4 Bl. Com. 162; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814, 25 L. ed. 1079; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 64 L. R. A.

24 L. ed. 77; Dunne v. People, 94 Ill. 120, 34 Am. Rep. 213.

Unwholesome trades, slaughter houses, the burial of the dead, may all be interdicted by law in the midst of dense masses of population, on the general rational principle that every person ought so to use his property as not to injure his neighbor's, and private interests must be made subservient to the general interests of the community.

2 Kent, Com. 13th ed. 340.

The power to regulate all matters affecting health being most essential to the well-being of the community, the legislature cannot, by any contract, divest itself of the right to exercise it.

Butcher's Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32, 27 L. R. A. 710, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; 4 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 597; State v. Ad-dington, 77 Mo. 110; Erie & N. E. R. Co. v. Casey, 26 Pa. 287; Davis v. State, 68 Ala. 58, 44 Am. Rep. 128.

When water is held by a dam, or, standing in a ditch, becomes stagnant, and so corrupts the atmosphere as to imperil the health of the neighborhood, it is a nuisance.

Gould, Waters, § 212; People v. Ewer, 141 N. Y. 129, 25 L. R. A. 794, 38 Am. St. Rep. 788, 36 N. E. 4; People v. King, 110 N. Y. 418, 1 L. R. A. 293, 6 Am. St. Rep. 389, 18 N. E. 245; State v. Wheeler, 44 N. J. L. 88.

Of the right of the legislature to restrain the use of private property in order to secure the general comfort, health, and prosperity of the state, "no question ever was, or, upon acknowledged general principles, ever can be, made, so far as natural persons are concerned."

Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53; Com. v. Tewksbury, 11 Met. 55; Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 149, 62 Am. Dec. 625; State ex rel. Sandfora v. Common Pleas Ct. 36 N. J. L. 72, 13 Am. Rep. 422.

Moore, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Goguac lake is a natural body of private water wholly within the township of Battle Creek, which township adjoins the city of Battle Creek. It has an area of about 360 acres, and varies in depth from nothing at the shore line, to 80 feet. The shore line of the lake is about 5 miles in all, and at the time of the alleged offense was owned as follows: About 200 feet by the city, upon which is its pumping station, and the rest of the 5 miles is owned and occupied by farmers, pleasure resort proprietors, and summer cottagers, the latter holding some by fee and others by lease from the farmer owners. At the north end of the lake is a pleasure resort, and scattered around the lake shore are between 40 and 50 cottages, occupied during the summer season by the respective owners, or persons to whom they rent. The lake is accessible from the city by a good highway, a fine bicycle path, and an electric road. It is the only nearby pleasure resort for the citizens of Battle Creek. There are a large number of row-boats, sailboats, and several steamers upon the lake. The riparian uses to which the various owners have put the water are all the uses which farmers and summer cottagers would naturally exercise, viz., fishing, wading, bathing, swimming, washing sheep, watering cattle, pigs, and horses, washing vehicles and clothing, cutting ice, boating, sailing, etc. In the summer of 1884 the respondent first occupied premises at the lake. In 1884, 1885, and 1886 he occupied tents within a few feet of where he erected a cottage in 1887, since which time he has continuously occupied said cottage. Beginning with 1884, he has occupied the premises for the camping season each year, continuously, except two, and every season has entered the water to swim. His investment in cottage and appurtenances is several hundred dollars. In 1886 the city proposed a system of water-works, and at some time thereafter determined to take the city water supply from Goguae lake. For that purpose the city bought a piece of land fronting on the lake at its northerly end, having a shore frontage of about 200 feet, and erected thereon a pumping station. The system is to take the water from the lake by means of an inlet pipe 16 inches in diameter, which runs into the lake. The water is pumped to a stand pipe, which is upon a rise of ground a short distance from the lake, and thence is distributed through pipes of 4 to 16 inches within the city limits, the piping now amounting to between 30 and 40 miles. The water is used by the city, and sold to the people, and is the only water system. The lake is about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles long, and is fed by subterranean springs. There is no outlet except the intake pipe. From the cottage of the respondent, by water, to the intake pipe, is about $\frac{1}{4}$ of a mile. Quite early in the use of the lake for municipal purposes, the city pumped out so much water as to lower the lake. Litigation resulted, and the city then for certain months in the year turned into the lake the water from Minges brook, so that the water is not now lowered by the city, but the effect of turning in the water from the brook is to make the water harder than it was before. The city, although given ample power by the charter to condemn lands and easements for a water supply upon paying due compensation for the rights taken, did not exercise that right, but, because it was a riparian proprietor, claimed the right to use the water of the lake, and that the other riparian proprietors must do nothing having a tendency to pollute the waters of the lake. The respondent, having first notified the board of public works of his intention to do so, made an entry into the waters of the lake on July 25, 1897, by wading on his own leased land under water, and swimming in the water flowing over said land. This he did without malice, and to afford a test case. He maintained that the difference between the exercise of the ancient common-law riparian right of bathing and swimming and those of washing sheep, watering cattle and horses, running a water wheel for a mill, etc., was a difference only in kind and degree, and that all were common-law rights incident and appurtenant to the ownership or lawful occupation of land upon an inland lake in this state. It was the claim of the people that this act of swimming polluted the sources of the water supply, and was criminal. The respondent was informed against, a trial was had, and the charge of the court was such that a conviction followed. The case is brought here by appeal.

Upon the trial several expert witnesses were sworn, who testified that germs might have been thrown off the body of the respondent while swimming, which would produce disease, and that some of those germs might reach the intake pipe, and through it the consumers of the water, and be a source of ill health. It is not shown any such germs ever did reach the intake pipe, or that any illness in Battle Creek could be traced to the use of the water taken from this lake. A great many interesting questions are raised by the record and presented in the briefs of counsel, but, in our view of the law, it will be unnecessary to discuss many of them. The first question calling for consideration is, Was the act of respondent unlawful? It is a matter of common knowledge that in this state the riparian owners whose lands border upon lakes, and through whose lands streams run, are in the habit of using the streams and lakes by allowing their domestic animals to drink therein, and by drawing therefrom what water may be needed for domestic purposes; and themselves and their families resort to the water of the streams and lakes for the purpose of bathing at suitable seasons of the year. It is also known that, as a rule, the supply of drinking and cooking water is obtained from springs or wells. Will the fact that a lower riparian proprietor decides to use the water of the stream or lake for drinking and cooking purposes make a reasonable use of the water by the upper riparian owners for the purposes of watering cattle and bathing purposes unlawful because to do so has a tendency to make the water less desirable for drinking and cooking purposes? Can the upper riparian proprietors be deprived of such reasonable and ordinary use when the lower proprietor is a city having a large population, by invoking the police power, and without compensation? It will readily be seen these are very important questions. The diligence of able counsel has failed to call our attention to a case on all fours with the one at bar, but the principles involved are not new.

In Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748, Pollock, C. B., speaking for the court, said: "We agree with the learned counsel for the plaintiffs in his exposition of the principles which regulate the law as to natural streams, which are fully considered, and placed on their right footing, in the case of Mason v. Hill, 3 Barn. & Ad. 306, 5 Barn. & Ad. 1, and the authorities there cited. Flowing water, as well as light and air, are in one sense publici juris. They are a boon from providence to all, and differ only in their mode of enjoyment. Light and air are diffused in all directions, flowing water in some. When property was established, each one had the right to enjoy the light and air diffused over, and the water flowing through, the portion of soil belonging to him. The property in the water itself was not in the proprietor of the land through which it passes, but only the use of it, as it passes along, for the enjoyment of his property, and as incidental to it. The law is laid down by Chancellor Kent, in 3 Com. 439, thus: 'Every proprietor of lands on the banks of a river has naturally an equal right to the use of the water. . . . He has no property in the water itself, but a simple usufruct as it passes along.' Aqua currit et debet currere, is the language of the law; and Mr. Justice Story, in Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,312, cited in Gale & W. Easements, p. 131, lays down the same law. In the judgment of Lord Chief Justice Tindal in the case of Acton v. Blundell, 12 Mees. & W. 324, he treats the right to waters flowing on the surface as arising from the acquiescence of neighboring owners, though he also quotes the judgment of Mr. Justice Story, above referred to, which treats the right as an incident to property; for Mr. Justice Story says: 'The natural stream, existing by the bounty of providence for the benefit of the land through which it flows, is an incident annexed by operation of the law to the land itself.' Mr. Justice Whitelock, also, in Sury v. Pigot, Popham, 169, and Crew, Ch. J., Popham, 172, and Lee, Ch. J., in Brown v. Best, 1 Wils. 174, treat the right as arising ex jure naturæ; and consequently it is not extinguished, as an easement in alieno solo would be, by unity. . . . In considering this question, it is to be assumed that the plaintiffs' right is established to the use of the water. It is said that the true rule on this subject is laid down by Chancellor Kent (3 Com. 439, 440) that streams are meant for the use of men, and that it would be unreasonable, and contrary to the universal consent of mankind, to debar each riparian proprietor from the application of the water to domestic, agricultural, or manufacturing purposes, provided the use of it be made so as to work no material injury or annoyance to his neighbor, and though there will, no doubt, be, in the exercise of a proper use of water, some evaporation and decrease of it,—some variation in the weight and velocity of the current; but the maxim, De minimis non curat lex, applies, and a right of action by the proprietor below would not necessarily flow from such use; it would depend on the nature and extent of the injury and the manner of using the water."

In Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 352, Baron Parke, speaking for the court, said: "The law as to flowing water is now put on its right footing by a series of cases beginning with that of Wright v. Howard, 1 Sim. & Stu. 190, Followed by Mason v. Hill, 8 Barn. & Ad. 304, 5 Barn. & Ad. 1, and ending with that of Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748; and is fully settled in the American courts. See 3 Kent, Com. 6th ed. lecture 52, pp. 439, 445. The right to have the stream to flow in its natural state without diminution or alteration is an incident to the property in the land through which it passes; but flowing water is publici juris,—not in the sense that it is a bonum vacans, to which the first occupant may acquire an exclusive right, but that it is public and common in this sense only,—that all may reasonably use it who have a right of access to it; that none can have any property in the water itself except in the particular portion which he may choose to abstract from the stream and take into his possession, and that during the time of his possession only. See Mason v. Hill, 5 Barn. & Ad. 24. But each proprietor of the adjacent land has the right to the usufruct of the stream which flows through it. This right to the benefit and advantage of the water flowing past his land is not an absolute and exclusive right to the flow of all the water in its natural state. If it were, the argument of the learned counsel that every abstraction of it would give a cause of action would be irrefragable. But it is a right only to the flow of the water, and the enjoyment of it, subject to the similar rights of all the proprietors of the banks on each side to the reasonable enjoyment of the same gift of providence. . . . The owner must so use and apply the water as to work no material injury or annoyance to his neighbor below him, who has an equal right to the subsequent use of the same water. Nor can he, by dams or any obstruction, cause the water injuriously to overflow the grounds and springs of his neighbor above him. Streams of water are intended for the use and comfort of man; and it would be unreasonable, and contrary to the universal sense of mankind, to debar every riparian proprietor from the application of the water to domestic, agricultural, and manufacturing purposes, provided the use of it be made under the limitations which have been mentioned; and there will, no doubt, inevitably be, in the exercise of a perfect right to the use of the water, some evaporation and decrease of it, and some variations in the weight and velocity of the current. But de minimis non curat lex, and a right of action by the proprietor below would not necessarily flow from such consequences, but would depend upon the nature and extent of the complaint or injury, and the manner of using the water. All that the law requires of the party by or over whose land a stream passes is that he should use the water in a reasonable manner, and so as not to destroy, or render useless, or materially diminish or affect, the application of the water by the proprietors above or below on the stream. . . . On the other hand, one's common sense would be shocked by supposing that a riparian owner could not dip a watering pot into the stream in order to water his garden, or allow his family or his cattle to drink it. It is entirely a question of degree, and it is very difficult—indeed, impossible—to define precisely the limits which separate the reasonable and permitted use of the stream from its wrongful application; but there is often no difficulty in deciding whether a particular case falls within the permitted limits or not."

In Merrifield v. Lombard, 13 Allen, 16, 90 Am. Dec. 172, it is said: "Any diversion or obstruction of the water which substantially diminishes the volume of the stream, so that it does not flow ut currere solebat, or which defiles and corrupts it to such a degree as essentially to impair its purity, and prevent the use of it for any of the reasonable and proper purposes to which running water is usually applied, such as irrigation, the propulsion of machinery, or consumption for domestic use, is an infringement of the right of other owners of land through which a water-course runs, and creates a nuisance for which those thereby injured are entitled to remedy. An injury to the purity or quality of the water to the detriment of other riparian owners constitutes, in legal effect, a wrong and an invasion of private right, in like manner as a permanent obstruction or diversion of the water. It tends directly to impair and destroy the use of the stream by others for reasonable and proper purposes. Mason v. Hill, 2 Nev. & M. 747, 5 Barn. & Ad. 1; Wood v. Waud, 13 Jur. 472, 3 Exch. 748; 3 Kent, Com. 6th ed. 439; Angell, Water Courses, § 136."

In Sanderson v. Pennsylvania Coal Co. 86 Pa. 401, 27 Am. Rep. 711, it is said: "In an elaborate and carefully considered opinion in Mason v. Hill, 5 Barn. & Ad. 1, Denman, Ch. J., held that the possessor of land through which a natural stream runs has the right to the advantage of that stream flowing in its natural course, not inconsistent with a similar right in the proprietors of the land above and below; and that neither can any proprietor above diminish the quantity or injure the quality of the water, nor can any proprietor below throw back the water without his license or grant. It was one of the features of that case that the water which the defendant had the right to use, subject to the duty of returning it, was heated when it was returned to the stream, and the jury had assessed damages for that. The chief justice said, in entering judgment: 'As to the right to recover for the injury sustained by the water being returned in a heated state, there can be no question.' In Wood v. Sutcliffe, 16 Jur. 75, 8 Eng. L. & Eq. Rep. 217, an injunction was granted to restrain the defendant, against whom a recovery had been had at law, from pouring dye wares, dye liquors, madder, indigo, or potash into a channel that connected his dye works with a stream called the 'Bowling Beck,' on which, below the works, the cotton mill of the plaintiffs was situated, and in the use of the water of which they claimed prescriptive rights. 'I am satisfied from the evidence,' the vice chancellor remarked in the course of his opinion, 'that to some considerable extent the pollution of this stream is inevitable, and that no court of law, or court of equity, nor all the courts in the world, except there were a power of removing that mass of human beings which now congregate about its banks, ever could restore it to the state in which it once was. But still it does not follow, because there be a certain degree of pollution, which cannot be very accurately measured, and which is inevitable, that, therefore, everybody has a right to pollute the stream by pouring in immense quantities of filth and pollution from his own works, to make it ten thousand times worse.' "

In Greene v. Nunnenmacher, 36 Wis. 50, the following language is used: "If the plaintiff is a riparian proprietor, he has the undoubted right to enjoy the use of the waters of the river for his cattle and for domestic purposes without having their purity affected or their quality destroyed by the upper proprietor. . . . And, if this is really the situation of his premises, it needs no argument to show that, so far as he is concerned, he has the right to insist that defendants shall not foul and corrupt the waters by discharges and slops from their distillery and hog and cattle yards, so as to render the waters unfit for agricultural and domestic purposes."

In Dwight Printing Co. v. Boston, 122 Mass. 583, it is said: "The riparian proprietors higher up still retain all their common-law rights in the river, so far as they are not inconsistent with the use defined in the statute. They certainly are not prohibited from drawing water from the river for domestic purposes, or from watering cattle in it, or from cutting ice."

In Strobel v. Kerr Salt Co. 164 N. Y. 303, 51 L. R. A. 687, 79 Am. St. Rep. 643, 58 N. E. 142, it is said: "There is nothing about the case now before us to take it out of the general rules governing the rights of riparian owners. Those rules are well established in this state, and, so far as material to the case before us, are, in the absence of modification by grant or prescription, as follows: A riparian owner is entitled to a reasonable use of the water flowing by his premises in a natural stream, as an incident to his ownership of the soil, and to have it transmitted to him without sensible alteration in quality or unreasonable diminution in quantity. While he does not own the running water, he has the right to a reasonable use of it as it passes by his land. As all other owners upon the same stream have the same right, the right of no one is absolute, but is qualified by the right of the others to have the stream substantially preserved in its natural size, flow, and purity, and to protection against material diversion or pollution. This is the common right of all, which must not be interfered with by any. The use by each must, therefore, be consistent with the rights of the others, and the maxim of sic utero tuo observari by all. The rule of the ancient common law is still in force, Aqua currit et debet currere, ut currere solebat. Consumption by watering cattle, temporary detention by dams in order to run machinery, irrigation (when not out of proportion to the size of the stream) and some other familiar uses, although in fact a diversion of the water involving some loss, are not regarded as an unlawful diversion, but are allowed as a necessary incident to the use, in order to effect the highest average benefit to all the riparian owners. As the enjoyment of each must be according to his opportunity, and the upper owner has the first chance, the lower owners must submit to such loss as is caused by reasonable use. Surrounding circumstances, such as the size and velocity of the stream, the usage of the country, the extent of the injury, convenience in doing business, and the indispensable public necessity of cities and villages for drainage, are also taken into consideration; so that a use which, under certain circumstances, is held reasonable, under different circumstances would be held unreasonable. It is also material sometimes to ascertain which party first erected his works and began to appropriate the water. Clinton v. Myers, 46 N. Y. 511, 7 Am. Rep. 373; New York Rubber Co. v. Rothery, 132 N. Y. 293, 28 Am. St. Rep. 575, 30 N. E. 841; Smith v. Brooklyn, 160 N. Y. 357, 45 L. R. A. 664, 54 N. E. 787; Prentice v. Geiger, 74 N. Y. 341; Bullard v. Saratoga Victory Mfg. Co. 77 N. Y. 525, Merritt v. Brinkerhoff, 17 Johns. 306, 8 Am. Dec. 404; Crooker v. Bragg, 10 Wend. 260, 25 Am. Dec. 555; Arnold v. Foot, 12 Wend. 330; Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,312; Columbus & H. Coal & I. Co. v. Tucker, 48 Ohio St. 41, 12 L. R. A. 577, 29 Am. St. Rep. 528, 26 N. E. 630; Beach v. Sterling Iron & Zinc Co. 54 N. J. Eq. 65, 33 Atl. 286; St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tipping, 11 H. L. Cas. 642; Crossley v. Lightowler, L. R. 3 Eq. 279; Pennington v. Brinsop Hall Coal Co. L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 769; Atty. Gen. v. Coloney Hatch Lunatic Asylum, L. R. 4 Ch. 146; Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 4 Best & S. 229; 3 Kent, Com. 6th ed. 439; Gould, Waters, § 219; Higgins, Water Courses, 132; Washb. Easements, 4th ed. 215; Wood, Nuisances, 3d ed. §§ 364, 427. The question of reasonable use is generally a question of fact; but whether the undisputed facts, and the necessary inferences therefrom, establish an unreasonable use, is a question of law. When the diversion or pollution (which is treated as a form of diversion) is caused by a new and extraordinary method of using the water, hitherto unknown in the state, and such method not only permanently diverts a large quantity of water from the stream, but also renders the rest so salt at times that cattle will not drink it unless forced to by necessity, fish are destroyed in great numbers, vegetation is killed, and machinery rusted, such use, as a matter of law, is unreasonable, and entitles the lower riparian owner to relief. Where the natural and necessary result of the place selected and the method adopted by an upper riparian owner in the conduct of his business is to cause material injury to the property of an owner below, a court of equity will exercise its power to restrain on account of the inadequacy of the remedy at law, and in order to prevent a multiplicity of suits. The lower riparian owners are entitled to a fair participation in the use of the water, and their rights cannot be cut down by the convenience or necessity of the defendant's business. 'The necessities of one man's business cannot be the standard of another's rights in a thing which belongs to both.' Wheatley v. Chrisman, 24 Pa. 298, 64 Am. Dec. 657. While the courts will not overlook the needs of important manufacturing interests, nor hamper them for trifling causes, they will not permit substantial injury to a neighboring property, with a small but long-established business, for the purpose of enabling a new and great industry to flourish. They will not change the law relating to the ownership and use of property in order to accommodate a great business enterprise. According to the old and familiar rule, every man must so use his own property as not to injure that of his neighbor, and the fact that he has invested much money and employs many men in carrying on a lawful and useful business upon his own land does not change the rule, nor permit him to permanently prevent a material portion of the water of a natural stream from flowing over the land of a lower riparian owner, or to so pollute the rest of the stream as to render it unfit for ordinary use."

In Trevett v. Prison Asso. 98 Va. 332, 50 L. R. A. 564, 81 Am. St. Rep. 727, 36 S. E. 373, the following language is used: "In 1 Wood, Nuisances, 3d ed. § 427, it is said: 'The right of a riparian owner to have the water of a stream come to him in its natural purity is as well recognized as the right to have it flow to his land in its usual flow and volume. But in reference to this, as with the air, it is not every interference with the water that imparts impurities thereto that is actionable, but only such as impart to the water such impurities as substantially impair its value for the ordinary purposes of life, and render it measurably unfit for domestic purposes; or such as cause unwholesome or offensive vapors or odors to arise from the water, and thus impair the comfortable or beneficial enjoyment of property in its vicinity; or such as, while producing no actual sensible effect upon the water, are yet of a character calculated to disgust the senses, such as the deposit of the carcasses of dead animals therein, or the erection of privies over a stream, or any other use calculated to produce nausea or disgust in those using the water for the ordinary purposes of life, or such as impair its value for manufacturing purposes.' The great principle upon which the law, as thus stated, rests, is that every man must use his own property so as not to injure that of another. It is true, as urged by counsel for defendant in error, that the operation of this principle is qualified by another maxim, founded in natural law, that he who exercises only his own legal rights injures no one. The motive, good or bad, which influenced the action complained of, is generally of no importance whatever, for it is well stated by an eminent writer upon this subject that 'whatever one has a right to do another can have no right to complain of.' Cooley, Torts, § 6, p. 630. If, therefore, a lawful act is done in a lawful manner, though another may be injured by it, the law affords no remedy. It is damnum absque injuria. It was said by the court in Merrifield v. Worcester, 110 Mass. 219, 14 Am. Rep. 592: 'Cultivating and fertilizing the lands bordering on the stream, and in which are its sources, their occupation by farmhouses and other erections, will unavoidably cause impurities to be carried into the stream. As the lands are subdivided, and their occupation and use become multifarious, these causes will be rendered more operative, and their effects more perceptible. The water may thus be rendered unfit for many uses for which it had before been suitable; but, so far as that condition results only from reasonable use of the stream in accordance with the common right, the lower riparian proprietor has no remedy. When the population becomes dense, and towns or villages gather along its banks, the stream naturally and necessarily suffers still greater deterioration. Roads and streets crossing it or running by its side, with their gutters and sluices discharging into it their surface water collected from over large spaces, and carrying with it in suspension the loose and light material that is thus swept off, are abundant sources of impurity, against which the law affords no redress by action.' . . . Tracing the law from the time of Lord Coke to more recent times, the court, speaking through Judge Alvey, declares that 'all common-law authorities agree that a riparian owner has the right to the natural stream of water flowing by or through his land in its ordinary, natural state, both as to its quantity and quality, as incident to the right to the land on or through which the water course runs.' . . . 'If, therefore,' said the court, 'the defendants, being upper riparian proprietors, and as such entitled to the ordinary use of the water, including the right to apply it in a reasonable way to purposes of trade and manufacture, are using the water of the stream in an unreasonable manner, and have defiled the same in such manner and to such an extent as to operate an actual invasion of the rights of the complainants, the latter are entitled to redress by action at law, and, in case the nuisance be continued, to summary relief by injunction. What nature and extent of pollution of the stream will call for the active interference of the court is not in all cases easy to define. It is not every impurity imparted to the water, however small in degree, that will be the subject of an injunction. All running streams are, to a certain extent, polluted; and especially are they so when they flow through populous regions of country, and the waters are utilized for mechanical and manufacturing purposes. The washing of the manured and cultivated fields and the natural drainage of the country of necessity bring many impurities to the stream; but these and the like sources of pollution cannot ordinarily be restrained by the court. Therefore, when we speak of the right of each riparian proprietor to have the water of a natural stream flow through his land in its natural purity, those descriptive terms must be understood in a comparative sense, as no proprietor does receive, nor can he reasonably expect to receive, the water in a state of entire purity. But any use that materially fouls and adulterates the water, or the deposit or discharge therein of any filthy or noxious substance that so far affects the water as to impair its value for the ordinary purposes of life, will be deemed a violation of the rights of the lower riparian proprietor, and for which he will be entitled to redress. Anything that renders the water less wholesome than when in its ordinary natural state, or which renders it offensive to taste or smell, or that is naturally calculated to excite disgust in those using the water for the ordinary purposes of life, will constitute a nuisance, and for the restraint of which a court of equity will interpose."

In Gehlen Bros. v. Knorr, 101 Iowa, 700, 36 L. R. A. 697, 63 Am. St. Rep. 416, 70 N. W. 75, it is said: "We need only consider, then, what the law is as to the rights of riparian owners to the use of the waters of a non-navigable stream for artificial purposes. Some general propositions may well be stated. The law is that as to such use, and in the absence of superior rights acquired by license, grant, or prescription, the rights of such proprietors in the water of the stream are equal. Willis v. Perry, 92 Iowa, 297, 26 L. R. A. 124, 60 N. W. 729. It tollows, therefore, that the defendants had the right to use the water reasonably, having reference to plaintiffs' rights therein. Washb. Easements, p. 379. Broadly stated, the general rule is that the owner of the land through which a stream of water runs has a right to have it flow over his land in the natural channel, undiminished in quantity, and unimpaired in quality, except in so far as diminution or contamination is inseparable from a reasonable use of such water. Willis v. Perry, 92 Iowa, 297, 26 L. R. A. 124, 60 N. W. 729; Ferguson v. Firmenich Mfg. Co. 77 Iowa, 578, 14 Am. St. Rep. 319, 42 N. W. 448; Spence v. McDonough, 77 Iowa, 462, 42 N. W. 371; 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 948; Elliot v. Fitchburg R. Co. 10 Cush. 191, 57 Am. Dec. 85, notes; Moulton v. Newburyport Water Co. 137 Mass. 163; Garwood v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 83 N. Y. 400, 38 Am. Rep. 452; Brookville & M. Hydraulic Co. v. Butler, 91 Ind. 138, 46 Am. Rep. 580; Heilbron v. Fowler Switch Canal Co. 75 Cal. 426, 7 Am. St. Rep. 183, 17 Pac. 535; Dumont v. Kellogg, 29 Mich. 420, 18 Am. Rep. 102; Union Mill & Min. Co. v. Dangberg, 2 Sawy. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 14,370; Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,312; Bullard v. Saratoga Victory Mfg. Co. 77 N. Y. 530; Palmer v. Mulligan, 3 Caines, 307, 2 Am. Dec. 270; Davis v. Getchell, 50 Me. 602, 79 Am. Dec. 636, note; Wadsworth v. Tillotson, 15 Conn. 366, 39 Am. Dec. 391; Haskins v. Haskins, 9 Gray, 390; Snow v. Parsons, 28 Vt. 459, 67 Am. Dec. 723; Springfield v. Harris, 4 Allen, 494, 81 Am. Dec. 715; Red River Roller Mills v. Wright, 20 Minn. 249, 44 Am. Rep. 194, 15 N. W. 167. No statement can be made as to what is such reasonable use which will, without variation or qualification, apply to the facts of every case. But in determining whether a use is reasonable we must consider what the use is for; its extent, duration, necessity, and its application; the nature and size of the stream, and the several uses to which it is put; the extent of the injury to the one proprietor and of the benefit to the other; and all other facts which may bear upon the reasonableness of the use. Red River Roller Mills v. Wright, 30 Minn. 249, 44 Am. Rep. 194, 15 N. W. 167, and cases cited; Washb. Easements, p. 379. Now, while one riparian proprietor may not divert the water of a stream so as to deprive a lower proprietor on the same stream of the benefit thereof, such upper proprietor may reasonably detain the water for proper purposes. Washb. Easements, p. 380; Brookville & M. Hydraulic Co. v. Butler, 91 Ind. 138, 46 Am. Rep. 580; 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 955; Gould, Waters, § 213; Angell, Water Courses, §§ 90-96; Gillett v. John- son, 30 Conn. 180. The doctrine that such use by the upper proprietor may result in diminishing the quantity of water which will go down the stream, and may affect the current by retarding the flow to a reasonable extent, and still be consistent with the existence of a common right, was early held in this country, and has been constantly adhered to. Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,312; Dumont v. Kellogg, 29 Mich. 420, 18 Am. Rep. 102; Bullard v. Saratoga Victory Mfg. Co. 77 N. Y. 530; Eidemiller Ice Co. v. Guthrie, 42 Neb. 238, 28 L. R. A. 581, 60 N. W. 717; Gould, Waters, § 191; Palmer v. Mulligan. 3 Caines, 307, 2 Am. Dec. 270; Davis v. Getchell, 50 Me. 602, 79 Am. Dec. 636, note; Van Hoesen v. Coventry, 10 Barb. 518; Oregon Iron Co. v. Trullenger, 3 Or. 1; 3 Kent, Com. 6th ed. p. 439; Keency & W. Mfg. Co. v. Union Mfg. Co. 39 Conn. 577; Timm v. Bear, 29 Wis. 254; Whaler v. Ahl, 29 Pa. 98; Gould v. Boston Duck Co. 13 Gray, 442. If the general rule that each riparian proprietor is entitled to the flow of the stream according to its natural course, without interruption or diminution, should be strictly adhered to, it would result in a virtual abrogation of the well-settled doctrine that the rights of all proprietors of the stream are equal, and would 'preclude the use of flowing waters in most cases; as, where power is desired, the rule must yield to the necessity of gathering the water into reservoirs. It is lawful to do this where it is done in good faith, for a useful purpose, and with as little interference with the rights of other proprietors as is reasonably practical under the circumstances.' Cooley, Torts, 1st ed. p. 584; Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,312. In Dumont v. Kellogg, 29 Mich. 420, 18 Am. Rep. 102, it was held, in an action by a mill proprietor against one having a mill and dam above him on the same stream, for damages caused by detention of the water, that it could not be said that such upper proprietor had no right to use the water to the prejudice of such lower proprietor; nor could it be held that such upper proprietor could not lawfully divert any of the water which would otherwise flow down the stream. The court said the real question was 'whether, under all the circumstances of the case, the use of the water by one is reasonable and consistent with a correspondent enjoyment of right by the other.'

In Dumont v. Kellogg, 29 Mich. 420, 18 Am. Rep. 102, Justice Cooley, speaking for the court, said: "But as between two proprietors, neither of whom has acquired superior rights to the other, it cannot be said that one 'has no right to use the water to the prejudice of the proprietor below him,' or that he cannot lawfully 'diminish the quantity which would descend to the proprietor below,' or that 'he must so use the water as not materially to affect the application of the water below, or materially diminish its quantity.' Such a rule would be, in effect, this: That the lower proprietor must be allowed the enjoyment of his full common-law rights as such, not diminished, restrained, or in any manner limited or qualified by the rights of the upper proprietor, and must receive the water in its natural state, as if no proprietorship above him existed. Such a rule could not be the law so long as equality of right between the several proprietors was recognized, for it is manifest it would give to the lower proprietor superior advantages over the upper, and in many cases give him in effect a monopoly of the stream. Cases may unquestionably be found in which the rule of law is laid down as broadly as it was given by the circuit judge in this case, but an examination of them will show, either that the facts were essentially different, or that the general language was qualified by the context. Thus the language employed in the first instruction as above given seems to have been quoted from Lord Tenterden to Mason v. Hill, 3 Barn. & Ad. 312. But there it had reference to a case of diversion of water, and was strictly accurate and appropriate. The same language, substantially, is made use of in Twiss v. Baldwin, 9 Conn. 291; Wadsworth v. Tillotson, 15 Conn. 373, 39 Am. Dec. 391; Arnold v. Foot, 12 Wend. 331, and probably in many other cases, and is adopted by Chancellor Kent in his Commentaries, vol. 3, 6th ed. p. 439. See also Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 208; Agawam Canal Co. v. Edwards, 36 Conn. 497; Williams v. Morland, 2 Barn. & C. 913; Mason v. Hill, 5 Barn. & Ad. 1; Tillotson v. Smith, 32 N. H. 95, 64 Am. Dec. 355. But, as between different proprietors on the same stream, the right of each qualifies that of the other, and the question always is, not merely whether the lower proprietor suffers damage by the use of the water above him, nor whether the quantity flowing on is diminished by the use, but whether, under all the circumstances of the case, the use of the water by one is reasonable, and consistent with a correspondent enjoyment of right by the other. 'Each proprietor is entitled to such use of the stream, so far as it is reasonable, conformable to the usages and wants of the community, and having regard to the progress of improvement in hydraulic works, and not inconsistent with a like reasonable use by the other proprietors of land on the same stream above and below.' Shaw, Ch. J., in Cary v. Daniels,

8 Met. 477, 41 Am. Dec. 532. 'The common use of the water of a stream by persons having mills above is frequently, if not generally, attended with damage and loss to the mills below; but that is incident to that common use, and for the most part unavoidable. If the injury is trivial, the law will not afford redress, because every person who builds a mill does it subject to this contingency. The person owning an upper mill on the same stream has a lawful right to use the water, and may apply it, in order to work his mills to the best advantage, subject, however, to this limitation: That if, in the exercise of this right, and in consequence of it, the mills lower down the stream are rendered useless and unproductive, the law in that case will interpose and limit this common right so that the owners of the lower mills shall enjoy a fair participation.' Woodworth, J., in Merritt v. Brinkerhoff, 17 Johns. 321, 8 Am. Dec. 404. It is a fair participation and a reasonable use by each that the law seeks to protect. Such interruption in the flow 'as is necessary and unavoidable by the reasonable and proper use of the mill privilege above,' cannot be the subject of an action. Chandler v. Howland, 7 Gray, 350, 66 Am. Dec. 487. And see Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353; Hetrich v. Deachler, 6 Pa. 32; Hartzell v. Sill, 12 Pa. 248; Pitts v. Lancaster Mills, 13 Met. 156; Bliss v. Kennedy, 43 Ill. 68."

It is very clear from these cases that the lower proprietor has no superior right to the upper one, and may not say to him that, because the lower proprietor wants to use the water for drinking purposes only, the upper proprietor may not use the water for any other purpose. Each proprietor has an equal right to the use of the stream for the ordinary purposes of the house and farm, even though such use may in some degree lessen the volume of the stream, or affect the purity of the water. Hazeltine v. Case, 46 Wis. 391, 32 Am. Rep. 715, 1 N.

W. 66; Ulbricht v. Eufaula Water Co. 86 Ala. 587, 4 L. R. A. 572, 11 Am. St. Rep. 72, 6 So. 78; Lewis, Em. Dom. § 65. This right is not affected by the fact that the lower proprietor is a municipality instead of an individual. Smith v. Rochester, 92 N. Y. 463, 44 Am. Rep. 393; Haupt's Appeal, 125 Pa. 211, 3 L. R. A. 536, 17 Atl. 436. It is not believed a case can be found where, out of deference to the rights of the lower riparian proprietor, it is made unlawful for the upper proprietor to make such reasonable and ordinary use of the water passing over his land as was made by the respondent in this case.

It is insisted by the people that under police power, it was competent to forbid any act on the part of the upper proprietor that would tend to impair the public health. It may be conceded that the police power of the state is very broad, but our attention has not been called to any principle of law, or to any case, the practical application of which will enable a village, city, or other municipality, for the purpose of obtaining a water supply, to prevent the ordinary and reasonable use of the waters of an inland lake or stream by an upper riparian proprietor, without the exercise of the right of eminent domain or without compensation.

In what we have said we do not mean to intimate that an upper proprietor may convert his property into a summer resort, and invite large numbers of people to his premises for purposes of bathing, and give them the right possessed only by the riparian owner and his family. We are undertaking to decide only the case which is presented here. Upon the record as made, we think the court should have directed a verdict in favor of respondent.

The conviction is reversed, and a new trial ordered.

Hooker, Ch. J., Grant and Montgomery, JJ., concur. Long, J., did not sit.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

Alexander M. WHITE, Respt.,
v.

NASSAU TRUST COMPANY, Exr., etc., of William M. Tebo, Deceased, Appt.

(168 N. Y. 149.)

1. The state alone can take advantage

NOTE.—Right to remove lateral support by dredging water bed.

From the shifting and unstable character of the deposits forming the beds of many of the navigable bodies of water, and the fact that a removal of a portion of such deposits may at any time become necessary for the improvement of a failure, by its grantee of lands under tide water, to fill them in as required by the terms of the grant.
64 L. R. A.

2. The owners of a pier, having obtained from the state a grant of the adjacent land under water, may dredge it away to any proper depth to make it commercially useful, without liability to the owner of a neighboring pier which subsides be-of navigation, or the construction of docks, the question, What rule with respect to lateral support governs? is an important one, although it is one which has not as yet received much consideration by the courts. WHITE v. NASSAU TRUST CO., in applying to the water bed the same rule as is applicable to the upland, appears to have adopted the only rule which is cause of the slipping of the intervening state lands towards the excavation.

3. No duty of lateral support which the owner of land under tide water owes to adjoining land extends to piers which may have been placed on such land.
4. The doctrine of lateral support has no application to lands under tide waters which have been granted by the state for the advancement of commerce.

(Height and Werner, JJ., dissent.)

(October 1, 1901.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Second Department, affirming a judgment of a Special Term for Kings County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for injuries to plaintiff's wharf by excavation in near-by waters. Reversed.

Statement by Gray, J.:

This action was brought to recover damages for injuries to plaintiff's wharf alleged to have been caused by the wrongful and unlawful acts of the defendant's testator in dredging beneath the waters adjacent to said wharf. The plaintiff is the owner of lands fronting on New York bay, in the borough of Brooklyn, at the intersection of the southerly line of Twenty-Fourth street with the waters of the bay. He is also the owner of a pier extending from high-water mark at Twenty-Fourth street into the bay for a distance of over 1,500 feet. This pier is constructed of timber cribs sunken in the mud, and filled with stones and earth. Defendant's testator was also the owner of lands fronting on said bay, between Twenty-Third and Twenty-Fourth streets, upon a portion of which there was a pier similar to that of the plaintiff, and extending into the bay about the same distance. These two piers were separated by a slip or channel 123 feet in width. By a grant from the state, defendant's testator became the owner of 93 feet in width of the land adjacent to this pier in this channel, which left a strip of 30 feet in width next to plaintiff's pier. The southerly line of the lands owned by the de-practicable. Under this rule, one who is acting within the limits of his rights is not liable for injuries to improvements by dredging away a portion of the water bed so that the adjoining land shifts, carrying improvements with it. But it is to be observed that the one causing the injury must act within the limits of his rights. Thus, it has been held that, if a municipal corporation, not for the purpose of improving navigation, nor for any other proper purpose, but to construct a settling basin for use in connection with its sewer system, dredges the bottom of the river to such an extent that the adjoining land shifts, carrying with it the foundations of a building belonging to a private owner, it will be liable for the injuries thereby caused to him. Pomroy v. Granger, 18 R. I. 624, 29 Atl. 690.

A difference in opinion as to whether defendant in the case of WHITS V. NASSAU TRUST CO. was acting within the limits of his rights accounts for the difference of opinion between the appellate division of the supreme court and the court of appeals. The lower court decided against the one making the excavation on the ground that he had extended his excavation to land of the state, and therefore was a wrongdoer acting without authority, and was liable for all the consequences of his wrongful act. The court of appeals disposes of this theory by the statement that negligence would not be presumed, and "our assumption must be that the excavation beyond Tebo's boundary line was accidental, or without any intention to prejudice the plaintiff in any of his rights." And the court then proceeds to decide the case by the application of the rule of lateral support. The two courts are, therefore, not necessarily in conflict as to the law, but merely as to the facts. If defendant was a wrongdoer a different rule would, of course, be applicable than in case he was acting within his rights, and the injury was the result of accident.

64 L. R. A.

The rule exempting the one making the excavation from liability applies only so far as the injury is done to structures on the bed, or on the adjoining land, so that the injury may have been increased by the weight of the improvement. If because of excavations the land itself is made to shift when in an unimproved state, the one doing the work is liable for the injury done. Therefore, if one excavates sand on the seashore in front of his property to such an extent that by the law of gravitation or of wave motion it results in the removal of adjoining soil, and the removal of this soil exposes the property of a third person to the action of the ocean, the excavator is liable for the results of his excavating, if they are the reasonable and proximate consequences of his act; and an injunction will issue restraining him from making further excavations. Murray v. Pannach, 64 N. J. Eq. 147, 53 Atl. 595.

While there is no easement of lateral support for buildings, the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas, applies in such cases; so that one who undertakes to excavate a dock on his own property adjoining piers belonging to a third person on which buildings are erected is bound to exercise ordinary care and skill in doing the work; and, if he negligently and improperly performs the work, and, through such negligence and want of caution, the buildings on the adjoining pier are injured, he will be liable to make compensation therefor. Austin v. Hudson River R. Co. 25 N. Y. 334.

And if the adjoining owner excavates the soil in such a way as to undermine a pier, he will be liable for the injury; and the remainderman, on succeeding to the estate in fee in the wharf, may, on the falling in of one of the walls of the wharf, maintain an action against an adjoining owner for so digging in his soil as to undermine it, although the undermining occurred before he succeeded to the estate in fee. Gillon v. Boddington, 1 Car. & P. 541, Ryan & M. 161.

H. P. F.

defendant's testator was the center line of Twenty-Fourth street extended. The plaintiff's northerly boundary was the southerly line of Twenty-Fourth street extended. The strip of land 30 feet in width between said two lines remained in the ownership of the state. The natural depth of the water in the slip between the two piers varied from 3 to 10 feet. In 1888 the defendant's testator dredged the part of the slip owned by him to a depth of about 13 feet, without causing any injury to plaintiff's pier. In 1893, for the purpose of constructing a dry dock, he dredged his portion of the slip, for a distance of several hundred feet from high-water mark, to a depth of 26 feet. During a part of the time while the work was in progress the dredge used in excavating was so placed that the lateral sweep of the "scoop" removed a considerable portion of the mud of the bed of the land owned by the state. As a result of this part of the dredging, the soil between the excavation and the plaintiff's pier fell or slid into the hole which had been made, and this caused a part of the latter's pier to sink away for some distance of its length. These facts were, in substance, found by the trial court, and are not in dispute. The plaintiff recovered a judgment for the cost of restoration of his pier, and that judgment has been unanimously affirmed by the appellate division, in the second department.

Messrs. Bergen & Dykman, for appellant:

At common law, and as riparian owner, and without any grant of lands under water, Mr. Tebo could project from his upland a pier for the purposes of commerce.

Buffalo v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 39 N. Y. Supp. 4; Rumsey v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 133 N. Y. 79, 15 L. R. A. 618, 28 Am. St. Rep. 600, 30 N. E. 654; Sage v. New York, 154 N. Y. 61, 38 L. R. A. 606, 61 Am. St. Rep. 592, 47 N. E. 1096.

The right to dredge alongside a wharf projected from the upland is necessary to the full enjoyment of the right to build the wharf.

The judgment should not be affirmed because of defendant's failure to prop up the plaintiff's pier.

Panton v. Holland, 17 Johns. 92, 8 Am. Dec. 369; Lasala v. Holbrook, 4 Paige, 169, 25 Am. Dec. 524.

The plaintiff had no right to have the structure he had erected on the confines of his land receive lateral support from the adjoining lands under water parcel of the bed of the sea.

Hendricks v. Spring Valley Min. & Irrig. Co. 58 Cal. 190, 41 Am. Rep. 257. 64 L. R. A.

The upland rule as to lateral support forbids this recovery.

If the damage to the lands is not appreciable there can be no recovery for the damage done to the buildings.

Gilmore v. Driscoll, 122 Mass. 199, 23 Am. Rep. 312; Smith v. Thackerah, L. R. 1 C. P. 564; Thurston v. Hancock, 12 Mass. 223, 7 Am. Dec. 57; Foley v. Wyeth, 2 Allen, 131, 79 Am. Dec. 771; Panton v. Holland, 17 Johns. 92, 8 Am. Dec. 369; Lasala v. Holbrook, 4 Paige, 169, 25 Am. Dec. 524; Farrand v. Marshall, 19 Barb. 380; Hay v. Cohoes Co. 2 N. Y. 159, 51 Am. Dec. 279; Radcliff v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 195, 53 Am. Dec. 357.

Messrs. Moore, Wallace, & Dudley, for respondent:

Mr. Tebo dug beyond the boundaries of his own premises.

This fact was alleged and proved; it was found by the trial justice, and the finding was unanimously approved by the appellate division. It is therefore not open to question in this court.

Harroun v. Brush Electric Light Co. 152 N. Y. 212, 38 L. R. A. 615, 46 N. E. 291; Consolidated Ice Co. v. New York, 166 N. Y. 97, 59 N. E. 713.

The privilege of the owner of land to excavate upon it, even though in doing so he may injure his neighbor's building upon adjoining land, is based upon the right of a man to do what he wishes with his own property, though even this right is limited and not absolute. Beyond the limits of the land owned by him, there is no reason for such a privilege, and the right to excavate does not exist except it be given by legislative or other proper authority.

Booth v. Rome, W. & O. Terminal R. Co. 140 N. Y. 275, 24 L. R. A. 105, 37 Am. St. Rep. 555, 35 N. E. 592; Farrand v. Marshall, 19 Barb. 380, 21 Barb. 409; Mairs v. Manhattan Real Estate Asso. 89 N. Y. 498; Sullivan v. Dunham, 161 N. Y. 290, 47 L. R. A. 715, 76 Am. St. Rep. 274, 55 N. E. 923; Smith v. Thackerah, L. R. 1 C. P. 564; Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Cas. 503; Darley Main Colliery Co. v. Mitchell, 55 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 529; Cabot v. Kingman, 166 Mass. 403, 33 L. R. A. 45, 44 N. E. 344.

Mr. Tebo disturbed the natural boundary of the sea, admitted it upon his land, allowed it to escape from his land and to enter upon adjacent land, and subjected the plaintiff's land to the action of the sea and its tides. He was liable for damage caused thereby, upon a principle analogous to that applied in cases of interference with running water.

Pisley v. Clark, 35 N. Y. 520, 91 Am. Dec. 72; Hartshorn v. Chaddock, 135 N. Y. 116, 17 L. R. A. 426, 31 N. E. 997; Covert v.

Cranford, 141 N. Y. 521, 38 Am. St. Rep. 826, 36 N. E. 597; Mears v. Dole, 135 Mass. 508.

Gray, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

I think this judgment should not stand. The question in the case is whether Tebo, the defendant's testator, in dredging out the slip by his pier, could become liable to the plaintiff for any damage occasioned by the latter's neighboring pier by reason of the soil upon which it stood subsiding or falling away into the excavation made by the dredging. There is no finding that the dredging was negligently performed, although it is found that the dredge, in its operation, excavated a portion of the state land intervening between Tebo's slip and the plaintiff's pier. Negligence will not be presumed, and our assumption must be that the excavation beyond Tebo's boundary line was accidental, or without any intention to prejudice the plaintiff in any of his rights. The theory upon which the plaintiff's right to recover has been upheld is that the plaintiff had an easement of lateral support in the adjacent land, and that it was the defendant's duty to protect the plaintiff's pier by preserving to it what lateral support there had been. I entertain the gravest doubt that the common-law rule thus invoked has its proper application to the case of land under the waters of the sea. The differing circumstances and the interests of the state incline me to the view that it should not be applied. But, if we should assume that it might apply, still, in my opinion, the plaintiff made out no right to recover damages. Tebo's wrongdoing, if any there was, consisted in the fact that he excavated the sea bottom by his dredge to a depth which, by force of natural laws, drew into it the soft and plastic mud upon the adjacent and intervening land of the state, with the consequence that the plaintiff's pier, losing some of its previous support, yielded and sank. Tebo, as riparian owner, had the common-law right, as against all but the state, to have his access to the navigable part of the waters in front of his upland, and, by grant from the state, the lands under water, between high and low water mark, became his for their appropriation to the purposes of commerce, by the erection of a dock or docks thereon. He constructed a pier out from high-water mark, and a slip, by which it could be availed of for commercial uses. By the legislation of 1873 and 1884 (chapters 702 and 491), the owners of real estate in that locality, fronting on the water, were authorized to fill in the lands under water to exterior bulkhead and pier lines. That, however, 64 L. R. A.

did not affect the right of Tebo to maintain the pier. It was a permission from the state, and not a command. He was under no obligation to destroy the pier property. There is no question here upon his grant, or of his compliance with its conditions. If the grant to Tebo is to be construed as requiring the grantee to fill in the lands under water, and a failure to do so has entailed a forfeiture of the grant, that is a question which the state alone can raise, in a proper action. Having, then, an apparent right to maintain his pier it would seem to follow that he had a clear right to dredge out the slip alongside the pier to any proper depth to make it commercially useful, and of the purposes of commerce the maintenance of a dry dock is certainly no inconsiderable one. A slip with water of sufficient depth to float vessels was a necessary incident to the pier. Not only had Tebo the general right to dredge his slip to the extent necessary to make it commercially useful, but the duty rested upon him by statute, as a pier owner, to properly dredge the adjoining slip. Laws 1860, chap. 254, § 4. If it is an admissible legal proposition that he owed a duty to the plaintiff to protect him in the enjoyment of an easement of lateral support to his pier in the adjacent land, it was, at most, one which regarded the land itself, and not the structure upon it. Tebo had a right to excavate upon his lands, and the limitation upon that right, if we are to apply the common-law rule referred to, was that it should be without injury to the adjacent land in its natural state. If that land had been burdened by the owner with some improvement, that fact gave to him no right to claim any greater easement of lateral support. This rule should be regarded as settled by the decisions of the courts of this state. Lasala v. Holbrook, 4 Paige, 169, 25 Am. Dec. 524; Farrand v. Marshall, 19 Barb. 380, Affirmed in 21 Barb. 409; Dorrity v. Rapp, 72 N. Y. 307; Booth v. Rome, W. & O. Terminal R. Co. 140 N. Y. 267, 24 L. R. A. 105, 37 Am. St. Rep. 552, 35 N. E. 592. And see Washb. Easements, 4th ed. pp. 585, 586. The courts in Massachusetts at an earlier day had declared this rule in Thurston v. Hancock, 12 Mass. 223, 7 Am. Dec. 57; and in Gilmore v. Driscoll, 122 Mass. 199, 23 Am. Dec. 312, it was mentioned as a rule which had the weight of American authority, a number of cases being cited. The situation here was that all these lands under water, in question, being part of the bed of the Bay of New York, consisted of mud, which, having no consistency, would subside or fall away, with any change effected in the level of the adjacent sea bottom, and to that result the weight of the pier would naturally contribute. There is no finding that the pier did not increase the lateral pressure upon the adjacent land, and therefore the natural presumption may be indulged, under the circumstances, that it did. It is plain that no appreciable damage could have been done to the plaintiff's land. In its natural state, it was soft mud. Its withdrawal or subsidence would ordinarily be of advantage in the deepening of the water. Its subsidence, in the nature of things, must have happened, and it is only by considering the effect upon the superstructure of the pier that we get at the damage to the plaintiff. But, within the rule of law as it has been declared in England and in this state, that could not give rise to a cause of action. Smith v. Thackerah, L. R. 1 C. P. 564; Lasala v. Holbrook, 4 Paige, 169, 25 Am. Dec. 524; Booth v. Rome, W. & O. Terminal R. Co. 140 N. Y. 275, 24 L. R. A. 108, 37 Am. St. Rep. 556, 35 N. E. 594. As it was observed by Judge Andrews in the Booth Case, in speaking of the rule as applying only to lands in their natural condition, and as not extending so as to give to the owner of a building the right to a lateral support, there was in this case "damage, but no wrong, because what was done by the adjacent owner was in the lawful and permitted use of his own property." In dredging out his slip, Tebo was in the lawful exercise of his property rights, and, as that which resulted to the plaintiff's lands was not a damage of any appreciable nature, he cannot be rendered liable because the plaintiff's pier sank with the subsidence of its plastic bed. This is the result which I reach upon the theory that the common-law rule of lateral support is applicable. But, as I have suggested, it cannot reasonably be applicable to such conditions. Applied to the land, as it is usually owned, it can be seen to have its reasonable operation upon the relative obligations of adjacent landowners; but I am quite unable to see how it had any relevancy to the case of lands under water, where the tide ebbs and flows, whose ownership is in the state, in trust for the benefit of the people, and which are granted by the state for the advancement of its commerce.

Then, in my opinion, there is a further view to be taken of this question from the standpoint of the state. While the grant was obtained by Tebo for his private advantage, nevertheless it was made by the state, primarily, in pursuance of a policy to benefit the municipality by the improvement of its harbor, and therefore to advantage, to that extent, the commonwealth. Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 129. It contemplated a development of the subject of the grant by the grantee, in a direction that would promote the purposes of commerce. As I have before observed, the question is not here as to whether Tebo has complied with the conditions of the grant. If he has not, that is for the state to assert. If it shall be held in this case that the owner of lands lying under the waters of the sea cannot deepen or improve them for commercial purposes without incurring a possible liability to an adjacent owner by reason of the effect upon his structures of the shifting of the loose soil or mud upon which they were insufficiently rested, or if he is legally bound to anticipate such a result and to make exertions to protect all such adjacent structures, the precedent must militate against the free and effective operation of the policy of the state, as it would tend to impose a more or less onerous burden upon the riparian proprietor in the exercise of his right to develop his water properties. The deepening by Tebo of his slip was to make it available to vessels entering from the public highway of the sea. As long as he elected not to avail himself of the permission to fill in his lands under water, they remained a part of the Bay of New York; and that was, too, the case with those intervening between his property and the plaintiff's, and which still remained in the ownership of the state. It was Tebo's right, and it was the interest of the state, that he should make use of his water properties for purposes of commerce; and no restrictions upon that right should be countenanced by the courts, which interfere with its lawful exercise, unless they can be seen to be based upon some rule of property of clear and obvious application in such cases.

For these reasons, I think the judgment should be reversed, and a new trial ordered; costs to abide event.

Parker, Ch. J., and Bartlett, Martin, and Vann, JJ., concur.

Haight and Werner, JJ., dissent.

Motion for reargument denied November 26, 1901.

Re Transfer Tax upon Property Transferred by Laura Astor DELANO, Deceased.

(176 N. Y. 486.)

The power to tax the exercise of a power of appointment by will is not destroyed by the fact that the power of appointment was created by deed prior to the passage of the statute providing for the tax.

(O'Brien and Werner, JJ., dissent.)

(November 24, 1903.)

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to taxation of a transfer under a power of appointment, see Re Stewart, 14 L. R. A. 836, and Re Dowd, 52 L. R. A. 433.

A PPEAL by the State Comptroller from an order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, reversing an order of the Surrogate for New York County denying the application of Arthur Astor Carey to have proceedings to assess a transfer tax dismissed as to him. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George M. Judd with Mr. Edward H. Fallows, for appellant:

The taxation of a transfer of property passing under and by virtue of the exercise of a power of appointment has been sustained by this court.

Re Vanderbilt, 163 N. Y. 597, 57 N. E. 1127, Affirming 50 App. Div. 246, 63 N. Y. Supp. 1079; Re Dows, 167 N. Y. 227, 52 L. R. A. 433, 88 Am. St. Rep. 509, 60 N. E. 439; Re McPherson, 104 N. Y. 306, 58 Am. Rep. 502, 10 N. E. 685.

The property over which Laura Astor Delano by her last will and testament exercised the power of appointment granted her under certain deeds of 1848 and 1849 is subject to the provisions contained in said subdivision 5 of § 220 of the tax law.

Re Seaver, 63 App. Div. 283, 71 N. Y. Supp. 544; Re Walkorth, 66 App. Div. 171, 72 N. Y. Supp. 984; Re Potter, 51 App. Div. 212, 64 N. Y. Supp. 1013.

Mr. Lucius H. Beers, with Messrs. Roosevelt & Kobbe, for respondent:

Where a doubt arises as to the construction of the transfer tax act, that doubt "should be resolved in favor of the taxpayer, and against the taxing power."

Re Enston, 113 N. Y. 174, sub nom. People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, 21 N. E. 87; Re Fayerweather, 143 N. Y. 114, 38 N. E. 278; Re Vassar, 127 N. Y. 1, 27 N. E. 394; Re Stewart, 131 N. Y. 274, 14 L. R. A. 836, 30 N. E. 184; Re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709, 32 N. E. 1096.

The transfer tax is a tax upon succession; that is, upon only such a class of transfers as are caused by the death of the person who has been the owner of the property.

Re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709, 32 N. E. 1096; Re Merriam, 141 N. Y. 479, 36 N. E. 505; Re Hoffman, 143 N. Y. 327, 38 N. E. 311; Re Vanderbilt, 172 N. Y. 69, 64 N. E. 782.

The legislature either did not intend to make the transfer-tax law retroactive, or, where that intention has been apparent, provisions to that effect are unconstitutional.

Re Pell, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L. R. A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789.

The amendment of 1897 does not apply to powers created by instruments which went into effect prior to the passage of the act. That amendment does not apply to cases 64 L. R. A.

where the power to appoint was created by a deed, unless the deed was one made in contemplation of the death of the grantor.

People ex rel. Mason v. McClave, 99 N. Y. 83, 1 N. E. 235.

The surrogate's court has no jurisdiction to assess a tax upon the property originally transferred by the deeds of 1848 and 1849.

Re Enston, 113 N. Y. 174, sub nom. People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, 21 N. E. 87; Re Vassar, 127 N. Y. 1, 27 N. E. 394; Re Stewart, 131 N. Y. 274, 14 L. R. A. 836, 30 N. E. 184; Re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709, 32 N. E. 1096; Re Fayerweather, 143 N. Y. 114, 38 N. E. 278; Re Smith, 40 App. Div. 481, 58 N. Y. Supp. 128; Re Cramer, 56 App. Div. 479, 67 N. Y. Supp. 795; Re Fitch, 160 N. Y. 87, 54 N. E. 701; Re Embury, 19 App. Div. 214, 45 N. Y. Supp. 881, Affirmed in 154 N. Y. 746, 49 N. E. 1096.

The amendment of 1897 did not impose a succession tax.

Re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L. R. A. 709, 32 N. E. 1096; Re Sherman, 153 N. Y. 1, 46 N. E. 1032; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41-56, 44 L. ed. 969-976, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283-289, 42 L. ed. 1037-1041, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625-628, 41 L. ed. 287, 288, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073.

If the amendment of 1897 imposed a tax on the respondent's property, it impaired the obligation of a contract made before the tax law was adopted, and is therefore unconstitutional.

Root v. Stuyvesant, 18 Wend. 257; Re Pell, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L. R. A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789; Re Vanderbilt, 172 N. Y. 69, 64 N. E. 782.

The remaindermen under the deeds of 1848 and 1849 held under contracts which were made when those deeds were delivered, and their rights under those contracts could not be impaired or abridged by subsequent statute.

3 Parsons, Contr. 7th ed. p. 481; Varick v. Briggs, 22 Wend. 543; Van Rensselaer v. Bull, 19 N. Y. 100; People ex rel. Reynolds v. Buffalo, 140 N. Y. 300, 37 Am. St. Rep. 563, 35 N. E. 485; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87-136, 3 L. ed. 162-177; Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 445, 24 L. ed. 760, 763; Forster v. Scott, 136 N. Y. 577, 18 L. R. A. 543, 32 N. E. 976.

Vann, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal presents the question whether the legislature is prohibited by the Constitution, state or Federal, from passing an act to impose a transfer tax upon the exercise by a last will and testament of a power of appointment derived from a deed executed before the passage of any statute imposing a tax upon the right of succession to the property of a decedent. The facts out of which this question arose are as follows: On the 30th of September, 1848, William B. Astor owned a house and lot on Lafayette place, in the city of New York, and on that day he conveyed the same to his daughter Mrs. Laura Delano for life, and upon her death without issue to her brothers and her sister Alida, or their issue, as they might then survive, per stirpes. By the same deed he conferred upon Mrs. Delano a power of appointment, to be exercised, in her discretion, by an instrument "in its nature testamentary," in such a manner as "to give the said land and premises, or any share or part thereof, to and amongst her said . . . brothers and sister Alida, or their issue, in such manner and proportions as she may appoint." On the 6th of September, 1894, said William B. Astor transferred certificates of the public debt of the state of Ohio, amounting to $50,000, to James Gallatin and another, in trust to receive the income and apply it to the use of his daughter Laura during her life, and upon her death without issue to transfer "the capital of the said stock . . . to her surviving brothers and sister Alida," or their issue then surviving. This gift was also subject to a power of appointment created by the trust deed, whereby the said Laura was authorized "by any instrument duly executed as a will of personal estate to dispose of said capital into and amongst her . . . brothers, sister, and their issue in such shares and proportions as she may think fit and upon such limitations, by way of trust or otherwise, as in her discretion may be lawfully devised." William B. Astor died on the 24th of November, 1875, about twenty-six years after the date of the last deed, and neither of said instruments was made by him in contemplation of death. Mrs. Delano, his daughter, died June 15, 1902, without issue, leaving a last will and testament, which has been duly admitted to probate, whereby she exercised the power of appointment contained in said deeds in favor of Arthur Astor Carey, her nephew. A proceeding was commenced before the proper surrogate to make the usual appraisal for the purpose of assessing a transfer tax upon the property transferred and appointed by the last will and testament of Mrs. Delano, and Mr. Carey was notified to appear. He appeared only for the purpose of objecting to the jurisdiction of the surrogate, from whom he procured an order requiring the executors of Mrs. Delano and the comptroller of the state to show cause why the proceeding should not be dismissed as to him for the want of jurisdiction. The surrogate denied the motion, but upon appeal to the appellate division his order was reversed, and the proceeding was dismissed as to Mr. Carey. The comptroller appealed to this court.

Article 10 of the tax law relates to taxable transfers, and embraces §§ 220 to 242, inclusive (Laws 1896, pp. 868-881, chap. 908). Section 220, as amended in 1897, imposes a tax upon the transfer of any property, real or personal, not only by will or intestate law, but also "whenever any person or corporation shall exercise a power of appointment derived from any disposition of property made either before or after the passage of this act, such appointment when made shall be deemed a transfer taxable under the provisions of this act in the same manner as though the property to which such appointment relates belonged absolutely to the donee of such power, and had been bequeathed or devised by such donee by will." Laws 1897, p. 150, chap. 284, § 220, subd. 5. The learned appellate division held that the statute, as amended, applied to the property in question, but that the appointee took under the deeds, and not under the will, and the attempt of the act to impose a tax upon the property under the guise of a tax upon succession was retroactive and unconstitutional.

The statute, as we read it, does not attempt to impose a tax upon property, but upon the exercise of a power of appointment. The power in this case was exercised by will in such a way that the appointee became entitled to all the property, instead of an aliquot part. While the property came to him by deed from his grandfather, only a part of it could have reached him but for the will of his aunt. His title to the most of it depended on the will, as well as upon the deed. He is compelled to resort to the will in order to establish his right, for the deed alone will not suffice. The privilege of making a will is not a natural or inherent right, but one which the state can grant or withhold in its discretion. If granted, it may be upon such conditions and with such limitations as the legislature sees fit to create. The payment of a sum in gross, or of an amount measured by the value of the property affected, may be exacted, or the right may be limited to one or more kinds of property and withdrawn as to all others. The legislature could provide that no power of appointment should be exercised by will, or that it should be exercised only upon the payment of a gross or ratable sum for the privilege. It could exact this condition independent of the date or origin of the power. All this necessarily flows from the absolute control by the legislature of the right to make a will. Re Sherman, 153

64 L. R. A.

N. Y. 1, 4, 46 N. E. 1032; Re Dows, 167 N. Y. 227, 231, 52 L. R. A. 433, 88 Am. St. Rep. 508, 60 N. E. 439; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 628, 41 L. ed. 287, 288, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 490, 493, 12 L. ed. 1168, 1170.

We do not regard the question presented as open in this court, for we have recently passed upon it in two cases, each of which arose under the statute as amended in 1897. In the earlier case a testator who died in 1885 created a trust fund, and gave the income thereof to his son during life, but directed that upon his death the principal should be paid to his issue in such shares or proportions as he should by will appoint, with a gift directly to such issue if the power of appointment was not exercised. The son died in 1899, leaving a will by which he exercised the power. We held, adopting the opinion of the court below, that, although the ultimate right of succession to the fund was not taxable under the statute in force when the father died, still the shares of the appointees under the son's will were subject to a transfer tax under the act of 1897. Re Vanderbilt, 50 App. Div. 246, 63 N. Y. Supp. 1079, 163 N. Y. 597, 57 N. E. 1127. In the second case the testator died in 1880, after devising certain real property in trust to pay the income to his son during life, and upon his death said realty was to vest absolutely and at once in such of his children and the issue of his deceased children as he should by will appoint. If, however, the son should die intestate, the realty was to vest absolutely and at once in his children then living and the issue of his deceased children. The son exercised the power by his last will, and died in 1890. We held that the property was subject to the tax imposed by the act of 1897; that such tax was on the right of succession, and not on the property; that, whatever may be the technical source of title of a grantee under a power of appointment, in reality and substance it is the execution of the power that gives to the grantee the property passing under it; and that, when the father devised the property to the appointees under the will of his son, he necessarily subjected it to the charge that the state might impose on the privilege accorded to the son of making a will. Re Dows, 167 N. Y. 227, 52 L. R. A. 433, 88 Am. St. Rep. 508, 60 N. E. 439, Affirmed sub nom. Orr v. Gilman, 183 U. S. 278, 46 L. ed. 196, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213. The Supreme Court of the United States reviewed our decision, and, after due consideration of the statute in question, was unable to see that, as construed by us, it infringed any provision of the Federal Constitution. 64 L. R. A.

The learned judges below did not consider the Dows Case in their opinion, but they attempted to distinguish the Vanderbilt Case from the one in hand upon the ground that the power of appointment was created by will, and that the will was made after the enactment of the collateral inheritance tax law. The latter distinction did not exist in the Dows Case, where the power was created before any act was passed in this state providing for the imposition of a succession or transfer tax. We think neither distinction is well founded. As the tax is imposed upon the exercise of the power, it is unimportant how the power was created. The existence of the power is the important fact, for what may be done under it is not affected by its origin. If created by deed, its efficiency is the same as if it had been created in the same form by will. No more and no less could be done by virtue of it in the one case than in the other. Its effective agency to produce the result intended is neither strengthened nor weakened by the nature of the instrument used by the donor of the power to create it. The power, however or whenever created, authorized the donee, by her will, to divest certain defeasible estates, and to vest them absolutely in one person. If this authority had been conferred by will, instead of by deed, the right to act would have been precisely the same, and the power would have neither gained nor lost in force. The statute applies to all powers alike, without distinction on account of the method of creation or the date of creation, and provides that the exercise of the power shall be deemed a taxable transfer of the property affected, the same as if it had belonged absolutely to the donee of the power, and had been bequeathed or devised by such donee. As we said through Judge Cullen in the Dows Case: "Whatever be the technical source of title of a grantee under a power of appointment, it cannot be denied that in reality and substance it is the execution of the power that gives to the grantee the property passing under it." This accords with the statutory definition of a power as applied to real estate, for it includes authority to create or revoke an estate therein. Real Property Law, § 111 (Laws 1896, p. 577, chap. 547). Such was the effect of the exercise of the power under consideration, for it both revoked and created estates in the real property and interests in the personal property. No tax is laid on the power, or on the property, or on the original disposition by deed, but simply upon the exercise of the power by will, as an effective transfer for the purposes of the act. If the power had been exercised by deed, a different question would have arisen, but it was exercised by will, and, owing to the full and complete control by the legislature of the making, the form, and the substance of wills, it can impose a charge or tax for doing anything by will.

It is quite immaterial that there was no statute imposing a succession tax of any kind in force when the original disposition of the property was made and the power was created. That transfer is not taxed, and the statute makes no effort to reach it. It is the practical transfer through the exercise of the power by will that is taxed, and nothing else. The right of the legislature to impose a tax on the privilege of exercising a power by will is not affected by the fact that no such tax was imposed when the power was created. When the creator of the power granted the property to the appointees of his daughter, as Judge Cullen said in the Dours Case, "he necessarily subjected it to the charge that the state might impose on the privilege accorded to the" daughter "of making a will. That charge is the same in character as if it had been laid on the inheritance of the estate of the" daughter herself; "that is, for the privilege of succeeding to property under a will." If the power had not been exercised, the question would have resembled that presented by the Pell Case, relied upon below, where we held that a statute was unconstitutional which imposed a tax upon such remainders, already vested and nondefeasible, as should result in an absolute title after the passage of the act. Re Pell, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L. R. A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 780. In that case the transfer was completed without the aid of a will, and the effect was the same as a deed inter vivos. There was no foundation for a succession tax, which is a charge upon the right to make a will, or on the right to inherit without a will.

We think that the surrogate had jurisdiction, and that his order denying the motion to dismiss the proceedings as to the respondent was proper. It follows that the order of the Appellate Division should be reversed, and that of the surrogate affirmed, with costs.

Parker, Ch. J., and Bartlett, Haight, and Cullen, JJ., concur. O'Brien and Werner, JJ., dissent.

Reargument denied.

MISSISSIPPI SUPREME COURT.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

Mrs. W. G. HARPER.

(.....Miss.....)

1. Evidence of declarations of the ticket agents and conductor of the train first boarded by the passenger is admissible upon the question of the carriage contract, where one desiring transportation between two points connected by different routes asks for a ticket by the longer route, over which runs the more desirable train, and receives one which does not specify the route; and it is immaterial that the regulations of the carrier, of which the traveler has no knowledge, require the use of the more direct route.
2. A conductor of a train running between two points connected by different routes is bound to listen to the explanation of a passenger holding a ticket which does not specify the route she is to take, that the agent selling the ticket had directed her to take the route on which the conductor finds her; and he cannot eject her from the train because of regulations of the carrier, unknown to her, requiring her to take the other route.

3. Insulting or ungentlemanly conduct is not necessary to render the ejection of a woman from a train wrongful, if, under the terms of her carriage contract she has a right there.
4. Exemplary damages may be recovered for the ejection, in the night and at a strange place, of a lady from a train where she has a right to be under the carriage contract made with the agent selling her ticket, of which the conductor is fully informed, although the terms of the contract are not embodied in the ticket, and the regulations of the carrier require passengers between the terminal named in the ticket to travel by another route.

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to liability for ejecting passenger who, through fault of carrier or its agents, presents a defective ticket, see MacKay v. Ohio River R. Co. 9 L. R. A. 132; Peabody v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 12 L. R. A. 823; Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Riley, 13 L. R. A. 38; Poulin v. Canadian P. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 800; Ellsworth v. Chicago B. & Q. R. Co. 29 L. R. A. 173; Northern P. R. Co. v. Pauson, 30 L. R. A. 730; and Southern R. Co. v. Wood, 55 L. R. A. 530.

As to liability for expelling passenger from train on the ground that it does not stop at the station for which ticket was bought, where the agent assured the passenger that the train would stop at such station, see, in this series, Atkinson v. Southern R. Co. 55 L. R. A. 223, and Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Little, 61 L. R. A. 122.

As to expulsion of passenger whose ticket has been wrongfully taken by other conductor, see Sloane v. Southern California R. Co. 32 L. R. A. 193.

5. A decision awarding punitive damages must be reversed where, although they were allowable under the facts set out in the first count of the declaration, they were not asked for by it, but were asked for in another count under which no damages were allowable, where, from the instructions and the award, it is evident that they were allowed under the wrong count.
6. The conductor of a passenger train is under no obligation to place upon the right car a passenger who has entered the wrong one by mistake.

(January 25, 1904.)

APPPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Zallabusha County in plaintiff's favor in an action brought to recover damages for alleged wrongful ejection from defendant's train. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Mayes & Longstreet and J. M. Dickinson for appellant.

Messrs. Brewer & Creekmore for appellee.

Whitfield, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Mrs. Harper lived at Henderson, Kentucky; had been living there about eighteen months. Prior to that time she had lived at Water Valley, Mississippi. On the 24th of July, 1901, desiring to make a visit to Water Valley, she bought a ticket from Henderson, Kentucky, to Water Valley, Mississippi, from the ticket agent at Henderson. She had lived at Grenada, Mississippi, before she lived at Water Valley, and her husband and herself desired that she should go by way of Grenada, because she had acquaintances there. She says that she preferred that route, because she did not know where she would be delayed on the direct route by way of Jackson, Tennessee, in the nighttime, and her husband and herself desired that she should go by way of Memphis, and stop over at Grenada. The agent told her that there was no difference in the price of tickets, and she took the Memphis route. The defendant company had two routes: One from Henderson, via Jackson, Tennessee, to Water Valley, called the direct route; but the local train ran over this route. The other route was from Henderson, Kentucky, via Princeton, Kentucky, to Memphis, Tennessee, and Grenada, Mississippi. Over this the fast train ran. When Mrs. Harper got to Princeton, Kentucky, she interviewed the ticket agent of the defendant company there, and he told her to take the Memphis train,—positively told her not to take the other train. She accordingly took the Memphis train at Princeton. When the conductor of the train came around for tickets, she asked him if she was all right, if she could go by way of Memphis. He told her that certainly she could go that way, and honored her ticket, and carried her to Brighton, Tennessee, within one half hour's run of Memphis. She was much nearer Water Valley at Brighton, going via Memphis, than she would have been returning from Brighton to Fulton, Kentucky, and thence going to Water Valley. But at Brighton another conductor refused to pass her any further on that ticket; saying that the ticket was for the other route, and not good on that route, and that she would have to get off. It was then about half past 8 at night. Mrs. Harper fully explained to him all that had passed between her and the two ticket agents and the conductor. On this point she says: "I told him the man had sold me a ticket for that route, and all the other railroad officials had instructed me to go on that way, and that I could not see why I could not; that I would get to Water Valley at 6:30 in the morning, and the other way would put me at Water Valley the day after; and that I had bought the ticket for that route. He put me off against my will; just wilfully put me off. Of course, he did not take me bodily and put me off, but he told me I had to do it, and, of course, I did it. I went back to Fulton and spent the night." She further testifies that he positively refused to accept any explanation from her. She got to Fulton on the back train about 10 o'clock that night. She would have been in Memphis in another hour on the route she was on. She stayed in the hotel in Fulton until 5 o'clock the next morning. She knew no person at Brighton, Tennessee, and stayed at the depot there about twenty minutes, until the train going to Fulton came along. This was an accommodation passenger train. At Fulton, Kentucky, the ticket agent, according to her testimony, which the jury believed, pointed out to her the train which he said was going to Water Valley, and also the very coach on the train which she should take to go to Water Valley. After the train had started, the conductor of this train which she was on told her that she was on the wrong train, but that he would put her on the right train directly. She says that by this time she was almost desperate, that she was really sick from anxiety and worry, and that she notified the conductor that she was thus sick from anxiety and worry. She had really gotten on the car that went to Nashville, Tennessee, from Martin, Tennessee. The conductor failed to keep his promise to put her in the right coach, and she was about to be carried to Nashville, Tennessee, from Martin; but she pulled the bell rope and stopped that train, and got off at Martin, and found herself about 50 yards from the train going to Water Valley, but it was just pulling out, and thus she got left, so far as that train was concerned. She went to a hotel so sick that she could not go to the dinner table, and dinner was served in her room. She stayed at Martin all day, sick, and had to go to bed. She then took, at last, the right train, and reached her destination, after all this worry, vexation, and delay,—quite enough to make any woman traveling by herself thoroughly sick from anxiety and worry. She stated that the agent at Henderson told her expressly to go by Memphis, because she would make better connection that way, and that she went through Memphis, because she passed through Memphis in the night. She says that she had gone from Water Valley to Henderson by way of Memphis, buying her ticket at Water Valley via Grenada; that she had gone that way twice. She says that the conductor at Brighton was not insolent, but he was positive, and compelled her to get off. She further testifies that the circuitous route from Henderson to Water Valley was nevertheless the quickest route, by five hours, because over that route the fast train ran. She further says that the conductor on the train from Princeton told her that the Memphis route was the best route, and that she remained on the train on his advice until they got to Brighton,—nearly to Memphis. She says that both the conductor and the ticket agent at Brighton told her to take that route. The proof of actual damages in a small amount—some $17—was made. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $817.

The chief contention on the part of the appellant is that it was incompetent to admit the declarations of the two ticket agents at Henderson and Princeton, and of the conductor on the train from Princeton, Kentucky, to Brighton, Tennessee. This contention is unsound. The ticket, on its face, contained no information as to which route should be taken, nor did it advise appellee of the rule of the company relied on here,—that passengers on their trains must go by the direct route. Mr. Justice Lamar, speaking for the United States Supreme Court, in New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Winter, 143 U. S., at pages 69, 70, 36 L. ed., at pages 78, 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep., at page 359, says: "The grounds upon which it is insisted that the evidence referred to was inadmissible are that the ticket itself, and the rules and regulations of the road with respect to stop-over checks, constitute the contract between the passenger and the road, and the only evidence of such contract, and that no representations made by a ticket seller could be received to vary or change the terms of 64 L. R. A.

such contract. This contention cannot be sustained, and is opposed to the authorities upon the subject. While it may be admitted, as a general rule, that the contract between the passenger and the railroad company is made up of the ticket which he purchases, and the rules and regulations of the road, yet it does not follow that parol evidence of what was said between the passenger and the ticket seller from whom he purchased his ticket, at the time of such purchase, is inadmissible, as going to make up the contract of carriage, and forming a part of it. In the first place, passengers on railroad trains are not presumed to know the rules and regulations which are made for the guidance of conductors and other employees of railroad companies as to the internal affairs of the company, nor are they required to know them. Hufford v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. 64 Mich. 631, 8 Am. St. Rep. 859, 31 N. W. 544. In this case there is no evidence, as already stated, that notice or knowledge of the existence of the rules of the defendant company, or what they were, with respect to stop-over privileges, was brought home to the plaintiff at the time he purchased his ticket, or at any time thereafter. There was nothing on the face of the ticket to show that a stop-over check was required of the passenger as a condition precedent to his resuming his journey from Olean to Salamanca after stopping off at the former place. It is shown by the evidence that Olean was a station at which stop-over privileges were allowed. Under such circumstances, it was entirely proper for the passenger to make inquiries of the ticket agent, and to rely upon what the latter told him with respect to his stopping over at Olean. Hufford v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. 64 Mich. 631, 8 Am. St. Rep. 859, 31 N. W. 544; Palmer v. Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. 3 S. C. N. S. 580, 16 Am. Rep. 750; Burnham v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 63 Me. 298, 18 Am. Rep. 220; Murdock v. Boston & A. R. Co. 137 Mass. 293, 50 Am. Rep. 307; Arnold v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 115 Pa. 135, 2 Am. St. Rep. 542, 8 Atl. 213."

This is decisive of two propositions: First, that these declarations were competent; and, second, that this appellee was not bound by this alleged rule, of which she had no knowledge. It will be noted that this holding of the United States Supreme Court is squarely to the effect that the appellee would not have been bound by the rule unless information of it had been communicated to her, in any event. It is not necessary, however, in this case, on its facts, to hold that the appellee should rely on this statement of the principle in its strictness, though we think the principle is just as stated by the United States Supreme Court. For here it is manifest that she did make inquiry of the ticket agent and of the conductor as to what route she should take, and the authorities cited by learned counsel for the appellant go no farther than to hold that, where there is a rule such as here involved, it is the duty of the intending passenger to find out what route he should take, by inquiry, and that it is not the duty of the railroad company to bring home notice of this rule to such intending passenger, otherwise than in answer to inquiry. In the case of Church v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 616, which, it should be noted, was decided without any counsel appearing for the appellee, the passenger,—the court reviews several authorities upon this particular question, as to which the editor, in the footnote, says: Very few precedents exist. One of these authorities, relied on by appellant (Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Randolph, 53 Ill. 510, 5 Am. Rep. 60), distinctly says: "The requisite information can always be had from the agent when the ticket is procured, and it is but reasonable to require passengers to obtain the information, and to act upon it." In Cheney v. Boston & M. R. Co. 11 Met. 121, 45 Am. Dec. 190, speaking upon this point, the court says: "The plaintiff might have inquired and informed himself of that." This is precisely what this plaintiff did, and "the direful spring of the woes unnumbered" which this plaintiff suffered was precisely the misinformation given her by the ticket agent. If it were a sound legal proposition that the company is not bound unless the plaintiff informs himself of the rule, still that condition was fully complied with in this case. Before passing from the Church Case, 6 S. D. 235, 26 L. R. A. 616, 60 N. W. 854, we desire to say that the only erroneous information given in that case was given by a mere gate keeper at the Milwaukee depot, whose sole duty, as pointed out at page 243, 6 S. D., page 619, 26 L. R. A. and page 857, 60 N. W., was "to assist passengers to take the right train." As stated: "He did not give her any misinformation. He simply did not advise her as to changes to be made at a junction 500 miles distant." Mrs. Harper was not dealing with a gate-keeper. She dealt with the ticket agent, who was authorized to give the very information she sought. Other authorities showing the competency of the declarations of the ticket agent and conductor, if any are needed, may be found in the learned note to Robinson v. Southern P. Co. 28 L. R. A. 755. It is also relied on and insisted by counsel for appellant that, as between the conductor and the passenger, it was not the duty of the conductor to listen to the explanation made by Mrs. Harper. Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Riley, 68 Miss. 765, 13 L. 64 L. R. A.

R. A. 38, 24 Am. St. Rep. 309, 9 So. 443: and Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Drummond, 73 Miss. 813, 20 So. 7, are decisive of the unsoundness of this view. In the Drummond Case the passenger simply protested; he did not make any explanation; and it was on this ground that the decision proceeded. It was not only the duty of the conductor to listen to this most reasonable explanation, but, having heard it, as he did, it was wrong—a wilful wrong warranting the imposition of exemplary damages—to put this lady off the train under the circumstances. It is none the less a wilful wrong because he acted in a gentlemanly manner, and was guilty of no insolent conduct. She was subjected to this most grievous wrong, and she was intentionally subjected to it, after full disclosure of what had occurred between her and the ticket agent of the company. Plaintiff was clearly entitled to recover, under the first count in the declaration, not only the actual damages she had sustained, but exemplary damages, and a verdict for a larger sum than here recovered would not have been disturbed by us. It is idle to argue that the conductor, flatly refusing to listen to the perfectly reasonable explanation made by this woman, and putting her off, under the circumstances detailed in the evidence, at night, was not guilty of such intentional and oppressive wrongdoing as to warrant the imposition of punitive damages. It may as well be understood, once for all, that this court proposes to stand by the doctrine announced in the Drummond and Riley Cases, as the just and true doctrine. But the difficulty in this case is that the plaintiff only asked for actual damages under the first count, when she was entitled to punitive damages, and yet asked and obtained an instruction for punitive damages under the second count, under which it is clear she was entitled to no damages at all. Under the well-settled decisions of this court, it was not the duty of the conductor to place Mrs. Harper in the right car, and the mistake of the ticket agent at Fulton was corrected by the proper information given by the conductor. Mrs. Harper had nothing to do except to get up from her seat and walk forward through the vestibule train to the Water Valley car. She was not sick to such a degree as to require the assistance of the conductor. It follows that the fifth and seventh instructions for the plaintiff, to the effect that she was entitled to exemplary damages, are erroneous. In this curious attitude of the case, reversal must necessarily follow, for we must indulge the presumption that the jury did their duty, and obeyed the instructions of the court, which did not allow them to find anything but actual damages under the first count, but which did allow them to find exemplary damages under the second count. The verdict cannot, under the instructions, be referred to the first count, since the actual damages were only about $17. It is obvious that it must be referred to the second count, under which no recovery at all could have been allowed.

What we have said indicates the proper disposition of the case on a second trial, it being only necessary to add that the modification of the second instruction given for the defendant was necessary to a correct statement of the law.

Reversed and remanded.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT.

Mary STONE, Appt.,

v.

E. C. COOK et al., Respts.

(.....Mo.....)

1. A residuary legatee who receives, although under protest, the amount due him under the will cannot, upon a mere offer to bring the amount so received into court, contest the validity of the will, where, upon the faith of his acceptance, the special legacies provided for have been distributed.

2. Where the facts constituting an estoppel to the maintenance of the action affirmatively appear on the face of the petition the defense may be interposed by demurrer without the necessity of a plea or answer.

(February 10, 1904.)

APPPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Audrain County in favor of defendants in a proceeding to contest the validity of the will of William T. Cook, deceased. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George Robertson, for appellant:

The plaintiff is not barred from contesting the will after the lapse of a period of five years, by the fact that she is a married woman.

Rev. Stat. 1899, § 4624; Linville v. Greer, 165 Mo. 380, 65 S. W. 579; Rosenberger v. Mallerson, 92 Mo. App. 27; Hughes v. Burriess, 85 Mo. 660.

Estoppel is an affirmative defense, and must be specially pleaded, and cannot be made by demurrer.

McClanahan v. Payne, 86 Mo. App. 284; Sanders v. Chartrand, 158 Mo. 352, 59 S. W. 95; Chance v. Jennings, 159 Mo. 544, 61 S. W. 177; Casler v. Gray, 159 Mo. 588, 60 S. W. 1032; Kansas Moline Plow Co. v. Wayland, 81 Mo. App. 305; Cadematori v.

NOTE.—As to estoppel of devisee claiming under will to contest truth of recital therein, see, in this series, Hunt ex rel. Streater v. Evans, 11 L. R. A. 185.

As to estoppel of legatees by receiving proceeds of executor's sale, though protesting that this is not all that is due, to deny executor's power to make sale, see Philbrook v. Newman, 34 L. R. A. 265.
64 L. R. A.

Gauger, 160 Mo. 352, 61 S. W. 195; Hammerslough v. Cheatham, 84 Mo. 13; Bray v. Marshall, 75 Mo. 327; State ex rel. Hospes v. Branch, 161 Mo. 622, 52 S. W. 390.

The amount of the estate involved in the will was $12,000. Plaintiff's share under the law would have been $4,000. She accepted under the will $1,100, slightly more than one fourth of her share under the law. Her conduct does not constitute estoppel.

To accept her share under the will, being a lesser amount than she was entitled to under the law were the will broken, does not mislead or induce another into any action to his prejudice.

11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 387, 388; Johnson-Brinkman Commission Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 126 Mo. 353, 26 L. R. A. 840, 47 Am. St. Rep. 675, 28 S. W. 870.

There can be no estoppel as against plaintiff, unless it be shown that defendants have incurred some liability, or have been induced to do something to their prejudice, in consequence of the plaintiff's conduct.

Jones v. McPhillips, 82 Ala. 116, 2 So. 468; Stevens v. Dennett, 51 N. H. 333; Brown v. Bowen, 30 N. Y. 541, 86 Am. Dec. 406; DeBerry v. Wheeler, 128 Mo. 84, 49 Am. St. Rep. 538, 30 S. W. 338; Smith v. Roach, 59 Mo. App. 115; Bales v. Perry, 51 Mo. 449; Noble v. Blount, 77 Mo. 235; Blodgett v. Perry, 97 Mo. 263, 10 Am. St. Rep. 307, 11 S. W. 891; State ex rel. Hospes v. Branch, 161 Mo. 622, 52 S. W. 390.

Where a widow has accepted all the provisions of a will her right of renunciation remains for the period of twelve months.

Bretz v. Matney, 60 Mo. 444; Burgess v. Bowles, 99 Mo. 543, 12 S. W. 341, 13 S. W. 99; Spratt v. Lawson, 176 Mo. 175, 75 S. W. 642.

The will was made, not only with reference to the law of wills, but with reference to the law of administration.

Lilly v. Menke, 126 Mo. 190, 28 S. W. 643, 994, 143 Mo. 137, 44 S. W. 730.

Election is the choice between two rights by a person who derives one of them under an instrument in which a clear intention appears that he should not enjoy both.

11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 59.

The plaintiff tenders into court what she has received. This is all that can be required of her.

1 Woerner, Am. Law of Administration, 2d ed. *500; Syme v. Badger, 92 N. C. 706; Holt v. Rice, 54 N. H. 398, 20 Am. Rep. 138; Watson v. Alderson, 146 Mo. 333, 69 Am. St. Rep. 615, 48 S. W. 478.

MCCARRS. Fry & Rodgers and E. C. Kennen, for respondents:

Plaintiff's cause of action is, and rightfully should be, barred by the special five years' limitation statute.

United States v. Wiley, 11 Wall. 508, 20 L. ed. 211.

The married women's acts enabling married women to sue as to their separate property repeal in so far the statutory disability, and the general married women's acts, by implication, repeal altogether the disabling clause of the statute, and cause it to run against married women as it would if they were single.

13 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 739 (d); Geisen v. Heidrich, 104 Ill. 537; Brown v. Cousens, 51 Me. 301; Dunham v. Sage, 52 N. Y. 230.

As the demurrer was the only pleading filed by the defendants in the court below, the defense of election or estoppel is sufficiently pleaded therein.

Barton Bros. v. Martin, 54 Mo. App. 134.

The plaintiff had her choice to accept the provisions of the will or institute a proceeding to contest it, and, if successful, then to take under the law; and, as the petition shows on its face that she accepted all the beneficial provisions made for her in the will, she is bound by her acceptance.

2 Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, § 1028, p. 1156; Fox v. Windes, 127 Mo. 502, 48 Am. St. Rep. 648, 30 S. W. 325; 1 Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, p. 11.

The plaintiff's interest in the estate of her father concerns her separate property, and she can be estopped, as much as any other property owner, although a married woman.

Blair v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 89 Mo. 383, 1 S. W. 350; Brown v. Bowen, 90 Mo. 184, 2 S. W. 398; Gilliland v. Gilliland, 96 Mo. 522, 10 S. W. 139; Henry v. Sned, 99 Mo. 425, 17 Am. St. Rep. 580, 12 S. W. 663; Leete v. State Bank, 115 Mo. 184, 21 S. W. 788; Stone v. Gilliam Exch. Bank, 81 Mo. App. 9.

She cannot avoid the force of the law of estoppel by claiming that she received her share under the will under "protest."

Broune v. Appleman, 83 Mo. App. 79.

He who would avail himself of the advantages arising from the act of another in his behalf must also assume the responsibilities.

64 L. R. A.

McLachlin v. Barker, 64 Mo. App. 511; Sirofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. v. Bank of Blue Mound, 81 Mo. App. 46; Pemberton v. Pemberton, 29 Mo. 409; O'Reilly v. Nicholson, 45 Mo. 160; Cadematori v. Gauger, 160 Mo. 352, 61 S. W. 195; Casler v. Gray, 159 Mo. 588, 60 S. W. 1032; Austin's Estate, 73 Mo. App. 61.

Marshall, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action under the statute to contest the will of William T. Cook. The plaintiff is a daughter of the testator, and the defendants are the other children, grandchildren, daughter-in-law, and executors of the deceased. The will was executed on December 17, 1895. Shortly thereafter the testator died, and the will was probated in March, 1896. By the first item of the will, the testator bequeathed to his grandson E. C. Cook 160 acres of land to enable him to support and care for his invalid mother. By the second item of the will, the testator bequeathed to his daughter, Martha Corner, 80 acres of land. By the third item of the will, the testator bequeathed to his daughter Mary Stone, the plaintiff, a legacy of $500, provided that sum could be realized from the sale of his interest in certain land, which was subject to a mortgage for $1,750 and interest, and, at all events, he directed that, if $500 could not be so realized, she should have the excess over the amount necessary to pay the mortgage. By the fourth item of the will, the testator directed that his storehouse and lot in Laddonia be sold, and out of the proceeds the sum of $50 a year, for six years, be paid to the trustees of the Methodist Church, to be used by them to pay the pastor's salary. By the fifth item of the will, the testator bequeathed to two granddaughters the sum of $35 each, to buy a watch, as a token of affection of their departed grandmother. By the sixth item, the testator set apart the sum of $100, the interest on which he directed to be used to keep in repair the graves of the testator and his family. By the seventh item, the testator bequeathed the residue of his estate to his daughter Mary Stone, the plaintiff, Martha Corner, the defendant, and his daughter-in-law, the widow of his deceased son, William R. Cook. After reciting the relationship of the parties litigant, and after setting out the will in full, wherein the testator declares himself to be ninety-one years old and of sound mind, the petition charges that at the time the will was made the testator was old, feeble of body, and was of unsound mind and incapable of making a will, and then charges that the will was procured by the undue influence of the grandson E. C. Cook, and of the daughter-in-law, and of a witness to the will. The petition then states that the will was admitted to probate in Audrain county at the March term, 1896, of the probate court. The petition then alleges that the plaintiff received from the executors the special legacy of $500 bequeathed to her by the third item of the will, and also received $600 under the seventh item of the will, being one third of the residuum of the estate, but said she received said amounts under protest, insisting that she received said sums only because, under the law, she was entitled to one third of the estate, which she says would amount to $4,000; and she avers that she is ready and willing (she omits to say able) to pay the said sums so received into court, or to have them deducted from her share of the estate, if the will is set aside. The prayer of the petition is that issue be joined as to whether or not the will is the will of William T. Cook. The suit was made returnable to the September term, 1901, of the Audrain circuit court. The defendants demurred to the petition on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, in this: First, because it shows on its face that it was not instituted within five years after the will was probated in common form, and hence is barred by limitations; and, second, because the petition shows on its face that the plaintiff accepted the benefits accruing to her under the will, and is therefore estopped to deny or contest the validity of the will. The circuit court sustained the demurrer, the plaintiff refused to plead further, judgment was entered for the defendants, and the plaintiff appealed.

The pivotal question here involved is whether the plaintiff, having received the legacies bequeathed to her by the will, can be heard to contest the validity of the will, upon bringing into court the sums she has received under the will. The fact that she received the legacies under protest, or under a claim that they constituted only a part of what she was entitled to by law, outside of the will, is wholly immaterial, and avails nothing. Pollman & Bros. Coal & Sprinkling Co. v. St. Louis, 145 Mo. 651, 47 S. W. 563; McCormick v. Interstate Consol. Rapid Transit R. Co. 154 Mo. 191, 55 S. W. 252; McCormick v. St. Louis, 166 Mo. loc. cit. 345, 346, 65 S. W. 1038. 1 Woerner, Am. Law of Administration, 2d ed. *500, says: "But since a person cannot hold under a will, and also against it, one who accepts a beneficial interest under a will thereby bars himself from setting up a claim which will prevent its full operation at law or in equity; and such a person will not, therefore, be allowed to contest a will unless he return the legacy received." The general rule laid down in the text is supported by the following cases cited in the notes to the text: Smart v. Easley, 5 J. J. Marsh. 215; Herbert v. Wren, 7 Cranch, 370, 3 L. ed. 374; Preston v. Jones, 9 Pa. 456; Smith v. Guild, 34 Me. 443; Hyde v. Baldwin, 17 Pick. 303; Benedict v. Montgomery, 7 Watts & S. 238, 42 Am. Dec. 230; Smith v. Smith, 14 Gray, 532; Van Duyn v. Van Duyn, 14 N. J. Eq. 49; and Fulton v. Moore, 25 Pa. 468. To the same effect is Syme v. Badger, 92 N. C. 706. In all these cases it is held, without qualification, that one who accepts a benefit under a will or deed thereby elects to take under the instrument, and is estopped thereafter from contesting the validity of the instrument. Nothing is said in any of these cases about the right of such person to bring into court the benefits so received, and thereupon to contest the instrument. However, in Holt v. Rice, 54 N. H. loc. cit. 402, 20 Am. Rep. 138, while the general rule is announced and affirmed, it is held that one who has received a benefit under a will may pay the amount so received into court, and thereafter contest the will, though it is said: "Under circumstances of delay, connected with other circumstances, it has been held to preclude the party from contesting the will afterwards;" and it was allowed in that case because there had been no great delay. In Miller's Appeal, 159 Pa. loc. cit. 575, 28 Atl. 441, the contesting legatee was required to pay the money received into court before he was permitted to proceed; and it was held that "where the acts set up are equivocal, or were done in ignorance of the rights of the doer, or where they consist merely of the receipt of a pecuniary legacy, and the money is returned before the appellant proceeds beyond the entry of his appeal [which is like our proceedings to contest the will], they will not amount to an estoppel." In Re Soule, 1 Connolly, 54, 3 N. Y. Supp. 250, the sufficiency of a mere offer to refund, contained in a petition to contest a will, is discussed, and held to be insufficient, and that nothing short of an actual payment into court of the benefits received before the filing of the petition will entitle a beneficiary under a will, who has received benefits thereunder, to repudiate and contest the will.

In Re Peaslee, 73 Hun, loc. cit. 114, 25 N. Y. Supp. 940, the rule is so admirably stated as to justify the following excerpt therefrom: "It is a well-settled proposition in law, as well as in equity, that he who accepts and retains a benefit under an instrument, whether deed, will, or other writing, is held to have adopted the whole, and to have renounced every right inconsistent with it. The rule has found expression in many actions, and with widely differing facts. A few of them only will be referred to. In Chipman v. Montgomery, 63 N. Y. 234, which was an action in the Supreme Court to obtain a judicial construction of a will, and for an accounting, Judge Allen, speaking for the court, said: "Two of the plaintiffs have received, in whole or in part, the legacies given them by the will, and, having accepted the benefits of the provision made for them, cannot be heard in opposition to other parts of the instrument, except by proof of circumstances showing that they had not intelligently elected to take under the will, rather than in opposition to it, and a return of all that has been received by them." And he quoted with approval Lord Redesdale's decision in Birmingham v. Kirwan, 2 Sch. & Lef. 444, that this rule of election is applicable to every species of instrument, whether deed or will, and to be a rule of law as well as equity. The rule is also asserted in Havens v. Sackett, 15 N. Y. 365, and in Mills v. Hoffman, 92 N. Y. 181, which was an appeal from a decree of the surrogate's court compelling an administrator to account; the objection overruled by that court being that the petitioner was barred because of an entry of judgment in which she was a party defendant, although an infant, and the subsequent distribution of the estate in pursuance of the judgment, by which the moneys came into the hands of her guardian, and upon her majority to her. After this latter event the judgment was vacated and set aside, as to her, on the ground that the appointment of a guardian ad litem to represent her had been irregular, and the court of appeals held that she was estopped from controverting in the surrogate's court the judgment under which she had received benefits. In Re Soule, 1 Connolly, 18, 3 N. Y. Supp. 259, the right of a legatee who had received moneys under a will to claim revocation of probate without making full restitution to the executors was denied. Numerous cases have arisen under wills where this principle has been applied. Hamblett v. Hamblett, 6 N. H. 333; Van Duyne v. Van Duyne, 14 N. J. Eq. 49; Weeks v. Patten, 18 Me. 42, 36 Am. Dec. 696; Smith v. Guild, 34 Me. 443; Hyde v. Baldwin, 17 Pick. 303; Smith v. Smith, 14 Gray, 532; Bell v. Armstrong, 1 Addams, Eccl. Rep. 365; Braham v. Burchell, 3 Addams Eccl. Rep. 243. The learned counsel for the appellant, while citing no authorities asserting a contrary proposition, has carefully analyzed and elaborately discussed nearly all the cases we have cited, in order to make it appear that they are distinguishable from the case at bar. In their facts they are different from this case, and they differ from each other; but they all tend to make good the assertion which may be found running through the books,—that he who receives money or property, or a benefit of any kind, under an instrument, whatever its character or his relation to the maker of it, cannot question the instrument, in whole or in part. But the appellant urges that the reason for the rule does not apply in this case, and therefore the rule should not obtain. Here he says no injury can result to the executors or anyone else because the petitioner is permitted to contest the will while retaining the $7,000 which she received from the executors, because, if the will be set aside, she, as one of the next of kin, will be entitled to receive a larger sum of money than $7,000, and therefore the executors can be amply protected by the surrogate. It may be true that, if the contest should proceed, it would so turn out, but of that we are not assured. It does not appear that, should the petitioner be successful in her contest, as a result her mother's intestacy will be established. There may be other and prior wills in existence, the validity of one of which may be established, with the possible result that the petitioner will not receive thereunder a legacy sufficient in amount to make good the advancement to her by these executors. Certainly the contrary cannot be safely assumed. The fact that the petitioner received this money and expended it before becoming aware of the facts which encouraged her to enter upon a contest of the will may perhaps be unfortunate for her. If misfortune it be, it arises, of course, from the necessities which induced her to expend the money. Where a person asks that a rule be not applied, on the ground that the reason upon which it is founded is not present, the burden rests upon him to establish clearly the facts which he relies on to support his contention. The petitioner took the money and used it, and until she puts the parties in a position where, whatever the result may be, no one can be the loser because of the payments originally made to her, she is not in a situation to attack the will."

64 L. R. A.

The general doctrine of election is well stated in 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 59, and the note to the text, on page 60, contains a reference to a multitude of cases showing that the rule is almost universal. And on page 98 the same author says: "Applying the principle that knowledge is essential to constitute a valid election, it is established that where the act is induced by deception or fraud, or where the person electing acted under an ignorance of the facts or under a misapprehension of his rights, and innocent third parties will not suffer by a revocation, the act may be revoked or set aside. But such election can be revoked only by restoring the property received under it." And at page 78 the author says that, while some courts hold that a married woman cannot elect, other courts hold to the contrary, and, in any event, if she seeks to revoke the election, she must bring the benefits she has received into court. In Fos v. Windes, 127 Mo. loc. cit. 511, 48 Am. St. Rep. 648, 30 S. W. 325, this court quoted the rule laid down by Herman on Estoppel as follows: "The doctrine of election is founded upon the principle that there is an implied condition that he who accepts a benefit under an instrument must adopt the whole of it, conforming with all its provisions, and renouncing every right inconsistent with them. The principle is recognized and established in this country almost precisely the same as in England, and rests upon the equitable ground that no man can be permitted to claim inconsistent rights with regard to the same subject, and that anyone who claims an interest under an instrument is bound to give full effect to that instrument as far as he can. A person cannot accept and reject the same instrument, or, having availed himself of it as to part, defeat its provisions in any other part; and this applies to deeds, wills, and all other instruments whatsoever. 2 Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, § 1028, p. 1156. See also 2 Story, Eq. Jur. 13th ed. § 1080. This doctrine of elections, which prevents the assertion of repugnant rights, is but an extension of the law of equitable estoppel. 1 Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, p. 11."

The sum of the matter, then, is that, as a general rule, one who has received a benefit under a deed, will, or other instrument cannot thereafter contest its validity; but the general rule is subject to this qualification: That if the benefit was received without a knowledge of his right to elect between the benefit so conferred and of his right to the property outside of the deed, will, or instrument, or if he was induced by fraud or deception to accept the benefit conferred by the instrument, he may revoke the election, and contest the validity of the instrument, and claim under the law, provided that innocent third persons will not suffer by a revocation, and provided there has been no unreasonable delay in exercising the right of revocation, and provided he pays into court the benefits received. Apply this rule to the case at bar, and the case is easily solved. It expressly appears from the face of the petition that the plaintiff knew that she had a right to elect to take under the will or by operation of law at the time she received the legacies, for she says she "accepted the same under protest, and insisted that the will was invalid, and only received the same because, under the law, she would be entitled to one third of the entire estate,—a sum and an amount much larger than the amount received by her as herein stated." Therefore the plaintiff acted with full knowledge of her legal right of election, and there is no charge that she was induced to accept the benefit by any fraud or deception. It does not appear how long she waited after receiving the benefit before she attacked the validity of the will. The allegation that she is ready and willing to pay the amount received into court, or to have it deducted from her share of the estate, if the will is set aside, is not sufficient to bring her within the rule which entitles one to contest an instrument after receiving a benefit under it, for the rule requires that the benefits received shall be actually paid into court at or before the filing of the suit. In addition to this, innocent third persons will suffer if she is allowed to revoke her election upon returning the benefits she has received. The major portion of the benefits she has received arose out of the residuum of the estate. That means that all the special legacies had been paid before such residuum was ascertained and paid. These special legacies arose solely out of the will, and, without the will, that money would have gone to other persons. Upon the faith of the plaintiff's acceptance of the benefits conferred upon her by the will, the executors paid out the special legacies to other persons. The plaintiff stood by and saw the executors do so. If the plaintiff should now be permitted to have the will set aside, upon payment into court of the benefits received by her, the special legacies paid by the executors would be lost to them, for the money so expended would go to the heirs, of whom the plaintiff was one. Thus the executors would suffer by a revocation. It is true that the statute permits a will to be contested at any time within five years after its probate in common form, and the statute contemplates that the estate may or will be wound up before that time, and persons who take under a will know that the estate thus derived is liable to be devested by a successful attack thereafter upon the will. But whilst this is true, the lawmakers never intended to permit a legatee under a will to accept the benefits conferred by the will, and then stand by and see the estate wound up, or practically wound up, and then begin proceedings to contest the will, upon returning only the amount received by the contesting legatee. Such a proceeding falls within the rule that denies the right to contest where there has been unreasonable delay. In short, it is plain from the petition that the plaintiff thought she could accept the benefits, and then contest the will, and simply have the benefits received deducted from her share of the estate after the will was set aside. By so doing she stood to gain everything if she succeeded, and to lose nothing if she failed, in the contest proceedings. The law does not sanction such a speculative proceeding. It follows that the plaintiff has not shown herself entitled to maintain this action.

It is contended, however, that estoppel is an affirmative defense, and cannot be raised by demurrer. Estoppel is an affirmative defense, and so is coverture and the statute of limitations, and contributory negligence, and payments, and release, and many others, and such defenses must be expressly pleaded in the trial court. But where the facts constituting such defense affirmatively appear on the face of the petition, the question can be raised by demurrer to the petition just as effectually and equally as scientifically as by answer or plea. The petition in this case stated the facts upon which the defense of estoppel is predicated, and it would seem as if the pleader had invited a determination by the inexpensive and speedy method of a demurrer in order to avoid the costly and tedious method of raising the same question of law by an answer and a trial. Wherever or however the essential facts appear, all else is a question of law, and can be raised by any of the methods provided for the determination of questions of law.

This conclusion makes it unnecessary to decide whether, since the adoption of the married women's acts, the five-year limitation for instituting suits to contest wills applies to a married woman.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

All concur.

Rehearing denied.

David E. WHEAT, Respt.,
v.

City of ST. LOUIS, Appt.

(.....Mo.....)

1. The driver of a milk wagon, who,

NOTE.—As to knowledge of person injured, of defect in highway as proof of contributory negligence, see also cases in note to Woodman v. Metropolitan R. Co. 4 L. R. A. 213; also the later cases of Dundas v. Lansing, 5 L. R. A. 143; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Prescott, 23 L. R. A. 854; and Danville v. Robinson, 55 L. R. A. 162.

As to contributory negligence of traveler in deviating from usual thoroughfare, see Ely v. Des Moines, 17 L. R. A. 124, and note.

As to contributory negligence in use of sidewalks generally, see Brush Electric Lighting Co. v. Kelley, 10 L. R. A. 250, and note. 64 L. R. A.

knowing of the existence of a man-hole to a sewer which projects above the surface of the street, attempts to turn his horse and wagon around in its vicinity without paying any attention to his course, is guilty of contributory negligence; so that, in case the wagon strikes the obstruction and is overturned to his injury, he cannot hold the city liable therefor.

2. Persons driving upon a highway have no right to be so engrossed in their own affairs as to become oblivious to their surroundings, and fail to use reasonable care to observe and avoid obstructions and defects in the surface of the street.

(February 10, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for St. Louis County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles W. Bates and Benjamin H. Charles, for appellant:

The city is not an insurer of the safety of travelers on the streets.

Buckley v. Kansas City, 156 Mo. 16, 56 S. W. 319; Carvin v. St. Louis, 151 Mo. 334, 52 S. W. 210; Baustian v. Young, 152 Mo. 317, 75 Am. St. Rep. 462, 53 S. W. 921.

Although the city was negligent, still, as the negligence did not contribute to the injury, no recovery can be had on account of such negligence.

Hutchinson v. Missouri P. R. Co. 161 Mo. 246, 84 Am. St. Rep. 710, 61 S. W. 635, 852.

Failure to look where he was going, when he knew the street was obstructed by the manhole and was unsafe, if it was unsafe, is negligence, as a matter of law, on the part of the plaintiff.

Cohn v. Kansas, 108 Mo. 387, 18 S. W. 973; Hudson v. Wabash Western R. Co. 101 Mo. 13, 14 S. W. 15; Roberts v. Missouri & K. Teleph. Co. 166 Mo. 370, 66 S. W. 155; Sindlinger v. Kansas, 126 Mo. 315, 26 L. R. A. 723, 28 S. W. 857; Hogan v. Citizens' R. Co. 150 Mo. 36, 51 S. W. 473; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 412; 4 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 15; Benton v. Philadelphia, 198 Pa. 396, 48 Atl. 267; Erie v. Magill, 101 Pa. 616, 47 Am. Rep. 739; Schaefer v. Sandusky, 33 Ohio St. 246, 31 Am. Rep. 533; Quincy v. Barker, 81 Ill. 300, 25 Am. Rep. 278; Hutchins v. Priestly Express Wagon & Sleigh Co. 61 Mich. 252, 28 N. W. 85; Cowie v. Seattle, 22 Wash. 659, 62 Pac. 121; Cloney v. Kalamazoo, 124 Mich. 655, 83 N. W. 618; Salem v. Walker, 16 Ind. App. 687, 46 N. E. 90; Bailey v. Brown Twp. 190 Pa. 530, 42 Atl. 951; Gribble v. Sioux City, 38 Iowa, 390; Dals v.

Webster County, 76 Iowa, 370, 41 N. W. 1; Tuffree v. State Center, 57 Iowa, 538, 11 N. W. 1; Yahn v. Ottumwa, 60 Iowa, 429, 15 N. W. 257; Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. Jones, 59 Neb. 510, 81 N. W. 435; Tasker v. Farmingdale, 91 Me. 521, 40 Atl. 544; Gilman v. Deerfield, 15 Gray, 577; Corlett v. Leavenworth, 27 Kan. 673; Moore v. Richmond, 85 Va. 538, 8 S. E. 387; Walker v. Reidsville, 96 N. C. 385, 2 S. E. 74.

Messrs. William H. O'Brien, B. R. Brewer, and Robert A. Holland, Jr., for respondent.

Marshall, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for $10,000 damages for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff on November 19, 1898, by his milk wagon running over and being upset by a manhole to a public sewer in Vernon avenue, in the city of St. Louis, nearly opposite 4635 Vernon avenue. The plaintiff recovered a judgment for $1,000, and the defendant appealed. The negligence charged in the petition is that the city constructed and maintained a manhole to a sewer in the street, which projected 3 feet above the level of the street, and which was about 6 feet in circumference, and had earth piled around the manhole, which was 9 feet and 6 inches in diameter at the base, and sloped towards the top, which, it is alleged, was a dangerous obstruction. The answer is a general denial and a plea of contributory negligence. The facts are these: Vernon avenue is only 1 block long, and extends from West End avenue to Walton avenue, and is 60 feet wide. About a year before the accident the city had constructed a sewer near the center of the street, preparatory to constructing the street. The top of the manhole was made to conform to the grade of the street when it was constructed, but is about 3 feet above the level of the street in its present condition. This left a driveway on the north of the manhole 8 feet 4 inches wide, and one on the south of the manhole 12 feet 10 inches wide. When the city finished building the sewer, the appropriation for the improvement of the street ran out, and the work had to be stopped. So this condition had existed for about a year before the accident occurred. The plaintiff was employed by the Union Dairy Company as a driver of one of its milk wagons, and had been delivering milk in that neighborhood for over five years, and on Vernon avenue for over a year. He had to deliver milk to a regular customer at No. 4635 Vernon avenue, and an irregular customer on the opposite side of the street. That was the end of his route, and, when he delivered milk to these customers, he turned and came east again. The manhole stood in the center of the street, and nearly opposite to the steps that lead up into the premises No. 4635 Vernon avenue. The plaintiff knew all about the manhole, and had seen it and driven around it every day for a year, sometimes west of it and sometimes turning east of it. On the morning of the accident he drove to 4635 Vernon avenue, and got out and delivered milk. When he got out of the wagon, he hung the reins up on a hook at the top of the wagon, which held the horse so he could not move without pulling the wagon by his mouth. He says his horse knew the way as well as he did, and did not need to be guided, and he frequently let him go along without directing him, and he knew where to stop. After delivering the milk, he got into the wagon and took the reins off of the hook, and the horse started. He says he does not remember whether he turned the horse, or whether he let the horse turn of his own accord. At any rate, the horse turned the wagon to go east again, and, in so doing, ran up on the pile of earth surrounding the manhole, upset the wagon, and the plaintiff was hurt. He says it was about 6 o'clock in the morning, and that, while it was after daybreak, the morning was dark and foggy, but not so much so as to prevent his seeing the manhole if he had looked. Other witnesses said that while it was foggy one could see across the street and anyone could see the manhole. The plaintiff says that he thought he had passed the manhole and consequently was not looking for it. At the close of the plaintiff's case and again at the close of the whole case the defendant demurred to the evidence. The court overruled the demurrers and the defendant excepted and relies solely upon this ruling upon this appeal.

The contention of the defendant is that the city was guilty of no negligence in constructing and maintaining the manhole in the condition shown, but then even if it was, its negligence was not the proximate cause of the injury, but that the plaintiff well knew the fact and the condition, and was guilty of such contributory negligence as bars a recovery. On the other hand, the plaintiff contends that, while he knew of the existence and condition of the manhole, and might have seen it and avoided it, still he was not obliged to keep it in mind, but had a right to think of something else, and that his mind was engrossed with his work, and he thought he had passed the manhole, and therefore he was guilty of no contributory negligence. The city had a clear legal right to build the sewer, and to leave it projecting 3 feet above the natural level of the unimproved street, and so that it would conform to the established grade of the street when it was improved. But it took the risk in so doing of someone who was unacquainted with its existence and condition, and who was traveling along the street in the nighttime, when he could not see the obstruction, running against it and being injured. Such a person would be entitled to recover, because as to him the city was negligent, and he was not. But the plaintiff does not fall within this rule, for he knew all about the manhole, and it was light enough at the time of the accident for him to see it; and, by the exercise of ordinary care, he could easily have avoided it, just as he had done every day, about the same hour of the day, for a year. It is not clear whether the plaintiff let the horse turn without guidance, or whether he directed him; but, in either event, he is responsible for the wagon striking the mound around the manhole and being upset, for, by the exercise of any care whatever, he could have avoided it. It is true, as claimed by the plaintiff that no one is precluded from traveling a highway in which he knows there are obstructions or defects, and on which he has business, and his knowledge of the condition of the street will not conclusively bar his recovery. Barr v. Kansas, 105 Mo. 550, 16 S. W. 483; Market v. St. Louis, 56 Mo. 189; Buesching v. St. Louis Gaslight Co. 73 Mo. 219, 39 Am. Rep. 503; Loewer v. Sedalia, 77 Mo. 431; Staples v. Canton, 69 Mo. 592. But whilst this is true, the person who knows of such defects, and is injured, must use reasonable care while traveling along such defective street, and that care must increase in proportion to his knowledge of the risk. Foster v. Scope, 41 Mo. App. 137. And such knowledge of the danger is admissible to prove contributory negligence. Flynn v. Neosho, 114 Mo. 567, 21 S. W. 903. As was well said by Lord Ellenborough, Ch. J.: "A party is not to cast himself upon an obstruction which has been made by the fault of another, and avail himself of it, if he do not himself use common and ordinary caution to be right. . . . One person being in fault will not dispense with another's using ordinary care for himself. Two things must concur to support this action—an obstruction in the road by the fault of the defendant, and no want of ordinary care to avoid it on the part of the plaintiff." Butterfield v. Forrester, 11 East, 60. And this court approved the rule so laid down, in an opinion per Gantt, P. J., in Sindlinger v. Kansas, 126 Mo. 315, 26 L. R. A. 723, 28 S. W. 857, and speaking of the rule said: "This is the general rule of law as to contributory negligence, which applies, as of course, to actions brought by travelers for injuries received by reason of defects or obstructions upon the highway. Beach, Contrib. Neg. 2d ed. § 246. Ordinarily the question whether the plaintiff, under all the circumstances, has been guilty of contributory negligence, is one for the jury. Loewer v. Sedalia, 77 Mo. 431. But if the evidence elicited to establish the contributory negligence of plaintiff admits of no other fair inference than that he was negligent, and that his own negligence contributed directly to, or was, in other words, the proximate cause of, the injury, then it becomes one for the court, and a demurrer to the evidence will be sustained." The same rule was recognized in Wiggin v. St. Louis, 135 Mo. 553, 37 S. W. 528, and in Cohn v. Kansas, 108 Mo. 387, 18 S. W. 973.

The plaintiff in this case knew of the obstruction in the street, and knew that by the exercise of ordinary care he could avoid striking it while traveling along the street. His act in striking it was therefore, per se, contributory negligence. Erie v. Magill, 101 Pa. 616, 47 Am. Rep. 739; Schaeffer v. Sandusky, 33 Ohio St. 246, 31 Am. Rep. 533; Quincy v. Barker, 81 Ill. 300, 25 Am. Rep. 278; Church v. Howard City, 111 Mich. 298, 66 Am. St. Rep. 396, 69 N. W. 651; Salem v. Walker, 16 Ind. App. 687, 46 N. E. 90; Tuffree v. State Center, 57 Iowa, 538, 11 N. W. 1; Yahn v. Ottumwa, 60 Iowa, 433, 15 N. W. 257; Benton v. Philadelphia, 198 Pa. 396, 48 Atl. 267; Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. Jones, 59 Neb. 510, 81 N. W. 435; Moore v. Richmond, 85 Va. 545, 8 S. E. 387; Walker v. Reidsville, 96 N. C. loc. cit. 385, 2 S. E. 74; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 412.

The contention of the plaintiff that he had a right to have his mind so engrossed in his business that he did not think of the obstruction, or thought he had passed it, is wholly untenable. Persons traveling on a highway are charged with a duty to exercise reasonable care to observe and avoid obstructions and defects. They have no right to be so engrossed in their own affairs as to be negligent of their own safety. As was well said by Campbell, Ch. J., in Hutchins v. Priestly Express Wagon & Sleigh Co. 61 Mich. 252, 28 N. W. 85, in speaking of a man who walked into an elevator shaft, instead of a door close to it: "The only explanation of his conduct is—what there is no difficulty in gathering from his own testimony, although he does not seem to be aware of it—that he is one of those persons who pay little heed to their surroundings, and go hither and thither on their errands absent-minded, or thinking only of some particular object, and shutting their eyes to everything else. Such inattention is sometimes dangerous to the person himself, and quite as often to his neighbors. It is a want of that ordinary care which the safety of society requires all sane persons of mature age to exercise, and for which they are civilly responsible. Business could not be carried on without this requirement." The rule has recently undergone review in other jurisdictions. In Cowie v. Seattle, 22 Wash. 659, 62 Pac. 121, the supreme court of Washington held that a person who is perfectly familiar with the condition of a sidewalk in which a defect exists has no right, while using it, to act on the ordinary presumption that it is in good condition. In Cloney v. Kalamazoo, 124 Mich. 655, 83 N. W. 618, the syllabus is as follows: "In an action for injuries to a pedestrian caused by his stepping into an unguarded excavation made in a cross walk of a city street in tearing up the pavement of the street for the purpose of repaving, it appeared that plaintiff knew that the work was being done at or near the crossing where the accident occurred, and, having seen the work going forward, must have been aware that such excavations were being made, and, though it was at night, he could have readily seen the excavation before stepping into it, as there was an arc light hanging over the street near such point, besides other lights in the vicinity. Plaintiff testified that he was observing a team at the time, and that he was not aware that the work was being done exactly at the crossing. Held, that a verdict should have been directed for the defendant city." To the same effect are Dale v. Webster County, 76 Iowa, 370, 41 N. W. 1, where the plaintiff knew of the defect, and walked along without looking where he was going; Tuffree v. State Center, 57 Iowa, 538, 11 N. W. 1, where the plaintiff drove in one direction, and was looking and talking to persons in another direction; Tasker v. Farmingdale, 91 Me. 521, 40 Atl. 544, where the plaintiff was absorbed in looking at an electric car, and gave no thought to the dangers on the road, and drove a wheel of her conveyance over the end of a culvert; Gilman v. Deerfield, 15 Gray, 577, where the plaintiff knew of the defect in the highway, and while thinking of something else, and, temporarily unmindful of the defect, drove into it; Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. Jones, 59 Neb. 510, 81 N. W. 435, where the plaintiff knew of the defect, and, while thinking of something else, drove over a stump in the road. In short, the rule is supported, not only by the almost universal trend of authority, both English and American, but also by the plainest principles of right and justice. While the city owes the citizen the duty to keep the highways reasonably safe for persons to pass over, the citizen owes the city the duty to use his God-given senses, and not to run into obstructions that he is familiar with, or which by the exercise of ordinary care he could discover and easily avoid. And while the city may be negligent in the discharge of its duty, the citizen may also be negligent in the discharge of his duty. And if both are negligent, and their negligence contributes to the injury, there can be no recovery. And if the plaintiff's negligence necessarily contributes to the happening of the injury, there can be no recovery. Such is clearly this case. The negligence of the city had continued for a year. The plaintiff knew it, and by the exercise of ordinary care he had avoided injury from it every day, and about the same hour every day, for a year. He could have avoided it on the day of the accident if he had exercised ordinary care. He was negligent in letting the horse turn unguided, or in so guiding him as to strike the obstruction he knew was there. Without his contributory negligence, no injury would have resulted to him from the negligence of the city. He made out no case for the jury. The demurrers to the evidence should have been sustained.

The judgment is reversed.

All concur.

Fannie E. HALEY, Appt.,
v.

ST. LOUIS TRANSIT COMPANY, Respt.

(.....Mo.....)

Failure to stop a street car at the destination of a passenger, by reason of which he is carried to the next street, is not the proximate cause of his falling on a slippery pavement in attempting to return to the point where he should have been permitted to leave the car.

(December 23, 1903.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the St. Louis Circuit Court in defendant's favor in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Lyon & Swarts and Charles M. Polk for appellant.

Mr. G. W. Easley, with Messrs. Boyle, Priest, & Lehmann, for respondent:

NOTE.—As to duty of railway company to assist passenger in alighting after carrying her beyond station platform, see, in this series, Foss v. Boston & M. R. Co. 11 L. R. A. 367.

As to liability of street railway company for injury to passenger because of unevenness of ground at place used for alighting, see Pool v. Consolidated Street R. Co. 25 L. R. A. 744.

There was no causal connection between defendant's failure to stop the car at Garrison avenue and the plaintiff's injuries. Her injuries were not the "direct and immediate consequence" of carrying her past Garrison avenue.

Sira v. Wabash R. Co. 115 Mo. 138, 37 Am. St. Rep. 386, 21 S. W. 905; Haley v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 21 Iowa, 15; Burlington & M. River R. Co. v. Rose, 11 Neb. 177, 8 N. W. 433.

The sidewalk was no more dangerous to the plaintiff than to any others passing over it, and her fall bore no causal relation to her having been carried past Garrison avenue, and cannot be said to have been the proximate cause of her injury.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Johnson, 92 Ala. 204, 25 Am. St. Rep. 35, 9 So. 269; Moak's Underhill, Torts, 16; Cooley, Torts, 73; Addison, Torts, 40; Wharton, Neg. 138; Phillips v. Dickerson, 85 Ill. 11, 28 Am. Rep. 607; McClelland v. Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co. 94 Ind. 276; Morrison v. Davis, 20 Pa. 171, 57 Am. Dec. 695; McClary v. Sioux City & P. R. Co. 3 Neb. 44, 19 Am. Rep. 631; Bosch v. Burlington & M. R. Co. 44 Iowa, 402, 24 Am. Rep. 754; Brown v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 20 Mo. App. 222; Francis v. St. Louis Transfer Co. 5 Mo. App. 7; Henry v. St. Louis, K. O. & N. R. Co. 76 Mo. 288, 43 Am. Rep. 762; Ashley v. Harrison, 1 Esp. 49; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Staley, 41 Ohio St. 118, 52 Am. Rep. 74; Swinfin v. Lowry, 37 Minn. 345, 34 N. W. 22; Shurtleff v. Parker, 130 Mass. 293, 39 Am. Rep. 454; Ward v. Weeks, 7 Bing. 211; Alexander v. New Castle, 115 Ind. 51, 17 N. E. 200; Barton v. Pepin County Agri. Soc. 83 Wis. 19, 52 N. W. 1129.

Brace, P. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This in an action for damages for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff in consequence of a fall upon a sidewalk in the city of St. Louis. The defendant objected to the introduction of any evidence under the petition on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The objection was overruled, and evidence introduced by plaintiff, at the close of which the court, at the request of the defendant, instructed the jury "that under the pleadings and the evidence in this case the plaintiff is not entitled to recover, and your verdict must be for the defendant." Thereupon plaintiff took a nonsuit with leave, and thereafter, her motion to set the same aside, duly filed, having been overruled, she appealed, and assigns for error the giving of defendant's instruction in the nature of a demurrer to the evidence.

The case made by the plaintiff's evidence is substantially as follows: The plaintiff at the time of the injury was a dressmaker, sixty years of age, weighing 170 pounds, and resided at 1017 North Garrison avenue,—the southwest corner of Garrison and Easton avenues. She was in perfect health, and, in the language of one of her witnesses, "was robust, tall, proud, well dressed, had style about her, and earned $2 a day making dresses." On the 30th of December, 1899, about 10 o'clock at night, the plaintiff boarded the west-bound Easton avenue car of the defendant at the crossing of Eighteenth street and Franklin avenue for the purpose of returning to her home at the southwest corner of Garrison and Easton avenues. As the car was approaching Garrison avenue, where she desired to alight, she pushed the button and rang the bell twice, once before the car reached the street next east of Garrison avenue, and again, when the car was a short distance east of Garrison avenue; but the car did not stop until it reached the next street—Cardinal avenue—one block west of Garrison avenue. When the car stopped she went to the door, "fussed" with the conductor, who was on the platform outside, for not stopping, got off the car on the north side, went to the north sidewalk of Easton avenue, and was walking east toward Garrison avenue and her home on that sidewalk, when she fell, and thereby sustained an intracapsular fracture of the femur, or a broken bone of the neck of the hip. The injury is serious and permanent. It further appeared from the plaintiff's evidence that on the 30th of December, 1899, the maximum temperature in St. Louis was 13, the minimum 7, and that there was a half inch of snow on the ground that evening, and the weather clear; that the snow fell principally on December 27th, on which day the fall was 1.3 inches; that the snow-storm on the 27th of December was general throughout the city, and there was no snow fall after 10:35 A. M. of that day; that the maximum temperature on that day was 24 and the minimum 18, and on the 28th the maximum was 26 and the minimum 15, and on the 29th the maximum was 19 and the minimum 11. The evidence further tended to show that the night of the 30th of December, although clear, was dark; that there was more light at the Garrison avenue crossing than there was at the Cardinal avenue crossing; that the sidewalk on which plaintiff was walking was covered with snow and ice, was slippery, was shaded by trees growing thereon, and that the stores along it were all closed, and that such was the condition at the place where she fell, which was about half way between the two streets.

The evidence for the plaintiff made a prima facie case of negligence against the defendant, in that its servants failed to stop the car at Garrison avenue, in compliance with plaintiff's timely signal therefor, given in the manner and by the means provided by the defendant for that purpose, and the only question presented by the record is, Was such negligence the proximate cause of the injuries for which she seeks to recover damages in this action? The learned counsel for the plaintiff contend that it should be so held, and cite many cases in support of this contention. We have carefully examined all of these cases, and find that each of them is easily distinguishable from this case, and have found none in which a defendant has been held liable in circumstances like those of the case in hand. As was said by Mr. Justice Miller in Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. 44, loc. cit. 52, 19 L. ed. 65: "It would be an unprofitable labor to enter into an examination of these cases. If we could deduce from them the best possible expression of the rule, it would remain, after all, to decide each case largely upon the special facts belonging to it, and often upon the very nicest discriminations." In the opinion of Mr. Justice Strong in Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, loc. cit. 475, 24 L. ed. 256, may be found perhaps as brief, and yet as comprehensive, an expression of the rule as can well be given. The learned justice there says: "The question always is, Was there an unbroken connection between the wrongful act and the injury, a continuous operation? Did the facts constitute a continuous succession of events, so linked together as to make a natural whole, or was there some new and independent cause intervening between the wrong and the injury? It is admitted that the rule is difficult of application. But it is generally held that, in order to warrant a finding that negligence, or an act not amounting to wanton wrong, is the proximate cause of an injury, it must appear that the injury was the natural and probable consequence of the negligence or wrongful act, and that it ought to have been foreseen in the light of the attending circumstances." There was no wanton wrong in this case. The negligence consisted simply in a failure to stop the car, in obedience to the plaintiff's signal, at the crossing nearest to her residence, in consequence of which she was carried to the next crossing, one block further west, where, of her own volition, she left the car in safety. This was the negligence and the immediate and proximate consequence thereof. The plaintiff, after safely alighting at the crossing, in returning to the crossing at which she intended to alight, fell on the sidewalk leading from the one to the other. The injury she received was the result of such fall. The evidence tended to prove that the immediate cause of her fall was the slippery condition of the sidewalk, and that condition may be said to have been the proximate cause of her injury, and thus the causal connection between the negligence complained of and the injury received was broken by the independent and voluntary act of the plaintiff in leaving the car at the crossing one block west of the crossing where she intended to alight. Even if we can go back of the slippery condition of the sidewalk, which was the immediate cause of the injury, to that voluntary act of the plaintiff must the injury be attributed, unless such act and the injury resulting therefrom were the probable consequence of the negligent act of the defendant, and ought to have been foreseen by its servants in the light of the attending circumstances. It may be conceded that the act of the plaintiff in getting off at the next crossing, and in returning by the sidewalk towards the crossing which had been passed, were probable consequences of the negligence of defendant in failing to stop the car at the crossing for which she signaled, which ought to have been foreseen. But it does not at all follow that the accident which befell the plaintiff was one which, in the light of the attending circumstances, ought to have been foreseen by defendant's servants as the probable consequence of plaintiff's walking thereon with due and proper care. Such accident was not the natural and usual sequence of such a walk under such circumstances. The natural and usual sequence of the walk of an ordinarily prudent adult person in perfect health and of a robust constitution as plaintiff was, whether that walk be long or short, whether by day or night, whether in weather cold or hot, on the improved sidewalks of a city in good repair, in its much-traveled thoroughfare as this sidewalk was, is that such persons safely arrive at their destinations. Persons sometimes fall on these sidewalks and are injured, but these are unusual and extraordinary occurrences not to be expected or foreseen. If the sidewalk is defective, so as not to be reasonably safe, by which a pedestrian thereon in the exercise of due care is injured, the city is liable for damages. If he is injured by obstructions or dangers created therein by another, such other person is liable therefor, and the city may become so. But in neither event is the pedestrian thereon, or he who may have caused him to become such, in fault. The defendant in this case was charged with no other or different duty in regard to the sidewalk in question than was the plaintiff herself. The fact that by reason of climatic conditions, or other natural causes, the sidewalk may have been in less safe condition than usual, in no way changes the relative rights, duties, or obligations of the parties. Such conditions only impose the necessity of being more cautious when walking thereon. Pedestrians exercising due care sometimes fall and are injured while walking on the public sidewalks under such conditions, but such occurrences are unusual and extraordinary, and not to be anticipated or foreseen. For support of their contention plaintiff's counsel seem to rely more upon the dicta contained in some of the opinions in the cases cited than upon the facts in judgment in those cases. Most of them are steam railroad cases, in which, in violation of the carrier's contract, the passenger was put off the car on the carrier's track in a dangerous situation, from which his injuries directly resulted, or at a distance from his destination, which he could only reach by pursuance of a dangerous way on or along its tracks, and in which was located a peril known to the carrier, and which the passenger must encounter, and from which his injuries resulted. We find no difficulty in differentiating the case in hand from all the cases cited on the facts in each, and only in the facts in each case can the dicta in each be fully appreciated and rightly understood. We have neither time nor space for an adequate review of all those cases, nor do we deem it necessary, since no better rule could be deduced therefrom on the vexed question of proximate cause, as applicable to the facts in this case, than that already laid down, and under which it seems evident that the defendant's negligence was not the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injury.

64 L. R. A.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

All concur.

NEW HAMPSHIRE SUPREME COURT.

BANCROFT et al.

v.

UNION EMBOSSING COMPANY.

(.....N. H.)

1. That the belief of the parties to a contract for the exclusive right to manufacture machines of a certain pattern that the principal feature in the machine was patentable proves to be erroneous is not such a failure of consideration as will entitle the one obtaining the right to make the machines to rescind the contract, since the rights of the parties are to be governed by the terms of the contract, and their belief as to the rights obtained is immaterial.
2. A contract by one selling the right to manufacture and sell a machine which he has devised, not to engage in the business of making such machines himself, nor grant anyone else the right to do so during the life of the contract, is not void as against public policy, where possible customers are limited in number and scattered throughout the country.
3. A contract not to compete in the manufacture of machinery under patterns, the right to use which is sold to the other contracting party, is not invalidated by the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, prohibiting restraints of trade and commerce among the several states and with foreign nations.

(December 31, 1903.)

EXCEPTIONS by both plaintiffs and defendant to rulings of the Superior Court for Hillsborough County made during the trial of an action to recover the contract price for the use of patterns in the construction of certain machines which resulted in a recovery in plaintiffs' favor for an amount less than their demand; the plaintiffs excepting to so much as denied a recovery for the full amount, and defendant excepting to so much as permitted any recovery. Plaintiffs' exception sustained.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Eastman & Hollis, for plaintiffs:

To entitle the defendant to rescind its contract, or to excuse it from performance of its promises, there must have been a total failure of consideration; mere inadequacy of consideration, or partial failure of consideration, will not suffice.

2 Parson, Contr. 5th ed. 679; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 645; Bedel v. Loomis, 11 N. H. 9; Sandborn v. French, 22 N. H. 246; Perkins v. Clay, 54 N. H. 518; Gove v. Newton, 58 N. H. 359; Probate Judge v. Adams, 49 N. H. 150; Cass v. Morey, 1 N. H. 347; Jenkins v. Abbotts, 54 N. H. 447; Clark v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. 62 N. H. 612.

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to validity of contract, on sale or lease of business, not to re-engage in such business, see Leslie v. Lorillard, 1 L. R. A. 456, and cases in note; National Benefit Co. v. Union Hospital Co. 11 L. R. A. 437; Gamewell Fire Alarm Teleg. Co. v. Crane, 22 L. R. A. 673, and note; Oakdale Mfg. Co. v. Garst, 23 L. R. A. 639; Cowan v. 64 L. R. A.

Fairbrother, 32 L. R. A. 829; Kramer v. Old, 34 L. R. A. 389; Lufkin Rule Co. v. Fringeli, 41 L. R. A. 185; Anchor Electric Co. v. Hawks, 41 L. R. A. 189; Trenton Potteries Co. v. Oliphant, 46 L. R. A. 255; Clark v. Needham, 51 L. R. A. 785; Pohlman v. Dawson, 54 L. R. A. 913, and Swigert v. Tilden, 63 L. R. A. 608.

The failure of consideration alleged by the defendant is the disappointment of its expectation that a broad, fundamental patent would be obtained which would give it a monopoly of the business and enable it to prevent competition. But this defense is not open to it here for the simple reason that the plaintiffs made no promise or agreement to obtain such a patent, but, on the contrary, expressly stipulated in the written agreement that the contract should continue and bind the parties for twenty years, even if no such patent should be granted upon said machine.

24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 645.

This contract is not a mere license.

Buss v. Putney, 38 N. H. 44; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 431.

Since, at the time of the defendant's attempted rescission, there was a valid and subsisting, past and executed, consideration for its promise to pay, it must follow that it cannot repudiate its contract, and refuse to pay the sums stipulated.

Jarecki v. Hays, 161 Pa. 613, 29 Atl. 118; Pressey v. Smith, 45 N. J. Eq. 872, 19 Atl. 618.

Messrs. Arthur W. Morgan and Bradford & Hood for defendant.

Bingham, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The questions in this case arise upon exceptions taken by the parties to the findings and rulings made in the superior court. At the time the contract in question was executed, the plaintiffs had not procured a patent upon their embossing machine; but the parties believed that its principal feature was novel, and that the plaintiffs would obtain a patent which would control the manufacture and sale of the machine. The plaintiffs, however, were not successful in obtaining such a patent, although patents were granted to them upon some minor parts. The defendant operated under the contract for a period of over two years, and down to May 27, 1901, when it notified the plaintiffs that it would not be further bound by it. After this notification the defendant manufactured and sold nine of the machines, four of which were sold before the middle of July, 1901, when the patterns mentioned in the contract were returned to the plaintiffs. This suit is brought upon the contract to recover the sum of $200 for each of the nine machines so manufactured and sold. The superior court ruled that there was such a failure of consideration as entitled the defendant to rescind the contract; that a rescission was made within a reasonable time, but was not completed until the middle of July, 1901, when the patterns were returned; and that the plaintiffs could recover the price named in the contract for each of the four machines sold prior to the return of the patterns, but not for those sold after that time.

The plaintiffs claim that the fact that the parties believed the principal feature of the machine was patentable, when it was not, did not constitute a failure of consideration entitling the defendant to rescind the contract; that the consideration for the defendant's undertaking is to be found in the contract itself; that the belief of the parties as to the novelty and patentability of the principal feature of the machine is immaterial; and that the material question is what the parties understood, as gathered from the terms of the written contract. We are inclined to accede to this view of the case. This is not a proceeding to reform the contract, but to enforce its provisions as therein expressed. If the contract as drawn does not express the understanding of the parties at the time it was made, it can be reformed upon proper proceedings instituted for that purpose; but, until reformed, their understanding is to be ascertained from the written contract, viewed in the light of the circumstances under which it was executed; and a finding as to the belief of the parties, based upon evidence gathered from extraneous sources, is immaterial. Horne v. Hutchins, 72 N. H. 214, 55 Atl. 364.

It is apparent from the contract that the plaintiffs did not agree that they would be successful in obtaining patents, fundamental or otherwise, upon the machine, or that the defendant should be excused from complying with its terms in case a fundamental patent was not obtained. What the plaintiffs undertook to do is there set forth in plain and unambiguous terms. After stating that they were ready and willing to give the defendant "the exclusive right, so far as it is in their power, to manufacture and sell the said machines," they agree (1) that the defendant shall have "full and exclusive license under any letters patent which may be granted to them . . . for inventions and improvements contained in or relating to said embossing machine, for the full term for which any such letters patent are or may be granted, including any renewal, reissue, or extension thereof," whether obtained from the government of the United States or any foreign country; (2) "that they will not during the existence of this contract make, vend, or use any embossing machines" of the type named; (3) that they will give to the defendant "all patterns and drawings which they have relating to such machines, and will furnish such drawings as may be necessary for the manufacture of the machine; and will give it the benefit of their advice and co-operation in the manufacture of the said machines so long as this contract shall remain in force;" (4) that they will transfer to the defendant "all orders which they now have or may hereafter have for embossing machines of the type . . . described," except two orders specifically named; (5) "that they will not during the existence of this contract in any way sell or assign any letters patent of the United States or any foreign country relating to said machine or any improvement thereon, or grant any rights thereunder;" and (6) that "this contract shall last for the full term for which any letters patent upon the applications of the [plaintiffs] . . . are or may be granted, including any renewal, reissue, or extension thereof; and, if no such patent shall be granted upon said machine, then this contract shall last for the term of twenty years from the date hereof." These undertakings of the plaintiffs constituted the consideration for those of the defendant; and it is found that the plaintiffs "did what in the agreement was covenanted and agreed," and that "in consequence . . . the defendant was relieved from competition with the plaintiffs." The contract was not a mere license to the defendant to manufacture and sell machines of this type, provided the plaintiffs were successful in obtaining an exclusive right by letters patent upon the principal feature of the machine, and an agreement to waive the enforcement of such right against the defendant; but was a sale of the plaintiffs' good will in the business of manufacturing and selling machines of this type, together with any patent rights which they might procure upon the machine from the government of the United States or any foreign country, and an agreement not to make, vend, or use the machine during the existence of the contract. Wood v. Whitehead Bros. Co. 165 N. Y. 545, 59 N. E. 357; Brett v. Ebel, 29 App. Div. 256, 51 N. Y. Supp. 573.

But the defendant says that, if such was the nature of the contract, it was in general restraint of trade and void, for the reason that it was unlimited as to territory, although limited as to time. An agreement in restraint of a man's right to exercise his trade or calling, according to the early common law of England, was void as against public policy. In those days a man could not lawfully exercise a trade to which he had not been duly apprenticed, and one so admitted was obliged by statute to follow and exercise his trade under a penalty. Pol- lock, Contr. 313. Hence, to enforce such an agreement was to deny the covenantor the right to earn his living, and to require him to violate an express provision of law. When the courts first began to recognize as valid any restraint upon trade, such restraints were confined within very narrow limits. The limitations which were allowed were such as were clearly necessary to protect the covenantee in the ordinary exercise of his trade or calling, having reference to the state of society and the conditions under which business was then carried on. In the application of this principle of reasonable necessity, a classification of agreements in restraint of trade came to be recognized, to wit: (1) Where the restraint was unlimited both as to time and space; (2) where it was limited as to time, but unlimited as to space; (3) where it was limited as to space, but unlimited as to time; and (4) where it was limited as to both time and space. If the agreement fell within the first or second class, it was held to be void; but if within the third or fourth it was valid. In this jurisdiction three cases have arisen, two of which came within the second class, and one within the fourth class, and in all of them the contracts were upheld: Webster v. Buss, 61 N. H. 40, 60 Am. Rep. 317; Eastern Exp. Co. v. Meserve, 60 N. H. 198; Perkins v. Clay, 54 N. H. 518. Whether the contracts were considered reasonable, having reference to the nature of the business and the circumstances of each case, is not stated. No decision has been found in our Reports in which the restraint was of the nature now under consideration.

Within the past few years the above classification, as a hard and fast rule of decision, has been questioned; and the House of Lords and many of the courts of this country, after an extensive review of the cases, have refused to be bound by it. Nordenfelt v. Maxim Nordenfelt Guns & Ammunition Co. [1894] A. C. 535; Rousillon v. Rousillon, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 351; Anchor Electric Co. v. Hawkes, 171 Mass. 101, 41 L. R. A. 189, 68 Am. St. Rep. 403, 50 N. E. 509; Watertown Thermometer Co. v. Pool, 51 Hun, 157, 163, 4 N. Y. Supp. 861; United States Cordage Co. v. William Wall's Son's Rope Co. 90 Hun, 429, 434, 35 N. Y. Supp. 978; Ru Ton v. Everitt, 35 App. Div. 412, 54 N. Y. Supp. 896; Diamond Match Co. v. Roeber, 106 N. Y. 473, 60 Am. Rep. 464, 13 N. E. 419; Wood v. Whitehead Bros. Co. 165 N. Y. 545, 59 N. E. 357; National Enameling & Stamping Co. v. Haberman, 120 Fed. 415; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 842-862. The conclusion reached in these decisions is that the validity of the agreement depend upon the reasonableness of the restraint as applied to the particular circumstances of each case, and that the contract is necessarily unreasonable and void if it is not limited as to space. It has even been denied that the alleged rule as to limits of space ever existed in England, as a positive rule of law, in any class of cases. Rousillon v. Rousillon, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 366. If, as is quite probable, this classification was the result of the application of the principle of reasonable necessity in a series of cases, at a time when trade and intercourse were necessarily confined to a given locality or to comparatively narrow limits, and the classification as applied to those conditions met the rule of reasonableness, there would seem to be no reason for its continued recognition and application, as a hard and fast rule, to cases arising under the enlarged and materially changed conditions in which trade and commerce are now carried on, but rather that there should be a recurrence to and application of the principle itself.

In Wood v. Whitehead Bros. Co. 165 N. Y. 545, 59 N. E. 357, Gray, J., in speaking of the doctrine which avoids a contract for being one in restraint of trade, says: "It had its origin at a time when the field of human enterprise was limited, and when each man's industrial activity was more or less necessary to the material well-being and welfare of the community and of the state. . . . The conditions which made so rigid a doctrine reasonable no longer exist. In the present practically unlimited field of human enterprise, there is no good reason for restricting the freedom to contract, or for fearing injury to the public from contracts which prevent a person from carrying on a particular business. Interference would only be justifiable when it was demonstrable that in some way the public interests were endangered. But contracts between parties, which have for their object the removal of a rival and competitor in a business, are not to be regarded as contracts in restraint of trade. They do not close the field of competition, except as to the particular party to be affected. To say at the present day that such a contract as was made in this case was affected by a public interest, and was a matter of public concern, would be, in my opinion, unreasonable."

In Diamond Match Co. v. Roeder, 106 N. Y. 473, 60 Am. Rep. 464; 13 N. E. 419, Andrews, J., says: "When the restraint is general, but at the same time is coextensive only with the interest to be protected and with the benefit meant to be conferred, there seems to be no good reason why, as between the parties, the contract is not as reasonable as when the interest is partial, and there is a corresponding partial restraint. And is there any real public interest which necessarily condemns the one, and not the other? It is an encouragement to industry and to enterprise, in building up a trade, that a man shall be allowed to sell the good will of the business and the fruits of his industry upon the best terms he can obtain. If his business extends over a continent, does public policy forbid his accompanying the sale with a stipulation for restraint coextensive with the business which he sells? If such a contract is permitted, is the seller any more likely to become a burden on the public than a man who, having built up a local trade only, sells it, binding himself not to carry it on in the locality? Are the opportunities for employment and for the exercise of useful talents so shut up and hemmed in that the public is likely to lose a useful member of society in the one case and not in the other? Indeed, what public policy requires is often a vague and difficult inquiry. It is clear that public policy and the interests of society favor the utmost freedom of contract, within the law, and require that business transactions should not be trammelled by unnecessary restrictions. If . . . there is one thing more than any other which public policy requires, it is that men of full age and competent understanding shall have the utmost liberty of contracting, and that contracts, when entered into freely and voluntarily, shall be held good, and shall be enforced by courts of justice. It has sometimes been suggested that the doctrine that contracts in general restraint of trade are void is founded in part upon the policy of preventing monopolies, which are opposed to the liberty of the subject, and the granting of which by the King, under claim of royal prerogative, led to conflicts memorable in English history. But covenants of the character of the one now in question operate simply to prevent the covenantor from engaging in the business which he sells, so as to protect the purchaser in the enjoyment of what he has purchased. To the extent that the contract prevents the vendor from carrying on the particular trade, it deprives the community of any benefit it might derive from his entering into competition. But the business is open to all others, and there is little danger that the public will suffer harm from lack of persons to engage in a profitable industry. Such contracts do not create monopolies. They confer no special or exclusive privilege. If contracts in general restraint of trade, where the trade is general, are void as tending to monopolies, contracts in partial restraint, where the trade is local, are subject to the same objection, because they deprive the local community of the services of the covenantor in the particular trade or calling, and prevent his becoming a competitor with the covenantee. We are not aware of any rule of law which makes the motive of the covenantee the test of the validity of such a contract. On the contrary, we suppose a party may legally purchase the trade and business of another for the very purpose of preventing competition; and the validity of the contract, if supported by a consideration, will depend upon its reasonableness as between the parties. Combination between producers to limit production and to enhance prices are or may be unlawful, but they stand on a different footing."

It seems to us that, inasmuch as public policy requires that a man should be free to sell in the most advantageous way what he has obtained by his skill or other means, the same public policy should permit him to enter into restrictive covenants in aid of the thing sold, provided the restriction, in the judgment of the court, is not unreasonable, having regard to the subject-matter of the contract. And it seems to be generally held that the question whether the restriction is reasonable, as applied in this class of cases, is one of law, and not of fact. Anchor Electric Co. v. Hawkes, 171 Mass. 101, 41 L. R. A. 189, 68 Am. St. Rep. 403, 50 N. E. 509; Cohen v. Berlin & J. Envelope Co. 166 N. Y. 292, 59 N. E. 906; Linn v. Sigsbee, 67 Ill. 75; Haynes v. Doman [1899] 2 Ch. Div. 24; Pollock, Contr. 316; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 858. In the application of this principle, the question is whether the restraint affords more than a fair and reasonable protection to the party in whose favor it is imposed. If it does not, the contract should be upheld. It will be noticed that the contract in this case does not restrain the plaintiffs from manufacturing and selling embossing machines of every description, as was the case in Berlin Match Works v. Perry, 71 Wis. 495, 5 Am. St. Rep. 236, 38 N. W. 82, cited by the defendant, but simply those involving the specific feature which the defendant was to manufacture and sell under the contract; and considering the nature of the business, the admitted limited number of customers, and their location throughout the various states of this country, we do not think the restriction can be held to exceed what is necessary for the protection of the purchaser, or that it violates any principle of public policy.

The defendant also contends that the contract comes within the provisions of act of Congress, July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), preventing restraints upon trade and commerce among the several states and foreign nations, and is therefore void. But we fail to see how the contract comes within this statute. It does not place or contemplate any direct restraint upon the right of the defendant to make sales of the manufactured article in any of the United States or any foreign country. Under it, the defendant was at liberty to carry on its trade in all of the states of the Union or any foreign country. This contention was raised in Brett v. Ebel, 29 App. Div. 256, 51 N. Y. Supp. 573, where the restraint was of a similar nature, and it was held that the contract was not in contravention of the act or within its spirit; that if the "act were to be construed literally and technically, so as to embrace such a contract, . . . it would involve consequences most harmful to the commercial community, consequences which . . . were never contemplated by the lawmakers." See also United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 271. The Supreme Court of the United States, in considering this statute, has said: "When it is seen that the agreement entered into does not directly relate to and act upon and embrace interstate commerce, and that it was executed for another and entirely different purpose, and that it was calculated to attain it, the agreement would be upheld, if its effect upon that commerce were only indirect and incidental." Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 221, 244, 44 L. ed. 140, 148, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96, 108; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

We are therefore of the opinion that this contention of the defendant cannot be maintained, and that the plaintiffs are entitled to recover the contract price and interest on the five machines sold after the middle of July, 1901, in addition to what has already been allowed them.

Plaintiffs' exception sustained; defendant's exception overruled.

All concur.

KANSAS SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Kansas

v.

A. B. RYNO, Appt.

(.....Kan.....)

- *1. One charged in an information with shooting with intent to kill with a deadly weapon, under § 38 of the crimes act (Gen. Stat. 1901, § 2023), may, upon sufficient proof, be convicted, under § 42 (§ 2027) of the same act, of a wounding under circumstances that would have constituted manslaughter in the fourth degree if death had ensued.
2. Proof of the genuineness of a disputed writing may be made by a comparison with other writings of the same person, either admitted or clearly proved to be genuine.
3. The sufficiency of the proof of a writing to be admitted as a standard of comparison is a question to be passed upon in the first instance by the court, but the weight and effect to be given the evidence by comparison, including the genuineness of the standards, is ultimately a question for the determination of the jury.
4. An expert in handwriting may give, not only an opinion, but the reasons for his opinion, in his examination in chief; and,

*Headnotes by JOHNSTON, Ch. J.

NOTE.—Limitations of evidence to handwriting.

- I. Scope, 303.
- II. Immaterial facts, 303.
- III. Immaterial opinions, 305.
- IV. Limits of expert testimony, 307.
- V. Proof of marks, 313.
- VI. Proof of copies, 314.
- VII. Value or weight of the evidence.
 - a. Nonexpert testimony, 315.
 - b. Expert testimony, 317.
- VIII. Summary, 319.

I. Scope.

This note is concerned only with the limitations of evidence, whether of expert or nonexpert witnesses, in regard to disputed handwriting, and does not treat of the rules in regard to "comparison of handwriting," which has been fully covered in five notes in this series; as to Comparison of handwriting generally, in a note to University of Illinois v. Spalding, 62 L. R. A. 817; as to the Examination of witnesses to handwriting by comparison, in a note to Hoag v. Wright, 63 L. R. A. 163; as to the Competency of handwritings as standards for comparison, in a note to Gambrill v. Schooley, 63 L. R. A. 427; as to the Competency of expert witnesses for comparison of handwriting, in a note to Tower v. Whip, 63 L. R. A. 337; as to Comparison of marks and spelling in a note to Re Hopkins, post —. The reader is also referred to the note upon the Competency of witnesses to handwriting, generally, to the case of Ratliff v. Ratliff, 63 L. R. A. 963; and to the note upon Procedure in proof of handwriting, to the case of State v. Hall, post, — 64 L. R. A.

for the purpose of illustrating and explaining his testimony, and conveying to the jury the reasons for his opinion, may be permitted to make illustrations upon a blackboard.

5. Where there is a general instruction that each juror shall act upon his own judgment, and that each must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that every element of the offense has been proved, before there can be a conviction, if it is not necessary to apply this rule of individual right and responsibility of jurors to each feature and element of the offense.
6. The defendant not having testified in his own behalf, the court instructed the jury that, "while the statute of this state provides that a person charged with crime may testify in his own behalf, he is under no obligation to do so, and the statute expressly declares that his neglect to testify shall not create any presumption against him." Held, that the giving of the instruction in this form was not prejudicial error.
7. Under the evidence in this case, wherein it appears that, if the defendant was guilty of any offense, it was one of a higher grade than a mere assault, the refusal of the court to instruct the jury as to assault is not error.
8. The evidence examined, and held to be sufficient to sustain the conviction.

(January 9, 1904.)

II. Immaterial facts.

Besides the fact of genuineness or nongenuineness of the writing to which the nonexpert witness may give his opinion, many other circumstances, adding light to the question, and corroborative of the testimony which the witness has been called in the first place to give, are capable of proof.

So it has been held to be unquestionably competent to prove, in connection with testimony tending to show the signature to a disputed instrument to be a forgery, that the party who sets it up as genuine is unusually clever in imitating the handwriting of others, and that he himself has boasted of that fact. Croom v. Sugg (1892) 110 N. C. 259, 14 S. E. 748.

And it was proper to admit a deposition in an action on a note alleged by the defendant to be forged, to the effect that the witness, two or three years before, saw the plaintiff writing in the office of the deponent's father, whose signature upon the note was disputed; that the plaintiff prepared an imitation of his signature; that the deponent compared the imitation with the genuine signature of his father; and that he found the resemblance so strong that he should have supposed that the imitation was a genuine signature if he had not seen the plaintiff write it. Moody v. Rowell (1835) 17 Pick. 490, 28 Am. Dec. 317.

Similarly, it was not reason enough for disturbing a verdict that one party, who was sought to be charged, was allowed, after a witness acquainted with his handwriting had testified that he believed the disputed writing to be his, to prove that signatures could be so perfect-

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for McPherson County convicting him of assault with intent to kill. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John D. Milliken and F. L. Martin, for appellant:

Expert Shearman's "argument" to the jury with his blackboard demonstration under the guise of testimony was an abuse of discretion by the court, and grievous error.

Clark v. Field, 42 Mich. 344, 4 N. W. 19.

The defendant, by his plea of not guilty, denied every issuable fact. He denied that the so-called standards were written by him. He was entitled to have had this question of fact submitted to the jury, and it was the duty of the court to do so whether requested so to do, or not.

ly imitated by an adroit penman as to render detection extremely difficult. Here the court said: "If signatures proved to be spurious may have a resemblance equally striking it may not be sufficient to overbalance facts and circumstances calculated to throw suspicion upon the integrity of the instrument in controversy. That a resemblance is so far from being conclusive evidence on this point that it may be altogether delusive was proved by the testimony of the two witnesses taken together." Page v. Homans (1837) 14 Me. 478.

On a trial for forgery in altering an instrument by erasing words and writing other words in it, a witness who is not an expert may testify that a powder which was found in the possession of the accused had the effect, when applied upon a similar instrument, of extracting the writing upon it, and the other instrument may be exhibited to the jury. People v. Brotherton (1874) 47 Cal. 388. The opinion carefully distinguished the case from one where the nonexpert witness might be called to prove that certain chemicals would have the effect testified to in this case; the witness stated the fact which actually happened.

And in order to admit such proof by an expert, that there was a fluid by means of which writing might be removed from paper, it was not necessary to prove, as a foundation for the evidence, that a solvent fluid had been used on the writing in question, and that the party against whom the evidence was offered was conversant with its use. People v. Dole (1898) 122 Cal. 486, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50, 55 Pac. 581.

Upon the introduction by one party of chemical experts, who testified that by the use of acids and gas writings could be so thoroughly eradicated as to leave no trace under the microscope, it was improper to admit in evidence another writing, foreign to the controversy, with which the other party had experimented, in order to show that an alteration could not be made without detection; an unsuccessful effort by one person to forge a name is plainly not competent evidence that another person did not succeed. Birmingham Nat. Bank v. Bradley (1895) 108 Ala. 205, 19 So. 791.

It is proper to ask a witness whether, during the time in which he was acquainted with the handwriting in question, it had always been the same, or whether there had been a change in it. 64 L. R. A.

Blashfield, Instructions to Juries, p. 105, note 59; State v. Bige, 112 Iowa, 433, 84 N. W. 518; Craft v. State, 3 Kan. 451, State v. Brainard, 25 Iowa, 572; State v. Carter, 112 Iowa, 15, 83 N. W. 715; Territory v. Baca (N. M.) 71 Pac. 469; People v. Molinew, 168 N. Y. 264, 62 L. R. A. 193, 61 N. E. 307.

It was the duty of the court to instruct upon the rules controlling, where the state's evidence was wholly circumstantial.

Horne v. State, 1 Kan. 42, 81 Am. Dec. 499; State v. Hunter, 50 Kan. 302, 32 Pac. 37; State v. Andrews, 62 Kan. 207; 61 Pac. 808; State v. Asbell, 57 Kan. 411; 46 Pac. 770; Wantland v. State, 145 Ind. 38, 43 N. E. 931; Kollock v. State, 88 Wis. 663; 60 N. W. 817; People v. Dick, 32 Cal. 216; Tatum v. State, 61 Neb. 229, 85 N. W. 40;

State v. Henderson (1886) 29 W. Va. 147, 1 S. E. 225.

After one party, in order to prove that a signature is not genuine, has introduced testimony that the formation of one letter of the signature in question appears only in one out of four or five of the genuine signatures of the writer, testimony that this peculiarity is "by no means an unusual feature in the signature of General Sherman, and that it is frequently, if not habitually, found therein," is competent in rebuttal. Throckmorton v. Holt (1901) 180 U. S. 552, 45 L. ed. 663, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, Reversing 12 App. D. C. 552.

Upon the cross-examination of a witness called to disprove the genuineness of a signature, it was clear error to allow the introduction of two instruments acknowledged to have been signed by the witness, offered for the purpose of showing a variance between the signatures, as evidence that the handwriting of the person, whose the signature in question purported to be, varied, and that the witness might be mistaken in identifying her signature; a dissimilarity between the signatures of the witness would not tend to show a like difference in the signature of the person whose signature was in question. Brown v. Tourtelotte (1897) 24 Colo. 204, 50 Pac. 195.

On a trial for uttering a forged note, the admission of evidence, for the purpose of showing that the defendant had knowledge that the note was forged, that at about the time of the transaction in question he had in his possession another note purporting to be signed by the same persons whose signatures were upon the note in question, and that in the opinion of the witness the signatures upon the two notes were in the same handwriting, was error without the production in evidence of the note testified to; but the court did not commit itself to an opinion as to whether the testimony of the witness would have been admissible if the note had been produced. State v. Breckenridge (1885) 67 Iowa, 204, 25 N. W. 130.

When the plaintiffs in an action on a note apparently made by the defendant have introduced testimony to prove that the body of the note, as well as the signature, is in the defendant's handwriting, the defendant may be permitted to offer testimony that neither is his handwriting; since proof that the body of the note is not his handwriting is not irrelevant, Hunt v. State, 7 Tex. App. 212; State v. Smith, 7 Tex. App. 382; Crutchfield v. State, 7 Tex. App. 65; Irvin v. State, 7 Tex. App. 109; State v. Taylor, 111 Mo. 538, 20 S. W. 239; People v. Scott, 10 Utah, 217, 37 Pac. 335; Blashfield, Instructions to Juries, § 312.

The state, being without any admitted evidence of the defendant's writing, produced certain writings. These were identified by witnesses, who testified that in their opinion they were in the handwriting of the defendant; or they testified to facts from which it was intended that such inference should be drawn. Thus the first inference drawn from an opinion was supplemented by another inference drawn from an opinion, and thus, from one inference drawn from another inference, the court and jury were asked to, but has some tendency to prove that the signature is not his. Keith v. Lothrop (1852) 10 Cush. 453.

But the production of an instrument signed with a mark, by the person purporting to have executed the disputed instrument with a written signature, is not material as affecting the question of genuineness, since such a habit might have existed in the latter part of the life of the signer, who was not a person to whom writing was familiar or easy. Wyche v. Wyche (1821) 10 Mart. (La.) 408.

III. Immaterial opinions.

Opinions as to purely conjectural matters are objectionable because having no direct evidential value, and as confusing the issues. A good example of this kind of testimony is seen in Burress's Case (1876) 27 Gratt. 934, a prosecution for forgery. There the testimony of a witness not an expert, but acquainted with the handwriting of the accused, that he did not believe that the prisoner could have written the order alleged to be forged if he had tried to do so, was held not to be admissible. The fact that the prisoner, according to the witness, "wrote a good, plain, round hand, remarkably uniform and fixed and well defined," was no reason for the witness forming an opinion that the prisoner could not have written the order if he had tried to do so. The court said: "We know of no principle of the law of evidence which would make the statement of the witness excluded in this case admissible evidence. It is a statement, not of facts to which a witness generally testifies, but of mere matter of opinion to which he rarely testifies, and only in special cases and for peculiar reasons. This is not such a case, and such reasons do not apply to it. . . . The law, in its wisdom, excludes all such opinions from the jury as calculated not to enlighten, but to mislead."

And somewhat similar is Boyle v. Coleman (1852) 13 Barb. 42. That was an action on a promissory note, and, when the plaintiff had proved by a witness acquainted with the defendant's hand that in his opinion the signature to the note was the defendant's, and the defendant had given contrary evidence, and further evidence that the plaintiff had been seen imitating his hand, it was then improper for the plaintiff, recalling the first witness, to ask him, 64 L. R. A.

and did, draw still another inference; viz: That the defendant committed the crime charged in the information. A standard of comparison, a unit of value, cannot thus be created.

Gillett, Indirect & Collateral Ev. pp. 66, 277, §§ 219-221; Abbott, Trial Brief, p. 391; Greenl. Ev. 12th ed. § 580; 3 Jones, Ev. § 565; State v. Miller, 47 Wis. 530, 3 N. W. 31; People v. Parker, 67 Mich. 222, 11 Am. St. Rep. 578, 34 N. W. 720; United States v. Jones, 20 Blatchf. 235, 10 Fed. 469; Rose v. First Nat. Bank, 91 Mo. 399, 60 Am. Rep. 258, 3 S. W. 876; Morrison v. Porter, 35 Minn. 425, 59 Am. Rep. 331, 29 N. W. 54; Com. v. Andrews, 143 Mass. 23, 8 N. E. 643; Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 23 L. ed. 346; Hickory v. United States, 151 U. S. 303, 38 L. ed. 170, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334;

"What kind of a hand does the plaintiff generally write?" and, "From your knowledge of his handwriting should you think he could have written the note in question?"—when the witness had not been examined as to his knowledge of the handwriting; no foundation had been laid for the expression of an opinion by the witness whether the note was or was not in the plaintiff's handwriting; and, if there had been, it seems, it would have been improper to ask the witness his opinion as to the capabilities of the plaintiff; for the opinion of the witness may have been formed as well upon his knowledge of the general scholarship or habits of the plaintiff as from a legitimate knowledge of his handwriting.

Equally objectionable, logically, are opinions as to what would have been the judgment of the witness in a supposed situation; such are in effect opinions as to opinions.

So it was not error to refuse to allow a witness who had become acquainted with the handwriting in question from having seen signatures upon checks, and had testified as to the signature in question, to be asked whether he was quite sure that if he had those checks and the signature in question before him his opinion would not be altered. Merritt v. Campbell (1880) 79 N. Y. 825.

And upon a witness stating that a signature was a genuine writing of the person whose it purported to be, it was proper to refuse to allow him to be asked, on cross-examination, "Would you take it against his denial of the signature?" The inquiry was purely hypothetical, predicated on no known or authenticated fact; it called for a belief or opinion on a subject as to which no one can be called an expert, and, whether asked affirmatively or negatively, it would be immaterial. No witness can tell what he would have done in such a case; it calls for mere speculation and vague belief. The answer might create some doubt with a weak juror, or be the foundation of an ad captandum argument, but would be wholly immaterial as evidence. Bank of Commonwealth v. Mudgett (1871) 44 N. Y. 514. Foster v. Collner (1884) 107 Pa. 305, is in accordance with this.

When the testimony of a witness as to the genuineness of disputed promissory notes did not express a belief, existing at the time when the answers were given, that the signatures were genuine, but was merely that, if the notes

Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397, 31 L. ed. 778, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 933; Macomber v. Scott, 10 Kan. 335; Joseph v. First Nat. Bank, 17 Kan. 261; Abbott v. Coleman, 22 Kan. 250, 31 Am. Rep. 186; State v. Zimmerman, 47 Kan. 242, 27 Pac. 999; Gaunt v. Harkness, 53 Kan. 405, 42 Am. St. Rep. 297, 36 Pac. 739; Gilmore v. Swisher, 59 Kan. 172, 52 Pac. 426; Lawson, Expert & Opinion Ev. p. 372; Re Foster, 34 Mich. 21; Turner v. Hand, 3 Wall. Jr. 115, Fed. Cas. No. 14,257; Borland v. Walrath, 33 Iowa, 131; Whitaker v. Parker, 42 Iowa, 585; Cowan v. Beall, 1 Mac Arth. 271; Miller v. Dill, 149 Ind. 326, 49 N. E. 272; Archer v. United States, 9 Okla. 569, 60 Pac. 288.

The fact that the expert was paid made him incompetent in a criminal case as a matter of public policy.

United States v. Mathias, 36 Fed. 892.

Messrs. Grattan & Grattan, D. P. Lindsay, and F. O. Johnson, for the State:

An expert may use a blackboard to illustrate or convey his testimony to the jury.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 281; McKay v. Lasher, 121 N. Y. 482, 24 N. E. 711; Dryer v. Brown, 52 Hun, 321, 5 N. Y. Supp. 486.

The expert may in all cases give the reasons and grounds for his opinion.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 280; Kendall v. Collier, 97 Ky. 446, 30 S. W. 1002; Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush. 295, 52 Am. Dec. 711; Keith v. Lothrop, 10 Cush. 453; Demeritt v. Randall, 116 Mass. 331; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Young, 36 Iowa, 44; Winnie v. Tousley, 36 Hun, 190; 9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 295, note 4; Koons v. State, 36 Ohio St. 195.

had been presented to him at his bank, he would have paid them, a new trial was granted for the error of admitting the evidence. But it was suggested in this case that it would have been admissible if he had said that he would have paid them if they had been presented with notice of contest over them. Foster v. Jenkins (1880) 80 Ga. 476.

To ask an expert witness who has testified as to the genuineness of a disputed writing, whether he would pay a check so signed, is improper; but, when his previous testimony has been that the signature in question is not genuine, but forged, the question and his answer are merely superfluous, and could not cause prejudice. Breck v. State (1889) 4 Ohio C. C. 160.

It was declared, however, in Holmes v. Goldsmith (1892) 147 U. S. 150, 37 L. ed. 118, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288, that the allowance of a question to a witness who had testified to the genuineness of a disputed note, as to whether he would act upon the signature upon the note if it came to him in an ordinary business transaction, was proper as a means of showing the strength and value of his opinion, though such a question, standing alone, might be objectionable.

And other opinions, although not merely guesses as to assumed conditions, may be inadmissible because not sufficiently relevant.

On the trial of an indictment to which there was a plea in abatement of misnomer, the evidence of a witness, who testified that he was well acquainted with the handwriting of the pleader who drew the indictment, that he believed, from his knowledge of the handwriting, that the letter "v," as written in the indictment, was intended by the pleader for an "r," and that the pleader, although he generally made the letter "r" in the way in which it is usually written by others, sometimes made it as it appeared written in the indictment, so as to resemble a "v,"—was incompetent; since it did not appear upon what the opinion was based, and the witness furnished no fact from which he drew his conclusion, so that the opinion was a mere conjecture, and not the judgment of an expert. Sayres v. State (1857) 30 Ala. 15.

And it was not error to refuse permission to a party to give to the jury certain blank notes printed on paper like the note in suit, so that the jury might determine whether, by using such 64 L. R. A.

notes, names could be traced by placing them over the signature; this would possibly have had the effect of showing that such a thing could be done, but had no bearing on the issue as to whether it was done. Doud v. Reid (1893) 53 Mo. App. 553.

On an issue as to the genuineness of a writing purporting to be that of a deceased person, produced by one of the parties, when it was in evidence that a witness who had never seen the deceased person write had seen the party producing the paper in question copy a genuine signature of the deceased person, it was incompetent to inquire of the witness whether the imitation was a good one, for the purpose of showing that the signature in question might have been written by the party producing it. And it was also held by the court that, even if the witness had been so well acquainted with the dead man's handwriting as to be competent to give an opinion, he could only be asked his opinion in regard to the genuineness of the signature in question. Reed v. Spaulding (1860) 42 N. H. 114.

In Winn v. Patterson (1835) 9 Pet. 663, 9 L. ed. 266, it was held that an instrument which could not be produced was sufficiently proved, prima facie, by the oath of a witness who was acquainted with the handwriting of the person executing it, having recorded it in the county records, that he believed it to be genuine, since the signature of the person executing it must have induced him to commit it to the record.

This, however, was simply upon the ground that the evidence was the best producible under the circumstances, the instrument not being produced.

So the evidence of a witness called to prove, from his acquaintance with the handwriting of the supposed author, certain lines written on the margin of the letter, that he believed them to be written by that person because they were on that paper which had been proved to be in his hand, and that he would not recognize them as his if he had seen them elsewhere, was incompetent as proof of the genuineness of the handwriting. Taylor v. Sutherland (1855) 24 Pa. 333.

It is interesting to note, however, in connection with the question of the competency of opinions as to the genuineness of disputed handwriting which are founded on matters other than the internal evidence of the handwriting

The expert may not only give the grounds and reasons for the opinion given, but may give them in his examination in chief by the party calling him.

Keith v. Lothrop, 10 Cush. 454; Lewis-ton Steam Mill Co. v. Androscooggin Water Power Co. 78 Me. 274, 4 Atl. 555; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Cicero, 154 Ill. 656, 39 N. E. 574; Butler v. Mehrling, 15 Ill. 488; Sanitary District v. Loughran, 160 Ill. 362, 43 N. E. 359.

He may point out the characteristics and differences in the writings.

Moon v. Crowder, 72 Ala. 79; Hanriot v. Sherwood, 82 Va. 1; Calkins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 222; Keyser v. Pickrell, 4 App. D. C. 198; Walker v. Steele, 121 Ind. 436, 22 N. E. 142, 23 N. E. 271; McDonald v. McDonald, 142 Ind. 55, 41 N. E. 336; Grand Island Bkg. Co. v. Shoemaker, 31 Neb. 124, itself, that in Throckmorton v. Holt (1898) 12 App. D. C. 552, Reversed in (1901) 180 U. S. 552, 45 L. ed. 683, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474, the court indulges in a query as to whether evidence of opinion in respect to the authorship of a writing, by a competent judge familiar with the learning, culture, and literary style of the alleged writer, is not equally competent and credible with that based solely on knowledge of handwriting.

IV. Limits of expert testimony.

(The discussion of expert testimony here is not concerned with expert testimony from comparison of handwritings; as to that the reader is referred to the note to University of Illinois v. Spaulding, 62 L. R. A. 817.)

The introduction of the testimony of experts as a distinct class of evidence is generally assigned to the decision of Lord Mansfield in Folkes v. Chadd (1782) 3 Dougl. 157, in which he admitted the opinion of an expert upon a question whether a phenomenon arose from a natural or artificial cause; since, as he said, "handwriting is proved every day by opinion, and for false evidence on such questions a man may be indicted for perjury."

But long before this decision experts—opticians, an engraver, and a writing master—had been permitted, in the King's bench, to give the results of their examination of forged papers, and their opinions, from the identity of three signatures, that two must have been traced from the third. This was in Kemp v. Mackrill (1754) Sayer, 130.

When comparison of handwriting by experts was in process of extinction in England, the strong efforts made to broaden the rules of evidence in regard to handwriting were productive of one narrow and limited result. This was the admission of the opinion of experts in handwriting that writings, alleged to have been forged, showed upon their face that they were "true," and "genuine," or that they were written in a "feigned," "disguised," "imitated," "simulated," "studied," or "fabricated," hand.

Such was the effect of Goodtitle ex dem. Revett v. Braham (1791) 4 T. R. 497; Stranger v. Searle (1793) 1 Esp. 14; King ex rel. Jackson v. Cator (1802) 4 Esp. 117; Reilly v. Rivett (1792) 1 Phillim. Eccl. Rep. 78, note; Saph v. 64 L. R. A.

47 N. W. 696; Tunstall v. Cobb, 109 N. C. 316, 14 S. E. 28; Kornegay v. Kornegay, 117 N. C. 242, 23 S. E. 257; Durnell v. Sowden, 5 Utah, 216, 14 Pac. 374; Bridgman v. Corey, 62 Vt. 1, 20 Atl. 273; State v. Folwell, 14 Kan. 105.

Handwritings to be used in comparison must either be admitted to be genuine by the parties seeking to use them, or at least clearly proved to be genuine.

State v. Stegman, 62 Kan. 476, 63 Pac. 746; State v. Zimmerman, 47 Kan. 242, 27 Pac. 999; Gaunt v. Harkness, 53 Kan. 407, 42 Am. St. Rep. 297, 36 Pac. 739; Holmberg v. Johnson, 45 Kan. 199, 25 Pac. 575; Gilmore v. Swisher, 59 Kan. 174, 52 Pac. 426; Ort v. Fowler, 31 Kan. 485, 47 Am. Rep. 501, 2 Pac. 580; Arthur v. Arthur, 38 Kan. 691, 17 Pac. 187; Macomber v. Scott, 10

Atkinson (1822) 1 Addams Eccl. Rep. 162; and Roupell v. Haws (1863) 3 Fost. & F. 784. (In Carey v. Pitt, Peake N. P. Add. Cas. 130, 4 Revised Rep. 895, the contrary was stated; and in Gurney v. Langlands [1822] 5 Barn. & Ald. 330, 24 Revised Rep. 396, the exclusion of such evidence was held not to be sufficient ground for a new trial, even if it were admissible, which was doubted; but these decisions are unrepresentative.)

There is now no question as to the admissibility of this evidence. People v. Hewit (1823) 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 20; Lyon v. Lyman (1831) 9 Conn. 55; Hess v. State (1831) 5 Ohio, 5, 22 Am. Dec. 767; Moody v. Rowell (1835) 17 Pick. 490, 28 Am. Dec. 317; Burkholder v. Plank (1871) 60 Pa. 225; Cox v. Dill (1882) 85 Ind. 334; Sudlow v. Warshing (1888) 108 N. Y. 520, 15 N. E. 532. (People v. Spooner [1845] 1 Denio, 343, 43 Am. Dec. 672, however, is to contrary effect.)

An expert who professed to have no knowledge whatever of the handwriting of the supposed testatrix was held to have been properly allowed to testify that he did not think the signature was the genuine signature of anybody. Withee v. Rowe (1858) 45 Me. 571.

But when one party, against whom a paper bearing his name has been produced, has merely testified to the fact that it was not signed by him, and has not introduced any evidence to show that it was in a simulated handwriting, it is proper to reject evidence offered by the other party, to the effect that the signature was not in a simulated handwriting. As the evidence stood, the opinion of an expert, that the signature was not in a simulated hand, was not competent for the purpose of establishing that it was in the hand of the party against whom it was offered. Kowing v. Manly (1872) 49 N. Y. 193, 10 Am. Rep. 346.

It was held in Daniel v. Toney (1859) 2 Met. (Ky.) 523, that the testimony of a witness who was not familiar with the handwriting of the justice before whom the depositions in question were taken, or of the witnesses who deposed; and had never seen either of them write; and who was merely called as an expert to state his opinion as to the character of the handwriting of the justice and the witnesses,—was incompetent, when the purpose of his testimony was to impeach the genuineness of an official Kan. 341; State v. Zimmerman, 47 Kan. 245, 27 Pac. 999.

The genuineness or falsity of disputed handwritings can be proved by the nonexpert who is acquainted with the handwriting of the supposed writer.

Rogers v. Ritter, 12 Wall. 317, 20 L. ed. 417; Redding v. Redding, 69 Vt. 500, 38 Atl. 230; Long v. Little, 119 Ill. 600, 8 N. E. 194; Com. v. Nefus, 135 Mass. 533.

The nonexpert who testifies that he is familiar or acquainted with one's handwriting is prima facie competent to testify to the above, and the burden is on the opposite party to show that his sources of information are insufficient to qualify him.

Hinchman v. Keener, 5 Colo. App. 300, 38 Pac. 611; Stoddard v. Hill, 38 S. C. 385, 17 S. E. 138; Pate v. People, 8 Ill. 644; State v. Minton, 116 Mo. 605, 22 S. W. 808; Davis v. Higgins, 91 N. C. 382; Anderson v. Logan, 99 N. C. 474, 6 S. E. 704.

It is enough that a nonexpert had seen the alleged maker of the instrument write once, and only his name, or had seen only one specimen.

Kendall v. Collier, 97 Ky. 446, 30 S. W. 1002; Jacob v. Watkins, 10 App. Div. 475, 42 N. Y. Supp. 6; Ponchin v. Furth, 15 Wash. 201, 46 Pac. 241; Redding v. Redding, 69 Vt. 500, 38 Atl. 230; Magee v. Osborn, 32 N. Y. 669; Tucker v. Hyatt, 144 Ind. 635, 41 N. E. 1047; Berg v. Peterson, 49 Minn. 420, 52 N. W. 37; Woodman v. Dana, 52 Me. 9; State v. Hastings, 53 N. H. 452; Hynes v. McDermott, 82 N. Y. 41, document coming from the hands of a public official of a sister state.

And much the same kind of evidence is that to the effect that the disputed writing has been "traced" from another. This is clearly competent. Dolan v. Meehan (1904; Tex. Civ. App.) 80 S. W. 99. (Apparently contra, however, as to "painting" a signature, is Robson v. Rocke [1824] 2 Addams Eccl. Rep. 53, infra, VII. b.)

It is equally well settled that experts may be called to assist the court and jury in deciphering obscure writing. Masters v. Masters (1718) 1 P. Wms. 421; Goblet v. Beechey (1829) 3 Sim. 24, 9 L. J. Ch. 200; Remon v. Hayward (1835) 2 Ad. & El. 666; Stone v. Hubbard (1851) 7 Cush. 595; Beach v. O'Riley (1878) 14 W. Va. 55; Kux v. Central Michigan Sav. Bank (1892) 93 Mich. 511, 53 N. W. 828.

California Code Civ. Proc. (1903), § 1863, is to the same effect.

As to whether experts may testify as to the age of a manuscript, the cases are not in harmony.

In Crouch v. Hooper (1852) 16 Beav. 182, experts were allowed to speak to the age of the disputed document and the character of the handwriting.

In Tracy Peerage (1843) 10 Clark & F. 154, however, it was declared that the evidence of several expert witnesses whose occupations have made them familiar with manuscripts of different periods before the year 1700, that writings were written in the early part and before the middle of the 18th century, although admissible, was but "small testimony," and entitled to little weight.

The opinions of witnesses that certain instruments purporting to have been executed several years before had been only recently executed, based only upon the appearance of the notes when the witnesses saw them, without any knowledge of the prior appearance or character of the paper or the ink, or as to the places where, or conditions under which, they had been kept, was incompetent, since information of the witnesses was insufficient. Williams v. Clark (1891) 47 Minn. 53, 49 N. W. 398.

Cheney v. Dunlap (1886) 20 Neb. 265, 57 Am. Rep. 828, 29 N. W. 925, is to somewhat the same effect. The court in this case (following Clark v. Bruce [1877] 12 Hun. 271, and Ellingwood v. Bragg [1872] 52 N. H. 490) in declaring L. R. A.

ing that the evidence of experts from mere inspection of the documents, to the effect that signatures upon them had been made recently and since their alleged date, should have been excluded, said: "It does not present a question of science, skill, or trade, nor one of a like kind. In other words, I do not think that any amount of science, study, or skill would enable a person by mere inspection to judge or testify of the age of handwriting with that accuracy necessary to its value or safety in judicial proceedings. The appearance of a written paper, some years or even months old, will depend greatly upon the color, kind, and quality of the ink used, and greatly upon the receptacle or place where the paper has been kept,—whether excluded from the air or sunshine, whether in a dry or damp, hot or cool, place,—and other conditions, the knowledge of which must be derived from source's other than inspection. Again, there is no recognized science or trade in which it can be said to be necessary that persons engaged in it should be skilled in detecting the age of writings by inspection. The science of the law, perhaps, comes nearer to it than any other, and the instances in which it becomes necessary, or even useful, that the legal practitioner should possess such skill are very rare."

When the controversy is as to whether a document in part genuine has been altered, either by another person or by the author of the document under irregular circumstances, countless questions may arise, as the means of investigation are numerous, as to the extent to which the testimony of experts should be permitted to go, and the decisions show little uniformity or connection.

In Norman v. Morrell (1799) 4 Ves. Jr. 769, 4 Revised Rep. 347, an engraver was examined upon the question whether a figure was originally "8," or "3," having been altered to 8 by drawing the pen over it again, extending the upper and lower parts of the figure towards the center. And the same thing was allowed in Nelson v. Johnson (1862) 18 Ind. 320.

So on an indictment for the forgery of a will the evidence of an engraver was proper, that he had examined the paper with a mirror to see if there were marks of pencil, and had been able to trace letters and words, but it was held that the weight of the evidence would depend upon the way in which it was confirmed. Reg. v. Williams (1838) 8 Car. & P. 434.

A witness shown to be an expert in the use

37 Am. Rep. 538; Armstrong v. Fargo, 8 Hun, 175; Baker v. Squier, 1 Hun, 448; Robinson Consol. Min. Co. v. Craig, 25 N. Y. Week. Dig. 512; Campbell v. Woodstock Iron Co. 83 Ala. 351, 3 So. 369; Southern Exp. Co. v. Thornton, 41 Miss. 216; Empire Lfg. Co. v. Stuart, 46 Mich. 482, 9 N. W. 521; Thomas v. State, 103 Ind. 419, 2 N. E. 803; Pearson v. McDaniel, 62 Ga. 100; Clark v. Freeman, 25 Pa. 133; Chaffee v. Taylor, 3 Allen, 598; Parker v. Amazon Ins. Co. 34 Wis. 363; Violet v. Rose, 39 Neb. 660, 58 N. W. 216.

Mr. C. C. Coleman, Attorney General, also for the State.

Johnston, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On the night of July 5, 1902, while Maud

Holmes was in her chamber, preparing to retire, a gun was fired near the house, a charge of shot from which passed through a screen window near which she was standing, striking her head, neck, and breast, and inflicting serious wounds. She was a young unmarried woman, who lived on a farm with the other members of the Holmes family, consisting of her father, mother, and sister, all of whom were in the house when the shooting occurred. No one was seen to fire the gun, and who did it was for some time, at least, a puzzling problem. Attention was finally directed toward A. B. Ryno, who resided in another neighborhood, about 3 miles distant from the Holmes place. He was about fifty years of age, married, and having a family of five children, the youngest of whom was sixteen years of age. It of the microscope may properly be examined as to what he saw, when he examined a note alleged to be forged, in regard to its appearance; although it is error to allow one shown only to be an expert in the use of the microscope to go further and express his opinion that one character has been changed to another. Stevenson v. Gunning (1892) 64 Vt. 601. 25 Atl. 697.

In Gentner v. Ulmer (1882) 15 Phila. 233, the offer to prove by an expert the character and general uniformity of execution, and the peculiarities and minute structure of some parts of the genuine signature of the person whose handwriting was in dispute, was held to have been properly rejected; but the decision seems to have been upon the ground that the offer was intended to evade the (former) Pennsylvania rule forbidding comparison of handwriting by witnesses.

A question to an expert as to whether the witness, as a bank officer, found anything on the face of the note in question of a suspicious character that would cause him to distrust it if the note were offered for discount was properly rejected. The court said: "What the witness would do as a bank officer had the note been offered to him for discount was irrelevant. So was his mere opinion that the face of the note was of a suspicious character. . . . It was competent for him to point out any irregularity upon the face of the note,—any fact tending to show that it had been tampered with; and the jury would then have had something to base a verdict upon. But a mere opinion, not based upon particular facts pointed out to the jury, was of no value, and might have misled them." Foster v. Collner (1884) 107 Pa. 305.

It is proper to ask an expert in handwriting, in regard to a disputed promissory note, whether there appeared to have been an erasure in it; whether the erasure was made before or after the body of the note was written; and whether the edges of the note were cut edges or the ordinary edges of foolscap paper; and the objection to these questions, that they asked for the opinion of the witness, was mistaken, since answers to them elicited facts, and facts material to the pending investigation. ² Dubois v. Baker (1864) 30 N. Y. 355.

When the defendant in an action on a note alleged by him to be forged had called two expert witnesses who testified that they had examined the note under a microscope and discovered certain superadditions and retouchings to portions of words and letters in the note and signature; and then the plaintiff also called as witnesses two expert microscopists, and examined them in detail as to the appearance of the note and as to its various letters and lines,—the objection of the defendant, upon the ground that the witnesses were asked to describe the appearance of the letters and lines and the paper upon which they were written, and not whether the signature was genuine or simulated, was properly overruled; since the testimony objected to bore directly upon the question whether the note had been changed or tampered with after it was written, and so was a contradiction of the testimony of the defendant's witnesses. Haddock v. O'Rourke (1889) 25 N. Y. S. R. 55, 6 N. Y. Supp. 549.

Where the appearance of a loop to the letter "r" in a contested instrument was relied upon to show that it was a forgery, it was competent to examine an expert witness in detail as to the appearance of this particular letter,—how far the ink mark ran, and where the paper appeared to have been dug out; whether he saw any evidence of a superadded line at that point, and whether there was anything in the appearance of the paper upon which he could safely base an opinion that there was a loop there when the letter was originally written. Ibid.

And in Card v. Moore (1902), 68 App. Div. 327, 74 N. Y. Supp. 18, experts were allowed to testify that a typewritten agreement, upon careful inspection under the microscope, showed that a date had been tampered with; but the court was not impressed with the importance of the testimony as against that of several witnesses testifying to the genuineness of the document.

After an expert had testified that, in his opinion, a letter and an erasure with ink on the envelope of another letter could not have been done with a pen or a brush, it was held by Shaw, Ch. J., that the witness's opinion as to how the erasure was made, or as to whether it was made with an instrument produced to him, being a small stick as large as a goose quill and having a small wad of cotton wound around one end and tied on with a string, which had been found in the defendant's possession, was quite inadmissible. Com. v. Webster (1850) 5 Cush. 295, 52 Am. Dec. 711.

But an expert was properly allowed to testify as to his opinion, from the appearance of appears that in January, 1901, someone representing himself to be George R. Clark wrote to Maud Holmes, proposing a correspondence with her. He claimed to be from Ohio, and was in Kansas, looking for investments, and dated his letter at Canton, Kansas, a point in the county in which Maud Holmes lived. She consented to, and did, correspond with him for a time, keeping copies of the letters which she sent to him. Although his letters were posted from neighboring places and on railway trains near Maud Holmes's home, he did not call on her until October 8, 1901, when he introduced himself as the George R. Clark who had been carrying on the correspondence. At the same time he also met Maud's father and mother, and, as the visit lasted about three hours, all had an opportunity to observe his appearance, manners, and peculiarities. He talked about the correspondence and the subjects about which they had been writing and undertook to explain the reasons why his letters had been so strangely posted at different places. At that time Maud indicated that she did not desire to carry on the correspondence further, but he continued to write to her and to other members of the Holmes family until shortly before the shooting. The letters first suggested love; a desire for matrimony; an effort to have Maud meet him at different places, and to take a trip to Ohio. There were some sensual allusions. They suggested resentment because she did not conform with his wishes; jealousy of a the paper, whether certain words on a writing were written before or after the paper was folded, that the ink had spread into the fibers broken by the folding, and also as to the way in which the letters were formed, their appearance and the peculiarities observed by him, as to where the pen was taken off, as to the angles in the letters and to a stiffness in a portion of the writing; and to state his opinion as to the ink in which the body of the instrument was written as compared with the ink in the signature and date. Bacon v. Williams (1859) 18 Gray, 525.

The testimony of an expert that, in his opinion, all the words in the note in suit were written at the same time was not improper. Quinsigamond Bank v. Hobbs (1858) 11 Gray, 250. Following Cooper v. Bockett (1844) 4 Moore P. C. C. 433, 10 Jur. 931, in which the expert was allowed to say which of two words which intersected was written first.

But as to testimony that different writings were executed at the same time, there is some dissent.

So in Phoenix F. Ins. Co. v. Philip (1834) 18 Wend. 81, an expert witness, offered to prove that several documents dated at different times were written at the same time, was held to have been properly rejected upon the authority and analogy of Gurney v. Langlands (1822) 5 Barn. & Ald. 330, 24 Revised Rep. 396, supra, which was later overruled so far as it discredited expert testimony to the effect that writings were in a genuine or simulated handwriting; and the court held that the opinions of expert witnesses were worth no more than the individual opinions of the jurors themselves.

And later, in Sackett v. Spencer (1859) 29 Barb. 180, it was held that the evidence of a witness who was qualified as an expert in handwriting, being the teller of a bank, was properly rejected upon the question whether the portion of a guaranty indorsed across a lengthwise fold in a promissory note was written since the paper had been folded and soiled, and since it had been stained; and also as to whether, in his judgment, from the luster and brightness of the ink, the guaranty could have been written as long as six years before. The court held, persisting in the error of Phoenix F. Ins. Co. v. Philip (1834) 13 Wend. 81, supra, that "the question was not one upon which the opinions of witnesses were admissible. . . . The evidence of experts has been allowed in some instances to show that a signature was in a simulated hand, but this is now disapproved of."

These last two cases, however, are not representative of the law.

And on an issue as to whether an instrument attested by the signature of a witness was executed at a certain place and time, or at two places, expert evidence that the two signatures were with different ink was held to be admissible. Forell v. Cavanaugh (1898) 69 N. H. 364, 41 Atl. 860.

So the testimony of an expert in handwriting and inks, offered to show an alteration in an instrument on file by adding a statement in ink, should have been admitted. Rass v. Sebastian (1896) 160 Ill. 602, 43 N. E. 708, Affirming (1894) 57 Ill. App. 417.

And the opinion of an expert is competent to go to the jury in the case of an alleged alteration in an instrument and retracing part of the instrument in different ink. But here such evidence was held to be intrinsically weak and to be received and weighed by the jury with great caution. Moye v. Herndon (1855) 30 Miss. 110.

It was error to refuse to allow a party to cross-examine experts in handwriting as to the effect of acids on writing, and as to whether, in their opinion, the writing could be altered or removed by the use of such means so as to escape detection, upon the ground that the witnesses were not experts in the use and effect of acids upon ink. In this case the court stated that, if the witnesses had declared that they knew nothing of the effect of acids upon ink, their testimony as to the genuineness of the check in question, and that it had not been altered, would have been properly considered in connection with the admission on their part that they had no knowledge or experience of the effect of acids on writings; it is right, and in fact necessary, that expert testimony should be subjected to every legitimate test on cross-examination, in order properly to weigh it. Birmingham Nat. Bank v. Bradley (1895) 108 Ala. 205, 19 So. 791.

But after one party had introduced chemical experts who testified that by the use of acids and gas writing could be so thoroughly and skilfully removed as to leave no discernible trace, so that the paper would present the same appearance to the eye or under microscopic examination as if it had never been written upon, and in rebuttal witnesses who were qual-young man with whom she was keeping company; a possible or impending tragedy in the family; and references to the poisoning of the Holmes dog; an attack on, and fright of, Maud a short time before she was shot; and other occurrences about the Holmes home about which only a participant could well have knowledge. Ryno was recognized by Maud and the other members of her family as the George R. Clark who called at the Holmes place, and then acknowledged the writing of the letters sent prior to the visit. These, with other circumstances, pointed to him as the guilty one, and a prosecution was instituted against him. He was charged with an assault upon Maud Holmes with an intent to kill her, under § 38 of the crimes act (Gen.

Stat. 1901, § 2023). In a trial the jury found him guilty under § 42 (§ 2027) of the same act, of wounding Maud Holmes under circumstances which would constitute manslaughter in the fourth degree if death had ensued.

On an appeal he complains, first, that the court submitted the case on the theory that the offense defined in § 42 of the crimes act was included in the offense charged under § 38; and he contends that the offense of which he was found guilty is not included in the one charged in the information, and that the verdict rendered was equivalent to an acquittal of the charge. In effect, the same question was raised in State v. Burwell, 34 Kan. 312, 8 Pac. 470, and decided contrary to the contention of the appellant.

lified as experts were offered to testify as to the genuineness of the check in question, it was not error to receive their evidence over the objection that it had not been shown that they were experts as to the effect of acids and gas upon writings, since no witness had testified that the check in question had been subjected to acids or gas. Ibid.

Upon a question as to the fact of an erasure and alteration in a note, when the person who drew it has testified to the erasure of words and the substitution of others since its execution, it is not reversible error to refuse to allow him, when called as an expert, to be asked whether a certain chemical had been used in the erasure; after this testimony the mere opinion of the witness was of little, or no, additional value. Charles T. Hayden Mill. Co. v. Lewis (1891; Ariz.) 32 Pac. 263.

Also, when such an instrument is not produced in court and offered in evidence, the writing itself is the best evidence of an erasure by the use of chemicals upon it, and the best-evidence rule applies as against the evidence of a witness called as an expert to prove erasure and alteration by chemicals. Ibid.

Many decisions excluding the evidence of experts have been grounded upon the principle which forbids usurpation by experts of the functions of the jury.

So in Frank v. Chemical Nat. Bank (1874) 5 Jones & S. 26, it was held that it was error to allow an expert to be asked whether there was any possibility, in his judgment, of the instruments in question being genuine, since the response to the question took the place and usurped the functions of the jury.

And where the trial court refused to permit an expert witness to say whether, in his opinion, an indorsement on the back of a note sued upon had been erased, no error was found. Upon appeal the court said: "It cannot be perceived how skill in judging of handwritings can enable a witness to judge what is an erasure better than another man who knows how to write, and knows the meaning of the word 'erasure.' Whether the indorsement was erased or not was a fact for the jury to find on inspection of the paper." Swan v. O'Fallon (1841) 7 Mo. 231. And this was followed by Wagner v. Jacoby (1858) 28 Mo. 530.

Similarly, when the subject-matter of the dispute was whether an alteration in a promissory note by drawing a line through several printed words had been made at the time of the execution of the note or afterwards, it was held that the subject was not one for the testimony of experts, and that the jury were as competent to form a correct conclusion as the experts. The court said: "The matter about which the witnesses were testifying was not in reference to the genuineness of handwriting; . . . nor was it a question whether there had been alterations and erasures in the note; . . . nor was the matter about which they were testifying a subject of science, skill, or long experience in a particular trade or profession; but it was a simple question of fact as to when the note had been altered by drawing the pen and ink lines through the printed words." Collins v. Crocker (1884) 15 Ill. App. 107.

The same reason was the ground for the decision in Jewett v. Draper (1863) 6 Allen, 434. It is not proper to allow an expert witness to testify that certain words had been interpolated into a contract after the signature was written, the ground of the statement being that the words were not written in the usual place above the signature, but by the side of it, and that the words were crowded and huddled together in appearance; a juror of ordinary intelligence was as competent to judge of these facts and draw a proper inference from them as a witness could be. Skill in the detection of counterfeits could give no aid in determining whether the words or the signature were written first.

But this is directly controverted in a Pennsylvania case, deciding that in an action involving forgery the testimony of an expert to support the inference that the instrument had been written over an existing signature, that it had the appearance of having been extremely crowded to get the writing into such a limited space, was competent, since "in all such inquiries great latitude in the admission of testimony is not unreasonable or improper." Brant v. Dennison (1885; Pa.) 1 Cent. Rep. 400, 5 Atl. 869.

On the other hand, also, it was error to exclude the testimony of an expert witness, that upon an examination under the microscope of the paper bearing the writing in question he discovered traces of pencil marks, and that the fiber of the paper had the appearance of being broken and rubbed before the ink was laid. Expert evidence was competent for that purpose; and it was a mistake to exclude it upon the ground that the microscope, being in court,

In that case the charge was, under the same section, of shooting with intent to kill with a deadly weapon; and the verdict was the same as the one returned in the present case,—of a wounding under circumstances that would have constituted manslaughter in the fourth degree if death had ensued. We see no reason to change the rule which has been so long followed, and which, no doubt, guided the court in the submission of the case. See also State v. Fisher, 8 Kan. 208; State v. Terreso, 56 Kan. 126, 42 Pac. 354; State v. Smith, 57 Kan. 674, 47 Pac. 541; State v. Countryman, 57 Kan. 815, 48 Pac. 137.

Error is assigned on the admission of the testimony of J. F. Shearman, or, rather, on the manner in which he gave his testimony.

could be used by the jury, and that they were as well able to judge of the facts to which the witness's attention was proposed to be called as the witness. Bridgman v. Corey (1889) 62 Vt. 1, 20 Atl. 273. This, it will be observed, is in accordance with Bacon v. Williams (1859) 13 Gray, 525, supra.

The opinions of experts are often objectionable as being mere inferences, and not facts.

So the testimony of persons called as experts to express their opinions whether a man could, within a short time, so improve his handwriting as shown by signatures offered as standards as to make a signature of as good a handwriting as that of the instrument in question was held not to be a subject for the testimony of experts, and incompetent. McKeone v. Barnes (1871) 108 Mass. 344.

And it was clearly not error to refuse to allow an expert to be asked as to whether the fact that one letter of a word appeared to have been altered was not strong evidence that another letter of the same word had been similarly altered; since the witness was called to testify as to facts, and not as to inferences to be derived from facts. Kruse v. Chester (1885) 66 Cal. 353, 5 Pac. 613.

It was not error to refuse to allow an expert to be asked whether one could lay the note in suit over a signature and trace it accurately with a point of a pencil. Even if this were a matter for expert testimony, it was not a matter relevant to this case. The fact would have too remote a tendency to prove that the signature in question was traced. Doud v. Reid (1893) 53 Mo. App. 553.

And in an action on a promissory note which the plaintiff alleged had been signed in the plaintiff's presence, by the defendant, who was illiterate, by copying his name from a copy set him by the plaintiff on another piece of paper, it was error to allow an expert to be shown a letter identified by the plaintiff as his own handwriting, and to be asked: "Do you not think it possible that a person unaccustomed to write might copy the signature in question by the aid of another signature before him, written on a separate sheet of paper by the person who wrote the letter in evidence?" The court said. "An affirmative answer to the question, at most, would only show, inferentially, not the probability, but the possibility, that the defendant wrote the signature in question. The question for the jury to decide was not whether the de-

It is said that he is a member of the bar, and a clerk in the Federal court, with a state reputation as an official and citizen of exceptional natural ability and unusual accomplishments; that he is of fine personal appearance, and has had an experience of fifteen years in studying and testifying as an expert in handwriting; and that he gave his testimony with illustrations on a blackboard, in an argumentative and very impressive way. The testimony does show that he had given the subject of handwriting much study, and that his qualifications as an expert had been recognized in many of the state and Federal courts where he had been called to give testimony. His apparent intelligence, study, and experience leave no doubt of his qualifications, and in fact the defendant might have written the signature to the note, but whether he actually did write it. It would be unsafe to infer an actuality from an inferential possibility. If such testimony were admissible on the part of the plaintiff it would be competent for the defendant to rebut it by evidence, (1) that such a person could not thus write the signature in question, and (2) that it would be impossible for him to do it,—an issue quite too remote to be serviceable in eliciting the truth called for by the pleadings. We know of no rule of law by which such a question is admissible." Thayer v. Chesley (1868) 55 Me. 393.

After an expert witness had stated certain facts which he had discovered by an examination, and peculiarities which he had observed in regard to the signature in question, he might be asked whether, from that examination, the signature, in his opinion, was genuine, over the objection that an expert witness must testify only in answer to a hypothetical question based upon facts either stated by himself or by other witnesses. The question fairly imported that the opinion asked for was based upon the facts derived by him from his examination, and the witness was not asked to give his opinion on what he supposed he knew. McDonald v. McDonald (1895) 142 Ind. 55, 41 N. E. 336.

A hypothetical question to an expert in handwriting, which assumed that, before the person alleged to have executed an instrument wrote it, he walked some distance carrying a large satchel, as to what effect this exertion would have upon his handwriting, was held to be incompetent; and it was held that the question, if proper for an expert at all, was one for a medical expert, rather than for an expert in handwriting. Langley v. Wadsworth (1883) 18 N. Y. Weck. Dig. 148.

The decision of STATE v. RYNO, allowing the use of the blackboard by an expert witness, has the authority of the only cases decided upon the exact point. They are McKay v. Lasher (1890) 121 N. Y. 477, 24 N. E. 711, and Dryer v. Brown (1889) 52 Hun. 321, 5 N. Y. Supp. 486. And as to the abuse of discretion of the trial court in permitting the witness to give his opinions without prompting from counsel, and to extend his answers beyond the usual length of such responses, there is no direct authority controlling the court's discretion in that matter. Further, in Clark v. Field (1880) 42 Mich. 342, 4 N. W. 19, the court, in declaring that appellant does not much question his competency, but does complain of the use of the blackboard with which he illustrated his testimony. For the purpose of illustrating and explaining his testimony, an expert as to handwriting may make use of a blackboard. In this way he can convey to the jury the reasons for his opinion, and make the points of similarity or difference upon which his opinion rests more intelligible to the jury. McKay v. Lasher, 121 N. Y. 477, 24 N. E. 711; Dryer v. Brown, 52 Hun, 321, 5 N. Y. Supp. 486; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 281. There were submitted to this witness a large number of letters and other writings, and he made a comparison between those and other writings admitted or proved to be genuine. His testimony was therefore necessarily quite extended. It was competent to inquire of him on the direct examination the reasons for his opinion, and the blackboard illustrations served this purpose efficiently. His opinion, unexplained, might have little value; but, when the reasons upon which it was based were given, the jury could then determine the soundness of his reasons and the correctness of his conclusions. In Lewiston Steam Mill Co. v. Androscoggin Water Power Co. 78 Me. 274, 4 Atl. 555, it was expressly decided that the expert may give, not only his opinion, but the reasons for his opinion, in his examination in chief; and, of course, the defendant is always at liberty to make a more detailed examination as to the basis of the expert's opinion upon cross-examination.

the trial court's refusal to allow a witness to give his testimony spontaneously, and without questioning, was a reasonable exercise of discretion, says that undoubtedly cases occur which justify such indulgence. It would seem, moreover, that the matter of the examination of witnesses generally is wholly discretionary with the trial court, and is not reviewable. (See upon this point the note, upon the Examination of witnesses to handwriting by comparison, to the case of Hoag v. Wright, 63 L. R. A. 163, at p. 166, and the note upon Procedure in proof of handwriting, div. IV. to the case of State v. Hall, post, —. In regard to the proof necessary to establish proper standards for comparison of handwriting, the reader will find the subject fully treated in a note to Gambrill v. Schooley, 63 L. R. A. 427.)

V. Proof of marks.

(In regard to the proof of marks by comparison in court, the reader is referred to the note upon that subject to Re Hopkins, post, —.)

As to whether a signature made by a mark may be proved or disproved by the evidence of persons professing to be familiar with the mark habitually made by the person in question, there is no general agreement.

In some decisions the courts content themselves with the bald statement that a mark is not capable of proof at all.

Thus in Engles v. Brulington (1807) 4 Yeates, 345, it is declared that to attempt to prove a mark to a will would be idle and ridiculous.

And in Gilliam v. Perkinson (1826) 4 Rand. (Va.) 325, the court says that where one makes a cross-mark, perhaps the first and last he ever made in his life, to attempt to prove such a signature would be a mockery of justice.

So in Delony v. Delony (1862) 24 Ark. 7, it is held that it is not to be presumed that a signature made by a simple cross-mark can be proved or identified like the handwriting of a signature; in Jackson ex dem. Van Dusen v. Van Dusen (1809) 5 Johns. 144, 4 Am. Dec. 330, it was held that, a testator having made his mark to his will, no evidence could be given or expected to prove his handwriting; and a mark is not a signature under the Missouri statute providing for the proof of deeds. Allen v. Moss (1858) 27 Mo. 354.

In Carrier v. Hampton (1850) 33 N. C. (11 Ired. L.) 307, it is said that "although in some very extraordinary instances the mark of an illiterate person may become so well known as to be susceptible of proof, like handwriting, yet, generally, a mark, a mere cross, cannot be identified."

This distinction, as to there being some distinctive characteristic about the mark, would seem to be the proper one, but even when the witness swears to a peculiarity observed by him, it has been held in Pennsylvania, Following Engles v. Brulington (1807) 4 Yeates, 345, supra, that the evidence is not good.

Thus on the trial of an issue of the validity of a will purporting to have been executed by the testatrix attaching her mark instead of her signature, the court improperly allowed a witness to testify to his belief that the mark was genuine, although he stated as the foundation of his belief that he was acquainted with the mark of the testatrix, and that it had certain peculiarities which distinguished it from others. The court said, upon appeal: "Where a mark on inspection appears to have nothing in its construction to distinguish it from the ordinary marks used by illiterate persons to authenticate their contracts, it is not the subject of this description of evidence." Shinkle v. Crock (1851) 17 Pa. 159.

And it was held in Watts v. Kilburn (1849) 7 Ga. 356, that, there being nothing distinctive to fix the identity of the signature of an attesting witness made by a mark, which was not handwriting, such a signature should be treated as a nullity, and the handwriting of the party should be proved.

But these cases are not representative.

In the English courts distinctive cross-marks are capable of proof.

In an action (which was undefended) against the acceptor of a bill of exchange drawn by Ann Moore to her order and indorsed by her mark and the writing "Ann Moore her mark," the indorsement being in the plaintiff's hand, a witness was called to prove the indorsement, and stated that he had frequently seen Ann Moore make her mark and so sign instruments, and he pointed out some peculiarity; Tindal, Ch. J., after some hesitation, admitted the evidence as sufficient. This was in George v. Surrey (1830) Moody & M. 518, 31 Revised Rep. 755; and there is a declaration in Sayer v. Glossop (1848) 12 Jur. 465, 17 L. J. Exch. N. S. 300, 2 Exch. 409, which is apparently in accord.

And, moreover, in an action on a promissory note an affidavit that the maker was a marks-

The objection that the testimony was not drawn out in the usual manner, by question and answer, is not sustained. We see nothing unusual in the method of the interrogation, and, while some of his answers were lengthy, they were responsive to the question asked, and the subject-matter necessarily required an extended answer. We find nothing in the conduct of this inquiry that trench upon the rights of the defendant, or furnishes ground for serious complaint.

Complaint is also made of the use of certain writings not acknowledged to be in the handwriting of defendant as standards of comparison. Some of these were admitted to be genuine, but a larger number were only shown by the testimony of the state to be the handwriting of the defendant. Among the papers so used were the recognizances in the case, as well as school orders, agreements, and leases which witnesses saw the defendant sign. There were other writings upon which defendant had acted, or which he acknowledged to witnesses to be his own, or were shown by testimony to be his. There was practically no dispute in the testimony as to the genuineness of these writings, although as to most of them there was no acknowledgment at the trial that they were genuine. Most of the witnesses who identified the papers and proved them to be the defendant's writing were not cross-examined, and no testimony contradicting the proof so made was offered by defendant. Under the rule which has been applied in this state, an acknowledgment is not essen-man, and that the sign or mark upon the note was his mark or sign used by him in place of signing his name, was held to be sufficient proof of the signature. Pearcy v. Dicker (1849) 13 Jur. 997. In harmony with the English cases is found Paisley v. Snipes (1807) 2 Brev. 200.

And the true rule seems to be laid down in Strong v. Brewer (1850) 17 Ala. 706, where it was held that the signature on an instrument, made simply by a mark, was capable of proof like an ordinary signature, by the evidence of a witness who swore that he knew the mark of the person whose signature it purported to be, and believed it to be his. In this case the court declared: "The general rule which admits of proof of the handwriting of a party is founded on the reason that in every person's manner of writing there is a peculiar prevailing character which distinguishes it from the handwriting of every other person, and therefore that one who knows the handwriting of the party is competent to testify to it. This kind of evidence, too, like all other probable evidence, admits of every degree from the lowest presumption to the highest moral certainty. . . . The degree of weight to be attached to it depends, not only upon the character of the witness, but also upon the opportunity he has had of acquiring a knowledge of the party's handwriting. It may be more difficult to acquire a knowledge of a simple mark by which an illiterate man executes a deed, than the knowledge of the handwriting of one who can write his name in full; but we cannot perceive why it may not be done. In some instances the peculiarity may be as strong as that which marks the characters of one who can write, and in other instances, not perhaps so great; yet in all we apprehend would be found something distinct and peculiar which would enable one who had frequently seen the party make his mark to know it. We can, therefore, see no reason why one who has frequently seen a party make his mark to deeds or other writings, and who can testify that he believes that he knows it, may not be permitted to prove the execution of a deed thus subscribed."

It is true that in Jones v. Hough (1884) 77 Ala. 437, it was held, citing and following Gilliam v. Perkinson (1826) 4 Rand. (Va.) 325, that, although there is a distinct individual character in the handwriting of every man who can write, and with those who have written much that character is so fixed and striking that persons acquainted with it would feel no more difficulty in recognizing it than in knowing the face of the writer, it is different in the case of a mere cross made instead of a signature. But in Jones v. Hough there is no mention whatever of the well-considered earlier Alabama case of Strong v. Brewer (1850) 17 Ala. 706.

Under § 764 of Hill's (Or.) Code, providing that the handwriting of a person may be shown by anyone who believes it to be his, and who has seen him write, or has seen writing purporting to have been his, upon which he has acted or been charged, and who has thus acquired a knowledge of his handwriting, it was competent for a witness to testify, from his own knowledge acquired in one of those modes, as to the genuineness of a signature by a mark. State v. Tice (1897) 30 Or. 457, 48 Pac. 367.

In Lansing v. Russell (1848) 3 Barb. Ch. 325, it is held, very properly, that the testimony of experts, who had been in the habit of examining signatures and marks of young persons as well as of very aged ones, to prove that the signature marks upon deeds could not have been the genuine marks of the unaided hand of an old and decrepit man, was proper as legal evidence to establish that fact.

And a case upon the border line between what is handwriting and what is merely a mark is found in another New York case, Jackson ex dem. Van Dusen v. Van Dusen (1809) 5 Johns. 144, 4 Am. Dec. 330. There one of the witnesses to a will made his mark upon it by way of attestation with his two initials "S. W.," rudely executed, and it was competent to prove this signature by a witness who testified that he had once seen the same person make the initial letters of his name, and that from the peculiar character and structure of these letters, particularly the letter "S," which was inverted, he believed the letters upon the will to have been made by that person.

VI. Proof of copies.

The question under what circumstances copies of instruments, instead of the originals, may be introduced in evidence, is properly a part of the subject of the proof of documents, and so not part of the subject of the proof of handwriting. What is intended to be discussed under the caption above is: What copies may be proved to be copies of genuine handwriting by reference to the copies themselves, and from tial to establish the genuineness and warrant the use of a standard of comparison. The courts of the country are not in accord on this question, but "it is the established law of this state and of many other states of this country to permit proof of the genuineness of a disputed signature by comparison with other signatures on other instruments in writing admitted or proved to be genuine." Holmberg v. Johnson, 45 Kan. 199, 25 Pac. 576. The recent case of State v. Stegman, 62 Kan. 476, 63 Pac. 746, was a prosecution for the forgery of a bond purporting to be the act of another, and involved the point whether the standards of comparison used by experts called as witnesses must be admitted to be genuine, or can be proved to have been written by the party. It was there held that "a writing clearly proved to be genuine, and about which there is no dispute in the evidence, may be used as a basis for comparison of handwritings, and to show that a certain other writing with which it is compared is not genuine." See also Macomber v. Scott, 10 Kan. 335; Joseph v. First Nat. Bank, 17 Kan. 256; State v. Zimmerman, 47 Kan. 242, 27 Pac. 999; Gaunt v. Harkness, 53 Kan. 405, 42 Am. St. Rep. 297, 36 Pac. 739.

There is some complaint that the court did not submit to the jury, as a question of fact, whether these standards of comparison were written by the defendant. Whether the writings offered as standards have been sufficiently proved to be genuine to be used as standards must be determined by the the knowledge possessed by the witness of the genuine handwriting of the person whose they are alleged to be? So questions in regard to copies as secondary evidence are not within the discussion here.

The subject of letter-press copies was fully treated in Com. v. Jeffries (1863) 7 Allen, 548, 83 Am. Dec. 712. Press or machine copies of certain letters purporting to have been written by the accused were admitted in evidence upon the testimony of a witness who knew his handwriting and was acquainted with the process of taking press copies, the witness being asked: "In whose handwriting was the original of which this purports to be a copy?" The court said: "The press copies, as they are called, were in fact proved to have been in the handwriting of the defendant. They were in truth a part of the original letters as written by him, transferred by a mechanical pressure to other sheets. But such transfer did not destroy the identity of the handwriting as shown on the impression, or render it unrecognisable by persons acquainted with its characteristics. These to a considerable extent it must necessarily still retain, so that a person having adequate knowledge could testify to its genuineness with quite as much accuracy as if he had before him the original sheets on which the letters were first written. Writings thus transferred are not unlike written documents which have been defaced or partially obliterated by exposure to dampness, rough usage, or the wasting effect of time. Such papers may not possess all the distinctive features of the original handwriting, but their partial destruction or obliteration will not render them inadmissible as evidence, if duly identified by testimony. . . .

Although incompetent as a means of comparison by which to judge of the characteristics of a handwriting which is in dispute, it might still retain enough of its original character to be identified by a witness when its own genuineness was called in question. . . . The mode of putting the inquiry to the witness was defective and irregular. Strictly he should have been asked if the letters shown to him appeared to be in the handwriting of the defendant; then, by proving that they were press copies, it would follow that the letter from which the impressions were made were his also. The defect was in so framing the question as to elicit the opinion of the witness concerning the handwriting, and the necessary consequence of that opinion, 64 L. R. A.

in the same answer. But the substance of the evidence was clearly competent."

And a letter-press copy of a letter if otherwise competent may be shown to be in the handwriting of a party who, as a witness, denies all knowledge of it. Clark v. Finn (1882) 12 Mo. App. 583, Appx.

In Nodin v. Murray (1812) 3 Campb. 228, 13 Revised Rep. 796, it was proposed to give in evidence as an original letter a duplicate taken from the autograph at one impression by means of a copying machine, but Lord Ellenborough said that he could only treat this as a copy, although it was likely to be more accurate than one taken by successive impressions, and therefore it could not be read without a notice to produce the original, written by the party's own hand.

As for photographic copies, where application was made to the court to take certain documents from the files for the purpose of sending them out of the country with a mandamus, the court refused the application, but suggested that, if it was necessary to identify the handwriting in the documents, that difficulty might be got over by taking photographic copies of them. Re Stephens (1874) L. R. 9 C. P. 187.

And photographic copies of documents on file in the War Department, which could not, without public detriment and inconvenience, be removed, are admissible as the best evidence of which the case admits, upon an authentication of their genuineness in the usual way by proof of handwriting. Leathers v. Salvor Wrecking & Transp. Co. (1875) 2 Woods, 680, Fed. Cas. No. 8,164.

(For a discussion of the question of the competency of copies as standards for comparison of handwriting, the reader is referred to the note to Gambrill v. Schooley, 63 L. R. A. 427.)

VII. Value or weight of the evidence.

a. Nonexpert testimony.

If one witness deposes positively to the handwriting of an instrument, whether lost or existing, it is sufficient prima facie evidence to allow the instrument or copy to go to the jury without regard to how many other witnesses may deny it, or what circumstances may be proved to cast doubt upon it. Krise v. Neason (1870) 66 Pa. 253.

A charge that the uncontradicted testimony of the attorney of the person whose handwriting court in the first place, but the weight and effect of the evidence by comparison, including the genuineness of the standards, is ultimately a question for the determination of the jury. Here no special instructions with respect to the standards were asked, and none were given; but the court submitted this, with all other testimony, to the jury, with the admonition that they were the sole and exclusive judges of all the facts in the case, and should give such weight to the testimony and opinions as to handwriting as they should deem them entitled to. There was no intimation in the rulings or instructions of the court that the genuineness of the standards of comparison used by the experts was not submitted as a question of fact for the jury, with the other testimony offered in proof of handwriting.

Error is assigned on the refusal of the court to instruct the jury that defendant was not on trial for the writing of letters to Maud Holmes, and that the letters could not be considered for any purpose, except as they might throw light on the motive of the defendant. This instruction was properly refused. In the first place, it was unnecessary for the court to name any offenses or charges for which the defendant was not on trial. The court did clearly define the offense with which the defendant was charged, and for which he was on trial, and did direct the application of the testimony to that charge. In the second place, the letters were receivable for other purposes than the mere motive of the defendant. They tended to establish the identity of the author of the letters, as well as the was in dispute as to its genuineness, who had seen him write his name ten years before, and swore that he could remember the looks of his signature, must be accepted by the jury as true unless there were something in the case which cast discredit upon the witness's testimony, was proper. Engmann v. Immel (1884) 59 Wis. 249, 18 N. W. 152.

When the genuineness of a signature is in dispute, the number of witnesses upon two sides of the question does not always control; the knowledge of a witness and the means of his knowledge, his honesty and intelligence, are to be considered in determining what weight should be given to his evidence. Long v. Little (1886) 119 Ill. 600, 8 N. E. 194.

The jury must conclude, from the facts stated by the witness, the times, places, opportunities, and circumstances under which he acquired his knowledge, whether he really knows it or not; and they should consider the capacity and experience of the witness. If he is an illiterate man, or one whose business seldom brings him into contact with writing, his opinion would be entitled to much less weight than if he were an educated man, himself a penman accustomed to correspondence and to seeing people write, even if he be in no sense an expert. United States v. Gleason (1889) 37 Fed. 331.

The weight of such an opinion as evidence will in general depend upon the credibility of the witness and the extent of his means or opportunity of becoming familiar with the handwriting or signature of the individual in question; it may also be affected by the testimony of other witnesses to the same point, as well as by other facts and circumstances developed at the trial. Salazar v. Taylor (1893) 18 Colo. 538, 33 Pac. 369.

But a verdict establishing the genuineness of a disputed signature was set aside as against the weight of evidence, where only one witness expressed a belief as to the genuineness of the signature, and nine witnesses, one of them called by the party producing the instrument, all being equally familiar with the handwriting in question, swore that they had no doubt the signature was a forgery. Bell v. Shields (1842) 19 N. J. L. 93.

As against the testimony of eyewitnesses, the opinions of other witnesses, merely from knowledge of the handwriting, do not find favor. 64 L. R. A.

So an instruction that the opinions of witnesses based upon their acquaintance with the genuine signatures of a party are unsatisfactory, and ought not to overthrow positive and direct testimony of a credible witness who testifies from personal knowledge; but that, in case of a conflict between the positive evidence of witnesses in regard to the genuineness of handwriting, they are important as corroborative evidence,—is not erroneous. Bruner v. Wade (1892) 84 Iowa, 698, 51 N. W. 251. And Hunsberger's Estate (1895) 11 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 165, and Risley v. Indianapolis, B. & W. R. Co. (1877) 7 Biss. 408, Fed. Cas. No. 11,859 accord.

But the testimony of a man that he has not signed a document is not of a higher grade of evidence than the testimony of a man who is acquainted with his handwriting and swears as to his opinion of it. Lefferts v. State (1886) 49 N. J. L. 26, 6 Atl. 521.

So a letter proved to be in the handwriting of one of the parties by the testimony of three witnesses acquainted with his handwriting, was properly allowed to go to the jury, although the signature was denied by the testimony of the party charged with it. Burgess v. Burgess (1895) 44 Neb. 16, 62 N. W. 242.

In an action on a promissory note, when the plaintiff produced several witnesses, two of whom were acquainted with the defendant's handwriting and believed the signature to be his, and another testified as an expert, from comparison, that it was genuine, and a fourth gave evidence tending to show an admission of the signature by the defendant, a verdict for the defendant, whose only evidence on the other side was his own testimony, was set aside. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. McMillan (1871) 31 U. C. Q. B. 596.

But in Louisiana the conflicting evidence of witnesses to the genuineness of a writing will be outweighed by the sworn statement of an unimpeached witness charged with the writing, that he did not execute it. Bayly v. Fourchy (1880) 32 La. Ann. 136.

It is not a violation of N. C. Code, § 413, forbidding the judge to express "an opinion whether a fact is fully or sufficiently proved," to charge the jury that an opinion as to the handwriting of an individual ought to be received with caution, and that direct evidence that an individual, when he saw the note in connection of the defendant with the offense charged, and hence to have limited that proof to mere motive would have been error.

Exception was taken to the refusal of the court to give the following instruction: "If the jury, or any one of the jury, after having considered all the evidence in this case, and after having consulted with his fellow jurymen, should entertain a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt, or, after such consideration and consultation, should entertain a reasonable doubt as to whether or not the defendant was present at the time and place of commission of the alleged shooting, then the jury cannot find the defendant guilty." While this request was not allowed, the court did not overlook the individual duties and responsibilities of the jurors. In one question, admitted having executed it, was entitled to greater weight than the expression of opinion by witnesses or experts as to the falsity of the handwriting. Buxly v. Buxton (1885) 92 N. C. 479.

The weight to be given to the testimony of similarity of signature is much more persuasive and satisfactory than that resulting from evidence of dissimilarity; for it is the experience of all business men that persons often vary materially in their signatures, depending sometimes upon the character of the pen, quality of paper or ink, and nervous condition of the writer, his posture in writing, his freedom from every interference, and many other circumstances, all of which serve to occasion dissimilarity. Sarvent v. Hesdra (1880) 5 Redf. 47.

The evidence of a witness who swears that he saw one of the parties sign the disputed instrument ought to outweigh the statement of another and equally credible witness, who testifies that he is acquainted with the handwriting of the alleged signer, and that he does not believe the signature to be genuine. Dissimilitude may be occasioned by a variety of circumstances,—by the state of health and spirits of the writer, by the materials, by his position, by his hurry or care. The testimony of a witness who speaks from his own personal knowledge is more satisfactory and convincing than the testimony of another who speaks of matters that lie in opinion only. Risley v. Indianapolis, B. & W. R. Co. (1877) 7 Biss. 408, Fed. Cas. No. 11,859.

And clearly the testimony of witnesses upon a trial for forgery, who swear that they are acquainted with the handwriting of the accused, and that the signature alleged to be forged is not in his handwriting, is not such that much reliance can be placed upon it; since the forger seeks to disguise his own handwriting, and to imitate that of the man whose signature he forges. Langdon v. People (1890) 133 Ill. 382, 24 N. E. 874.

A deposition in which the deponent swears that a writing purporting to be a will, which had been shown to him by the propounder of the will some time before the taking of the deposition, was in the handwriting of the deceased, was held to be competent evidence in spite of the objection that it was not competent for the witness to give evidence of the handwriting of a paper shown to him before the deposition was of the instructions given, they were told that "the state must prove by competent evidence every essential element of the crime charged, to the satisfaction of each and every juror, beyond a reasonable doubt." This was a sufficient admonition that each juror might act upon his own judgment, and each should be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that every element of the offense had been proved, and unless it was so proved there could be no conviction. It is argued that this rule of individual responsibility should have been applied to the matter of alibi. It is not necessary, nor would it be proper, for the court to make special application of the rule of individual right and duty of each juror to every branch and feature of the case. When the rule has been stated to the jury, and ap-made, and without having the paper before him when he made his deposition; there being no distinct proof that the paper shown to him was the paper offered for probate. The objection went rather to the weight of the evidence than to the competency of the witness. Whether the testimony proved the identity of the paper was a question for the jury,—especially as the witness had been cross-examined on the occasion when his deposition was taken. Nuckols v. Jones (1851) 8 Gratt. 267.

When a plea of forgery is made to an action on an obligation, and is supported by the oath of a party, in Louisiana, much stronger evidence should be required of the execution of the instrument than in the ordinary case of a general denial. So proof by witnesses who have not seen the person in question write or sign, and who only express their belief or knowledge of the genuineness of the signature in dispute from its similarity and likeness to signatures of the same person which they have seen, is insufficient to support a verdict establishing the obligation. Robinson v. Arnet (1840) 15 La. 282.

The mere proof of handwriting, of persons who did not subscribe the instrument in question as witnesses or see it executed, is not sufficient, without any record evidence in confirmation, to establish the validity of a claim to land under the Federal statutes in regard to rights or titles derived from the Spanish or Mexican governments. United States v. Oslo (1859) 23 How. 273, 16 L. ed. 457.

b. Expert testimony.

(For treatment of the subject of the weight of evidence of handwriting from comparison, see the note, XII. a, to University of Illinois v. Spalding, 62 L. R. A. 817.)

Of all kinds of expert testimony that as to handwriting is probably looked upon with the least favor; as is declared in Sarvent v. Hesdra (1880) 5 Redf. 87. Besides the frequent charge of venality, made against the handwriting expert, well illustrated by the words of Lord Campbell in Tracy Peerage (1843) 10 Clark & F. 154, where he voiced his opinion "that hardly any weight is to be given to the evidence of what are called scientific witnesses," and that "they come with a bias on their minds to support the cause on which they are embarked," plied generally to every phase of the case and every ingredient of the offense, the purpose of the law has been subserved. There was no request for a special and distinct declaration on the law of alibi, nor any allusion to the subject, except the incidental reference to it in the requested instruction as to the individual duties and responsibilities of jurors. If the defendant desired a distinct instruction as to that defense, it should have been requested; and the failure, therefore, to give a special declaration, is not a ground for reversal.

Complaint is also made of a portion of the charge given which stated that, "while the statute of this state provides that a person charged with crime may testify in his own behalf, he is under no obligation to do so, and the statute expressly declares that his neglect to testify shall not create any presumption against him." This was evidently given for the benefit of the defendant, who failed to testify in his own behalf. The complaint is that the court did not call attention to the further provision of the statute that the prosecuting attorney cannot refer to the circumstance that defendant did not testify, and that it should not be considered by the court or jury before whom the trial takes place. We think the instruction as given was beneficial to the defendant, and we cannot conceive that the omission of the other provision of the statute could have prejudiced the defendant.

There is criticism of the instruction as to circumstantial evidence, but we think it a the evidence is most frequently attacked on the ground of uncertainty and inconclusiveness.

So courts are found declaring that the evidence of experts "is so weak and decrepit as scarcely to deserve a place in our jurisprudence" (Cowan v. Beall [1874] 1 MacArth. 271); or "much too loose and unsatisfactory to lay the foundation for a judicial decision" (People v. Spooner [1845] 1 Denio, 343, 43 Am. Dec. 672); or far from satisfactory, and to be received with great care and caution (State v. Van Tassel [1897] 103 Iowa, 6, 72 N. W. 497; Daniels v. Foster [1870] 26 Wis. 686).

An instruction in regard to the testimony of handwriting experts, that it should be received by the jury with great caution; that they were at liberty to reject it, like the testimony of any other witness, if, after due consideration, they deemed it not well founded in fact; and that they were not legally compelled to follow the opinion of any such witness unless they were satisfied that it was correct,—was not erroneous. Haight v. Vallet (1891) 89 Cal. 245, 23 Am. St. Rep. 485, 26 Pac. 897.

So the jury were charged, in United States v. Malloy (1887) 31 Fed. 19, that the testimony of an expert as to handwriting is simply an expression under oath of an opinion which he entertains; and the jury are not bound by it further than it coincides with their own opinion on an examination made by them of the handwriting in question, or than they think deserves to be credited with an account of the experience of the witness.

And a charge that the opinion of handwriting experts was to be considered in connection with other evidence, but was not of itself conclusive; that the rule permitting experts to testify was grounded on the fact that such an opinion was generally correct, but that its value was to be determined by the jury with reference to the skill which the witness manifested; that experts were not infallible, but that their opinion was generally reliable,—was not improper. Pratt v. Rawson (1868) 40 Vt. 183.

Unless an expert who expresses his opinion as to the genuineness of a handwriting also states the reasons for his opinion, the evidence amounts to very little, if anything whatever, and in this case was stricken from the records. Re Koch (1900) 33 Misc. 153, 68 N. Y. Supp. 875.

The cashier of a bank, as a witness to handwriting with which he is acquainted, is entitled to no more credit than any other person of equal skill. Murphy v. Hagerman (1833) Wright (Ohio) 293.

In Mississippi an instruction to the jury to the effect that, while the opinion of an expert is competent to go to the jury on an issue involving the genuineness of a written instrument, such evidence is intrinsically weak and ought to be received and weighed by the jury with great caution, is error. The weight and value of such evidence must be judged by the jury without any influencing instruction, either weakening or strengthening, from the court. Coleman v. Adair (1898) 75 Miss. 660, 23 So. 369.

In Robson v. Locke (1824) 2 Addams Eccl. Rep. 53, it was declared that the fact that a signature gives the appearance of having been "painted," or touched up, proves nothing, since many persons have a trick or habit of retouching their letters. It may happen to any person not in the habit of it to pass over his letters a second time from a failure of ink in the pen; and this circumstance of "painting" is in itself extremely trivial.

The opinions of experts, however skilful they may be, are weaker in degree of certainty than the direct evidence of a subscribing witness who swears to the genuineness of both signatures. Brown v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. (1880) 32 N. J. Eq. 809.

Thus on a contest as to the genuineness of the handwriting of a deed, when there was clear and distinct evidence of a surviving witness, who was not cross-examined, that he saw the deed signed, which evidence was unimpeached, it was not error in the vice chancellor to decide upon the point at issue, without granting an issue as to whether the signature of the deed was genuine, from the evidence of certain persons skilled in handwriting that in their opinion, looking at the handwriting of the signature, it was not genuine. The court said here: "That could be no counterbalance to the direct evidence of the attesting witness, and under all the circumstances of the case it would have been very indiscreet to grant such an issue." Newton v. Ricketts (1861) 9 H. L. Cas. 263, 31 L. J. Ch. N. S. 247, 7 Jur. N. S. 952, 5 L. T. N. S. 62, 10 Week. Rep. 1.

The testimony of expert witnesses to handwriting is not entitled to the same weight as the testimony of persons who speak concerning matters within their personal observation; and, as these witnesses simply express opinions which fair statement of law as applied to the facts in this case, and that nothing in it could have misled the jury.

No error was committed by the court in declining to give an instruction on assault. The act was committed with a deadly weapon, and, under the testimony, if the defendant was guilty of any offense, it was one of a higher grade than mere assault.

In connection with defendant's letters to Maud Holmes, her letters to him were read to the jury. Objections were made to the admission of these, and although the ruling was not duly assigned as error, we are now asked to consider it. Her letters were made in duplicate, one of which she sent to him, and the other she retained. His letters were responsive to those written by her, and hers explained those written by him. Her letters were, in a sense, adopted by him, and made a part of his own, and together constituted a single and continuous correspondence. If error had been regularly assigned on the reception of these letters, we would not regard it as ground for reversal.

The sufficiency of the testimony is challenged, and, although it is largely circumstantial, we think it strongly tends to prove the guilt of the defendant. The letters against which so many objections are made constitute a great part of the incriminating evidence. That the defendant is the author of the letters was quite satisfactorily shown, and although he assumed several characters, and wrote under several names, all the letters fit together, and disclose a base purpose they entertain, the jury should regard their statements in this matter as opinions merely, and should give them such weight, only, as they think the opinions deserve considering the experience which the experts have had. United States v. Pendergast (1887) 32 Fed. 198.

When two officials before whom an instrument was executed swore positively to the fact that it was executed upon the day of its date, detailing circumstances from which they were able to make this statement, the testimony of experts that the date has been altered is not sufficient to outweigh their positive statements. Spooner v. Best (1880) 8 Ky. L. Rep. 185.

This accords with Card v. Moore (1902) 68 App. Div. 327, 74 N. Y. Supp. 18. There experts were allowed to testify that a typewritten agreement, upon careful inspection and under the scrutiny of the microscope, showed that a date had been tampered with; and it was said: "The testimony of an expert, however eminent, based upon the appearance of a paper of some age, when that appearance might be due to other causes than those inferred from visual examination and microscopic scrutiny, should not prevail with us against positive testimony of the witnesses in this case, . . . so as to require at our hands a reversal."

VIII. Summary.

Besides the mere opinion of the witness that a handwriting is genuine or not, it is competent to prove that the supposed forger is clever at imitating the handwriting of others; that a chemical found in the possession of one accused of altering an instrument had the actual effect of obliterating writing when used for that purpose; but a mere experiment with chemicals, generally, is not of sufficient direct value as evidence to be admissible; a witness may be examined, however, as to such matters as a change in the handwriting of the person in question. (Supra, II.) And purely conjectural matters, as of the capabilities, for doing a certain thing, of the person supposed to have written the disputed writing; or as to what would have been the judgment of the witness as to the writing in other circumstances,—are not properly the subject of testimony by witnesses. (Supra, III.)

It is now competent to call experts to testify from the mere appearance of the writing in question that it is genuine, or is in a disguised hand; or to decipher obscurities of handwriting; or to give their opinions as to the age of a manuscript appearing to be old. As to opinions whether two writings were executed at the same time and with the same ink, however, there is sharp contradiction. Various incidental matters, which may be considered the grounds for the opinion of the witness as to the main question of genuineness, may be gone into by the witness; such as whether erasures or writings were made before or after the paper was folded, the digging out of the paper, the stiffness of the writing, the different inks used. But some matters are held to be for the jury alone, such as whether there has been an erasure; and whether the words are crowded so as to indicate interpolation. Mere possibilities, such as whether the person in question could improve his handwriting up to a certain standard, or whether an accurate tracing could be made in a particular manner, are not properly the subject of the opinions of experts. (Supra, IV.)

A cross-mark intended as a signature is generally not capable of proof, like handwriting, unless there appears to the court to be some distinctive characteristic about the mark by which it may be recognized; but the true rule would seem to admit proof of a mark by a witness who swears that he knows it from some peculiarity observed by him in it. (Supra, V.)

It seems that press or photographic copies of manuscript are capable of proof like ordinary handwriting. (Supra, VI.)

As for the value of the testimony of witnesses to handwriting there is, of course, no general rule; but, compared with the evidence of eye-witnesses, mere opinion is generally of less weight, except when the eyewitness is the person charged with the writing; but generally evidence going to show similarity of the disputed writing with the general character of the handwriting is of more convincing weight than evidence to the contrary effect. (Supra, VII. a.)

Expert evidence to handwriting is in small favor, and is of great weight generally only as against evidence of the same kind, and without the reasons for the opinion of the witness being given, is worthless. Juries, also, will be charged that, as against the testimony of witnesses speaking of matters within their personal observation, the expert's testimony is not entitled to the same weight. (Supra, VII. b.)

L. B. B.

to gain the confidence of the young woman, and procure her to meet him in a remote place, go through the form of a marriage, and thus establish a relation necessarily illicit. The improbability of a man so advanced in years and having a large family engaging in such a scheme, and carrying it out at such risk and with so much trouble, is urged against the verdict; but, however strange and unnatural such conduct is, the proof is so convincing that we have no inclination to disturb a finding based thereon. The letters show remarkable cunning in playing the different parts which he assumed, and also great persistency in the efforts to accomplish his purpose; but there are so many of them,—39 in number,—and they are so extended, that it is impracticable to set them out, or even to summarize them, here. In connection with the letters themselves, are the admissions made by him at the time of his visit that he was the George R. Clark who had written the preceding letters, and he was fully identified as the defendant; the vindictive feeling exhibited towards a young man who was paying especial attention to Maud, including an attempt to blacken his reputation and discredit him with the Holmes family; his ill will towards Maud herself, and intimations of a coming tragedy when his plans were thwarted; his prowling about the house where Maud lived, in the nighttime, and his attempted assault upon her which was interrupted; the poisoning of the dog, so that he might go to the Holmes place without interference; the tracks such as his shoes would make which were traced from the Holmes place to his farm; the wadding of the gun found after the shooting, which corresponded with some used by the defendant; the indications, too, that the shot was fired from such a gun as he had. These facts and circumstances, together with matters not enumerated, furnish sufficient support for the verdict.

All the objections made have not been mentioned, but all have been examined, and we find nothing in them disclosing prejudicial error.

The judgment will therefore be affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

Rehearing denied.

64 L. R. A.

C. C. STOFFER et al., Pliffs. in Err.,
v.

James S. HARLAN et al.

(.....Kan.....)

*A mortgagee of real property in possession of the mortgaged premises after condition broken may not be disposed without the payment of the mortgage debt, unless his possession was acquired under such circumstances that he ought not, in equity, to be permitted to retain it. One who assumes possession of the property under color of foreclosure proceedings believed by him to be valid, however defective they may be in fact, is within the protection of this rule.

(December 12, 1903.)

ERROR to the District Court for Lyon County to review a judgment in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover possession of certain real estate. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. G. Hutchison, for plaintiffs in error:

The alleged sale was void and passed no title, and therefore judgment should have been for the plaintiffs in error.

Gordon v. Bodwell, 59 Kan. 51, 68 Am. St. Rep. 341, 51 Pac. 906; Taylor v. Buck, 61 Kan. 694, 78 Am. St. Rep. 346, 60 Pac. 736; Rice v. Smith, 18 N. H. 369; Freeman, Void Judicial Sales, § 46; Robinson v. Hall, 33 Kan. 139, 5 Pac. 763.

The court's jurisdiction had ceased.

Freeman, Judgm. § 142; Wright v. Leclair, 3 Iowa, 221; Mulvey v. Carpenter, 78 Ill. 580; Johnson v. Anderson, 76 Va. 766; Van Fleet, Collateral Attack, § 699.

Therefore, defendants in error failed to show that they had acquired the title of plaintiffs in error, by virtue of their foreclosure proceedings, and they are compelled to rely upon their possession as being lawful under their claim that they hold a mortgage on the land and have a right to the possession until it is paid.

It is for the occupant to show that he has a right to possession.

Bedell v. Shaw, 59 N. Y. 46; Gross v. Welwood, 90 N. Y. 638.

The presumption is that the debt is satisfied.

*Headnote by MASON, J.

NOTE.—As to who is mortgagee in possession, and what are rights, see, in this series, Cook v. Cooper, 7 L. R. A. 273, and note.

State ex rel. Henry v. McArthur, 5 Kan. 281; Lytle v. Cincinnati Mfg. Co. 4 Ohio, 466; 18 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 1057; Lambson v. Moffett, 61 Md. 426; Stewart v. Peterson, 63 Pa. 230; Von Puhl v. Rucker, 6 Iowa, 187.

The assent, express or implied, of the mortgagor that the mortgagee may take possession under or because of his mortgage, is of the essence of a mortgagee in possession.

Rogers v. Benton, 39 Minn. 39, 12 Am. St. Rep. 613, 38 N. W. 765; Jones, Mortg. § 717; Newton v. McKay, 30 Mich. 380; Humphrey v. Hurd, 29 Mich. 44; Morrow v. Morgan, 43 Tex. 304; Pierce v. Grimley, 77 Mich. 273, 43 N. W. 932; Cable v. Ellis, 86 Ill. 525.

Defendants in error got into possession surreptitiously and by a collusive deal between them and the tenant of plaintiffs in error. This is not a lawful possession, and will not prevent plaintiffs in error from maintaining an action of ejectment for the land, although the debt had not been paid.

Forbes v. Caldurell, 39 Kan. 14, 17 Pac. 478; Jones, Mortg. § 715, p. 620; Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1190; Ferman v. Lombard Invest. Co. 56 Minn. 166, 57 N. W. 309; Davenport v. Turpin, 41 Cal. 100; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1004; Cable v. Ellis, 86 Ill. 525; Rodriguez v. Haynes, 76 Tex. 225, 13 S. W. 296; Hannay v. Thompson, 14 Tex. 144; Morrow v. Morgan, 43 Tex. 304; Newton v. McKay, 30 Mich. 381; Russell v. Ely, 2 Black. 575, 17 L. ed. 258; Gillett v. Eaton, 6 Wis. 30; Tallman v. Ely, 6 Wis. 257; Madison Ave. Baptist Church v. Baptist Church, 73 N. Y. 82; Bennett v. Austin, 81 N. Y. 308; Howell v. Leavitt, 95 N. Y. 617; Galloway v. Kerr (Tex. Civ. App.) 63 S. W. 180; Kerr v. Galloway (Tex.) 64 S. W. 858; Pingrey, Mortg. § 910; Reading v. Waterman, 46 Mich. 107, 8 N. W. 691; Mills v. Hamilton, 49 Iowa, 105; Mills v. Heaton, 52 Iowa, 217, 2 N. W. 1112; Howard v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. Woolw. 57, Fed. Cas. No. 6,760; Witherell v. Wiberg, 4 Sawy. 232, Fed. Cas. No. 17,917; Newell, Ejectment, p. 113; Boone, Mortg. § 118.

Mr. Charles B. Graves, for defendants in error:

The order of sale was not void because the seal of the court was omitted therefrom when attacked collaterally.

Paine v. Spratley, 5 Kan. 525; Bowman v. Cockrill, 6 Kan. 324; Cross v. Know, 32 Kan. 725, 5 Pac. 32; Dickens v. Orane, 33 Kan. 344, 6 Pac. 630; Pritchard v. Madren, 31 Kan. 39, 2 Pac. 691; Phillips v. Love, 57 Kan. 834, 48 Pac. 142; Watson v. Tromble, 33 Neb. 450, 29 Am. St. Rep. 492, 50 N. W. 331; Rorer, Judicial Sales, § 57, pp. 30, 76; Van Fleet, Collateral Attack, § 66; 64 L. R. A.

Rood, Attachments, Judgments, & Executions, §§ 26, 46; Head v. Daniels, 38 Kan. 12, 15 Pac. 911; Satcher v. Satcher, 41 Ala. 26, 91 Am. Dec. 498; Terrill v. Auchauer, 14 Ohio, St. 80; Williams v. Harrington, 53 N. C. (11 Ired. L.) 616, 53 Am. Dec. 421; Embury v. Conner, 3 N. Y. 511, 53 Am. Dec. 333.

Defendants are not required, at their peril, to obtain the consent of the real owners of the land, however hidden such ownership may be, to receive the equitable protection of mortgagees in possession. When a mortgagee in good faith begins the proper foreclosure proceedings to realize upon his security, and in good faith conducts the proceeding to an end, and especially where jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject-matter is obtained; and in such case the court adjudicates that the amount claimed is a first lien upon the land, and orders the land sold, and afterwards confirms the sale, and orders a deed, and the purchaser with such deed in good faith acquires possession without a violation of law or breach of the peace or the commission of a fraud,—the possession so acquired places him in a position to retain such possession, against the mortgagor, until his debt is paid, even though the proceedings in foreclosure are invalid.

Kelso v. Norton, 65 Kan. 778, 93 Am. St. Rep. 308, 70 Pac. 896; Rogers v. Benton, 39 Minn. 39, 12 Am. St. Rep. 613, 38 N. W. 765; Backus v. Burke, 63 Minn. 272, 65 N. W. 459; Romig v. Gillett, 187 U. S. 111, 47 L. ed. 97, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Cooke v. Cooper, 18 Or. 142, 7 L. R. A. 273, 17 Am. St. Rep. 709, 22 Pac. 945.

Mason, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Prior to 1889 C. C. Stouffer was the owner of a tract of land in Lyon county, subject to a mortgage to the Emporia Investment Company. It was arranged that a new mortgage, maturing January 1, 1894, should be given in satisfaction or extension of the old one. For some reason, it was agreed that, instead of Stouffer executing the new mortgage himself, the property should be conveyed to one F. R. Stevenson, who should make the mortgage, and then reconvey to Stouffer. This plan was carried out, although the formal reconveyance was not made until some time later. Stevenson's part in the transaction is of no moment, as he was merely acting for Stouffer. In April, 1889, this mortgage was bought by, and assigned to, Phineas Prouty. In 1891 Prouty died, and executors were appointed and qualified. In October, 1894, suit to foreclose the mortgage was brought by the Emporia Investment Company in the name of the executors; service being made upon Stouffer, a nonresident, by publication. The executors afterwards ratified and adopted the act of the investment company in bringing the suit. A judgment of foreclosure was rendered, and an order of sale was issued, from which the seal of the court was omitted. Under color of this process the property was sold by the sheriff and bid in by Richard D. Harlan, one of the plaintiffs. In October, 1895, at the request of the executors, a sheriff's deed was made to James S. Harlan, who held it for the estate, acting for and under the direction of the executors. W. L. Loomis, as the tenant of Stouffer, occupied the property in 1895, and until about March 1, 1896, when Edwin Hawkins, to whom Harlan proposed to lease it for the ensuing season, at Harlan's suggestion, requested him to vacate as soon as his time as tenant expired, which he understood to be on March 1st. Loomis did vacate the property, accordingly, prior to March 1st; and after that date Hawkins entered upon it as the tenant of the executors, who thereby acquired its quiet, peaceable, and exclusive possession and control. Stouffer had no knowledge of the foreclosure proceedings until the summer of 1896. In September, 1898, he began an action against Harlan and the executors for the recovery of the possession of the property, and was defeated. He brings this proceeding to reverse the judgment.

The omission of the seal rendered the order of sale and all proceedings under it null and void. Gordon v. Bodwell, 59 Kan. 51, 68 Am. St. Rep. 341, 51 Pac. 906. Irrespective, therefore, of any question growing out of its being made to an apparent stranger to the proceedings upon which it was based, the sheriff's deed passed no title. The trial court held that the circumstances stated made the defendants "mortgagees in possession," and precluded the plaintiff from recovering the property without paying the mortgage debt. The question here presented is whether this ruling was correct. The expression "mortgagee in possession" has been adopted by the courts and law writers as a convenient phrase to describe the condition of a mortgagee who is in possession of mortgaged premises under such circumstances as to make the satisfaction of his lien a prerequisite to his being dispossessed, even in jurisdictions where the mortgage itself can confer no possessory right either before or after default; but the authorities are in some confusion as to what these circumstances are. It has been said that the possession must be "lawfully" acquired (Gillett v. Eaton, 6 Wis. 30; Tallman v. Ely, 6 Wis. 244); that it is sufficient that it is acquired "peaceably" (Hen- ney v. Farrell, 20 Wis. 42; Brinkman v. Jones, 44 Wis. 498), or "without force" (Pell v. Ulmar, 18 N. Y. 139); that it must be taken under the mortgage, and because of it (Rogers v. Benton, 39 Minn. 39, 12 Am. St. Rep. 613, 38 N. W. 765); that it need not be under the mortgage, nor with a view thereto (Madison Ave. Baptist Church v. Baptist Church, 73 N. Y. 82); that it must be by consent of the mortgagor, express or implied (Rogers v. Benton, 39 Minn. 39, 12 Am. St. Rep. 613, 38 N. W. 765); that it is not sufficient if obtained by an arrangement with the tenant of the mortgagor after his lease had expired (Russell v. Ely, 2 Black, 575, 17 L. ed. 258). Many cases are reported in which possession was obtained under color of irregular or void foreclosure proceedings. In some of these, such as Kelso v. Norton, 65 Kan. 778, 93 Am. St. Rep. 308, 70 Pac. 896, and Cross v. Knox, 32 Kan. 725, 5 Pac. 32, the possession is held sufficient upon the ground that it was taken with the express or implied consent or acquiescence of the mortgagor, or that the mortgagor had waived the right to object. But in others the fact that the mortgagee took possession in reliance upon foreclosure proceedings which he in good faith believed to be valid is made a distinct ground for according him the rights of a mortgagee in possession, apart from any question of the consent or acquiescence of the mortgagor. In Van Dyne v. Thayer, 14 Wend. 233, it is said: "If the mortgagee after forfeiture entered into possession, either by the consent of the mortgagor or by means of legal proceedings, he may defend himself there,—at least till his debt is paid." However, as possession in that case was not taken in virtue of any proceedings in court, it would seem that the words "or by means of legal proceedings" are obiter, or else "legal" is used merely in the sense of "lawful." In Cooke v. Cooper, 18 Or. 142, 7 L. R. A. 273, 17 Am. St. Rep. 709, 22 Pac. 945, the second paragraph of the syllabus, which is quoted with approval in Kelso v. Norton, 65 Kan. 785, 93 Am. St. Rep. 311, 70 Pac. 898, reads as follows: "If, for any cause, in the foreclosure suit, the proceeding is ineffectual to foreclose the mortgage, and the mortgagee purchases at a sale under such void proceedings, and enters into the possession under such sale, his relation to the mortgaged premises is that of a mortgagee in possession." This accurately indicates the scope of the opinion, but the argument in support of the conclusion is based almost entirely upon the authority of various New York cases in which the language used is broader than the facts under consideration required. In Bryan v. Brasius (Ariz.) 31 Pac. 519, in a case where possession was taken under invalid foreclosure proceedings, without fraud (there being, however, no suggestion of consent of the mortgagor), it is said: "But the facts in the case disclose an indebtedness of $2,500 to Kales from T. J. Bryan, and a mortgage to secure the same on the property in dispute; a proceeding in court, in good faith and without fraud on the part of Kales or anyone, to foreclose the mortgage (the proceeding thought to be valid and regular on its face); a sale under the decree of the court, and possession taken in pursuance thereof; and taxes paid and valuable and lasting improvements made by the purchaser and his grantees. The plaintiff brings suit by action of ejectment. He does not pay or offer to pay the mortgage debt. In this territory the action of ejectment is based on the right of possession. I think, on the very best of authority and the highest equity, the defendant must be held to be the mortgagee in possession, and subrogated to the rights of Kales under his mortgage, and entitled to remain in possession till the requirements of equity are fully met." This case was taken to the United States Supreme Court, where it was affirmed (Bryan v. Brasius, 162 U. S. 415, 40 L. ed. 1022, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803, following Bryan v. Kales, 162 U. S. 411, 40 L. ed. 1020, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802), but upon the authority of cases arising in jurisdictions where the mortgagee, after condition broken, has the legal estate in the mortgaged property, without any discussion as to whether the rule should be the same where the mortgage merely gives a lien. In Romig v. Gillett, 187 U. S. 111, 47 L. ed. 97, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40, it is said: "A mortgagee who enters into possession, not forcibly, but peacefully, and under the authority of a foreclosure proceeding, cannot be dispossessed by the mortgagor, or one claiming under him, so long as the mortgage remains unpaid." But this is stated, not as a determination then reached by the court upon consideration of the matter before it, but as the effect of the opinion in Bryan v. Brasius, 162 U. S. 415, 40 L. ed. 1022, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803, and cases there cited. In Barson v. Mulligan, 66 App. Div. 486, 73 N. Y. Supp. 262, it is said: "The only question, therefore, that can arise as to the right of a mortgagee in possession to hold the premises until the mortgage debt is paid, depends upon the method by which he obtained possession, and it is claimed that that possession must be with the assent of the mortgagor; but I can find no authority limiting the right of a mortgagee to hold property of which he is in lawful possession to a case where such possession was with the consent of the mortgagor. . . . 64 L. R. A.

What is essential to entitle a mortgagee to hold possession of the premises until his mortgage debts are paid is that his possession should have been lawfully acquired. If, under a deed which purports to convey title, a mortgagee enters into possession, although that deed is void, he is entitled to maintain possession until his mortgage debt is paid. This follows from the decisions in the cases in which a mortgagee has entered under a deed in a foreclosure proceeding, either statutory or by action of foreclosure." But it is at least doubtful whether this language is warranted by the authorities to which it refers.

In Backus v. Burke, 63 Minn. 272, 65 N. W. 459, the court gave full consideration to the very question under discussion, and reached a conclusion indicated by the following extracts from the opinion: "We are of the opinion that when there is a default in the mortgage, and the mortgagee, in apparent good faith, makes a void foreclosure, and, after the end of the year to redeem, the purchaser at the foreclosure sale takes possession under color of the foreclosure proceedings he should be treated as a mortgagee in possession, whether he takes possession with or without the consent, either express or implied, of the mortgagor. It is true that, unlike a mortgage at common law, a mortgage under our statute gives the mortgagee neither the title nor right of possession. But the courts were long ago compelled to recognize a marked difference between the character of our statutory mortgage after default, but before foreclosure, and the character of the same mortgage after an abortive foreclosure, and the year to redeem has expired. . . . Every mortgagor understands, when he executes a mortgage, that, if he defaults in the conditions to be by him performed, an attempt will be made to foreclose the mortgage. If he makes no effort to take advantage of the irregularities in an abortive foreclosure until after the year to redeem has expired, and the purchaser at the foreclosure sale has in good faith taken possession, what court will then oust such purchaser without payment of the mortgage indebtedness, even though there was no express consent of the mortgagor to such possession, and the circumstances raise no presumption of an implied consent? . . . Surely, the mortgagor cannot, in such a case, obtain possession except through an action to redeem, whether the purchaser has been in possession one day or nine years. But if the purchaser has been in possession only one day, it cannot be held that so short a period of possession is of itself sufficient evidence of the consent of the mortgagor to that possession. Then it cannot be held that the purchaser's right to continue in such possession, taken peaceably and in good faith, after the year has expired, is based on the mortgagor's consent, express or implied, but, on the contrary, it is based on that rule of law which denies to the mortgagor in such a case any remedy but one in equity, which will compel him to do equity." This we regard as the most full and satisfactory discussion of the question upon its merits to be found in any adjudicated case.

On the other hand, in Howell v. Leavitt, 95 N. Y. 617, the owners of the mortgaged property were permitted to maintain ejectment against a mortgagee who had acquired possession by a writ of assistance under a void judgment. The land was owned by minors, and occupied by their tenant, who was dispossessed under the writ without their knowledge. The decision was based upon the ground that such possession was obtained by force, and was unlawful. In Bowen v. Brogan, 119 Mich. 218, 75 Am. St. Rep. 387, 77 N. W. 942, and in McClory v. Ricks, 11 N. D. 38, 88 N. W. 1042, it is held that ejectment may be maintained against a mortgagee who is in possession under a void or irregular foreclosure; but the argument presented in support of these decisions, and of others which they follow, is largely directed against the right of the mortgagee who is out of possession to bring action to be let into possession, the courts refusing to recognize any distinction between the right to demand possession and the right to hold it when it is once obtained. The same conclusion is announced in Lewis v. Hamilton, 26 Colo. 263, 58 Pac. 196, but without extended discussion, and upon the authority of a Michigan case.

To determine the true extent of the doctrine under consideration in the face of these conflicting decisions, it is well to consider its origin and reason. In an article entitled, How Mortgagee, as Such, can Get Possession, published in the Albany Law Journal (vol. 26, p. 528, and vol. 27, p. 6), an ingenious review of the New York cases is presented in support of the contention that the right of the mortgagee to retain possession is founded upon contract, and therefore exists only when the mortgagor agrees that the mortgagee may take possession of the mortgaged property for his better security. This view would practically do away with the doctrine altogether, since it is not necessary to invoke any peculiar rule of equity to provide for the enforcement of such an agreement. In Howell v. Leavitt, 95 N. Y. 617, it is suggested that the old rule, existing when a mortgage actually passed the title to the property, kept its hold upon the later opinions when the reason which led to it was gone. Mr. Pomeroy, in his work on Equity Jurisprudence, adopts this view of the origin of the doctrine, but adds (vol. 3, § 1189): "The courts, while retaining the doctrine as settled, have guarded against any inference from it that the mortgagee has acquired a legal estate by his possession. His right to retain possession does not depend upon an estate held by him. His possession is protected by his lien. It is certainly more simple and just that the mortgagee should be left in possession, and the mortgagor forced to redeem, than that the mortgagor should be permitted to recover the possession by an action at law, and be immediately liable to the consequences of a foreclosure suit in equity brought by the mortgagee." And in Gillett v. Eaton, 6 Wis. 30, it is said: "If the defendant is turned out of possession because he is in as a mere mortgagee, he will be put to the trouble and expense of foreclosing his mortgage, and perhaps put to the necessity of taking legal steps to regain possession. It is not the policy of the law to encourage such litigation. And substantial justice will be better subserved by permitting the mortgagee to retain the possession which he has lawfully acquired, until the mortgagor, or those claiming under him, shall institute proceedings for the purpose of redemption." And in Tallman v. Ely, 6 Wis. 244: "It would be unwise, and inequitable to permit the grantee of the mortgagor to obtain the possession, as against the mortgagee or his assigns, while the mortgage debt remains unpaid. Under such circumstances, if the grantee desired to obtain possession of the premises he could file his bill to redeem, and the court could properly aid him in obtaining possession after the encumbrance was discharged. In this way equity could be fully done between all the parties. Again, if the court should put the mortgagor or his grantee in possession of the premises without requiring him first to pay off the mortgage, it might be called upon at the next moment, in a proceeding to foreclose and sell the mortgaged premises, to turn him out and reinstate the mortgagee or his assignee. But all this unnecessary expense and fruitless litigation can be avoided, and the rights and interests of the parties most completely subserved and protected, by adhering strictly to the doctrine that, if the mortgagee or his assigns, after forfeiture, obtains possession lawfully, the mortgagor, or those claiming under him, should not recover the possession without paying the money secured by the mortgage." Substantially the same reasoning is employed in other cases, as shown by several of the quotations already made. Whatever may be the source of the rule historically, we think it is justified upon equitable principles by the considerations just stated, and that it should be followed, because of that fact, and be administered with reference to it; that it should be acted upon when the circumstances are such that these reasons are applicable, and only then. It is obvious that such reasons apply to all cases in which the mortgagee has actual possession of the mortgaged property, except where he has acquired it under such circumstances that it would be inequitable to permit him to assert a right under it. The expression, frequently used, that the entry must be lawful, we interpret to mean, not that it must have been effected under a formal right capable of enforcement by legal proceedings, but that it must not be through any unlawful or wrongful act, upon which the mortgagee would be estopped to found a right. The importance given to the matter of the consent or acquiescence of the mortgagor we conceive to be derived, not from the idea of its establishing a contract (since, as already suggested, if a contract for possession exists, there is no occasion to invoke the rule), but from the fact that it frees the mortgagee from any suspicion of having obtained possession by fraud or force. We conclude that the true rule is that, when the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged premises after condition broken, he may not be dispossessed without a payment of the mortgage debt, unless his possession was acquired under such circumstances that he ought not, in equity, to be permitted to retain it. This conclusion may not go far toward the practical solution of questions involving the application of the doctrine, but it is sufficient for the purposes of the present case, since it is clear that one who assumes possession of the mortgaged property under color of foreclosure proceedings believed by him to be valid, however defective they may be in fact, cannot be thought to have thereby estopped himself to assert the right otherwise given him to retain possession until his debt is paid. There is nothing in the facts of this case to impeach the good faith of defendants in error, or to charge them with the use of force or fraud in gaining possession, and they are within the protection of the rule as stated.

Two minor questions are also presented. The plaintiff below, in his reply, pleaded that the mortgage debt had been paid. He offered no proof under this allegation until the cause had been submitted, and the decision of the court announced. Then he asked leave to introduce evidence in support of it, but the request was denied. We cannot say that this was an abuse of discretion. It is now urged, upon the authority of State ex rel. Henry v. McArthur, 5 Kan. 64 L. R. A.

280, that there was a presumption that the debt was paid, arising from the fact that the judgment had become dormant. If the judgment were dormant, as contended, the situation would furnish a good illustration of a class of cases, readily to be imagined, in which the doctrine just discussed serves to prevent gross injustice. But under the authority of Watson v. Keystone Ironworks Co. (Kan.) 74 Pac. 269, overruling State ex rel. Henry v. McArthur, 5 Kan. 280, the judgment or decree, so far as it affords a remedy against the land, has not become dormant. But the judgment was not dormant when this action was begun, and, if it had afterwards become dormant, that fact could not have raised a presumption of payment for the purposes of this case.

The plaintiff, upon other considerations, did recover a part of the real property sued for. The trial court divided the costs. It is claimed that this was error; that, under the authority of Meskimen v. Day, 35 Kan. 46, 10 Pac. 14, plaintiff, having recovered a part of the property sued for, should have been awarded all his costs. That rule holds good in purely legal cases; but where equitable issues are tried, and the defendant prevails in part, a division of the costs is not only permissible, but has been enforced by this court. Longworth v. Johnson, 66 Kan. 193, 71 Pac. 259.

The judgment is affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

John T. ATKINSON et al., Pliffs. in Err.,
v.

H. P. WOODMANSEE.

(.....Kan.....)

*1. Section 5121, Gen. Stat. 1901, being § 5 of the mechanic's lien law, and providing as follows: "And in case of action brought, any lien statement may be amended by leave of court in furtherance of justice as pleadings may be in any matter, except as to the amount claimed,"—permits an amendment, correcting the description of the property and the name of the owner, and does not thereby authorize the taking of property without due process of law.

*Headnotes by BURCH, J.

NOTE.—As to constitutionality of provision for attorneys' fees in a particular class of cases, see also, in this series, note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 586; and the later cases of Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Chowning, 24 L. R. A. 504; Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, 29 L. R. A. 386; Vogel v. Pekoe, 30 L. R. A. 491; Cameron v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 31 L. R. A. 553; Dell v. Marvin, 45 L. R. A. 201; Davidson v. Jennings, 48 L. R. A. 340; Gano v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 55 L. R. A. 263; and Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Simonson, 57 L. R. A. 765.

2. Section 5125, Gen. Stat. 1901, being § 9 of the mechanic's lien law, and providing as follows: "In an action brought by any artisan or day laborer to enforce any lien under this act, where judgment be rendered for plaintiff, the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court, which shall be taxed as costs in the action,"—denies to persons within the jurisdiction of this state the equal protection of the laws, and is therefore unconstitutional and void.

(December 12, 1903.)

ERROR to the District Court for Wyandotte County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to enforce a mechanic's lien. Modified and affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Joseph Johnson and J. A. Smith, for plaintiffs in error:

A claimant's lien must stand or fall with the lien on file at the expiration of the four months from the making of the improvement, and no amendment can be made as to substance after the four months have expired.

Dorman v. Crozier, 14 Kan. 224; Long v. Froman, 49 Kan. 360, 30 Pac. 461; Leavenworth, N. & S. R. Co. v. Whitaker, 42 Kan. 634, 22 Pac. 733; Cogshall v. Spurry, 47 Kan. 448, 28 Pac. 154; Parsons Water Co. v. Hill, 46 Kan. 145, 26 Pac. 412.

The statute allowing the attorney's fee imposes a penalty upon a certain class of persons, or litigants, not imposed upon other classes, and deprives them of the equal protection of the laws.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Wilder v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 70 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 289; Durkee v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 464, 9 Am. Rep. 500; Lafferty v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 71 Mich. 35, 38 N. W. 660; Grand Rapids Chair Co. v. Runnels, 77 Mich. 104, 43 N. W. 1006; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193; Johnson v. Goodyear Min. Co. 127 Cal. 4, 47 L. R. A. 338, 78 Am. St. Rep. 17, 59 Pac. 304; Davidson v. Jennings, 27 Colo. 187, 48 L. R. A. 340, 83 Am. St. Rep. 49, 60 Pac. 354; Randolph v. Builders' & Painters' Supply Co. 106 Ala. 501, 17 So. 721; Paddock v. Missouri P. R. Co. 155 Mo. 537, 56 S. W. 453; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Williams, 49 Ark. 492, 5 S. W. 883; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869, 7 N. E. 631; Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 32 L. R. A. 659, 52 Am. St. Rep. 365, 43 N. E. 1108; Williamson v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 105 64 L. R. A.

Fed. 31; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Hart, 112 Ga. 765, 38 S. E. 67; San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Wilson, 4 Tex. App. Civ. (Willson) p. 565, 19 S. W. 910; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 41 S. W. 680.

Messrs. Alden & McFadden and S. H. Whisman for defendant in error.

Burch, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In an action for the foreclosure of a mechanic's lien it was discovered that the land upon which the improvement had been erected had been misdescribed, and that the owner had been misnamed in the original lien statement. The district court permitted amendments to cure these defects, and rendered judgment foreclosing the lien. This action of the court is complained of. It was, however, fully warranted by § 5121, Gen. Stat. 1901, which provides as follows: "And in case of action brought, any lien statement may be amended by leave of court in furtherance of justice as pleadings may be in any matter, except as to the amount claimed." The legislature could, without doubt, provide for the enforcement of a lien statement, amended as to parties and as to property, to the same extent that it could provide for the appropriation of the property by virtue of a lien in the first instance. The judgment rendered, however, included an attorney's fee of $25, allowed upon due proof under § 5125, Gen. Stat. 1901, which reads as follows: "In any action brought by any artisan or day laborer to enforce any lien under this act, where judgment be rendered for plaintiff, the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court, which shall be taxed as costs in the action."

The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every state are bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of their own state to the contrary notwithstanding. U. S. Const. art. 6. Section 1, art. 14, of the Amendments to that Constitution, provides that no state shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. The statute in question singles out property owners who are charged with receiving from artisans or day laborers labor going to the improvement of their property, by virtue of contract made by themselves or through contractors employed by them, and mulcts them in damages if they should be unsuccessful in resisting a claimed lien therefor. Under the statute such persons are subjected to a liability for attorneys' fees when owners of other classes of property, and when other classes of persons employing artisans and day laborers are not subjected to such burden, and their contracts for labor are segregated from all other contracts and separately classified, as if they possessed some distinctive attribute calling for the imposition of special legislative penalties for their enforcement. Of course, the legislature may classify objects of legislation, and it has a wide discretion in that respect, but classifications may not be made either arbitrarily or capriciously. There must be differences in the elements and relations distinguished, producing consequences justifying difference in treatment, and these differences must be such as by the very nature of the things considered divide them into classes. Thus a statute allowing the recovery of attorneys' fees in an action against a railroad company for damages caused by its negligence in permitting the escape of fire is in the nature of a police regulation to prevent carelessness in the use of a dangerous element and the consequent destruction of property. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 58 Kan. 447, 49 Pac. 602, Affirmed in 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609. The business of fire insurance has likewise assumed such a peculiar and special relation to the public welfare that the legislature is authorized to provide special penalties for breaches of contracts made in its prosecution. British America Assur. Co. v. Bradford, 60 Kan. 82, 55 Pac. 335; Fidelity Mut. Life Assn. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662. But the homely and highly beneficial act of building or repairing some structure upon his premises, or otherwise improving them, by any man, whether rich or poor, who possesses property, whether much or little, does not so stand out from his other ordinary and innocent employments, or so stand out from similar employments of other men, as naturally to distinguish it from them. There is absolutely nothing to indicate that such a person, or a contract for such a purpose, should be the subject of impositions not suffered by others. The duty to pay is not more vital to the welfare of the public in this case than it is between other persons and with respect to other obligations. The legislature could not have believed that claims of the character adverted to by this act were unconscionably resisted beyond all other debts, and no other legal reason is discoverable for such a hostile and discriminating law.

Under the Constitution of the state of Kansas, artisan and owner, contractor and laborer, are each one possessed of equal and inalienable rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. They all live under the same indiscriminating sunshine, breathe the same free air, venerate the same historical past, are imbued with the same patriotic ideals, and look forward to equal shares in the common blessings of a higher civilization in a brighter future. The burden of the law upon them should be as equal and impartial as the law of gravitation, and yet, in the baldest and most arbitrary manner imaginable, this act "singles out a certain class of debtors and punishes them, when for like delinquencies it punishes no others. They are not treated as other debtors, or equally with other debtors. They cannot appeal to the courts as other litigants under like conditions and with like protection. If litigation terminates adversely to them, they are mulcted in the attorneys' fees of the successful plaintiff; if it terminates in their favor, they recover no attorneys' fees. It is no sufficient answer to say that they are punished only when adjudged to be in the wrong. They do not enter the courts upon equal terms. They must pay attorneys' fees if wrong; they do not recover any if right; while their adversaries recover if right, and pay nothing if wrong. In the suits, therefore, to which they are parties, they are discriminated against, and are not treated as others. They do not stand equal before the law. They do not receive its equal protection." Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 153, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255. There is, therefore, a perfectly manifest and utterly irreconcilable conflict between the statute and the Constitution. The Constitution is the direct mandate of the people themselves. The statute is an expression of the will of the legislature. Which shall this court obey?

In the first case in the first volume of the Reports of decisions made by this court, it was assumed that a statute which clearly and beyond any substantial doubt infringes the supreme law should be declared unconstitutional. The power to do so has since been exercised many times. There is no lawful or conscientious escape from its exercise in this case, and the statute in question is declared to be unconstitutional, and no warrant for the taxing of an attorney's fee as a part of the costs in the court below.

In a dissenting opinion in the case of Re Davis, 58 Kan. 368, 384, 49 Pac. 160, the writer discovers the following statement: "It is now too late, for any effective purpose, to deny the right of the courts to sit in judgment upon acts of the legislature. Accumulated precedent has established such right beyond the questioning of one judge, or even of many judges. If, however, it were an open inquiry, I should have no hesitation in denying the existence of the jurisdiction assumed." This language refers to the right and power of courts to adjudge statutes conflicting with the fundamental law to be unconstitutional, since that is the only right to sit in judgment upon the acts of the legislature which has been established, and the only power of jurisdiction which courts assume to have over acts of the legislature, aside from the ordinary and unquestioned matter of interpretation. Following the announcement quoted, is this remarkable statement: "No close student of the structure, history, and philosophy of the government but will agree that the exercise of such power was not within the design of the framers of either state or Federal Constitutions. The question whether such power should be conferred by express provision was debated in the Constitutional Convention of 1787. Propositions to confer it were repeatedly brought forward, and as often put aside without decision. Finally, the one introduced by Mr. Madison was put to a vote, and received the approval of Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia only; Mr. Dickinson, during the course of the debate, epitomizing the objection to the scheme in the pithy observation that 'the judiciary of Aragon became by degrees the lawgiver.' It never thereafter, during the sessions of the Convention, became a subject of discussion. Bancroft's History of the Constitution, vol. 2, chap. 10."

Against the extravagance of this language may be opposed a statement somewhat rhetorical in form, but still of one who has been accredited a close student of the structure, history, and philosophy of government,—Rufus Choate: "I do not know that I can point to one achievement in American statesmanship which can take rank for its consequences of good above that single decision of the Supreme Court which adjudged that an act of the legislature contrary to the Constitution is void, and that the judicial department is clothed with the power to ascertain the repugnancy and pronounce the legal conclusion. That the framers of the Constitution intended this to be so is certain; but to have asserted it against Congress and the executive, to have vindicated it by that easy yet adamant demonstration than which the reasonings of mathematics show nothing surer, to have inscribed this vast truth of conservatism upon the public mind, so that no demagogue not in the last stage of intoxication denies it,—this is an achievement of statesmanship (of the judiciary) of which a thousand years may not exhaust or reveal all the good." Harvard Law School Address, July, 1845.

Propositions to confer in express words the simple power to declare statutes unconstitutional were not put aside in the Federal Convention. The proposition of Madison, debated by Dickinson and defeated upon receiving the approval of Delaware, Maryland, 64 L. R. A.

and Virginia, only, was not such a proposition, and Bancroft does not so state. Bancroft's text is as follows: "A deeply seated dread of danger from hasty legislation pervaded the mind of the Convention; and Madison, Madison, and others persistently desired to vest in the Supreme Court a revisionary power over the acts of Congress, with an independent negative, or a negative in conjunction with the executive." Bancroft's History of the Constitution, p. 195, chap. 10.

Madison's motion was that "all acts, before they become laws, should be submitted both to the executive and supreme judiciary departments, that, if either of these should object, two thirds of each House—if both should object, three fourths of each House—should be necessary to overrule the objections and give to the acts the force of law." 3 Documentary History of the Const. 536.

This proposition, as all others which had preceded it, allowed the judges to pass upon the wisdom, policy, and expediency of legislative acts, and involved them in politics, parties, and all the business and circumstance of legislation. That proposition was debated and defeated. In the course of the debate upon that question Dickinson made the statement quoted, because impressed with a remark of Mercer that the judiciary ought to be separate from the legislative, and that he disapproved the doctrine that the judges, as expositors of the Constitution, should have the authority to declare a law void. 3 Documentary History Const. 537, 538. Mr. Gouverneur Morris replied to Dickinson that he could not agree that the judiciary should be bound to say that a direct violation of the Constitution was law. 3 Documentary History Const. 538. And the proceedings of the Constitutional Convention, and of the state conventions held to consider its adoption, may be searched in vain for any expression of dissent from the view of Morris, except the two just referred to.

On the other hand, on June 4th, when debating in the Federal Convention the subject of a council of revision, Elbridge Gerry "doubts whether the judiciary ought to form a part of it, as they will have a sufficient check against encroachments on their own department by their exposition of the laws, which involved a power of deciding on their constitutionality. In some states the judges had actually set aside laws as being against the Constitution. This was done too with general approbation. It was quite foreign from the nature of the office to make them judges of the policy of public measures." 3 Documentary History Const. 54.

On July 17th, when considering a proposition to give a congressional negation to state laws, "Mr. Sherman thought it unnecessary, as the courts of the states would not consider as valid any law contravening the authority of the Union, and which the legislature would wish to be negatived." 3 Documentary History Const. 351. And "Mr. Gouverneur Morris was more and more opposed to the negative. . . . A law that ought to be negatived will be set aside in the judiciary department, and, if that security should fail, may be repealed by a national law." 3 Documentary History Const. 353.

On July 21st, James Wilson renewed the proposition to associate the judiciary with the executive in the revisionary power, saying: "The judiciary ought to have an opportunity of remonstrating against projected encroachments on the people as well as on themselves. It has been said that the judges, as expositors of the laws, would have an opportunity of defending their constitutional rights. There was weight in this observation; but this power of the judges did not go far enough. Laws may be unjust, may be unwise, may be dangerous, may be destructive; and yet may not be so unconstitutional as to justify the judges in refusing to give them effect." 3 Documentary History Const. 390.

On the same day Luther Martin "considered the association of the judges with the executive as a dangerous innovation, as well as one which could not produce the particular advantage expected from it. A knowledge of mankind and of legislative affairs cannot be presumed to belong in a higher degree to the judges than to the legislature. And as to the constitutionality of the laws, that point will come before the judges in their proper official character. In this character they have a negative on the laws. Join them with the executive in the revision, and they will have a double negative." Documentary History Const. 395.

And on that day George Mason observed that "it had been said that if the judges were joined in this check on the laws, they would have a double negative, since in their expository capacity of judges they would have one negative. He would reply that in this capacity they would impede in one case only—the operation of laws. They could declare an unconstitutional law void. But with regard to every law, however unjust, oppressive, or pernicious, which did not come plainly under this description, they would be under the necessity as judges to give it a free course. He wished the further use to be made of the judges of giving aid in preventing every improper law." 3 Documentary History Const. 396.

In the convention of North Carolina, Richardson Davies, a delegate to the Federal 64 L. R. A.

Convention, said that, "without a judiciary, the injunctions of the Constitution may be disobeyed, and the positive regulations neglected or contravened. . . . And the Constitution might be violated with impunity if there were no power in the general government to correct and counteract such laws. This great object can only be safely and completely obtained by the instrumentality of the Federal judiciary." 4 Elliot's Debates, 156, 157.

In the convention of Pennsylvania, James Wilson said: "If a law should be made inconsistent with those powers vested by this instrument in Congress, the judges, as a consequence of their independence, and the particular powers of government being defined, will declare such law to be null and void; for the power of the Constitution predominates. Anything, therefore, that shall be enacted by Congress contrary thereto, will not have the force of law." 2 Elliot's Debates, 489.

In the Virginia convention Edmund Randolph said that, if Congress wished to aggrandize themselves by oppressing the people, the judiciary must first be corrupted. And Patrick Henry spoke as follows: "The honorable gentleman did our judiciary honor in saying that they had firmness to counteract the legislature in some cases. Yes, sir, our judges opposed the acts of the legislature. We have this landmark to guide us. They had fortitude to declare that they were the judiciary, and would oppose unconstitutional acts. Are you sure your Federal judiciary will act thus? Is that judiciary as well constructed, and as independent of the other branches, as our state judiciary? Where are your landmarks in this government? I will be bold to say you cannot find any in it. I take it as the highest encomium on this country, that the acts of the legislature, if unconstitutional, are liable to be opposed by the judiciary." 3 Elliot's Debates, 325.

In this convention, fifteen years before the decision in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60, John Marshall spoke as follows: "Has the government of the United States power to make laws on every subject? Does he understand it so? Can they make laws affecting the mode of transferring property, or contracts, or claims, between citizens of the same state? Can they go beyond the delegated powers? If they were to make a law not warranted by any of the powers enumerated, it would be considered by the judges as an infringement of the Constitution which they are to guard. They would not consider such a law as coming under their jurisdiction. They would declare it void." Magruder's Life of John Marshall, 93.

Alexander Hamilton has been esteemed to be something of a student of the structure and philosophy of this government, and as a member of the Federal Convention had some share in framing the Constitution of the United States. In order to induce the people of the United States to adopt that Constitution, he gave to the world upon June 17 and 20, 1788 the paper constituting No. 78 of The Federalist, in which the following discussion of this subject occurs:

"The complete independence of the courts of justice is peculiarly essential in a limited constitution. By a limited constitution I understand one which contains certain specified exceptions to the legislative authority; such, for instance, as that it shall pass no bills of attainder, no ex post facto laws, and the like. Limitations of this kind can be preserved in practice no other way than through the medium of courts of justice, whose duty it must be to declare all acts contrary to the manifest tenor of the constitution void. Without this, all the reservations of particular rights or privileges would amount to nothing.

"Some perplexity respecting the rights of the courts to pronounce legislative acts void, because contrary to the Constitution, has arisen from an imagination that the doctrine would imply a superiority of the judiciary to the legislative power. It is urged that the authority which can declare the acts of another void must necessarily be superior to the one whose acts may be declared void. As this doctrine is of great importance in all the American Constitutions, a brief discussion of the ground on which it rests cannot be unacceptable.

"There is no position which depends on clearer principles than that every act of a delegated authority, contrary to the tenor of the commission under which it is exercised, is void. No legislative act, therefore, contrary to the Constitution, can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy is greater than his principal; that the servant is above his master; that the representatives of the people are superior to the people themselves; that men acting by virtue of powers may do, not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid.

"If it be said that the legislative body are themselves the constitutional judges of their own powers, and that the construction they put upon them is conclusive upon the other departments, it may be answered that this cannot be the natural presumption where it is not to be collected from any particular provisions in the Constitution. It is not otherwise to be supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by the judges, as a fundamental law. It therefore belongs to them to ascertain its meaning, as well as the meaning of any particular act proceeding from the legislative body. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, that which has the superior obligation and validity ought, of course, to be preferred; or, in other words, the constitution ought to be preferred to the statute, the intention of the people to the intention of their agents.

"Nor does this conclusion by any means suppose a superiority of the judicial to the legislative power. It only supposes that the power of the people is superior to both, and that where the will of the legislature, declared in its statutes, stands in opposition to that of the people, declared in the Constitution, the judges ought to be governed by the latter rather than the former. They ought to regulate their decisions by the fundamental laws, rather than by those which are not fundamental." The Federalist, Lodge's ed. 482, 484.

Doubtless some consideration of these among other facts led Henry Hitchcock, LL. D., a learned lawyer and an accomplished scholar, to say to the students of Michigan University: "The doctrine that it is the right and duty of the courts to declare void a law repugnant to the Constitution lies at the very root of our system of government." Const. History, as seen in American Law, 77.

And in an able and exhaustive discussion of this subject, under the title The Legislature and the Courts, Judge Charles B. Eliott says: "But the change in the form of government from a monarchy to a republic rendered necessary a change in theory as to the location of sovereignty. The absolute authority of Parliament as sovereign was now transferred to the people, and the restraints which applied to the executive in the English system became applicable to the new government as a whole. The change in location of the sovereignty resulted in raising the judiciary to the position of a co-ordinate department of government, and the application of the established principles of the common law secured to it a controlling influence over the other departments. The interpretation of the supreme law, being a judicial act, belonged to the judiciary." 5

Political Science Quarterly, June, 1890, 229, 230.

C. Ellis Stevens, LL. D., D. C. L., in his book, "Sources of the Constitution of the United States," at page 190, says: "In deciding constitutional questions, the Supreme Court interprets the law in accordance with principles that have long governed the courts of England. For when an English judge finds conflict between an act of Parliament and a judicial decision, he sets aside the decision, as of an authority inferior to that of the act; and if two parliamentary acts conflict, the earlier is set aside as superseded by the later one—the court interpreting the law simply by determining what is law as distinguished from what is not. The range of this English usage was somewhat amplified in the colonies, owing to the fact that, instead of Parliament, the colonial courts had legislatures to deal with, which acted, in most instances, under written charters limiting their powers, as also under the general domination of the home government. The colonial judiciary did not hesitate to adjudge a local statute invalid, if its enactment could be shown to have exceeded powers conferred by charter; and the Privy Council, in the capacity of a supreme court for the colonies decided in like manner conflicts between laws. When state constitutions succeeded to the charters, the process was continued by the state courts in cases showing conflict between statutes and the new constitutions judicially interpreted. The national government, with a constitution of its own, created an element of superior law, in conflict with which not only state but national enactments of lesser authority are nullified. All that the judiciary does in England, and all that it does in the states, and in the courts of the United States, is to uphold the authority of what it decides to be the higher law, as against all lesser laws or judicial decisions. What, therefore, has been supposed to be the most unique feature of the American Supreme Court is really only another adaptation from the past, and rests upon colonial and English precedents."

For the famous Privy Council Cases, see Thayer's Cases on Constitutional Law.

Referring to the matter of precedents for the decision in the case of Marbury v. Madison, Andrew McFarland Davis says: "There was, however, in the records of the Superior Court of Judicature of the Massachusetts Bay, a decision rendered in 1738 and repeated in 1739, in which the court refused to enforce an order issued by His Majesty in Council, because the powers of the court derived through the charter, and the laws passed to carry the same into effect, were in the judgment of the court inadequate for that purpose. An analysis of the two cases will disclose a certain parallelism. The Supreme Court of the United States, interpreting the Constitution, the source of its authority, declared that it could not, in the exercise of original jurisdiction, issue writs of mandamus, notwithstanding the action of Congress, because no such power was conferred upon the court by that instrument. The Superior Court of Judicature, interpreting in a similar way the Province Charter, and the laws through which they derived their powers, asserted that, notwithstanding the explicit instructions received from His Majesty in Council, they were unable to carry out the royal order, because adequate powers were not conferred upon the court." The Case of Frost v. Leighton, 2 American Historical Review, January 1897, 229.

From the time of the separation of the colonies from the mother country to the time of the Federal Convention, the power under discussion had been brought to public notice in seven cases arising in five states. In the case of Holmes v. Walton the question of constitutionality was squarely raised before the supreme court of New Jersey, November 11, 1779, and squarely decided September 7, 1780. The decision, though meeting with some opposition, was ratified by a legislature fresh from the people. Breatly, the chief justice who rendered the decision, Patterson, the attorney general, and Livingston, the governor of the state, all sat in the Federal Convention. 4 American Historical Review, 456. After referring to this case in his contribution, Constitutional Law, to the volume "Two Centuries Growth of American Law," Dr. Baldwin, of Yale University says: "Similar decisions followed in other states; some in those where royal charters were still regarded as in substance an expression of the fundamental law; and others where these had given place to formal constitutions emanating from the people or those who assumed to represent them. In one of these the Articles of Confederation, under which the United States were then organized, were thus upheld as of paramount authority. Jefferson was among those who, at the time, seems to have approved this doctrine. . . . The general approbation with which, as Gerry said, the position that the judiciary were clothed with power to set aside unconstitutional legislation was from the first received, was largely due to the spirit of reverence for law which has always marked the American people, but gained new strength when they began to make and administer law for themselves, in entire independence of British control."

In 19 American Law Review, 184, a critic of the power under discussion, Mr. Wm. M. Meigs, says: "But it appears that the step had already been made, and that the doctrine was, at or before the adoption of the present Constitution, almost a recognized principle in our country. The instances already cited go far to establish this; but, when it is seen how opinions to the same effect continued to be expressed and enforced, and almost universally without serious opposition, we think there can be no doubt of it."

In 1893 appeared a volume of more than 400 pages by Brinton Coxe, of the Philadelphia bar, entitled "Judicial Power and Unconstitutional Legislation," in which he describes his work as follows: "The chief purpose of the writer is to show that the Constitution of the United States contains express texts providing for judicial competency to decide questioned legislation to be constitutional or unconstitutional, and to hold it valid or void accordingly. Subordinate to this chief purpose are four others. The first of these subordinate purposes is to show that the framers of the Constitution, according to the extant records of their debates and proceedings at Philadelphia in 1787, expressly intended to provide for the said judicial competency as to such unconstitutional legislation. The second subordinate purpose is to point out and comment upon certain texts in Federal documents older than the Constitution, which are historical antecedents of the constitutional texts concerned. The third subordinate purpose is to examine the history of the relation of judicial power to unconstitutional legislation in certain of the states before and during the Confederation, and to show that the judicial competency under discussion is an American institution older than the Constitution of the United States." Pages 1, and 2.

Mr. Austin Acott, in The American Historical Review, volume 4, p. 456, says of this book that it speaks with all but final authority upon its subject-matter.

In the opinion referred to, the following statement is made: "In the early days of the Republic, an assumption by the courts of the right to invalidate acts of the legislature was bitterly resented. The judges of Rhode Island and of Ohio were impeached for assuming such power, and those of Virginia resigned under a storm of censure on account of like conduct." Re Davis, 58 Kan. 385, 49 Pac. 165. It is true that in some instances particular decisions of courts led to factional resentment, but the statement quoted is quite misleading. The great democrat, Patrick Henry, had correctly represented the people of Virginia in the speech quoted above. The matter of public sentiment in no wise entered into the resignation of judges shown in Cases of Judges of Court 64 L. R. A.

of Appeals, 4 Call (Va.) 135, 150, and the true attitude of the judges themselves is shown in the following extract from the report of those cases: "On this view of the subject, the following alternatives presented themselves to the court: Either to decide those questions, or resign their offices. The latter would have been their choice, if they could have considered the questions as affecting their individual interests only; but viewing them as relating to their office, and finding themselves called by their country to sustain an important post as one of the three pillars on which the great fabric of government was erected, they judged that a resignation would subject them to the reproach of deserting their station, and betraying the sacred interests of society intrusted with them; and, on that ground, found themselves obliged to decide, however their delicacy might be wounded, or whatever temporary inconveniences might ensue, and in that decision to declare that the Constitution and the act are in opposition and cannot exist together, and that the former must control the operation of the latter. If this opinion declaring the supremacy of the Constitution needed any support, it may be found in the opinion of the legislature themselves, who have, in several instances, considered the Constitution as prescribing limits to their powers, as well as to those of the other departments of government." Cases of Judges of Court of Appeals, 4 Call (Va.) 142, May, 1788.

In Ohio, impeachment proceedings were brought against two of the judges, but upon the trial they were acquitted. In Kentucky an effort to remove the judges failed. In Rhode Island the judges were cited before the legislature to render reasons for their conduct, but no proceedings in impeachment were initiated. It must be remembered, however, that in the early days of the Republic an armed rabble actually shut up the courts of Massachusetts through nothing more than an ignorant and rebellious malcontentedness, and that, when the bitterness of partisan rancor in Jefferson's administration demanded a victim, the Senate of the United States impeached an insane Federal judge upon ex parte evidence, without a hearing, and without even an attorney to act in his behalf. These, however, are not pointed out as among the constructive constitutional movements of our country. In every state in the Union the people ultimately approved the power the judges claimed. After the discovery of wheat the American people refused to feed on acorns.

The references given above by no means exhaust the literature upon this great subject, but it seemed to the writer to be due to those who use the Kansas Reports that at least some witnesses be called to show that the dogmatic dissenting dissertation referred to does not contain the final word upon the matter of which it treats. As late as April, 1901, Mr. Justice Brewer deemed it proper, in the case of Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, to quote again from the often-quoted language of Chief Justice Marshall in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60, as follows: "The Constitution is either a superior paramount law, unchangeable by ordinary means, or it is on a level with ordinary legislative acts, and, like other acts, is alterable when the legislature shall please to alter it. If the former part of the alternative be true, then a legislative act contrary to the Constitution is not law; if the latter part be true, then written constitutions are absurd attempts, on the part of the people, to limit a power in its own nature illimitable. Certainly all those who have framed written constitutions contemplate them as forming the fundamental and paramount law of the nation, and consequently the theory of every such government must be that an act of the legislature repugnant to the Constitution is void. This theory is essentially attached to a written constitution, and is consequently to be considered, by this court, as one of the fundamental principles of our society. It is emphatically the province and duty of the judicial department to say what the law is. Those who apply the rule to particular cases must of necessity expound and interpret that rule. If two laws conflict with each other, the courts must decide on the operation of each. So if a law be in opposition to the Constitution, if both the law and the Constitution apply to a particular case, so that the court must either decide that case conformably to the law, disregarding the Constitution, or conformably to the Constitution, disregarding the law, the court must determine which of these conflicting rules governs the case. This is of the very essence of judicial duty. If, then, the courts are to regard the Constitution, and the Constitution is superior to any ordinary act of the legislature, the Constitution, and not such ordinary act, must govern the case to which they both apply. . . . The particular phraseology of the Constitution of the United States confirms and strengthens the principle, supposed to be essential to all written constitutions, that a law repugnant to the Constitution is void, and that courts, as well as other departments, are bound by that instrument."

The district court is directed to modify its judgment by striking out the sum of $25 from the taxed costs. The judgment as modified is affirmed.

The costs in this court are divided.

All the Justices concur.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

MOBILE TRANSPORTATION COMPANY,

Appt.,

v.

City of MOBILE.

(128 Ala. 335.)

1. The admission of a new state into the Union vests in it the title of the general government to the land under tide water as far as high-water mark within its territorial limits.
2. The grant of the fee of land under tide water is within the title of an act granting "The Riparian Rights in the River Front."
3. A governmental grant of land adjoining a tidal body of water will not extend below high-water mark.

4. The state does not abrogate its trust by granting to a municipality the shore of a tidal body of water within its limits.
5. A suit by a municipal corporation does not abate by the repeal of its charter and the substitution for the old corporation of a new one with substantially the same inhabitants and locality.
6. Property between high and low water mark of a tidal river, held by a municipal corporation in trust for public use, will not pass by an act placing the property of the municipality in the hands of commissioners for the payment of its debts.
7. A municipal corporation may

NOTE.—Municipal ownership of tide lands.

The general question of the title to land under water, and to the shore between high and low water mark, is fully considered in the notes to Goff v. Cogle, 42 L. R. A. 161, and Waverly Water Front Improv. & Development Co. v. White, 45 L. R. A. 227.

It is established that the state, as the primary source of title to all land within its borders, is the owner of the land under the tidal waters; 64 L. R. A.

that the title to such land is held subject to the public rights of navigation and fishery; and that, subject to such rights, the state may transfer its title to the property to private individuals for such use as may be made of it without conflicting with the rights of the public. A municipal corporation has the capacity, as one of the powers conferred upon it by its corporate existence, to take and hold title to property. Therefore the municipal corporation is entitled to the benefit of the rule permitting the state

- maintain ejectment for property between high and low water mark on a tidal river, held by it in trust for the public.
8. Title to property below high-water mark on a tidal river, held by a municipality in trust for the public, cannot be acquired by an individual by adverse possession.
9. Erroneously collecting a tax on property held by the municipality in trust for public use will not estop the municipality from asserting its title.
10. Public statutes and grants constituting plaintiff's title papers may be read in evidence in an action to recover real property.
11. Error in refusing to retax costs after rendition of a judgment is no ground for reversal of the judgment.

(December 20, 1900.)

to part with its title to land under the water, and such title may be conferred upon it. But, in considering the question whether it has in fact title in any particular case, the distinction must be preserved between the rights which it acquires as a grantee in its private capacity and those secured by conferring jurisdiction upon it in its public capacity. A municipal corporation has jurisdiction over the land within its borders, but it does not necessarily have title to such land; and the same rule will apply to the land under the water. The title to such land may be in private owners, or it may remain in the state; and at the same time the land for jurisdictional purposes may be within the limits of the municipality. The only object of conferring title to such land upon the municipality would be for its private profit or emolument, and the grant would carry a corresponding burden, the same as in case of highways, parks, and other public property owned by the municipality; so that, in order to establish title in the municipality, it must be shown to have been expressly conferred.

Therefore, the rule is that the title to tide lands is in the state, and not in the municipal subdivision in which they lie, unless they were expressly granted to such subdivision by the state authorities. Com. v. Roxbury, 9 Gray, 451.

The presumption will always obtain that the title is in the state or in the Crown. Bridgewater v. Bootle-cum-Linacre Twp. 36 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 41, L. R. 2 Q. B. 4, 15 L. T. N. S. 351, 15 Week. Rep. 169.

And the mere establishment of municipal boundaries so as to include a portion of the land under the water is not of itself sufficient to carry title to the land there situated. Bliss v. Ward, 198 Ill. 104, 64 N. E. 705; Kean v. Stetson, 5 Pick. 492; Russ v. Boston, 157 Mass. 60, 31 N. E. 708; Palmer v. Hicks, 6 Johns. 133.

The question whether the soil of the Thames at London belongs to the city or to the Crown has been a fruitful source of litigation. In Atty. Gen. v. London, 8 Beav. 270, 14 L. J. Ch. N. S. 305, 9 Jur. 571, the title was claimed for the Crown. And in Re Chabot, 17 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 336, 12 Jur. 1023, 15 Q. B. 446, which was a proceeding to prohibit the commissioners of woods and forests from entering an assessment for property required by them, it was contended that the land which was situated between high and low water mark belonged either to the Crown or to the corporation of the city of London. 64 L. R. A.

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Mobile County in plaintiff's favor in an action brought to recover certain land covered with tide water. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederick G. Bromberg, for appellant:

The title to the act of January 31st, 1867, does not describe the subject of it, and the act is unconstitutional, since the title refers to an easement, and the body of the act to soil.

Ex parte Pollard, 40 Ala. 77; Weaver v. Lapsley, 43 Ala. 224; Walker v. State, 49 Ala. 329.

The state holds the lands under the navigable waters of the state, not absolutely, don, between which a contest was then pending. But the question whether it belonged to the Crown or not was not decided in either case, and its status was established by compromise confirmed by statute.

In accordance with the rule that there will be no presumption of an intention to grant title to the tide land, San Francisco, being entitled by its foundation law to 4 square leagues of land, was obliged to acquire that land, on account of the narrowness of the peninsula, by extending its lines inland, because the town "could acquire no right or title to the ocean or bay." Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 530, 544; Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 221.

The fact that the title is in the state is further illustrated by the holding in Kean v. Stetson, 5 Pick. 492, that township authorities have no power to lay out a highway between high and low water mark without express authority from the legislature.

A municipality may have title.

While, as above indicated, the presumption is that the title to the soil is not in the municipality, it is well established that such land may be a parcel of the municipality. Ferrott v. Bryant, 2 Young & C. Exch. 61, 6 L. J. Exch. N. S. 26; Farnham, Waters, § 426.

And Rex v. Grosvenor, 2 Starkie, 511, 20 Revised Rep. 732, assumed that the title to the soil of the River Thames was in the city of London, for the purpose of determining the authority of the city to grant permission to erect wharves between high and low water mark.

As already indicated, there is nothing to prevent the state from granting the title to the soil to the municipality. The state has the right to make the grant, and the municipality has the capacity to receive it. Atty. Gen. v. Burridge, 10 Price, 350, 24 Revised Rep. 705; Coolidge v. Williams, 4 Mass. 140.

In Linn-Regis v. Taylor, 3 Lev. 160, the mayor and commonalty of Linn-Regis claimed the shore by grant to them by the Crown of the manor of Linn-Regis, and this claim does not seem to have been disputed in the case.

The state of California, by the act of March 26, 1851, conveyed to the city of San Francisco the beach and water-lot property in the Bay of San Francisco. Payne v. English, 79 Cal. 140, 21 Pac. 952.

And in Holladay v. Frisbie, 15 Cal. 630, that city was held to have a legal estate for ninety-but in trust; not alone for the people of the state of Alabama, but in trust for the people of the whole United States.

Prieve v. Wisconsin State Land & Improv. Co. 103 Wis. 537, 74 Am. St. Rep. 904, 79 N. W. 780; Willow River Club v. Wade, 100 Wis. 86, 42 L. R. A. 305, 76 N. W. 273; Mobile v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 598, 33 Am. Dec. 325; Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 271, 272, 41 L. ed. 1000, 1001, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5251 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3522); Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 629, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.

The state also holds the shores and soil under the navigable waters of the state in trust for the owners of the lands abutting upon such waters, whose riparian rights in such waters and such shores and soil are property rights, of which they cannot be divested without due process of law.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 445, 446, 36 L. ed. 1040, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Murphy v. Montgomery, 11 Ala. 586; Hagan v. Campbell, 8 Port. (Ala.) 33, 33 Am. Dec. 267; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 103, 106, note 1, 107, 108; 29 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 65, 66, 68, and note 2; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 40, 38 L. ed. 346, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Weber v. State Harbor, 18 Wall. 64, 65, 21 L. ed. 801, 802; Gough v. Bell, 22 N. J. L. 441; Roberts v. Brooks, 24 C. C. A. 158, 43 U. S. App. 395, 78 Fed. 414; 6 Jacob's Fisher's Digest, 9,314; 8 Jacob's Fisher's Digest, nine years in the beach and water-lot property, the use and occupation of which was granted by the legislative act of 1851 for ninety-nine years, which is subject to sale on execution; as the proviso therein for the payment to the state of a certain per cent of money received from sale or other disposition of the property was only a covenant on the part of the city to make such payment where money is received for a sale thereof, and created no trust which affects the legal title of the city, and by the grant it was not subject to any special use (Wheeler v. Miller, 16 Cal. 124); so that the purchaser from the land commissioners has only the reversionary interest of the state therein, which is subject to the rights of a purchaser at such execution sale.

A statute declaring that the state doth hereby grant to a city in fee simple a defined tract of land under water places the title in the city, so that it cannot be lost or impaired by the acts or negligence of the city; and the board of riparian commissioners cannot subsequently grant the land to private owners after the municipality has complied with the conditions of the grant. Jersey City v. American Dock & Improv. Co. 54 N. J. L. 215, 23 Atl. 682.

Construction of grant.

It being thus settled that the title may be transferred to the municipality, the question in most cases where title to the land is claimed by the municipality is, What is the particular construction of the grant under which the title is claimed?

A grant of a town will not, even when the place in question abuts on the sea, carry foreshore, unless the granted country establish by acts of ownership or other sufficient evidence that the foreshore claimed is part of the town lands. Atty. Gen. v. Portsmouth, Moore, Foreshore, p. 555.

So, a grant by the state to a municipal corporation, of land bounded by the tide water, will not carry the title below high-water mark, except by the use of words so unequivocal as to leave no reasonable doubt concerning the meaning, and the use of the words "waters, water courses, ports, havens, rivers, and fishings," are not sufficient to convey the soil. East Haven v. Hemingway, 7 Conn. 186.

But a grant of land with certain boundaries will include the land under water within such 64 L. R. A. boundaries. Robins v. Ackerly, 24 Hun, 499, Affirmed in 91 N. Y. 98.

Although water not expressly included within the bounds of the grant will not pass. East Hampton v. Vail, 151 N. Y. 463, 45 N. E. 1030, Affirming 71 Hun, 94, 24 N. Y. Supp. 583.

The Carteret charter to the town of Bergen, Hudson county, granted only to high-water mark on the shore line. Gough v. Bell, 21 N. J. L. 156.

As the grant from the governor and company to the proprietors of the town of Norwalk did not convey royalties, the title to the shores of the sea did not pass. Church v. Meeker, 34 Conn. 421.

A grant by the Crown to several freeholders and inhabitants of a town, of land which they bought from the Indians, confirming the purchase to certain persons named, "as patentees for and in behalf of themselves and associates, the freeholders and inhabitants of the town, their heirs, successors, and assigns" conveys to the inhabitants of the town, and not to the individuals; so that titles must be derived from the town to be valid. Atkinson v. Bowman, 42 Hun, 404.

The habendum clause in the Dongan patent to the freeholders of the town of Southampton, which confirmed the Andros patent, did not have the effect of vesting the title in the named grantees as tenants in common, but vested the title in the town, including the land under water, although it runs to certain named persons and their heirs forever, and, after reciting the purposes of the grant, concludes as to all lands not yet taken up or appropriated to any individual, "'to the use, benefit, and behoof of such as have been purchasers thereof, and their heirs and assigns forever' . . . in proportion to their several and respective purchases thereof made as tenants in common." Southampton v. Mecox Bay Oyster Co. 116 N. Y. 1, 22 N. E. 387.

Huntington bay is a harbor or haven within the meaning of the Colonial patents granting lands under water in such bay to the town of Huntington, and the title to the soil passed to the trustees of the town thereunder. Huntington v. Lowndes, 40 Fed. 825.

A grant within certain boundaries fixed by reference to a recorded map or plat includes all land within such boundaries, and is not confined to such land as is laid off as water lots on such map; and ejectment will therefore not 11,689; Webb v. Demopolis, 95 Ala. 127, 21 L. R. A. 62, 13 So. 289; Demopolis v. Webb, 87 Ala. 670, 6 So. 408; Williams v. Glover, 66 Ala. 189.

The state could not pass such an act as the act under which plaintiff claims.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 450, 452-454, 460, 36 L. ed. 1018, 1042, 1043, 1045, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 1000, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; American Dook & Improv. Co. v. Public Schools, 39 N. J. Eq. 409; Chisolm v. Caines, 67 Fed. 285; Loundes v. Huntington, 153 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 615, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838.

lie by a claimant under a subsequent grant from the state land commissioners as against one claiming under the city, for a strip of land which at the time of the passage of the act was part of an open public slip within such boundaries. Hyman v. Read, 13 Cal. 444.

But the Mexican grant to the pueblo of San Francisco conferred no title, but merely jurisdiction over the water, and therefore it did not, by the confirmation of its grant, acquire title to the soil as against the state. United Land Asso. v. Knight, 85 Cal. 448, 24 Pac. 818, Overruling People v. San Francisco, 75 Cal. 388, 17 Pac. 522.

A grant to a municipal corporation of the tidal lands "in front of" its corporate limits will include only such lands as lie adjoining and in front thereof, and it is not intended to include lands which may happen to lie in front of a city in fact, but across a channel of navigable water and upon an opposite shore, and which might ultimately be included in another municipality. State ex rel. Lehman v. Bridges, 24 Wash. 363, 64 Pac. 518.

A grant to a municipal corporation of tide lands "within 2 miles thereof on either side" refers to a measurement thereof along the general direction of the shore line, a distance of 2 miles from each of the two boundary lines which extend inland from such shore line. Ibid.

Effect of practical interpretation or acts of ownership.

In case of obscurity in the terms of the grant the practical interpretation thereof by the parties may be such that the court will follow it. As said in Southampton v. Mecox Bay Oyster Co. 116 N. Y. 1, 22 N. E. 387, the practical interpretation of a patent to certain named persons of land forming a town including land under water as vesting the title in the town, and not in the grantees as tenants in common, and acquiescence therein for a long series of years, is the most important evidence in the determination of the rights existing thereunder.

A grant to a burg located on a port, of all the territory within the burg, will be construed as including the foreshore as against one owning land adjoining the shore, under a conveyance describing it as bounded by the sea, where the user of the burg has been in accordance with such ownership, it having exercised acts of ownership, and constructed buildings on different parts of the shore, without opposition from any 64 L. R. A.

The state had a right to annul the charter of Mobile, and destroy the corporation.

1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 86-88, 91; Cooley, Const. Lim. 4th ed. §§ 231-233; Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 525, 526, 528, 530, 25 L. ed. 701-703; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 89, 35 L. ed. 943, 947, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

There is no connection between the old corporation and the new, and the old corporation has no claim upon public property within the boundaries of the new.

Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 524, 25 L. ed. 701.

The court takes judicial notice of the charters of municipal corporations.

1 Brickell's Digest, § 15, p. 805.

of the adjoining owners. Smart v. Dundee, 8 Bro. P. C. 119.

So, a reservation to a town of the privilege of the shores, in an act incorporating proprietors of ditches and defining their bounds, followed by a long period of time in which the town lets out to various persons the right to take sand, gravel, and stones from the shores, as well as seaweed, will be held to include the right to take sand and gravel to repair highways if the beach will not be materially injured thereby. Ripley v. Knight, 123 Mass. 515.

But votes of a town granting annually to individuals the right to take shell fish from beaches within its limits for a sum to be paid to the town are no evidence of an absolute title in the town to the beaches. Lynn v. Nahant, 113 Mass. 433.

And mere permission by a town to the owner of the adjoining upland to extend a wharf over the flats is not sufficient to show that the title in the flats was in the town. Boston v. Richardson, 105 Mass. 351.

Although a town has under its charter and early grants title to land below the tide water, it will be estopped from asserting it, if the inhabitants vote and agree that a certain person may purchase it from the Indians and peaceably enjoy it, upon his requiring to know whether or not the town laid claim to it; and subsequently, upon his reading his patents to them, agreed to acquiesce in the limits and bounds thereof, which included the land to which they afterwards laid claim. Brookhaven v. Smith, 118 N. Y. 634, 7 L. R. A. 755, 23 N. E. 1002.

But a city is not estopped from claiming tide lands by the participation of its mayor, as a member of the state board of tide-land commissioners, in the survey by which the tide lands were excluded from the city, and in the approval of the survey by several ordinances. United Land Asso. v. Pacific Improv. Co. 139 Cal. 370, 69 Pac. 1064, 72 Pac. 988.

The acts of the parties in carrying out the provisions of the legislative act are not necessarily such a practical interpretation of the grant as will be conclusive in case they plainly conflict with the terms of the act. And therefore a line indicating high-water mark on the map required by an act of legislature granting to a city certain water-lot property to be filed with the secretary of state, clearly delineating such property, is not conclusive as to the extent of such property, the boundaries of which were

The defendant, although a corporation, is under the equal protection of the laws, as if it were an individual, by virtue of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbs, 142 U. S. 391, 35 L. ed. 1054, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 585, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Ovington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 592, 41 L. ed. 565, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 209, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 394, 30 L. ed. 118, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132; Pembina Consol. Silver Min. & Mill. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S.

187, 31 L. ed. 653, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 24, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 737.

The judgment excludes the defendant from its riparian rights, viz.: The right of approach to its lands; the right to build wharves on its lands; the right to tie up vessels to its lands, and to use the approaches to its lands over said waters for the purposes of commerce.

Rice v. Ruddiman, 10 Mich. 125; Sterling v. Jackson, 69 Mich. 488, 13 Am. St. Rep. 405, 37 N. W. 852; Hall v. Alford, 114 Mich. 165, 38 L. R. A. 205, 72 N. W. 137.

The right to the natural accretions to its lands is a part of defendant's riparian rights.

Hagan v. Campbell, 8 Port. (Ala.) 33, 33 Am. Dec. 267; Doe ex dem. Kennedy v.

specified in the act, and as to what was the water line of the city at the date of the act; but such question is one of fact. Cook v. Bonnet, 4 Cal. 397.

Effect of conferring jurisdiction on the municipality.

As has been already indicated, the mere conferring upon the municipality of jurisdiction over a particular locality does not invest it with title to the soil. Therefore, the mere fact that a municipal corporation has jurisdiction over adjoining tide land does not show that it has title to such lands. Com. v. Roxbury, 9 Gray, 451.

And the grant of political rights and powers with a grant of islands in a tidal river does not convey a proprietorship of the soil under the water, unless such intent is plainly expressed. De Lancey v. Piepgras, 138 N. Y. 26, 33 N. E. 822, Affirming 63 Hun, 160, 17 N. Y. Supp. 681.

An act extending the bounds of the town of Flushing in Queens county, New York, over the bay and into the sound of East river, so as to include islands eastward of the main channel, was held in Palmer v. Hicks, 6 Johns. 133, to be merely for the purpose of jurisdiction, but did not give the town title to the land under water, or power to prohibit the catching of clams below ordinary low-water mark.

And the conclusion follows that the municipality may be given jurisdiction over property the title to which is retained by the state. Accordingly it has been held that under the New York act of 1857, settling the bulkhead lines for the port of New York, the city has authority to locate wharves upon land of the state under water, with an easement of approach in front and of access from the land, and can fill up and occupy the space between the new line and the land, and can convey its interest and easements therein. Williams v. New York, 105 N. Y. 419, 11 N. E. 829.

And a grant by the state to a municipal corporation of land under tide water for a particular purpose does not divest the state of its obligation to protect the public against encroachments upon such land other than those authorized by the grant. State v. Vanderbilt, 26 N. Y. 287.

The mere exercise by the municipal corporation of jurisdiction which has been conferred upon it will not ripen into title. Therefore, no title to a beach can be acquired by a municipality which, under legislative authority, maintains a committee to enforce a law prohibiting cattle from running at large on said beach. Cutts v. Hussey, 15 Me. 237; Atty. Gen. v. London, 2 Macn. & G. 247, 2 Hall & T. 1, 19 L. J. Ch. N. S. 314, 14 Jur. 205.
64 L. R. A.

Title is subject to rights of the public.

The private title to the Crown to land under the water was held subject to the rights of the public to navigate and fish in the waters, and, when the states succeeded to the rights of the Crown, they presumptively undertook to hold under the same limitations; and, while there is nothing to prevent their destroying the public use or conveying the property free from such use, they will not be presumed to have done so; and therefore, in order to enable the grantee to hold free from the trust, he must show that the terms of his grant expressly relieved him from it. The same rules apply in case of grants to a municipality; so that in case of a grant by the Crown such corporation will take subject to the rights of the public. Atty. Gen. v. Burridge, 10 Price, 350, 24 Revised Rep. 705.

And so with respect to grants by the state. Coolidge v. Williams, 4 Mass. 140.

Under this rule, the mere grant by the state of the freehold in the soil does not destroy the rights of the public; and therefore a grant to a town of land under a body of water navigable in fact does not pass to the government of the town the control over the public easement which the state would have were it not for the patents. People ex rel. Howell v. Jessup, 28 App. Div. 524, 51 N. Y. Supp. 228.

And where jurisdiction merely has been conferred upon the municipality it cannot grant any rights to individuals which will interfere with the rights of the public. It cannot lease the beaches. New Shoreham v. Ball, 14 R. I. 566.

And in Galveston City Surf Bathing Co. v. Heldenheimer, 63 Tex. 559, it is said that it seems that, if the charter of a city which borders on the seashore could be so construed as to extend the limits of the city beyond the seashore and to the open sea, the city would have no power to grant to certain persons the exclusive right to erect bath houses on the shore and surf. The right of the public to the use of the shore and surf would not be impaired by the extension of the city limits, as such extension would be jurisdictional, and not proprietary.

Jones, 11 Ala. 63; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 469, ¶ 11; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 35, 38 L. ed. 344, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Mobile v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 591, 33 Am. Dec. 325.

Lines of riparian owners in the city of Mobile may extend to the channel of the Mobile river.

Doe ex dem. Pollard v. Files, 3 Ala. 47, 2 How. 591, 11 L. ed. 391; Hagan v. Campbell, 8 Port. (Ala.) 33, 33 Am. Dec. 267; Hallett v. Doe ex dem. Hunt, 7 Ala. 905.

In ejectment plaintiff must have the right of possession as well as the fee, in order to recover.

Doe ex dem. Kennedy v. Jones, 11 Ala. 86. Time runs against a municipal corporation.

Ala. Code 1886, § 2613; Wyatt v. Tisdale, 97 Ala. 594, 12 So. 233.

The suit is for land within a Spanish grant in existence in 1819 when the state was admitted.

3 Am. State Papers, pp. 30, 400; Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 216, 34 L. ed. 697, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

All Spanish grants were confirmed by the treaty of 1819 with Spain.

8 U. S. Stat. at L. relating to Treaties, p. 258; Treaty with Spain, Acts 2, 8; Ala. Const. 1865, art. 1, §§ 25, 36; Ordinance August 2, 1819; Ala. Code 1876, p. 68.

A grant by the United States of land bordering on a navigable river includes the shore or bank of such river, and extends to the water line at low water.

Webb v. Demopolis, 95 Ala. 129, 21 L. R. A. 62, 13 So. 280; Demopolis v. Webb, 87

Ala. 670, 6 So. 408; Williams v. Glover, 66 Ala. 189; Scranton v. Wheeler, 6 C. C. A. 585, 16 U. S. App. 152, 57 Fed. 803.

The plaintiff having waited twenty-nine years and more before moving, in the meanwhile recognizing the title now disputed by it, by assessing and collecting taxes upon the property sued for, is estopped, in ejectment, from asserting legal title.

1 Brickell's Digest, p. 267, § 33; Mitchell v. Robertson, 15 Ala. 412; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 19; Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 618; Kirk v. Hamilton, 102 U. S. 68, 77, 78, 26 L. ed. 79, 82, 83; Drexel v. Berney, 122 U. S. 253, 30 L. ed. 1222, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1200.

Sovereign states may be barred by estoppel arising from conduct.

Indiana v. Kentucky, 136 U. S. 509, 34 L. ed. 332, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051.

Whatever the objection to the deeds, they were good in evidence, to establish color of title.

Carter v. Chevalier, 108 Ala. 563, 19 So. 798.

Messrs. Gregory L. Smith and H. T. Smith, for appellee:

The lands in question became the property of the state of Alabama by virtue of a compact under which Alabama was admitted into the Union.

Mobile v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 603, 33 Am. Dec. 325; Goodtitle ex dem. Pollard v. Kibbe, 1 Ala. 403; Doe ex dem. Kennedy v. Beebe, 8 Ala. 909; Doe ex dem. Pollard v. Greit, 8 Ala. 941; Boulo v. New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. 55 Ala. 490.

Municipality may protect its title.

If the title has actually been conferred upon the municipality it holds by the same right as any private individual, and, as held in Holladay v. Friable, 15 Cal. 630, the land is subject to sale under execution against the municipality.

So, a city which has granted lands under water, excepting a portion reserved for street purposes, may maintain ejectment to recover such portion, since the action is not to recover an incorporeal hereditament, but the land itself with the erections upon it. New York v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 69 Hun, 324, 23 N. Y. Supp. 562.

But if the title is placed in the municipality in trust, or if jurisdiction merely is conferred upon it, it has no title with which it can part; and, therefore, execution against the municipality cannot be levied upon such land. In accordance with this rule, it has been held that land between high tide and ship channel, held by a town subject to a public trust of constructing thereon wharves, docks, and piers and other essential aids to commerce and to the traffic of a seaport town, are not subject to levy and sale under executions. Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co. 118 Cal. 160, 50 Pac. 277. But MOBILE TRANSPORTATION CO. v. MOBILE holds that although the property is held in trust, the municipality has sufficient title to enable it to maintain ejectment.

The question whether or not the municipality will lose its title by adverse possession also depends upon the title by which it holds the land. If it has the absolute fee simple title, and the property is not devoted to the public use, it may lose its title by adverse user. Thus, it has been held that the right of the city of San Francisco in beach and water-lot property under the beach and water-lot act of 1851, granting such property to it for the term of ninety-nine years, without the reservation to the state of any beneficial interest therein during the term, but only requiring the city to pay to the state a specified percentage of the proceeds of sales thereof if made, which it is not obliged to make, is an absolute title for the term, free from any trust, which may be extinguished by adverse possession under the statute of limitations. San Francisco v. Straut, 84 Cal. 124, 24 Pac. 814.

But title to the shore under tide water, which is shown to have been originally in a town, is not shown to have become vested in a private individual by the fact that he has cut thatch there and licensed others to do so. Roe v. Strong, 107 N. Y. 350, 14 N. E. 294.

Although in Roe v. Strong, 119 N. Y. 316, 23 N. E. 743, it was held that such acts might justify a presumption of a grant.

The patent of the United States government did not vest the title to the land between high-water mark and low-water mark, where the tide ebbs and flows, in the patentee, so as to shut off the right of the state to take possession of those lands, either by itself, or its proper grantees.

Mobile v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 577, 33 Am. Dec. 325; Goodtitle ex dem. Pollard v. Kibbe, 1 Ala. 403; Doe ex dem. Kennedy v. Bebee, 8 Ala. 914; Doe ex dem. Pollard v. Greit, 8 Ala. 941; Mobile v. Eslava, 16 Pet. 240, 10 L. ed. 950; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 124 U. S. 688, 31 L. ed. 551, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 643; Doe ex dem. Hallett v. Bebee, 13 How. 25, 14 L. ed. 35; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 55, 38 L. ed. 351, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

Following the common law, all of the authorities, except in states controlled by statutes, agree that the riparian ownership on tide waters extends only to high-water mark.

People v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 357; More v. Massini, 37 Cal. 432; Wright v. Seymour, 69 Cal. 122, 10 Pac. 323; Long Beach Land & Water Co. v. Richardson, 70 Cal. 209, 11 Pac. 695; Kimball v. Macpherson, 46 Cal. 108; East Haven v. Hemingway, 7 Conn. 202; Simons v. French, 25 Conn. 352; Midletown v. Sage, 8 Conn. 221; Chapman v. Kimball, 9 Conn. 40, 21 Am. Dec. 707; State v. Sargent & Co. 45 Conn. 373; Sullivan v. Moreno, 19 Fla. 219; Rivas v. Solary, 18 Fla. 126; Day v. Day, 22 Md. 537; Garitee v. Baltimore, 53 Md. 432; Martin v. O'Brien, 34 Miss. 22; Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N. J. L.

1, 10 Am. Dec. 356; Gough v. Bell, 21 N. J. L. 157; Bell v. Gough, 23 N. J. L. 624; State, Roberts, Prosecutor, v. Jersey City, 25 N. J. L. 525; Stevens v. Paterson & N. R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 532, 3 Am. Rep. 269; Wheeler v. Spinola, 54 N. Y. 385; East Hampton v. Kirk, 68 N. Y. 460; Gould v. Hudson River R. Co. 6 N. Y. 522; People v. Tibbetts, 19 N. Y. 523; Roberts v. Baumgarten, 110 N. Y. 380, 18 N. E. 96; Bowlby v. Shively, 22 Or. 410, 30 Pac. 154; Parker v. Taylor, 7 Or. 445; Bailey v. Burges, 11 R. I. 331; Aborn v. Smith, 12 R. I. 373; Brown v. Goddard, 13 R. I. 76; Galveston v. Menard, 23 Tex. 349; Eisenbach v. Hatfield, 2 Wash. 236, 12 L. R. A. 632, 26 Pac. 539; Harbor Line v. State, 2 Wash. 531, 27 Pac. 550; Morse v. O'Connell, 7 Wash. 117, 34 Pac. 426; Allen v. Forrest, 8 Wash. 702, 24 L. R. A. 606, 36 Pac. 971.

In every instance where the distinction between tidal and nontidal waters has been wholly discarded the riparian owner has been restricted to high water where the stream was navigable; and in no single instance has his title been extended where the tide ebbs and flows.

McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa, 1; People ex rel. Loomis v. Canal Appraisers, 33 N. Y. 466; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 671, 34 L. ed. 822, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210.

In the absence of the expression of the contrary intention on the part of the state, it will be assumed by the court that the state intends to permit the owner of the adjoining land to use the land between low-

Merely permitting the public to use the property is not sufficient to devert the municipality of its title. No dedication to the purpose of navigation will be effected by the failure of a municipality to improve the land under tide water lying at the end of a street, so as to deprive it of its right to make such use of it as it pleases as against those claiming to use it as a dock. Boston v. Lecraw, 17 How. 426, 15 L. ed. 118.

The fact that a town claiming title to land under navigable water has made no lease of the fisheries there, and has allowed the lands to be enjoyed in common, does not tend to negative its right to the property, where it claims under ancient patents which may cover the place, and has made leases of lands for marine railways, docks, etc. Robins v. Ackerly, 91 N. Y. 98, Affirming 24 Hun, 499.

Effect of granting jurisdiction to municipality.

If the title to the property has been granted to the municipality the legislature cannot reclaim it. But if the grant includes merely jurisdiction over the locality the legislature may resume such jurisdiction in whole or in part, at its pleasure. Therefore, an act of the legislature authorizing the state to provide for the improvement of its tide lands by the construction of the water ways and the filling up of such lands so as to make them above high tide, although the same lie within the corporate limits of a city, is not unconstitutional as in violation of a constitutional provision conferring upon municipalities the power to make local improvements by special assessment. Mississippi Valley Trust Co. v. Hofus, 20 Wash. 272, 55 Pac. 54.

But the jurisdiction will not be held to have been withdrawn, unless such construction is necessary. If both acts can be upheld, such a construction will be given them as to preserve the jurisdiction of the municipality. Thus, a statute establishing the grade of a portion of a municipal corporation lying below high tide on a tidal river does not supersede the power granted to the municipality to regulate and establish the grades of streets within the city. State, Latta, Prosecutor, v. Hoboken, 48 N. J. L. 63, 4 Atl. 655.

And if jurisdiction is exercised directly by the state the municipality will not be held responsible as in case of a private individual. Therefore, filling up flats by municipal authorities under a plan devised by the state harbor commissioners in conjunction with the state board of health is not within an act requiring compensation for the tide water displaced, and the approval of the board of harbor commissioners in case of the filling of flats by private individuals. Atty. Gen. v. Cambridge, 119 Mass. 518.

H. P. F.

water and high-water mark, which is adjacent to its other property.

Stevens v. Paterson & N. R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 546, 3 Am. Rep. 269; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. New York & L. B. R. Co. 23 N. J. Eq. 159.

Whatever title to these lands was obtained subsequent to the admission of the state into the Union was obtained from the state, and not from the United States.

Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324-338, 24 L. ed. 224, 227, 228; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 55, 38 L. ed. 351, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Stevens v. Paterson & N. R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 544, 3 Am. Rep. 269.

The state may grant to any individual the right to wharf out upon the shores of another's land without compensation to the latter. This is no violation of the riparian owner's rights.

Martin v. O'Brien, 34 Miss. 22; Ravenwood v. Fleming, 22 W. Va. 52, 46 Am. Rep. 485; Eisenbach v. Hatfield, 2 Wash. 236, 12 L. R. A. 632, 26 Pac. 539; Harbor Line v. State, 2 Wash. 531, 27 Pac. 550.

The right to wharf out rests upon passive or implied license merely. The state may regulate it, or even prohibit it.

Cohn v. Wausau Boom Co. 47 Wis. 314, 2 N. W. 546; Diedrich v. Northwestern Union R. Co. 42 Wis. 262, 24 Am. Rep. 399; Eisenbach v. Hatfield, 2 Wash. 236, 12 L. R. A. 632, 26 Pac. 539; Harbor Line v. State, 2 Wash. 531, 27 Pac. 550; State v. Sargent & Co. 45 Conn. 358; Musser v. Hershey, 42 Iowa, 361; Stevens v. Paterson & N. R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 532, 3 Am. Rep. 269; Stewart v. Fitch, 31 N. J. L. 18; Keyport & M. P. S. B. Co. v. Farmers' Transp. Co. 18 N. J. Eq. 511; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

The state can grant the shore even to a private concern; and a grant by statute is effective to operate such a transfer.

Goodlet v. Smithson, 5 Port. (Ala.) 245, 30 Am. Dec. 561; Wright v. Swan, 6 Port. (Ala.) 84; Swann v. Lindsey, 70 Ala. 517; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 46, 47, 38 L. ed. 348, 349, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Goodtitle ex dem. Pollard v. Kibbe, 9 How. 478, 13 L. ed. 223; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 381, 382, 35 L. ed. 433, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 124 U. S. 690, 31 L. ed. 552, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 643; State, Roberts, Prosecutor, v. Jersey City, 25 N. J. L. 525; People ex rel. Loomis v. Canal Appraisers, 33 N. Y. 466.

The state may grant a right of way to a railroad to construct its road between high and low water mark, and the fact that this interferes with the riparian owner's access to the water does not give him a right of action.

64 L. R. A.

Gould v. Hudson River R. Co. 6 N. Y. 522.

The state has power to make an absolute grant of tide or submerged lands.

Eldridge v. Cowell, 4 Cal. 87; Ward v. Mulford, 32 Cal. 366; Chapin v. Bourne, 8 Cal. 295; Upham v. Hosking, 62 Cal. 250; East Haven v. Hemingway, 7 Conn. 198; Gough v. Bell, 21 N. J. L. 157; State, Roberts, Prosecutor, v. Jersey City, 25 N. J. L. 525; State, Morris Canal & Bkg. Co., Prosecutors, v. Brown, 27 N. J. L. 14; State, Coles, Prosecutor, v. Platt, 24 N. J. L. 108; Keyport & M. P. S. B. Co. v. Farmers' Transp. Co. 18 N. J. Eq. 511; Gould v. Hudson River R. Co. 6 N. Y. 522; People v. Tibbetts, 19 N. Y. 528; Williams v. New York, 105 N. Y. 420, 11 N. E. 829; Galveston v. Menard, 23 Tex. 349; McCreedy v. Com. 27 Gratt. 985; Eisenbach v. Hatfield, 2 Wash. 236, 12 L. R. A. 632, 26 Pac. 539; Morse v. O'Connell, 7 Wash. 119, 34 Pac. 426; Wisconsin River Improv. Co. v. Lyons, 30 Wis. 65; Martin v. O'Brien, 34 Miss. 22; Hagan v. Campbell, 8 Port. (Ala.) 25, 33 Am. Dec. 267.

The present city of Mobile, comprising, as it does, the same people and the same territory, is the successor of the former city, and entitled to the possession of its property.

Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 301, 29 L. ed. 625, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Dill. Mun. Corp. § 172; Milner v. Pensacola, 2 Woods, 632, Fed. Cas. No. 9,619; Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 269, 23 L. ed. 897; O'Connor v. Memphis, 6 Lea, 730; Amy v. Selma, 77 Ala. 124.

If the plaintiff has title it may recover.

Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 124 U. S. 658, 31 L. ed. 543, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 643; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; Goodtitle ex dem. Pollard v. Kibbe, 1 Ala. 403, 9 How. 471, 13 L. ed. 220; Doe ex dem. Pollard v. Greitt, 8 Ala. 932; Doe ex dem. Kennedy v. Bebee, 8 Ala. 909; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838.

When the municipal corporation acts as the representative of sovereignty, the statute of limitations cannot be invoked against it.

Webb v. Demopolis, 95 Ala. 116, 21 L. R. A. 62, 13 So. 289; Reed v. Birmingham, 92 Ala. 339, 9 So. 163; Olive v. State, 86 Ala. 88, 4 L. R. A. 33, 5 So. 653; Driggs v. Phillips, 103 N. Y. 77, 8 N. E. 514; Burbank v. Fay, 65 N. Y. 57; Yates v. Warrenton, 84 Va. 337, 10 Am. St. Rep. 860, 4 S. E. 818; Smith v. State, 23 N. J. L. 727; Marsalis v. Garrison (Tex.) 27 S. W. 932; Olive v. State, 86 Ala. 94, 4 L. R. A. 33, 5 So. 653; Miller v. State, 38 Ala. 604.

Wharf property, when owned by a city, is of a public nature.

Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 501, 26 L. ed. 200; Klein v. New Orleans, 99 U. S. 150, 151, 25 L. ed. 431; Hitchcock v. Galveston Wharf Co. 50 Fed. 269; Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 530; Mobile v. Moog, 53 Ala. 568.

An equitable estoppel cannot avail the defendant in an action of ejectment.

Hawkins v. Ross, 100 Ala. 463, 14 So. 278; McLeod v. Bishop, 110 Ala. 640, 20 So. 130; Goodman v. Winter, 64 Ala. 410, 38 Am. Rep. 13.

The claimant's title is founded upon the report of the commissioner and act of Congress confirmatory thereof, and not upon any Spanish grant.

Doe ex dem. Chastang v. Dill, 19 Ala. 421; Hall v. Doe ex dem. Root, 19 Ala. 378; Menard v. Massey, 8 How. 308, 12 L. ed. 1090; Chastang v. Armstrong, 20 Ala. 609; Garcia v. Lee, 12 Pet. 511, 9 L. ed. 1176; Pollard v. Files, 2 How. 602, 11 L. ed. 395.

The riparian owner takes no title to the land below his property line, except by accretions.

Lewis, Em. Dom. § 78; Gould, Waters, § 167; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Hagan v. Campbell, 8 Port. (Ala.) 11, 33 Am. Dec. 267; Stevens v. Paterson & N. R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 532, 3 Am. Rep. 269; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. New York & L. B. R. Co. 23 N. J. Eq. 159; Coburn v. Ames, 52 Cal. 398, 28 Am. Rep. 643; Dana v. Jackson Street Wharf Co. 31 Cal. 118, 89 Am. Dec. 164.

Tyson, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The present case is an action of ejectment in Code form, by the city of Mobile, to recover of the appellant certain real estate described in the complaint, constituting the shore or part of Mobile river below high-water mark. The plaintiff's title was derived from the state of Alabama, through and by the act of the legislature approved January 31, 1867, entitled "An Act Granting to the City of Mobile the Riparian Rights in the River Front" (Acts 1866-67, p. 307), supplemented by the acts of February 18, 1895, and of December 5, 1896; the latter being amendatory of the former, and confirming and vesting all rights theretofore vested in any municipal corporation of Mobile in the city of Mobile. If the act of 1867 was operative, it is evident that the legal title to the shore of the river below high-water mark, as described in the act, under the rule of the common law, became vested in the city of Mobile. Though the property belonged to the United States before the admission of the state into the Union, by the compact under and by which Alabama became a state the title to all lands not reserved to the United States became the property of the 64 L. R. A.

state of Alabama; it being well settled that there was no reservation, and could be none, in the shores and beds of navigable streams, since such reservation would conflict with the fundamental law of organization, under which new states are entitled to be on an equal footing with the original states, as well as with the Constitution, restricting the municipal jurisdiction of the United States to the particular cases enumerated therein. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 689, 27 L. ed. 447, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 546, 30 L. ed. 489, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Sands v. Manistee River Improv. Co. 123 U. S. 296, 31 L. ed. 152, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 9, 31 L. ed. 632, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Shiveley v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

The chief important question is whether the act of 1867 is a valid law. The appellant insists that it is void because its title does not sufficiently describe the purpose of the body of the act. The Constitution of 1865, under which this law was enacted, required that "each law should embrace but one subject which shall be described in the title." Const. 1865, art. 4, § 2. The title is, "An Act Granting to the City of Mobile the Riparian Rights in the River Front" (Acts 1866-67, p. 307), while the body grants the fee. The objection is that "riparian rights" could not comprehend the fee, but only easements therein, distinct from absolute ownership. The object of this provision of the Constitution was to prevent surprise and fraud, in passing laws under misleading titles. It should not, therefore, be construed so as to defeat, by too technical an application, legislation not clearly within the evil aimed at. If the title of an act is single, and directs the mind to the subject of the law in a way calculated to direct the attention truly to the matter which is proposed to be legislated upon, the object of the provision is satisfied. In such case the generality of a title, not defining the particulars of the proposed legislation, would be more apt to excite general attention than otherwise, since the general words would give warning that everything within their limits might be affected, and thus draw the attention of the whole body of legislators, while narrower words would only interest those concerned with the matters specially named. It is therefore held that the generality of the title is no objection if it may comprehend the particulars of the body of the act, and that the act must be upheld if the subject may be comprehended in the title. Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 21; Ballentyne v. Wickersham, 75 Ala. 536; Quartlebaum v. State, 79 Ala. 1;

Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145; 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 229-235. In this case the body of the act grants the fee in the locus in quo; the title, "riparian rights." The question is, May not "rights" comprehend absolute rights of property, to wit, a fee, and may not "riparian" be taken as a mere localizing term to "rights?" The first definition of the word "riparian" in the Century Dictionary is "pertaining to or situated on the bank of a river." We think the fair and reasonable meaning of the title is to grant rights (property) which are riparian; that is, situated on or along the banks (ripa) of the river. No great precision and nicety of language is necessary in such case. It is sufficient if the common and ordinary mind would understand from the title the subject in reference to which a particular law is proposed. We therefore hold the act in question free from the objection interposed to it.

The next question is whether the patent from the United States in 1836 to the persons under whom defendant claimed, to the land adjoining the shore sued for, extended to low-water mark, and, if so, affected the previous title to the state to the land below high-water mark. We must decide both these questions in the negative. It is true, the first point was decided otherwise in the case of Webb v. Demopolis, 95 Ala. 126, 21 L. R. A. 62, 13 So. 289, and in one or two other cases relating to the shore line of streams above the ebb and flow of tide water. But these cases in no wise conflict with the common-law rule, so often approved by this court and other jurisdictions,—that, on streams where the tide ebbs and flows, grants of adjoining lands only extend to the ordinary high-tide line along the shore. The law is definitely settled as to this point, and it could hardly have been the purpose of the decision in Webb v. Demopolis to disturb this rule of property, supported by a vast array of authorities, without making reference to them. At common law the adjoining owner of the shore would, in the Case of Webb, have acquired title to the center of the stream; but the decision restricted the rule, on account of the actual navigability of the stream, to the line of low water. This cannot be a reason for enlarging the common-law rule as to tide-water shores, which restricted the rights of adjoining owners to the line of high tide. Mobile v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 577, 33 Am. Dec. 325, 16 Pet. 240, 10 L. ed. 950; Goodtitle ex dem. Pollard v. Kibbe, 1 Ala. 403, 9 How. 471, 13 L. ed. 220; Doe ex dem. Kennedy v. Bebee, 8 Ala. 914; Doe ex dem. Pollard v. Greit, 8 Ala. 941; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 124 U. S. 688, 31 L. ed. 551, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64 L. R. A.

643; Doe ex dem. Hallett v. Beebe, 13 How. 25, 14 L. ed. 35; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548, and the numerous authorities cited in brief of appellee's counsel.

But, if the first point was decided otherwise, it cannot affect this case, because the title of the United States to the shore in question, to the line of ordinary high tide, became vested in the state on and by its admission as a state, and could not be affected by any subsequent grant of the United States, if there had been such. Mobile v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 577, 33 Am. Dec. 325, 16 Pet. 240, 10 L. ed. 950; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Goodtitle ex dem. Pollard v. Kibbe, 1 Ala. 403, 9 How. 471, 13 L. ed. 220; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

It is next insisted that the state could not grant the fee to the city of Mobile, and thereby deplete itself of the trust under which the land was held. This court has decided that a deed by a trustee in violation of his trust nevertheless conveys the legal title, and is valid in a court of law. Robinson v. Pierce, 118 Ala. 273, 45 L. R. A. 66, 72 Am. St. Rep. 160, 24 So. 984. But the grant in this case was not in fraud of the trust. On the contrary, it was made for the purpose of making it effective for the public good. The shores of tide water in all the states are held in fee by the states, subject only to the reservation and stipulation that such streams should forever be and remain public highways, with the right in Congress to regulate commerce thereon. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 410, 10 L. ed. 1012; 4 Notes U. S. Rep. 185 et seq., 412 et seq. And it cannot be doubted that the state may convey the fee in such shore, subject, of course, to the paramount rights of the United States respecting navigation, and particularly so when the conveyance is in furtherance of the public interests. St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 360, 42 L. ed. 502, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157; Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 671, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210, 34 L. ed. 822; Hagan v. Campbell, 8 Port. (Ala.) 25, 33 Am. Dec. 267; Williams v. New York, 105 N. Y. 433, 11 N. E. 829; Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 129.

It is next insisted that the municipal corporation of Mobile was dissolved after the institution of this suit, and that the suit cannot be further entertained. The modern doctrine is that the identity of a municipal corporation is not changed by the repeal of its charter, and the substitution of a new municipal organization for substantially the same inhabitants and locality. When there is an alteration of a name, it may be convenient and proper for the pleadings to trace the change; but when the new organization bears the same name as the old, and the courts take judicial notice of the laws effecting the change, it is unnecessary to make any averment or obtain any order respecting the further prosecution of pending suits. Any authoritative appearance or step taken in the cause is the act of the new organization, which comes in, not by revivor, as in the case of representatives on the death of natural persons, but as the same party metamorphosed only in the external habiliments of organization and powers wrought by the new enactment. 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 172, note; Mobile v. Watson, 116 U. S. 289, 29 L. ed. 620, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 270, 23 L. ed. 898; Milner v. Pensacola, 2 Woods, 632, Fed. Cas. No. 9,619; Girard v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 53. It is manifest from a reading of the act of February 11, 1879 (Acts 1878-79, p. 381), that only such property as was possessed by the city of Mobile that was subject to the payment of its debts passed by the terms of the act to the commissioners as trustees for the bondholders. This property was trust property, and therefore was not subject to the debts of the city, and was not affected by the act.

It is further insisted that ejectment will not lie for the recovery of the premises. There is nothing in this contention. No matter what the trust may be, the trustee or holder of the legal title may recover the possession from one who ousts him or claims to hold adversely. He may do this even against a cestui que trust. Without this right, he might be unable to perform his duties. And it is of no consequence that the land, or a portion of it, is servient to the right of the flow of water over it, or of navigation thereon. Newell, Ejectment, chap. 2, §§ 20-22; Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 124 U. S. 658, 31 L. ed. 543, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 643; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mobile v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 577, 33 Am. Dec. 325.

The defendant offered evidence of adverse possession of the lands in controversy since the grant to the city of Mobile in 1867, which was rejected. There was no error in this, since there can be no limitation against a municipal corporation as to property held for the public. Dill. Mun. Corp. § 675; Webb v. Demopolis, 95 Ala. 116, 21 L. R. A. 62, 13 So. 289; Olive v. State, 86 Ala. 94, 4 L. R. A. 33, 5 So. 653; Miller v. State, 38 Ala. 604. The presumption is that the property is public, and, indeed, the words of the grant make it such in this case. The wrong or error of collecting tax on public property, 64 L. R. A.

on the same principle, can create no estoppel against the assertion of the legal title, if it could have any effect on the right to such property. Hawkins v. Ross, 100 Ala. 463, 14 So. 278; McLeod v. Bishop, 110 Ala. 640, 20 So. 130; Goodman v. Winter, 64 Ala. 410, 38 Am. Rep. 13. The plaintiff showed by the evidence introduced a valid legal title to the land sued for, unaffected by limitation or an estoppel of any character.

The defendant offered no evidence of title or possession which could have any operation to defeat the plaintiff's right of recovery. The supposed Spanish grant to so operate was never complete, and, besides, there was no proof of such a grant. The grant in 1836 by the United States cannot be construed to cover the land below high-water mark along the shore, and, if it could, would be ineffective, because the title was divested out of the United States and vested in the state of Alabama on the admission of the state into the Union. The case of Goodtitle ex dem. Pollard v. Kibbe, 1 Ala. 403, is decisive of this point against the appellant. The title vested in the United States on the acquirement of the territory from France, and passed irrevocably to the state on its admission, and could not be affected by any subsequent act of the United States. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565. The possession by the defendant after the grant to the city in 1867 could not be adverse, so as to put in operation the statute of limitations, so as to entitle the defendant to compensation for improvements. And as the plaintiff's declaration was good, and its paper title perfect, and no evidence was admitted or rejected which could legitimately affect the plaintiff's right to recover the shore land sued for, below the high tide, there could be no error prejudicial to the appellant.

The defendant, however, insists that its third charge, limiting the plaintiff's right to recover the lands "covered by the description in the complaint," which is not now below high-water mark, should have been given. The argument is that the description in the complaint takes the western line far inland; that is, west of the high-water line. We do not find this is the fact. The description distinctly limits the western line southwardly "along the high-water mark," which would necessarily limit the line to the high tide. Besides, the charge limits the recovery to the present high-tide line, which might be different from what it was when the grant was made or the suit commenced. There was no error, therefore, in the refusal of this charge.

Nor was there any error in the court's allowing public statutes and grants to be read in evidence, when they constituted the title papers of the party. They constitute facts in the case, and are evidence, in the strictest sense, which must go to the jury. It is the proper practice to read them to the jury, as was done in Mobile v. Eslava. It is always allowable to prove any fact which the court knows judicially. And certainly no injury can possibly result where it is permitted to be done.

The authority of the attorney to bring the suit and represent the plaintiff was sufficiently shown. Williams v. Johnson, (21 L. R. A. 848, note, 112 N. C. 424, 34 Am. St. Rep. 513, 17 S. E. 496); Tullock v. Cunningham, 1 Cow. 256; Pisley v. Butts, 2 Cow. 421; Denton v. Noyes, 6 Johns. 296, 5 Am. Dec. 237.

After the rendition of the judgment the defendant made a motion to retax the costs in respect to fees of certain witnesses subpoenaed by the plaintiff. This motion was denied, and its refusal is here insisted upon as error. It may be conceded for the purposes of this appeal that the court committed an error in refusing to retax the costs, and yet this will not work a reversal of the judgment. The error, if committed, in no wise involves any ruling of the court upon the trial, but was subsequent to the rendition of the judgment, and cannot be said to have induced its rendition, or to have otherwise infected it. We must therefore decline to consider it further. Mobile & K. C. R. Co. v. Owen, 121 Ala. 505, 25 So. 612.

We have not deemed it necessary to notice in detail the many assignments of error, since the principles announced by us involve the adjudication of all of them against the appellant.

There is no error in the record, and the judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed by Supreme Court of United States January 5, 1903.

KANSAS SUPREME COURT.

KANSAS CITY-LEAVENWORTH RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

Margaret GALLAGHER.

(.....Kan.....)

*1. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, a jury may infer from a universal instinct of self-preservation that a person about to cross an electric street railway track both looked and listened before venturing to do so.

2. It is the duty of a pedestrian upon a city street, who is about to cross the track of an electric street railway company, to exercise his faculties of sight and hearing, and in other respects to take ordinary precautions to avoid collision with the cars. If he does look and listen, he will be held to an apprehension of that which should have been seen and heard, and, if he fails to look and listen, he will be charged with the same liability in case of disaster as if he had done so. But a traveler may cross an electric street railway track in front of an approaching car which he plainly sees and distinctly hears, and not be negligent. If, in view of his distance from the car, the rate of speed of its approach, and all other circumstances of the event, a reasonably prudent man would accept the hazard and undertake to cross, a traveler may do so, and the propriety of his conduct is ordinarily a question for the jury.

(February 6, 1904.)

ERROR to the District Court for Leavenworth County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged negligent killing of her husband. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Atwood & Hooper, for plaintiff in error:

A traveler on a city street, who is about to cross the track of an electric street car company, must exercise his faculties of sight and hearing, and, under special circumstances, must use other careful and prudent means to ascertain whether a car is approaching.

Burns v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 66 Kan. 188, 71 Pac. 244; Schulte v. New Orleans City & L. R. Co. 44 La. Ann. 509, 10 So. 811; Doherty v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 118 Mich. 209, 76 N. W. 377, 80 N. W. 36; Sheets v. Connolly Street R. Co. 54 N. J. L. 518, 24 Atl. 483; Henderson v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 116 Mich. 368, 74 N. W. 525; McGee v. Consolidated

*Headnotes by BURCH, J.

NOTE.—As to measure of care required of person in crossing street-car track, see also, in this series, Chicago City R. Co. v. Robinson, 4 L. R. A. 126; Carson v. Federal Street & P. Valley R. Co. 15 L. R. A. 257; Ehrisman v. East Harrisburg City Pass. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 448; Newark Pass. R. Co. v. Bloch, 22 L. R. A. 374; McGee v. Consolidated Street R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 300; Cincinnati Street R. Co. v. Snell, 32 L. R. A. 276; Consolidated Traction Co. v. Scott, 33 L. R. A.

R. A. 122; Baltimore Traction Co. v. Helms, 36 L. R. A. 215; Johnson v. St. Paul City R. Co. 36 L. R. A. 586; Evansville Street R. Co. v. Gentry, 37 L. R. A. 378; Hoelzel v. Crescent City R. Co. 38 L. R. A. 708; Tesch v. Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. 53 L. R. A. 618; Roberts v. Spokane Street R. Co. 54 L. R. A. 184; and Keenan v. Union Traction Co. 58 L. R. A. 217.

Street R. Co. 102 Mich. 107, 26 L. R. A. 300, 47 Am. St. Rep. 507, 60 N. W. 293; Smith v. City & Suburban R. Co. 29 Or. 539, 46 Pac. 136, 780; Carson v. Federal Street & P. Valley R. Co. 147 Pa. 219, 15 L. R. A. 257, 30 Am. St. Rep. 727, 23 Atl. 369; Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. Arnold (Kan.) 72 Pac. 857.

The employees of the company, in adopting the usual and ordinary methods of giving warning to persons or vehicles upon the track, and especially persons who are in possession of all their faculties and in a position to instantly get out of the way of a car, are performing their whole duty, because it can be presumed by them that such a person will heed such warning immediately, and get out of the way of the approaching car.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Karns, 66 Kan. 802, 72 Pac. 234; Schulte v. New Orleans City & L. R. Co. 44 La. Ann. 509, 10 So. 811; Carson v. Federal Street & P. Valley R. Co. 147 Pa. 219, 15 L. R. A. 257, 30 Am. St. Rep. 727, 23 Atl. 369; Sheets v. Connolly Street R. Co. 54 N. J. L. 518, 24 Atl. 483; McGee v. Consolidated Street R. Co. 102 Mich. 107, 26 L. R. A. 300, 47 Am. St. Rep. 507, 60 N. W. 293; Burns v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 66 Kan. 188, 71 Pac. 244; Henderson v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 116 Mich. 368, 74 N. W. 525; Doherty v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 118 Mich. 209, 76 N. W. 377, 80 N. W. 36; Smith v. City & Suburban R. Co. 29 Or. 539, 46 Pac. 136, 780; Pinder v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 173 N. Y. 519, 66 N. E. 405.

It was Gallagher's duty, before going upon or across the track, to use ordinary precaution to avoid a collision with the car; and it was his duty to look and listen for a car; and if he went upon the track without so doing, or remained thereon for any length of time without looking or listening, he was guilty of negligence.

Robards v. Indianapolis Street R. Co. (Ind. App.) 67 N. E. 953; Everett v. Los Angeles Consol. Electric R. Co. 115 Cal. 105, 34 L. R. A. 350, 43 Pac. 207, 46 Pac. 889.

Messrs. John T. O'Keefe and Benjamin F. Endres, for defendant in error:

A reviewing court ought not to disturb the verdict of the jury upon the question of contributory negligence, and adjudge the existence thereof, unless the evidence of the facts and circumstances is so clear and uncontradicted that no other reasonable deduction can be drawn therefrom.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. French, 56 Kan. 584, 44 Pac. 12; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Conlon, 9 Kan. App. 116, 57 Pac. 1063; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Aderhold, 58 Kan. 298, 49 Pac. 83; Missouri P. 64 L. R. A.

R. Co. v. Moffatt, 56 Kan. 668, 44 Pac. 607; Dewald v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 44 Kan. 586, 24 Pac. 1101.

Gallagher had a right to depend upon the operators of the car giving him a reasonable time to leave and push his cart off of the track after they had rung the bell. No bell was rung; no warning given.

Little v. Street R. Co. 78 Mich. 205, 44 N. W. 137; Smith v. Union Trunk Line Co. 18 Wash. 351, 45 L. R. A. 169, 51 Pac. 400; Cincinnati Street R. Co. v. Snell, 54 Ohio St. 197; 32 L. R. A. 276, 43 N. E. 207.

Where the evidence of the plaintiff shows actionable negligence on the part of the company, and the question of contributory negligence of the plaintiff depends upon a variety of circumstances from which different conclusions may be reached as to whether there was contributory negligence or not, the question should be submitted to the jury under proper instructions.

Brooks v. Lincoln Street R. Co. 22 Neb. 816, 36 N. W. 529; Swain v. Fourteenth Street R. Co. 93 Cal. 179, 28 Pac. 829; Rascher v. East Detroit & G. P. R. Co. 90 Mich. 413, 30 Am. St. Rep. 447, 51 N. W. 463; Robbins v. Springfield Street R. Co. 165 Mass. 30, 42 N. E. 334; Benjamin v. Holyoke Street R. Co. 160 Mass. 3, 39 Am. St. Rep. 446, 35 N. E. 95; Creamer v. West End Street R. Co. 156 Mass. 320, 16 L. R. A. 490, 32 Am. St. Rep. 456, 31 N. E. 391; Shea v. St. Paul City R. Co. 50 Minn. 395, 52 N. W. 902; Chicago City R. Co. v. Robinson, 127 Ill. 9, 4 L. R. A. 126, 11 Am. St. Rep. 87, 18 N. E. 772; Traver v. Spokane Street R. Co. 25 Wash. 225, 65 Pac. 284; Newark Pass. R. Co. v. Block, 55 N. J. L. 605, 22 L. R. A. 374, 27 Atl. 1067; Thompson v. Salt Lake Rapid Transit Co. 16 Utah, 281, 40 L. R. A. 172, 67 Am. St. Rep. 621, 52 Pac. 92; Dallas Rapid Transit R. Co. v. Elliott, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 216, 26 S. W. 455; Citizens' Rapid Transit Co. v. Seigrist, 96 Tenn. 119, 33 S. W. 920; North Jersey Street R. Co. v. Schwartz, 66 N. J. 437, 49 Atl. 683; Bass v. Norfolk R. & Light Co. 100 Va. 1, 40 S. E. 100; Lawler v. Hartford Street R. Co. 72 Conn. 74, 43 Atl. 545; Lake Roland Elev. R. Co. v. McKewen, 80 Md. 593, 31 Atl. 797; Thoresen v. LaCrosse City R. Co. 87 Wis. 597, 41 Am. St. Rep. 64, 58 N. W. 1051; Mock v. Los Angeles Traction Co. 139 Cal. 616, 73 Pac. 455; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 429; Penny v. Rochester R. Co. 7 App. Div. 595, 40 N. Y. Supp. 172.

Gallagher's failure to look was not the proximate cause of his injury and death.

Lawler v. Hartford Street R. Co. 72 Conn. 74, 43 Atl. 548; Consolidated Traction Co. v. Glynn, 59 N. J. L. 432, 37 Atl. 66; Downey v. Pittsburg, A. & M. Traction Co.

161 Pa. 131, 28 Atl. 1019; Patterson v. Townsend, 91 Iowa, 725, Appx., 59 N. W. 205; Pittsburg Electric R. Co. v. Kelly, 57 Kan. 514, 46 Pac. 945.

The conduct of the company and its employees, under the circumstances, was such as to amount to wilfulness or wantonness.

Kansas P. R. Co. v. Whipple, 39 Kan. 541, 18 Pac. 730; 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, 20; Cooley, Torts, 674; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Brafford, 15 Ind. App. 655, 43 N. E. 892, 44 N. E. 551; Pacific R. Co. v. Houts, 12 Kan. 332; 1 Thomp. Neg. 124, § 1222; Thompson v. Salt Lake Rapid Transit Co. 16 Utah, 281, 40 L. R. A. 172, 67 Am. St. Rep. 621, 52 Pac. 92; Roberts v. Spokane Street R. Co. 23 Wash. 325, 54 L. R. A. 184, 63 Pac. 506; Turnbull v. New Orleans & C. R. Co. 57 C. C. A. 151, 120 Fed. 783; Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. Arnold (Kan.) 72 Pac. 857; Nellis, Street Surface Roads, § 24, p. 349; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Moffatt, 60 Kan. 118, 72 Am. St. Rep. 343, 55 Pac. 837; Topeka City R. Co. v. Higgs, 38 Kan. 375, 5 Am. St. Rep. 754, 16 Pac. 667; Consolidated City & C. P. R. Co. v. Carlson, 58 Kan. 64, 48 Pac. 635; Shea v. St. Paul City R. Co. 50 Minn. 395, 52 N. W. 902; Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Albright, 14 Ind. App. 433, 42 N. E. 238, 1028; Hays v. Tacoma R. & Power Co. 106 Fed. 49; Robbins v. Springfield Street R. Co. 165 Mass. 30, 42 N. E. 334.

Where the appearances indicate that a person upon the track is in such a condition as to be either insensible of his danger or unable to avoid it, those in charge of the train must use all available means to stop.

Campbell v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 55 Kan. 543, 40 Pac. 997; Cleveland, O. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Tartt, 49 L. R. A. 98, 39 C. C. A. 568, 99 Fed. 369; Bedell v. Detroit, Y. & A. A. R. Co. (Mich.) 9 Det. L. N. 479, 92 N. W. 349; Baltimore Traction Co. v. Appel, 80 Md. 603, 31 Atl. 964; Harrington v. Los Angeles R. Co. 140 Cal. 514, 63 L. R. A. 238, 74 Pac. 15; Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Steen, 42 Ark. 321; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Camp, 46 Ill. App. 503; Baltimore Traction Co. v. Wallace, 77 Md. 435, 26 Atl. 518; North Baltimore Pass. R. Co. v. Arnreich, 78 Md. 589, 28 Atl. 809; Little v. Superior Rapid Transit R. Co. 38 Wis. 402, 60 N. W. 705; Bunyan v. Citizens' R. Co. 127 Mo. 12, 29 S. W. 842; Thatcher v. Central Traction Co. 166 Pa. 66, 45 Am. St. Rep. 645, 30 Atl. 1048; Houston City Street R. Co. v. Woodlock (Tex. Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 817.

He who has the last clear opportunity of avoiding the accident by exercising proper care must do so.

Moore v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo. App.) 75 S. W. 699; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. 64 L. R. A.

Law, 2d ed. p. 437; Klockenbrink v. St. Louis & M. River R. Co. 172 Mo. 678, 72 S. W. 900; Esrey v. Southern P. Co. 103 Cal. 541, 37 Pac. 500; Lee v. Market Street R. Co. 135 Cal. 293, 67 Pac. 765; 1 Thomp. Neg. 2d ed. §§ 239, 240, 245; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 99; Tully v. Pennsylvania, W. & B. R. Co. 2 Penn. (Del.) 537, 82 Am. St. Rep. 425, 47 Atl. 1019.

Bureh, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

A street sweeper of a city street, while engaged in the performance of his duties, at night, was run down and killed by an electric street railway car. The car was running at a speed of from 20 to 25 miles per hour, while the rate allowed by the ordinances of the city was but 12 miles per hour. The track was "sweaty," and because of its slippery condition a moving car was difficult to control. The conductor and motorman in charge of the car discovered the employee of the city when 100 feet distant from him. He was then upon the track between its rails, and in the act of walking across it. The car conductor shouted to him, but the bell was not sounded or other warning given. Two railway engines were standing a short distance beyond the place of accident, one of which was taking water and the other noisily emitting steam, while the wind blew from the direction of the engines toward the pedestrian and the car. When the man was observed the motoneer set the brakes, which locked the car wheels, but not so quickly as if the brakes had been in good repair. The proper method of overcoming the momentum of the car would have been to apply sand to the track, but the apparatus for the use of sand was out of repair, and that expedient was not adopted at all. The car was properly lighted, and some street lights were burning in the vicinity, and, if it had been properly equipped, operated, and controlled, the car could have been stopped within a distance less than that intervening between the man and the car when he was discovered to be upon the track. The deceased was struck by the corner of the car on the side of the track toward which he was walking, and by force of the collision his body was thrown still farther away from the track. He was in good health and had good eyesight and good hearing. He was familiar with the track and the manner and mode of running cars upon it along the street in question, and knew about how often cars passed the place of injury. He had an unobstructed view of the railway track for 610 feet in the direction from which the car came. There was nothing to prevent his seeing the car as it approached him if he had looked, and, if he had heard or heeded the shouting of the conductor, he then had time to leave the track and avoid the collision, and had the ability to do so. But there is nothing to show either that he did or did not look for an approaching car, or that he did or did not see or hear the one which struck him. Under these circumstances, was the deceased guilty of such contributory negligence that his widow may not recover from the company operating the car the damages occasioned by his death?

The defendant company argues the case as if the deceased man either looked and listened for the approaching car or did not do so; that he was negligent if he failed to take so much precaution for his own welfare; that he must be held to have noted the proximity of the car if he did look and listen; and that a reasonably prudent man, after looking and listening, would have avoided a collision. It is true that a traveler upon a city street, who is about to cross the track of an electric street railway company, should exercise his faculties of sight and hearing, and in other respects take ordinary precautions to avoid collision with the cars. If he does look and listen, he will be held to an apprehension of that which should have been seen and heard, and, if he fails to look and listen, he will be charged with the same liability in case of disaster as if he had done so. These principles meet the tests both of reason and of practical application to the affairs of men. Burns v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 66 Kan. 188, 71 Pac. 244. But a jury may infer ordinary care and diligence on the part of an injured person from the love of life, the instinct of self-preservation, and the known disposition of men to avoid injury. Devald v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 44 Kan. 586, 24 Pac. 1101. And, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed that a person about to cross a railroad track both looked and listened before venturing to do so. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hinds, 56 Kan. 758, 44 Pac. 993. "There was no error in instructing the jury that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, there was a presumption that the deceased stopped, looked, and listened. The law was so declared in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 353, 366, 41 L. ed. 186, 192, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104. The case was a natural extension of prior cases. The presumption is founded on a law of nature. We know of no more universal instinct than that of self-preservation,—none that so insistently urges to care against injury. It has its motives to exercise in the fear of pain, maiming, and death. There are few presumptions based on human feelings or experience that have 64 L. R. A.

surer foundation than that expressed in the instruction objected to." Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Landrigan, 191 U. S. 461, 48 L. ed. 262, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137.

Since the evidence in this case gives no account of the street sweeper on the night of the fatality until he was suddenly seen in a place of peril on the railway track, with the enginery of death bearing swiftly down upon him, these presumptions should be indulged in his favor, and the case determined as if he had chosen his gait in crossing the track with reference to an observation of his surroundings. Conceding, then, that the traveler looked for whatever was to be seen and listened for whatever was to be heard, and duly apprehended the report of his senses, still he cannot be summarily condemned. A man may cross an electric street railway track in front of an approaching car which he plainly sees and distinctly hears, and not be negligent. Hundreds of people do so every day, and yet satisfy every demand for care and caution which the law imposes upon them. The requirement of the law that a man shall look and listen means no more than that he shall observe and estimate with reasonable accuracy his distance from the car and the speed of its oncoming. He is then to make a calculation and comparison of the time it will take the car to come and the time it will take to cross the track, and if, under the same circumstances, a reasonably prudent person would attempt to cross at a given rate of speed, he will not be negligent in doing so. It is true that a reasonably prudent man may be mistaken or be deceived, but, if so, and if his conclusion from the facts as they appear to him be erroneous, and an injury result, he is nevertheless guiltless of contributory negligence, for the law does not measure human conduct in such cases by any higher standard of care than that which such a man would exercise; and whether or not a prudent man would accept the hazard is generally a question of fact for the jury. "It is consistent with the facts proved that Lawler saw the approaching car, and without negligence on his part failed to observe from his position the unusual speed at which it was running, so that his conclusion that he could safely cross was not an unreasonable one. Clearly, it is not negligence in law for one to cross a street railway track in front of an approaching car which he has seen, and which does not appear to him to be dangerously near, and which would not have been so in fact had it been running at its ordinary rate of speed. Whether one who has observed an approaching street car should have also apprehended that it was approaching at such a speed as to reach him before he could cross the track, is generally a question of fact to be determined upon the circumstances of each particular case." Lawler v. Hartford Street R. Co. 72 Conn. 74, 82, 43 Atl. 545. "He who puts himself in the way of runaway horses who have escaped from the driver's control must know that he is taking a risk. But a jury may well say that he who crosses in front of a trolley car provided with a motorman may assume that it is furnished with the means of stopping or reducing speed. Then there was a question for the jury in this case whether a prudent man, upon such an assumption might not judge it safe to cross in front of a trolley car 300 feet away, although coming at great and illegal speed. Upon the assumption of the existence of means to reduce speed and to stop, and of a servant employed to make use of such means, it would be absurd to say that one was bound to refrain from crossing for fear the servant would not make use of the means." Consolidated Traction Co. v. Lamberton, 59 N. J. L. 297, 299, 36 Atl. 100. "It would be palpable negligence for the driver of a wagon or carriage to recklessly drive upon a crossing in a race with an approaching car. In all such cases it should be held that the driver of the vehicle takes his chances of a collision, and he ought to have no remedy if an accident occurs. But no principle of law or common sense requires that the driver of a vehicle should stop his team, and await the passing of an approaching car, if he discovers the car on the line at such a distance as that, in the exercise of reasonable care and prudence, he may safely proceed on his way, and cross the track. Much is said in argument about the question whether the rule requiring a person about to cross the track to stop and look and listen for an approaching car, and whether the rule applicable to a railroad operated by trains and steam locomotives, should apply to an electric railroad. That question is not in this case. There is no claim that plaintiff did not see the approaching car. He saw it when it was 300 feet away from the crossing. The question is, Did he use proper care and caution in determining whether he could safely cross the track? That was a fair question, under the evidence, for the jury to determine." Patterson v. Townsend, 91 Iowa, 725, 726, Appx., 59 N. W. 205. See also Schmidt v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 75 Iowa, 606, 39 N. W. 916; Gratiot v. Missouri P. R. Co. 116 Mo. 450, 16 L. R. A. 189, 21 S. W. 1094; 2 Thomp. Neg. § 1450.

What, then, was the situation of the street sweeper in this case? The car was hurtling through space at a rate of speed far in excess of that allowed by the city law. An observation of it would not have indicated peril, and would not have dictated haste in crossing, unless this high and dangerous rate of speed were appreciated. The sweeper had the right to rely upon a compliance with the law on the part of the company, and to believe the speed of the car to be within 12 miles per hour, and under the control of the motoneer. The mingling lights and shadows of the night necessarily rendered vision inaccurate and uncertain. The man was not bound to regard a shout as a street-car signal, and other sounds were opposed to the noise of the flying car. Under these circumstances an unexpected and unlawful acceleration of speed might well deceive a reasonably prudent and careful man, and delude him into danger; and, if he were cognizant of the true rapidity of the car's motion, he might nevertheless feel secure that it would be reduced to the lawful rate by a vigilant motorman in command of efficient appliances in good repair, before it could overtake him. So considered, the facts already narrated, which seem especially to militate against a belief in the carelessness of the deceased, are not irreconcilable with a liability on the part of the company. In the light of such facts different minds might arrive at different conclusions as to what might, under all the circumstances, have been done without blame. The question, therefore, is not one of law, but is one of fact, and the general verdict against the company is conclusive.

Some complaint is made of instructions given and refused at the trial. Under the view of the case taken above, the instruction given relating to reciprocal rights upon the streets could not have been prejudicial. In the next instruction given the allusion to the safety of passengers occurs in a recital of duties evidently taken from the city ordinance granting the defendant the right to use the streets, and could not have misled the jury; and the objection that this instruction permitted a recovery if the defendant "negligently failed and neglected in any manner to care for the safety of the life and personal safety of the plaintiff's intestate" ignores the succeeding words "as alleged." The subject-matter of two of the instructions refused, referred to in the defendant's brief, was covered by instructions given, and the third conflicts with the views set forth above.

Since no material error appears to have been committed by the District Court, its judgment is affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

MARYLAND CASUALTY COMPANY, Piff.
in Err.,

v.

Sallie M. HUDGINS.

(.....Tex.....)

1. A specification in an answer to a petition for recovery on a policy insuring against accident one who came to his death by eating spoiled oysters, the facts as to which are set out in the petition, that, if the death was so caused, it was because the oysters contained ptomaine poison, which would bring the death within one exception in the policy, does not preclude reliance upon another exception from liability in case of death from things voluntarily taken, where the allegations of the answer and petition together are sufficient to raise that defense.

2. Death caused by accidentally eating spoiled oysters is within a clause in an accident insurance policy providing that the policy does not cover injuries resulting from poison, or anything accidentally or otherwise taken or absorbed.

(November 16, 1903.)

ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Fifth Supreme Judicial District to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the District Court for Bowie County in plaintiff's favor in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on an accident insurance policy. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Baker, Botts, Baker, & Lovett and J. S. McEachin, for plaintiff in error:

The court of civil appeals erred in holding that the voluntary act of eating an unsound oyster, not known to be so, falls within the terms of an accident policy insuring against death resulting from "external, violent, and accidental means," and excluding "injuries, fatal or otherwise, resulting from poison, or anything accidentally or otherwise taken, administered, absorbed, or inhaled."

Ermentrout v. Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. 63 Minn. 305, 30 L. R. A. 346, 56 Am. St. Rep. 485, 65 N. W. 635; Foster v. Fidelity & C. Co. 99 Wis. 447, 40 L. R. A. 833, 75 N. W. 69; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Myers, 62 Ohio St.

529, 49 L. R. A. 760, 57 N. E. 458; Western Commercial Travelers' Assn. v. Smith, 40 L. R. A. 653, 29 C. C. A. 223, 56 U. S. App. 393, 85 Fed. 401; Woodmen Accl. Assn. v. Pratt, 62 Neb. 673, 55 L. R. A. 291, 89 Am. St. Rep. 777, 87 N. W. 546; Scheiderer v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 58 Wis. 13, 46 Am. Rep. 618, 16 N. W. 47; O'Reilly v. Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co. 60 N. Y. 169, 19 Am. Rep. 151; Peabody v. Satterlee, 166 N. Y. 174, 52 L. R. A. 956, 59 N. E. 818; McGlothter v. Provident Mut. Accl. Co. 32 C. C. A. 318, 60 U. S. App. 705, 89 Fed. 685; Pollock v. United States Mut. Accl. Assn. 102 Pa. 234, 48 Am. Rep. 204; Westmoreland v. Preferred Accl. Ins. Co. 75 Fed. 245.

Messrs. Sheppard, Jones, & Sheppard for defendant in error.

Brown, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On October 6, 1900, the Maryland Casualty Company, a foreign corporation doing business in Texas on a permit from the state, issued and delivered to William T. Hudgins a policy of accident insurance which contained these stipulations: "The Maryland Casualty Company, Baltimore, Md., hereinafter called the company, does hereby insure Wm. T. Hudgins, of Texarkana, in the county of Bowie, and state of Texas, hereinafter called the assured, by occupation a lawyer, classified by the company as 'A Spl.' for the term of twelve months, beginning on the 6th day of October, 1900, at twelve o'clock noon, and ending on the 6th day of October, 1901, noon, standard time, in the amount of five thousand dollars, principal sum, and $25 weekly indemnity against bodily injuries, sustained through external violent, and accidental means, as follows: 1st. If death shall result from any such injury independent of all other causes within ninety days from the happening of the accident causing such injury, the company will pay the principal sum above specified to Mrs. Sallie N. Hudgins, wife of the assured, if surviving, otherwise to the legal representatives of the assured. . . . This insurance does not cover . . . injuries fatal or otherwise, resulting from poi-

NOTE.—As to effect of provision in policy exempting company from liability for death caused by poison or anything taken or absorbed, see also, in this series, Mennelley v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. 31 L. R. A. 686; Fidelity & C. Co. v. Waterman, 32 L. R. A. 654; and Kasten v. Interstate Casualty Co. 40 L. R. A. 651.

As to what constitutes an accident within the meaning of a provision in a life insurance policy, see note to Fidelity & C. Co. v. Johnson, 64 L. R. A.

30 L. R. A. 206; also Modern Woodmen Accl. Assn. v. Shryock, 39 L. R. A. 826; Kasten v. Interstate Casualty Co. 40 L. R. A. 651; Western Commercial Travelers' Assn. v. Smith, 40 L. R. A. 653; Feder v. Iowa State Travelling Men's Assn. 43 L. R. A. 693; Smith v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 56 L. R. A. 271; Preferred Accl. Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 61 L. R. A. 145; Fetter v. Fidelity & C. Co. 61 L. R. A. 459; and Horsfall v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 63 L. R. A. 425.

son or anything accidentally or otherwise taken, administered, absorbed, or inhaled."

Mrs. Sallie N. Hudgins, the beneficiary in the said policy, instituted suit in the district court of Bowie county, and by appropriate allegations set up the making and delivering of the policy, her right to maintain the suit, and the death of William T. Hudgins, alleging the facts in connection with the said death, and the causes which brought it about, as follows: "That while said policy was in full force and effect, according to the face and reading thereof, to wit, on October 28, 1900, the said Wm. T. Hudgins did receive a bodily injury through external, violent, accidental means, from which, independently of all other causes, the said Wm. T. Hudgins died on November 1, 1900; that the nature and character of said accident to the said Wm. T. Hudgins, and the injury arising therefrom and causing his death, were as follows: That on October 28, 1900, the said Wm. T. Hudgins ordered, among other things, for his dinner, some raw oysters; that some of said oysters were unsound and spoiled; that the said Wm. T. Hudgins accidentally ate one or two of said oysters, and soon thereafter discovered that they were unsound and spoiled; that at the time he ate them he did not know that they were unsound and spoiled; that had he known that said oysters were unsound and spoiled before he ate them he would not have eaten them; that as soon as he detected their unsound and spoiled condition he quit eating them; that a few hours after he had eaten said unsound and spoiled oysters his stomach began to cramp him, and pains seized him in his bowels and stomach; that he became sick at his stomach, vomited, and passed bloody mucus actions from his bowels; that said unsound and spoiled oysters had passed into his intestines, and inflamed his bowels to such an extent that they were obstructed and prevented from performing the functions essential to the maintenance and sustenance of life; that he steadily and rapidly grew worse, until he died on November 1, 1900, from the effects of eating said unsound and spoiled oysters accidentally, and from the effects of said unsound and spoiled oysters lodging in his intestines accidentally, the one or both of said accidents being the proximate cause of his death."

Defendant answered by a general demurrer, by special exceptions, and a general denial, and specially pleaded as follows: "And for further answer defendant says that said policy contains a stipulation that said policy does not cover injuries, fatal or otherwise, resulting from poison, or anything accidentally or otherwise taken, administered, absorbed, or inhaled, and that, if said unsound or spoiled oysters caused the death of said Wm. T. Hudgins, it was because said spoiled oysters contained ptomaine poison, and that therefore defendant is not liable, and plaintiff ought not to recover, and of this it puts itself upon the country." The evidence established the allegations of the petition as to the manner of Hudgins' death, but the facts need not be repeated.

Upon a trial before a jury, after the evidence was introduced, the defendant in the court below filed the following demurrer to the evidence and motion for instruction: "Now comes the defendant, by Webber & Webber and Dan T. Leary, its attorneys, and says the evidence offered herein and introduced by the plaintiff fails to show any right for plaintiff to recover herein, and defendant demurs to the evidence of plaintiff, and says the same is not sufficient to entitle plaintiff to a judgment. Wherefore the defendant prays that the court instruct the jury to return a verdict in favor of the defendant." The court refused the request to instruct the jury to find for the defendant, and proceeded with the trial, submitting the issues to the jury, and verdict was rendered for the plaintiff for the amount of the policy, with interest thereon, which judgment was by the court of civil appeals affirmed.

The court of civil appeals held that the answer specially set up that the deceased died from ptomaine poison, and under such answer the defense that the oysters were voluntarily taken into the stomach, and that death ensued therefrom, was not admissible. The answer of the defendant set up the clause excepting from liability death or injury arising from poison, or anything taken, etc., and alleged that, if the oysters taken or swallowed by the deceased caused his death, then it was because the said oysters contained "ptomaine poison." The word "because" marks the means by which death was produced, and not the reason why the defendant is not liable; but the answer continues, "and therefore the defendant is not liable," etc., which refers to all of the facts set up in the answer as constituting a defense to the plaintiff's claim. Plaintiff's petition contains specific allegations of the facts attending the eating of the oysters by deceased, and the manner in which it is claimed the oysters produced the death of Hudgins. The facts alleged in the petition, taken in connection with the answer of defendant, were sufficient to present the whole defense claimed by the defendant. It is a well-established rule of pleading in our court that facts alleged by one party need not be pleaded by the other. Lyon v. Logan, 68 Tex. 525, 2 Am. St. Rep. 511, 5 S. W. 72; Gaston v. Wright, 83 Tex. 286, 18 S. W. 576.

The court erred in refusing to sustain the defense that the injury was excepted from the obligation of the contract presented under the following assignment of error: "The court erred in overruling defendant's demurrer to plaintiff's evidence, and in refusing to sustain and grant defendant's motion herein to instruct the jury in this case to return a verdict in favor of the defendant." The policy sued upon contracted to indemnify William T. Hudgins against bodily injuries sustained "through external, violent, and accidental means," but the policy did not propose to indemnify against the consequence of all accidents. Much argument has been indulged in by the counsel for defendant in error as well as the learned judge who wrote the opinion of the court of civil appeals to establish that the means by which Hudgins lost his life was accidental. In the view we take of the case it is unnecessary to discuss that question, for, granting that it comes within the terms of the policy as being "external, violent, and accidental," yet it is just the character of accident which is specifically excepted from the obligation by this language: "This insurance does not cover . . . injuries, fatal or otherwise, resulting from poison, or anything accidentally or otherwise taken, administered, absorbed, or inhaled." The word "take" means to eat as food, to swallow. Webster's Dict., word take, 2d ¶ 6. The true meaning of the policy will be shown by reading its different clauses which bear upon this question in connection, thus: "The Maryland Casualty Company . . . does hereby insure William T. Hudgins . . . for the term of twelve months . . . against bodily injuries sustained through external, violent, and accidental means. . . . This insurance does not cover injuries, fatal or otherwise, resulting from poison, or anything accidentally or otherwise taken. . . . But it is understood that this policy covers the assured, according to the terms hereof, in the event of his injury from . . . choking in swallowing." The last clause quoted was introduced to qualify the excepting clause; the words "choking in swallowing" can refer to no word in the qualified clause except "taken," and serves to define the meaning of that word.

It is true that the policy should be construed in that manner which is most favorable to the assured, and, if the language of the contract is fairly susceptible of any construction that would make the insurer responsible for the loss, it would be the duty of the court to place such construction upon it; but the courts cannot undertake to make a new contract, in disregard of the plain and unambiguous language used by the parties. The plain meaning of this language is that the company excepts from its liability all injuries which may arise from whatever thing of any kind or character, poisonous or not, that Hudgins might voluntarily and consciously take into his stomach,—that is, to swallow as food or drink,—and any other meaning attributed to the exception would be in disregard of the plain language, and would give to the policy a force and effect never intended by the parties.

There is no doubt that the oysters, whether poisonous or not, and whether taken accidentally or not, were consciously and voluntarily swallowed by Hudgins, and, this being the case, it comes strictly and clearly within the terms of the excepting clause, and there can be no liability under that contract for the injury which resulted in his death. Carnes v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Asso. 106 Iowa, 281, 68 Am. St. Rep. 306, 76 N. W. 683; Kasten v. Interstate Casualty Co. 99 Wis. 73, 40 L. R. A. 651, 74 N. W. 534; Early v. Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 113 Mich. 58, 67 Am. St. Rep. 445, 71 N. W. 500; Pollock v. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. 102 Pa. 234, 48 Am. Rep. 204; McGlothter v. Provident Mut. Acci. Co. 32 C. C. A. 318, 60 U. S. App. 705, 89 Fed. 685; Westmoreland v. Preferred Acci. Ins. Co. 75 Fed. 244; Bayless v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 14 Blatchf. 143, Fed. Cas. No. 1,138; Cole v. Accident Ins. Co. 61 L. T. N. S. 227.

In Pollock v. United States Mut. Acci. Asso., supra, the supreme court of Pennsylvania said: "To remove all doubt as to the liability of the association to the plaintiff in this case, the certificate further declares the benefits under it shall not extend to any death or disability which may have been caused 'by the taking of poison.' It is not necessary that the poison be taken with an intent to produce death, in order to defeat a claim flowing from the right of membership. If the poison be innocently taken, and without any knowledge of the injurious effect which it was likely to produce, and did produce, so far as the person taking it is concerned, the effect may be said to be accidental. If we go a step further, and admit in such case that the 'means' are accidental, yet it is one of the accidental means expressly excepted from the protective power of the certificate."

In the case of Westmoreland v. Preferred Acci. Asso. supra, there was the same exception in the policy as that under consideration. In that case the party died from inhaling chloroform, which produced death. The chloroform was properly administered by a physician, and it was claimed that, while the administering of the chloroform was intentional, the effect was accidental, and therefore within the terms of the policy.

Judge Newman used this language: "How could there be a case that comes more clearly within the language of this exception, in the sense in which it must have been used? It need not necessarily, it seems to me, be malpractice or carelessness on the part of the physician or surgeon; but certainly, to come within this exception, the medical or surgical treatment must be the proximate cause of death. If this is not true of this case, it seems difficult to imagine a case to which the exception would apply. So that, considering the right to recover of the company under the general terms of the policy, or under either of the exceptions just referred to, I am clear that there is no liability." The death of Hudgins in this case was caused by swallowing unsound oysters, and, whether it was "accidental or otherwise," it is strictly within the exception contained in the policy.

Many cases have been cited to show that inhaling of gas from which death followed must be voluntary, to bring it within the terms of this exception; but, granting the full force of those authorities, they do not support the claim of defendant in error, because there is no doubt from the evidence that the oysters were voluntarily taken into the stomach of Hudgins.

Miller v. Fidelity & C. Co. 97 Fed. 836, is more nearly analogous to the case now before us in its facts than any other that has been cited by appellees; but we do not regard it as sound in its doctrine as applied to the facts before that court, and it certainly does not bear upon the question now before us. The main question discussed by the court in that case was whether the injury resulted from external, violent, and accidental means, but neither of the questions are 64 L. R. A.

involved in the decision of this case. The case of Healey v. Mutual Acci. Assn. 133 Ill. 556, 9 L. R. A. 371, 23 Am. St. Rep. 637, 25 N. E. 52, is somewhat similar in its facts to this, but the question discussed and decided in that case was the same as in the preceding case.

It is claimed that, while the eating of the oysters was not accidental, the eating of spoiled oysters was accidental because Hudgins did not intend to eat unsound oysters,—the accident consists in the state of the thing swallowed. This is a shadowy distinction, but, admitting it to be sound, it does not take the case out of the exception; for the spoiled oysters was a thing, it was "taken," from which the injury resulted, which brings the case under the exception, and takes it out of the obligation of the contract.

We are of opinion that the undisputed evidence in this case shows that the death of William T. Hudgins was caused by means embraced within the exception from liability contained in the contract of insurance, and that no cause of action was or can be shown against the plaintiff in error upon that contract. The district court erred in not instructing the jury to find a verdict for the defendant below, and the court of civil appeals erred in affirming that judgment.

It is therefore ordered that the judgments of the District Court and of the Court of Civil Appeals be reversed, and judgment be here entered; that Sallie N. Hudgins take nothing by her suit; that the Maryland Casualty Company go hence without day, and recover of Sallie N. Hudgins all costs in all of the courts.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT.

Martin SNIDER, Trustee, etc., for Standard Oil Company of Cleveland, Ohio, Appt.,
v.

J. C. YATES et al.

(.....Tenn.....)

A chattel mortgage duly recorded in one state will not, under the doctrine of comity, be given priority by the courts of another state, to which the chattels are removed, over local attaching creditors who had no actual notice of it.

(February 15, 1904.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a decree of the Court of Chancery Appeals affirming a decree of the Chancery Court for Hickman County in defendants' favor in a suit brought to enjoin interference with certain mortgaged chattels under attachments and executions in favor of creditors of the mortgagor. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. B. Leech, for appellant:

A valid mortgage of chattels situated in another state, which was made and registered in that state, will, in the absence of some settled rule of public policy forbidding it, be enforced by the courts of this state, when the mortgaged property comes within their jurisdiction, to the same extent as a domestic mortgage.

Hughes v. Abston, 105 Tenn. 69, 58 S. W. 296; Bank of Louisville v. Hill, 99 Tenn. 45, 41 S. W. 349.

The rights of such a mortgagee will be protected against purchasers, as well as attaching and execution creditors.

Langworthy v. Little, 12 Cush. 109; Barber v. Stacy, 25 Miss. 471; Ames Iron

NOTE—Conflict of laws as to chattel mortgages.

- I. As a contract inter partes, 353.
- II. As a lien or right prior to claims of third persons.
 - a. Effect of removal of property to another jurisdiction after execution of mortgage.
 1. Necessity of change of possession, 355.
 2. Necessity of refile or rerecording in state to which property removed, 356.
 - b. When property located in another state at time of execution of mortgage.
 1. Necessity of filing, or recording, or change of possession in state where located, 361.
 2. Oath as to consideration, 363.
 - c. Necessity of complying with law of domicile, and of place where mortgage executed, 363.
 - d. Judgment in attachment as res judicata against mortgagee, 366.
- III. As between lex loci contractus and lex domicilii, 366.
 - I. As a contract inter partes.

Chief Justice Marshall, in Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cranch, 289, 3 L. ed. 104, distinguishes between the validity of a contract creating a lien and the priority of the lien over the rights of third persons, as follows: "The law of the place where a contract is made is, generally speaking, the law of the contract; i. e., it is the law by which the contract is expounded. But the right of priority forms no part of the contract. It is extrinsic, and is rather a personal privilege, dependent on the law of the place where the property lies, and where the court sits which is to decide the cause."

The principle embodied in the first part of the foregoing proposition (with which alone this subdivision is concerned) has been expressly applied to chattel mortgages viewed as contracts inter partes. Thus:

64 L. R. A.

The validity of a chattel mortgage inter partes is to be determined by the law of the state where it was executed, and where the parties were, at the time, domiciled, notwithstanding the subsequent removal of the property to another state. Ramsey v. Glenn, 33 Kan. 271, 6 Pac. 265.

Not only does the lex loci contractus govern as to the substantive rights of the immediate parties, but also as to the rights of third persons so far as they depend upon the validity, construction, or effect of the instrument itself; that is, so far as their rights depend upon, and are measured by, the rights of the immediate parties. Thus:

A chattel mortgage, valid in Iowa where it was executed, where the mortgagor resided at the time of its execution, and where the mortgaged property was then situated, will be regarded as valid also in Missouri, to which the property is subsequently removed by the mortgagor, though contested by a third person. Brown v. Koenig, 99 Mo. App. 653, 74 S. W. 407. The party contesting the mortgage in this case did not have any right or claim superior to that of the mortgagor.

So, a description of property in a chattel mortgage, sufficient under the laws of the state where it was made and registered and where the property was then situated, will be held sufficient in Tennessee, even as against a commission merchant in that state who is sued for the conversion of the property, although it might be inadequate in a domestic mortgage. Hughes v. Abston, 105 Tenn. 70, 58 S. W. 296.

Whether the equitable interest of a mortgagor in a chattel mortgage may itself be made the subject of a second mortgage after default has been made under the first mortgage and the mortgagee has taken possession thereunder, is to be determined by the law of the state where the mortgagor was domiciled, the mortgages were executed, and the property was then situated, notwithstanding that the mortgagee in the first mortgage is a resident of another state, and is garnished in the latter state by a creditor seeking to reach the surplus above the Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512, 40 Am. Rep. 258; Feurt v. Rowell, 62 Mo. 524; Craig v. Williams, 90 Va. 500, 44 Am. St. Rep. 934, 18 S. E. 899; Mumford v. Canty, 50 Ill. 370, 99 Am. Dec. 525; Hall v. Pillow, 31 Ark. 32; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa, 322; Cobb v. Buswell, 37 Vt. 337; Kanaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134, 70 Am. Dec. 62, notes; Lally v. Holland, 1 Swan, 401.

The lien of a mortgage on chattels duly recorded, as required by the law of the state where they are located, follows the property when it is taken into another state, either with or without the consent of the mortgagee, and is not destroyed by a local statute merely prescribing how such mortgages shall be executed and recorded.

Shapard v. Hynes, 52 L. R. A. 675, 45

C. C. A. 271, 104 Fed. 449; Hornthall v. Burwell, 109 N. C. 10, 13 L. R. A. 740, 26 Am. St. Rep. 556, 13 S. E. 721; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa, 322; Handley v. Harris, 48 Kan. 606, 17 L. R. A. 703, 30 Am. St. Rep. 322, 29 Pac. 1145; National Bank of Commerce v. Morris, 114 Mo. 255, 19 L. R. A. 463, 35 Am. St. Rep. 754, 21 S. W. 511; Kanaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134, 70 Am. Dec. 62; Langworthy v. Little, 12 Cush. 169; Whitney v. Heywood, 6 Cush. 82; Ames Iron Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512, 40 Am. Rep. 258; Feurt v. Rowell, 62 Mo. 524; Cool v. Roche, 20 Neb. 550, 31 N. W. 367; Keenan v. Stimson, 32 Minn. 377, 20 N. W. 364; Offutt v. Flag, 10 N. H. 46; Lathe v. Schoff, 60 N. H. 34; Barrows v. Turner, 50 Me. 127; Hall v. Pillow, 31 Ark.

amount of the first mortgage. Beckham v. Tootle, 19 Mo. App. 506.

The respective rights of a chattel mortgagee, and of a purchaser from the mortgagor, under a chattel mortgage executed in Texas, are to be determined by the Texas statute, which provides that a sale of the property under execution against the mortgagor carries the right of possession with the equity of redemption. Roach v. St. Louis Type Foundry, 21 Mo. App. 118. The property was in Texas at the time the mortgage was executed and at the time of its purchase under the execution sale, and was subsequently removed to Missouri.

A chattel mortgage, made in Nebraska by parties domiciled there upon property there situated, is subject to the law of that state, and that law will be applied thereto by a court of Iowa. Fisher v. Friedman, 47 Iowa, 443. This was an action in Iowa by the mortgagee for conversion against one who purchased a part of the mortgaged property in Nebraska with knowledge of the mortgage. So far as appears, the property was never in Iowa.

In Aultman & T. Machinery Co. v. Kennedy, 114 Iowa, 444, 86 Am. St. Rep. 373, 87 N. W. 435, while it was held that the law of the state where the property was located at the time the mortgage was executed, rather than the law of the state where the mortgagor was domiciled and the mortgage executed, governed as to the necessity of filing, and that the failure to file in either state did not defeat the mortgage as against an attaching creditor with notice, it not having that effect according to the lex rei sitæ, though it would according to the lex loci contractus et domicili,—it was conceded that, so far as the effect of the mortgage, even as against third persons, depended upon its validity as between the parties, it would be governed by the law of the place where the mortgage was executed as the lex loci contractus.

So, in Whitman v. Conner, 8 Jones & S. 339, while the question as to the necessity of filing the mortgage was referred to the lex rei sitæ, the question as to the validity of the mortgage, even as against third persons, so far as it depended upon usury, was referred to the law of the place where the contract was executed and where the obligation secured was payable. And the same position is taken in the recent case of Trower Bros. Co. v. Hamilton (Mo.) 77 S. W. 1081.

64 L. R. A.

The rule above stated, however, applies only to matters of substantive law; matters of remedy are, of course, governed by the law of the forum. Thus:

The liability to the mortgagor of a mortgagee who takes possession of and sells, or otherwise disposes of, the property after its removal to Kansas, is governed by the law of Kansas, rather than by the law of the state where the mortgage was executed, and in which the property was situated at the time of its execution. Denny v. Faulkner, 22 Kan. 89. This is on the ground that the matter pertains to the remedy.

In referring the question as to the validity of the contract creating the lien, as distinguished from the question of priority, to the law of the place where the contract is made, Chief Justice Marshall probably intended to eliminate only the lex rei sitæ as such, and not to exclude the law of the place of performance of the contract with respect to those elements of the contract which are within the control of the parties, and which, the circumstances indicate, the parties intended to refer to that law. In other words, he probably only intended to refer that question to the general principles governing personal contracts, which sometimes, and in certain respects, apply the lex loci contractus, and sometimes, and in other respects, apply the lex loci solutionis. Assuming that the mortgage is executed in the state in which the property is then situated, that state would ordinarily, and in the absence of an express designation of another place of performance, be both the locus contractus and locus solutionis of the contract, although the property was subsequently removed to another state. The fact that the property was in another state at the time the mortgage was executed will probably not, as a rule, be regarded as sufficient to locate the locus solutionis in that state, though it is apparent that it might, under some circumstances, have that effect; in which event, the construction and essential, as distinguished from the formal, validity of the contract would, under the principles applicable to personal contracts generally, be referred to the law of that state,—not as the lex rei sitæ, but as the lex loci solutionis. Again, even regarding the instrument in its aspect as an executed contract, the question of its effect, even as between the parties, may be referred to the law of the state where the property is situated, upon the ground that it is to operate there. Thus:

32; Mumford v. Canty, 50 Ill. 370, 99 Am. Dec. 525; Ballard v. Winter, 39 Conn. 179; Jones, Chat. Mortg. 4th ed. § 260.

The general rule is, that a chattel mortgage which is valid under the laws of the state where it is executed, both as between the immediate parties thereto and as against third persons, will be so held by the court of a sister state to which the property may be removed.

3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 190; Offutt v. Flagg, 10 N. H. 46; Ferguson v. Clifford, 37 N. H. 86; Bigelow v. Hartford Bridge Co. 14 Conn. 583, 36 Am. Dec. 502; Langworthy v. Little, 12 Cush. 109; Rhode Island Central Bank v. Danforth, 14 Gray, 123; Tyler v. Strang, 21 Barb. 198; Nichols v. Mase, 25 Hun, 640; Whitman v. Con- ner, 8 Jones & S. 339; Martin v. Hill, 12 Barb. 631; Edgerly v. Bush, 81 N. Y. 199; Wilson v. Carson, 12 Md. 54; Ryan v. Clanton, 3 Strobb. L. 411; Barker v. Stacy, 25 Miss. 471; Beall v. Williamson, 14 Ala. 55; Hall v. Pillow, 31 Ark. 32; Kanaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134, 70 Am. Dec. 62; Blystone v. Burgett, 10 Ind. 28, 68 Am. Dec. 658; Ames Iron Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512, 40 Am. Rep. 258; Arnold v. Potter, 22 Iowa, 194; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa, 332; Sims v. McKee, 25 Iowa, 341; Feurt v. Rowell, 62 Mo. 524.

Messrs. J. A. Bates and John A. Pitts, for appellees:

The laws of Illinois as to registration and the authentication of instruments for regis-

Where an instrument was executed in Louisiana in the common-law form of a mortgage; to wit, a sale with an equity of redemption upon paying a certain debt; and was intended to operate on slaves in Arkansas,—it was valid only as a mortgage, and could not be regarded in Louisiana as an instrument translatif of property. Frelson v. Tiner, 6 La. Ann. 18.

II. As a lien or right prior to claims of third persons.

a. Effect of removal of property to another jurisdiction after execution of mortgage.

1. Necessity of change of possession.

See I., supra, as to distinction between validity of contract creating a lien and the priority of the lien.

Most of the states have statutes which substitute filing or recording the mortgage in lieu of a change of possession thereunder, as a condition of its validity against third persons. In some of the states, however, there are, or at least at the time of the decisions were, no such statutes, and an actual change of possession was, therefore, necessary according to the laws of those states. The question then arises, whether a third person dealing with the property in possession of the mortgagor after its removal to such state will be affected by the filing or recording in the state from which the property was removed. As this question presents a somewhat different aspect than that which is presented when the statutes of both states provide for filing or recording, it is discussed separately in this subdivision, the other question being left for the next subdivision.

The rule of law in Connecticut, which requires a change of possession to accompany a mortgage of personal property in order to protect the mortgagee against creditors of the mortgagor, is not a mere rule of evidence, but of positive law, and does not, as such, apply to property which was mortgaged while in Massachusetts, by a resident of that state to another resident thereof, and was subsequently, without the knowledge or consent of the mortgagee, taken into Connecticut, and there seized under attachment against the mortgagor. Ballard v. Winter, 39 Conn. 179.

The same rule was adopted in Vermont, whose local law required a change of possession in 64 L. R. A.

order to protect the mortgagee against purchasers from, and creditors of, the mortgagor. Thus:

A chattel mortgage duly executed and recorded in another state, between residents of that state, upon property then in that state, will protect the property from attachment by the creditors of the mortgagor, residents of Vermont, after its removal to Vermont, notwithstanding the local rule of policy established in Vermont requiring a complete change of possession in order to exempt the property from attachment. Jones v. Taylor, 30 Vt. 42, Overruling Skiff v. Solace, 23 Vt. 279.

Notwithstanding that the mortgagee knew of, and consented to, such removal. Cobb v. Buswell, 37 Vt. 337.

The doctrine of the foregoing cases was applied in Norris v. Sowles, 57 Vt. 360, as against a subsequent mortgagee in Vermont.

The title acquired by the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage in Massachusetts is not lost by the fact that the mortgagor subsequently wrongfully brought the property into Vermont, and sold the same to a bona fide purchaser who had no notice of the mortgage. Taylor v. Boardman, 25 Vt. 581.

In Woodward v. Gates, 9 Vt. 358 (where it was held that a chattel mortgage, which was executed in New Hampshire upon property then in that state, and was placed upon the record in that state, was not valid as against a creditor of the mortgagor who attached the property after its removal to Vermont), the decision was put upon the ground that, the mortgagor not being a resident of New Hampshire, the record in that state was unavailing, even according to its law. The judge writing the opinion intimated that, even if the mortgagor had been a resident of New Hampshire, the record in that state would not have been availing in Vermont; but this intimation is contrary to the subsequent decisions in Vermont above referred to.

So, Martin v. Hill, 12 Barb. 631, upheld the validity of a chattel mortgage executed and duly recorded in New York, upon property then in that state, between residents of that state, in an action by the mortgagee against an officer who seized it under execution while in Vermont in possession of the mortgagor, notwithstanding that, by the law of Vermont, a mortgage of personal property, unaccompanied by possession, is fraudulent and void as against creditors.

The law of Canada, by which a chattel mort-tration cannot have force in Tennessee in displacing our own laws on that subject.

In the application of the doctrine of comity a distinction is to be kept in mind, which is sometimes overlooked by the judges, between the rights, obligations, or duties of the parties to a foreign contract, as between themselves, and the question of priorities growing out of such contract and the effect of it upon third persons, who were never subject to the foreign state or country, and cannot be presumed to have any notice or knowledge of its laws.

Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cranch, 299, 3 L. ed. 107; Le Prince v. Guillemot, 1 Rich. Eq. 213; Underwriters' Wrecking Co. v. The Katie, 3 Woods, 186, Fed. Cas. No. 14,342; Donald v. Hewitt, 33 Ala. 545, 73 Am. Dec.

431; Oswell v. Skipper, 6 Fla. 583; Lee v. His Creditors, 2 La. Ann. 604; Corbett v. Littlefield, 84 Mich. 35, 11 L. R. A. 95, 22 Am. St. Rep. 684, 47 N. W. 581; Saunders v. Williams, 5 N. H. 215; Hall v. Harris, 11 Tex. 310.

An application of this distinction to this case is decisive of it.

The doctrine of comity rests primarily, if not entirely, upon the assumption that parties to a foreign contract have voluntarily subjected themselves and their rights to the sovereignty and jurisdiction of the state or country where the contract was made; and, because they have done so, and thereby incurred obligations lawful and enforceable there, the courts of the state of the forum will, when such parties are implead-gaged cannot reclaim the property from a bona fide purchaser from the mortgagor without refunding the purchase price, will not be applied in an action for conversion in New York by a chattel mortgagee against a subsequent purchaser, where the mortgage was executed in New York, where both parties were domiciled, and where the property was then situated, although the property was subsequently taken to Canada, and there purchased by the defendant in good faith. Edgerly v. Bush, 81 N. Y. 199.

A deed of trust covering railroad cars, even if they are to be regarded as personal property, being presumably valid by the law of Michigan where executed, will be enforced in Illinois where the cars are subsequently found, as against an attaching creditor in that state, without a change of possession. Michigan C. R. Co. v. Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. 1 Ill. App. 399.

And upon the same ground, it was held in Mumford v. Canty, 50 Ill. 370, 99 Am. Dec. 525, that the law of Missouri, under which the possession of the property by the mortgagor after the maturity of the debt is not, per se, fraudulent as to creditors of the mortgagor, but may be shown to be bona fide, governed a chattel mortgage made in that state by a resident thereof, upon property at the time in that state, but subsequently taken by the mortgagor to Illinois and seized there under an attachment by a bona fide creditor after the maturity of the debt; notwithstanding that, by the law of Illinois, the retention of possession after maturity would render the mortgage void as against creditors.

A rule, prevailing in the state where a chattel mortgage is executed, and where the property was then situated, by which such a mortgage, without delivery of possession to the mortgagee, is conclusively, and as a matter of law, fraudulent, will be applied in favor of a creditor of the mortgagor who subsequently attaches the property after it is brought into another state, by the law of which such a mortgage is but prima facie fraudulent, and may be proved to be honest and fair. Henderson v. Thayer, 5 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 115. The decision is upon the ground that such rule is a rule of substantive law, and not a rule of remedy merely.

It was held in Runyon v. Groshon, 12 N. J. Eq. 86, at a time when, by the law of New Jersey, the retention of possession by the mortgagor was merely prima facie evidence of fraud, 64 L. R. A.

that a chattel mortgage, executed in that state between parties there domiciled, upon property at the time in New York, prevailed over the title of one who, in good faith, purchased the property in New York from the mortgagor, notwithstanding that the mortgage had not been filed in the latter state as required by the laws of that state. This was an action by the mortgagee against the vendee to foreclose the mortgage. The decision rests upon the ground that the courts of New Jersey would apply their own law to the situation. It was conceded that, if the property had remained in New York, and the suit had been brought in that state, the law of New York would have been applied.

In Pennsylvania, however, where the law requires a change of possession in order to protect the mortgagee against bona fide purchasers without notice, and does not provide for filing or recording chattel mortgages in lieu of a change of possession, it is held that the filing or recording of the mortgage in another state, where it was executed and where the mortgagor was domiciled, pursuant to the laws of that state, does not protect the mortgagee against a bona fide purchaser of the property from the mortgagor after it was brought into Pennsylvania. MacCabe v. Blymyre, 9 Phila. 615; Armitage v. Spahn, 4 Pa. Dist. R. 270; State Bank v. Carr, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 246.

2. Necessity of refileing or rerecording in state to which property removed.

Assuming that the mortgaged chattels remain in the possession of the mortgagor, but that the mortgage has been duly filed or recorded in the manner required by the law of the mortgagor's domicile, where the mortgage was executed and the property then situated, the question arises whether that filing or recording will protect the mortgagee after the removal of the property to another state, without a refileing or rerecording under the law of the latter state. It is to be observed, in the first place, that this is a matter entirely within the power of the legislature of the state to which the property is removed. When, as in Armitage-Herschell Co. v. Muscogee Real Estate Co. (Ga.) 46 S. E. 634, it appears that a law has been enacted expressly requiring the filing or recording of such mortgages upon property subsequently brought into the state, that law is, of course, conclusive, and there is no occasion or op-ed before them, out of courtesy to such foreign state, expound and enforce the contract according to the laws of the country where it was made.

1 Beach, Modern Law of Contracts, § 584; 2 Parsons, Contr. pp. 568 et seq.; Bank of Louisville v. Hill, 99 Tenn. 42, 41 S. W. 349; Hughes v. Abston, 105 Tenn. 70, 58 S. W. 296; Lally v. Holland, 1 Swan, 401.

Wilkes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case presents a contest between a mortgagee and attaching creditors of one Meixsell with respect to certain mules and sawmill machinery. The attaching creditors established their right to priority before portunity for invoking general principles upon the subject. Such an occasion or opportunity, however, is presented when the statute of the state to which the property is removed provides generally for the filing or recording of chattel mortgages, but does not specifically or in terms refer to mortgages executed by nonresidents out of the state upon property subsequently brought into the state. In such cases, according to the great weight of authority, though there is some conflict, refiling or rerecording is not necessary in order to protect the mortgagee against bona fide purchasers or encumbrancers of the property after its removal and while in possession of the mortgagor,—at least when the mortgagee did not know of, or consent to, the removal of the property. Shapard v. Hynes, 52 L. R. A. 675, 45 C. C. A. 271, 104 Fed. 449, which stated the rule, expressly said that it applies whether the removal was with or without the mortgagee's consent; and the following cases, which also support the rule, do not qualify it by any condition as to the mortgagee's consent: Gosline v. Dunbar, 32 N. B. 325; Hall v. Pillow, 31 Ark. 32; Blystone v. Burgett, 10 Ind. 28, 68 Am. Dec. 658; Ames Iron Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512, 40 Am. Rep. 258; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa, 322; Simms v. McKee, 25 Iowa, 341; Aultman & T. Machinery Co. v. Kennedy, 114 Iowa, 444, 86 Am. St. Rep. 373, 87 N. W. 435; Ord Nat. Bank v. Massey, 48 Kan. 762, 17 L. R. A. 127, 30 Pac. 124; Langworthy v. Little, 12 Cush. 109; Keenan v. Stimson, 32 Minn. 377, 20 N. W. 864; Hundley v. Mount, 8 Smedes & M. 387; Barker v. Stacy, 25 Miss. 471; Davis v. Williams, 73 Miss. 708, 19 So. 352; Lafayette County Bank v. Metcalf, 29 Mo. App. 384; Smith v. Hutchings, 30 Mo. 380; Feurt v. Rowell, 62 Mo. 524; Ofutt v. Flagg, 10 N. H. 46; Ferguson v. Clifford, 37 N. H. 87; Cushman v. Luther, 58 N. H. 562; Parr v. Brady, 87 N. J. L. 201; Nichols v. Mase, 94 N. Y. 160; Hornthall v. Burwell, 109 N. C. 10, 13 L. R. A. 740, 26 Am. St. Rep. 556, 13 S. E. 721; Wilson v. Rustad, 7 N. D. 330, 66 Am. St. Rep. 649, 75 N. W. 260; Greenville Nat. Bank v. Evans-Snyder-Buel Co. 9 Okla. 353, 60 Pac. 249; Bank of Louisville v. Hill, 99 Tenn. 42, 41 S. W. 349; Hughes v. Abston, 105 Tenn. 70, 58 S. W. 296; Craig v. Williams, 90 Va. 500, 44 Am. St. Rep. 934, 18 S. E. 899.

Bank of Louisville v. Hill, 99 Tenn. 42, 41 S. W. 349, and Hughes v. Abston, 105 Tenn. 70, 58 S. W. 296, also seem to support the foregoing the chancellor, and his decree has been affirmed by the court of chancery appeals.

The facts found by the court of chancery appeals, so far as necessary to be stated, are that Meixsell executed a chattel mortgage to Snider upon the mules and machinery in question. It was acknowledged before Stricklin, a justice of the peace of Saline county, Illinois, and was recorded by John B. Lee in volume 5 of Chattel Mortgages of said county. John B. Lee, in his certificate, recites that he is clerk of the circuit court and ex officio recorder for said county and state, and that the mortgage was duly recorded. It was afterwards recorded without any further probate or certificate in the register's office of Hickman county, Tennessee, to which place the mortgagor doctrine, but the effect of these decisions is limited, by the opinion in SNIDER v. YATES, to cases not involving the rights of subsequent purchasers or attaching creditors in good faith without notice of the mortgage.

The rule established by the foregoing cases has been applied to a different class of cases, involving, however, the same principles.

Thus, an antenuptial contract, recorded in the state where it was made, and where the property was then situated, is sufficient to protect the rights of the parties as against third persons upon the removal of the property to another state. DeLane v. Moore, 14 How. 253, 14 L. ed. 409.

And a similar decision was made in Bank of United States v. Lee, 13 Pet. 107, 10 L. ed. 81, with reference to a deed of trust of personal property made by a husband for the benefit of his wife.

So, personal property removed from Mississippi to Louisiana, and there transferred by a husband to his wife by bill of sale, is not subject to the debts of the husband upon their removal to Mississippi, although the bill of sale is not recorded in the latter state, and although the parties to the bill were at all times domiciled in Mississippi. Davis v. Williams, 73 Miss. 708, 19 So. 352.

The right of a wife under a deed of trust executed in Tennessee conveying a slave to the husband for her use is not defeated, as against the creditors of the husband, by the omission to record the deed in Texas after the removal of the domicile and the slave to that state. Parks v. Willard, 1 Tex. 350, 46 Am. Dec. 100.

The provision of the Alabama statute, requiring a transfer of a remainder interest in personal property after the expiration of a life estate to be recorded in order to protect the remainderman against the creditors of, or purchasers from, the life tenant who remains in possession, does not apply to a transfer made in another state where the property was then situated, although the property is subsequently removed to Alabama. Catterlin v. Hardy, 10 Ala. 511; Adams v. Broughton, 13 Ala. 731, 748; Lyde v. Taylor, 17 Ala. 270; Turner v. Fenner, 19 Ala. 355.

See also note to Succession of Welsh, post, —, where the same principle is applied to contracts of sale with reservation of title.

The rule was applied in Langworthy v. Little, 12 Cush. 109, and Craig v. Williams, 90 brought the property after the mortgage had been registered in Illinois, and where he engaged in the stave manufacturing business. The mules and machinery were levied upon by attachments and executions at the instance of local creditors of Meixsell after the registration of the instrument in Hickman county. An original bill was then filed enjoining further proceedings by the creditors, and it was amended so as to make it a replevin suit under which plaintiff retained possession of the property, giving bond. It was afterward sold and it is agreed that the proceeds are sufficient to satisfy the claims of the creditors if they are entitled to recover as against the trustee.

The sole question presented to this court is whether the complainant's rights under these mortgages are superior to those of the attaching or levying creditors. All other questions are eliminated.

The rights of complainant depend entirely upon the validity and effect of the mortgage executed in Illinois and its registration in that state. Without passing upon the sufficiency of the pleadings in this case, we are of opinion that complainant is not entitled to priority over the attaching creditors. The subject of the probate of instruments and their registration, and the effect of such registration as to third persons, is governed purely by local statutes, and is a matter entirely unknown to the common law. The statute laws of a state have of themselves no extraterritorial force, Va. 500, 44 Am. St. Rep. 934, 18 S. E. 899, though the mortgagor was, at the time of the execution of the mortgage, domiciled in the state to which the property was subsequently removed, which was also the forum.

It will be observed that the cases next cited support the rule, with the qualification that the mortgagee did not consent to the removal.

A chattel mortgage executed in New York upon personal property in that state, which is afterwards removed to Illinois without the consent of the mortgagee, is valid in the latter state so long as it remains valid in New York, and, as such, is enforceable against judgment creditors of the mortgagor who levied upon it; and the result is not changed by the fact that the mortgagee consented to the removal of the property to Wisconsin. Armitage-Herschell Co. v. Potter, 93 Ill. App. 602.

Where a chattel mortgage is given upon property which, at the time, was in the state of the mortgagor's domicile, and the mortgage was duly recorded according to the law of that state, the subsequent removal of the property to Ohio without the consent of the mortgagee, and before default, does not require the mortgage to be recorded in Ohio in order to protect the mortgagee as against a subsequent purchaser in good faith from the mortgagor. Kanaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134, 70 Am. Dec. 62. The facts that there was no lack of diligence on the part of the plaintiff, and that the sale by the mortgagor was made on the day the mortgage debt became due, are alluded to, but do not necessarily limit the decision.

In Anderson v. Doak, 32 N. C. (10 Ired. L.) 295, it was held that a deed of trust of a slave, executed in Virginia by a resident of that state while the slave was there, being proved and registered according to the law of that state, and otherwise valid by that law, the slave, who subsequently ran away and came to North Carolina, was not subject to attachment in that state for a debt of the grantor in the trust deed.

A chattel mortgage, duly recorded in the state where made, and where the property was then situated, so as to constitute notice according to the laws of that state, is, by comity, good in another state to which the property is taken, in violation of the agreement, and sold, even as against an innocent purchaser for value, unless this rule is against the policy of the laws of the latter state. National Bank of Commerce v. Morris, 114 Mo. 255, 19 L. R. A. 463, 35 Am. St. 64 L. R. A.

Rep. 754, 21 S. W. 511. The mortgage was executed in Kansas, and the property subsequently removed to Illinois and there sold. The court cited Mumford v. Canty, 50 Ill. 370, 99 Am. Dec. 525, to show that such rule was not contrary to the policy of Illinois.

Where personal property has been mortgaged and left in possession of the mortgagor, and the mortgage is duly recorded, a subsequent removal of the mortgagor, with the property, to another state does not make a new record of the mortgage necessary in the latter state in order to protect the mortgagee as against a subsequent purchaser from the mortgagor without actual notice of the mortgage. Handley v. Harris, 48 Kan. 606, 17 L. R. A. 703, 30 Am. St. Rep. 322, 29 Pac. 1145. It appeared in this case that the mortgagee knew of the removal of the property to Kansas, and permitted it to remain there for several months without claiming the same; and it was urged that his conduct in that respect constituted such laches as prevented him from recovering the property from an innocent purchaser for value, but this contention was rejected.

The lien of a chattel mortgage, duly registered in the state where the mortgage was executed and the property was then situated, will prevail against a subsequent purchaser without notice after the removal of the property to Texas, although the first mortgage was not registered in the latter state, where the removal was without the consent of the mortgagee, and sufficient time had not elapsed between the removal and the sale to enable him to give notice by registration in the latter state. Blythe v. Crump Bros. 28 Tex. Civ. App. 327, 66 S. W. 885.

In Greene v. Bentley, 52 C. C. A. 60, 114 Fed. 112, a chattel mortgage was executed in Texas upon property then in that state, the law of which requires the mortgagee to record the mortgage in any county into which the property may be removed. The property was taken by the mortgagor into Louisiana (where chattel mortgages are unknown), and was kept there for a number of years, and, finally, long after the mortgage had become due, sold to a bona fide purchaser under attachment against the mortgagor; subsequently, the mortgagor, still having possession of the property, but as the representative of the purchaser, surreptitiously brought it back into Texas, and turned it over to the mortgagee in discharge of the mortgage debt. It and whatever effect they have in foreign states they have by virtue of the laws of such state, or under the doctrine of the comity of states.

The court of chancery appeals rightly held that the statutes of Tennessee do not provide for the registration in this state of the mortgage in question, and that its registration could not operate as notice to the creditors of the mortgagor.

This leaves the complainant to stand alone upon the doctrine of comity. This is the doctrine under which contracts made, rights acquired, and obligations incurred in one country, and in accordance with its laws, are recognized and enforced by the courts of another country.

In Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cranch, 299, 3 L.

was held, in an action brought in the Federal court sitting in Texas, that the mortgagee had lost his lien as against the subsequent purchaser, notwithstanding that he could not have made a valid record of the lien in Louisiana, by his failure to exercise due diligence otherwise to give notice of his lien. It appeared in this case that the purchaser acquired his title through attachment proceedings instituted against the mortgagor in Louisiana; and the court intimated that, if it were necessary to go to that extent, it would hold, upon the authority of Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109, irrespective of the negligence of the mortgagee, that the lien of the mortgage was extinguished by the attachment proceedings, as that would be the effect of such proceedings according to the law of Louisiana, which does not recognize chattel mortgages, even when executed out of the state upon property brought into the state.

Assuming that the local statute with reference to filing or recording chattel mortgages makes no distinction between subsequent bona fide purchasers and creditors without notice, there is no ground for making any distinction between them in applying the rule dispensing with the necessity of refiling or rerecording in the state to which the property is removed, in the absence of a statute of the latter, expressly requiring the same. The local statute may, however, distinguish between such parties, and in that case the distinction may modify the effect of the rule.

Thus, it was held in Beall v. Williamson, 14 Ala. 55, that the registration, in Alabama, of a chattel mortgage, executed and recorded in another state where the property was then situated, was not necessary in order to protect the mortgagee against a subsequent bona fide purchaser from the mortgagor after the removal of the property to Alabama, since the Alabama act, requiring a mortgage on property that may be removed into the state from another state to be recorded within twelve months, makes the property, if the encumbrance is not recorded, liable to the debts of the person in possession, but is silent as to purchasers.

So, in Mississippi, where the local statute provides that mortgages and deeds of trust take effect and are valid as to all persons from the date of their delivery to the registrar of deeds, it was held, in Wyse v. Dandridge, 35 Miss. 672, 72 Am. Dec. 149, that the failure to register in that state a deed of trust executed in another

ed. 107, it is said by the court, speaking through Chief Justice Marshall: "The law of the place where a contract is made is, generally speaking, the law of the contract; i. e., it is the law by which the contract is expounded. But the right of priority forms no part of the contract itself. It is extrinsic, and is rather a personal privilege, dependent on the law of the place where the property lies, and where the court sits which is to decide the cause.

That was a case of bankruptcy involving property belonging to a firm residing in England, upon which the United States, as a creditor, claimed priority under the rule of comity as against British creditors claiming under a trust assignment in the nature of a mortgage made in England upon state, upon slaves subsequently brought into Mississippi, would not defeat the rights of the cestuis que trust as against creditors of the trustee, but would as against a subsequent bona fide purchaser from the latter. The court said that Palmer v. Cross, 1 Smedes & M. 48 (involving a deed executed in another state settling personal property on a married woman, which was seized by the husband's creditors after being brought into Mississippi); Prewett v. Dobbs, 13 Smedes & M. 431 (involving a chattel mortgage executed in another state upon property subsequently brought into Mississippi, and seized under process against the mortgagor); and Presley v. Rodgers, 24 Miss. 520 (involving a deed of trust executed in another state upon a slave subsequently brought into Mississippi, and seized under process against the owner of the equitable estate),—were only authority as against creditors, and not as against bona fide purchasers. While the cases referred to involved merely the rights of creditors, and not of bona fide purchasers, they do not refer to any distinction between the two classes; and the last case expressly said that the failure to record the deed of trust in Mississippi after the removal of the property thereto did not impair its validity, "even as against bona fide purchasers and creditors without notice of its existence." In Barker v. Stacy, 25 Miss. 471, also, where it was held that the failure to register a chattel mortgage executed in another state upon property subsequently brought into Mississippi did not defeat it as against the mortgagor's creditors, the court seems to have assumed that there was no distinction in this respect between bona fide purchasers and creditors. Perhaps the court in Wyse v. Dandridge, 35 Miss. 672, 72 Am. Dec. 149, merely meant to assert the distinction with reference to cases which, like the instant case, involved the rights of one who purchased in good faith from a trustee having the legal title, as well as possession.

It will be observed that the general principle dispensing with refiling or rerecording in accordance with the local law of the state to which the property is removed, unless such local law expressly covers such a case, is also supported by the following cases, in which the principle had been modified by statute.

A chattel mortgage upon property at the time in Florida, which was executed and recorded as required by the laws of that state, is superior to an attachment levied after the removal of the a cargo of the ship Semiramis, and certain debts owing by parties in South Carolina; and the claim of priority of the United States was sustained.

This distinction has been recognized and enforced in many cases, and is well settled.

In Le Prince v. Guillemot, 1 Rich. Eq. 213, it was held that a marriage settlement constituting a lien in France was valid here, but that such lien gave no priority over American creditors.

In Underwriters' Wrecking Co. v. The Katie, 3 Woods, 186, Fed. Cas. No. 14,342, the mortgage on the vessel in the home port was given priority over previous liens acquired in foreign jurisdiction.

In Donald v. Hewitt, 33 Ala. 545, 73 Am.

Dec. 431, a lien of a local attaching creditor was preferred to a previous mortgage lien in another state.

In Crowell v. Skipper, 6 Fla. 583, it was held that, although a contract is to be construed according to the lex loci contractus, the property rights under it are subject to the regulations of the country into which the property affected may be brought.

In Lee v. His Creditors, 2 La. Ann. 604, a foreign lienholder was held to have acquired no priority in local insolvency proceedings.

In Corbett v. Littlefield, 84 Mich. 35, 11 L. R. A. 95, 22 Am. St. Rep. 684, 47 N. W. 581, a subsequent attaching creditor was given priority over a prior chattel mortgage.

property to Alabama and before it was recorded in the latter state, where it was so recorded within four months from the time of the removal into the state, as required by the Alabama Code with respect to mortgages on property removed to the state. Johnson v. Hughes, 89 Ala. 588, 8 So. 147.

A chattel mortgage duly executed and recorded in Alabama by a resident of that state, upon property then situated in that state, will prevail against an attachment of the property after its removal to Georgia, but before the expiration of the six months in which a foreign mortgage is required to be recorded in the latter state, although, at the time of the attachment, the mortgage had not been recorded in the latter state. Peterson v. Kaigler, 78 Ga. 464, 3 S. E. 655.

So, where a mortgage on personal property was regularly made and recorded in another state, where the property was at the time, and the property was subsequently brought into Georgia and sold to a bona fide purchaser, without notice of the mortgage, before the expiration of the time allowed by the Georgia Code for recording in that state mortgages on property brought into the state, his title will not prevail against the title acquired under a foreclosure of the mortgage which took place before the expiration of the time allowed for recording the mortgage, although the same was not recorded in the state until after foreclosure. Hubbard v. Andrews, 76 Ga. 177.

In Garner v. Wright, 52 Ark. 385, 6 L. R. A. 715, 12 S. W. 785, where a mortgage was executed in the Indian territory between parties there resident, upon property there located, and was subsequently seized in Arkansas under an attachment against the mortgagor, who had borrowed the property from the mortgagee, who had taken possession of it upon the execution of the mortgage and had it in his general custody,—the court assumed that the relative rights of the mortgagee and attaching creditor would be determined by the law of Indian territory if it were proved, but, in the absence of proof of such law, the court administered the law of Arkansas.

The general rule which upholds the mortgage when duly filed as required by the law of the place where it was executed and the property was then situated, as against subsequent purchasers or lienors of the property in good faith, without notice, though not effectively filed or recorded in the latter state, has been denied 64 L. R. A.

by a number of cases, besides SNIDER v. YATES.

Thus, a lien created by a chattel mortgage executed in another state upon property then situated there will not prevail as against rights acquired by a third person without notice, after removal of the property to Louisiana. Miles v. Oden, 8 Mart. N. S. 214, 19 Am. Dec. 177.

A mortgage executed on a slave out of Louisiana has no effect upon the slave when subsequently brought into Louisiana, except from the time it is duly registered in the latter state. Frelson v. Tiner, 6 La. Ann. 18.

A purchaser of personal property in Louisiana is not affected by a mortgage thereon, executed out of the state before the removal of the property to the state, unless the mortgage be recorded in Louisiana. Verdier v. Leprete, 4 La. 41; Zollkoffer v. Briggs, 19 La. 521; Tillman v. Drake, 4 La. Ann. 16.

As a chattel mortgage is unknown to the law of Louisiana, such a mortgage, executed in another state, cannot be enforced in Louisiana after the removal of the property to that state and its attachment for a debt of the mortgagor. Delop v. Windsor, 26 La. Ann. 185. In this case the mortgagees contended that, by the laws of Mississippi, where the mortgage was executed, the legal title vested in them by virtue of the mortgage; but it was held that this position was contrary to their judicial admissions in the petition of intervention, and therefore could not be permitted.

A chattel mortgage executed in Canada by a resident of Canada, and properly put upon record there as required by the Canadian law, does not protect the mortgagee as against an execution creditor of the mortgagor who levies upon the property after its removal to Michigan. Montgomery v. Wight, 8 Mich. 143. The decision is upon the general ground that the laws for recording chattel mortgages have no extra-territorial force, and nothing is said about the mortgagee's knowledge of, or consent to, the removal of the property.

The doctrine of the foregoing cases was applied in Boydson v. Goodrich, 49 Mich. 65, 12 N. W. 913, and Corbett v. Littlefield, 84 Mich. 30, 11 L. R. A. 95, 22 Am. St. Rep. 681, 47 N. W. 581, although it expressly appeared that the property was brought into Michigan without the mortgagee's knowledge or consent.

A chattel mortgage on horses, given in Canada by the owner of a half interest in them, and filed by the mortgagee, who takes possession

In Saunders v. Williams, 5 N. H. 215, a subsequent attachment was given priority over a previous assignment in insolvency.

The same doctrine has been held in a large number of cases, and we think that it is a better doctrine, and not in conflict with any of our adjudications, and not passed on in any of them because not involved, but is in perfect harmony with our statutes and policy on the subject of registration. There are decisions, however, holding a contrary doctrine.

Under our statutes a chattel mortgage is equally good between the parties, whether registered or not. The sole purpose and effect of registration are to effectuate notice of it to third persons. The only constructive notice which can bar a creditor is that which the statute causes to flow from a proper registration or noting, although a purchaser may be barred by actual notice. This is the effect of our statutes in respect to chattel mortgages executed within our state, and foreign statutes and the doctrine of comity cannot give any greater or more enlarged effect.

A chattel mortgage executed in another state will be expounded and enforced by the laws of this state upon proper averments and proof of the laws of the state where made, just as if it had been made here; but a different doctrine applies where it is attempted to go further, and affect third persons, especially the creditors of the mortgagor, with constructive legal notice of the mortgagee's rights.

of and puts the horses in the care of the keeper of a hotel at a race track to hold possession for him, gives such mortgagee a better right to such interest in the horses after they have been taken without his consent from the custodian and shipped to Michigan by the owners of the other half interest in the horses, who did not know of his mortgage, than the latter can assert under another chattel mortgage from the same mortgagor, which they took in Michigan before the horses went to Canada, and recorded after their return. Vining v. Millar, 109 Mich. 206, 32 L. R. A. 442, 67 N. W. 126.

There is no statute in Pennsylvania providing for the filing and recording of chattel mortgages in lieu of a change of possession, though there is a statute of that state permitting a railroad company to mortgage its rolling stock and other personal property, and retain the use and possession of the same without impairing the lien, provided that the mortgage is recorded in every county in which the property is situated. It has been held that such a mortgage, executed in New York by a New York corporation, upon cars then in that state, did not protect the mortgagee against attachment creditors of the mortgagor who seized the cars while in Pennsylvania, the mortgage having been recorded in New York, but not in Pennsylvania. Buffalo Coal Co. v. Rochester & State Line R. Co. 8 W. N. C. 126. See also Pennsylvania cases cited in II. b, supra.

The effect of the registration of a deed of trust upon personal property in the state where the deed was executed, and where the property then was, cannot be extended beyond the territorial limits of that state. Crosby v. Huston, 1 Tex. 203.

In Rosenbaum v. Dawes, 77 Ill. App. 295, the court said that the rule, based on interstate comity, that the constructive notice of a chattel mortgage, resulting from its record in the state of its execution, is also constructive notice to the citizens of other states to which the property may be removed, should not be extended by the courts of the latter state to the detriment of its citizens.

The point, however, was not authoritatively decided, either by the appellate court, or by the supreme court affirming the decision below (179 Ill. 112, 53 N. E. 585); and see Armitage-Herschell Co. v. Potter, 93 Ill. App. 602, supra.

Neither Wolf v. Shannon, 50 Ill. App. 396, which declares that the rights of the mortgagees of chattels mortgaged in another state and brought into Illinois are not determined entirely by the law of the latter state if the laws of the former will not contravene the criminal laws of Illinois, or sanction vice or immorality; nor Farmers' & M. Bank v. Arnold, 58 Ill. App. 349, declaring that the rights of parties claiming under a chattel mortgage are governed by the law of the state in which it was made,—is exactly in point on the question discussed in this subdivision; for, in the former case, the party who was garnished by the mortgagor's creditor was a pledgee of the mortgagee with respect to the mortgaged chattels and their proceeds; and in the latter case the rights of the party claiming adversely to the mortgagee were based upon a transaction in Missouri where the mortgage was executed.

A cotton factor and commission merchant of New Orleans, who has made advances to a planter of Mississippi, and has received and sold for the account of the latter certain cotton in New Orleans, is not answerable to the holder of a trust deed, duly recorded in Mississippi, upon the cotton, where he did not know of the shipment until the goods had been received in New Orleans, nor of the lien until after the goods had been sold. Hernandez v. Aaron, 73 Miss. 434, 16 So. 910.

b. When property located in another state at time of execution of mortgage.

1. Necessity of filing, or recording, or change of possession in state where located.

Notwithstanding the general principle, so frequently stated by the courts, that personal property has no situs of its own, but follows the person of the owner, it is established by the weight of authority that the filing or recording of a chattel mortgage according to the laws of the domicile of the mortgagor, where the mortgage was executed, will not protect the mortgagee against bona fide purchasers or creditors without notice in another state in which the property was located at the time of the execution of the mortgage, unless refiled or rerecorded in the latter state pursuant to its laws, even if such laws are general and do not specifically designate mortgages executed under such circumstances. Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 100; Re Soldiers' Business Messenger & Dispatch Co. 3 Ben. 204, Fed.

When parties to a foreign contract are impleaded in the courts of this state, this court will expound and enforce the contract according to the laws of the country where it was made, if such laws are properly pleaded and proved; but it will not, in a question of priority, set aside its own statutes and rules to the prejudice of its own citizens.

We are satisfied that the Court of Chancery Appeals has reached the correct result, and its decree is affirmed.

A petition for rehearing having been filed, the following response was handed down on February 27, 1904:

Upon petition to rehear it is strongly urged that the holding in this case is opposed to previous adjudications of this court; and we are cited to the cases of Eaves v. Gillespie, 1 Swan, 128; Lally v. Holland, 1 Swan, 401; Bank of Louisville v. Hill, 99 Tenn. 42, 41 S. W. 349; Hughes v. Abston, 105 Tenn. 70, 58 S. W. 296,—as holding the contrary doctrine.

The case of Eaves v. Gillespie, 1 Swan, 128, is not at all in point. It was simply held in that case that a parol gift of a slave in a state that has no statute requiring such gift to be by deed or writing will have the effect to transfer the legal title to the donee. In that case the gift of the slave was made in South Carolina, and delivery was also made there, and title vested by the lex loci before the slave was removed to Tennessee. This being so, the Cas. 13,163; Hardaway v. Semmes, 38 Ala. 657; Ames Iron Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512, 40 Am. Rep. 258; McFadden v. Blocker, 2 Ind. Terr. 260, 58 L. R. A. 878, 48 S. W. 1043; Aultman & T. Machinery Co. v. Kennedy, 114 Iowa, 444, 86 Am. St. Rep. 373, 87 N. W. 435; Arkansas City Bank v. Cassidy, 71 Mo. App. 186; Clark v. Tarbell, 58 N. H. 88; Keller v. Paine, 107 N. Y. 83, 13 N. E. 635; Whitman v. Conner, 8 Jones & S. 339.

Smead v. Chandler (Ark.) 76 S. W. 1066, also held that filing in the state in which the property was situated at the time the mortgage was executed was necessary, although the mortgage was executed and the mortgagor resided in another state. In Arkansas, however, the statute expressly provides that, if the mortgagor be a nonresident of the state, the mortgage shall be recorded in the county in which the property is situated at the time the mortgage is executed.

Ballard v. Great Western Min. & Mfg. Co. 39 W. Va. 394, 19 S. E. 510, also, held that the lien of an attachment levied in West Virginia upon personal property had priority over a claim under a deed of trust which had never been recorded in the county where the property was situated, but which had been recorded in another state. It does not appear where the property was at the time the mortgage was executed.

In some of the foregoing cases the local statute provided that the mortgage should be filed or recorded in the county in which the property was located. It is, of course, perfectly feasible to comply with such a statute, though the mortgagor be a nonresident, and the mortgage be executed out of the state. In some of them, however, the statute provided for filing or recording in the county in which the mortgagor resides. It was, nevertheless, held in those cases that the filing or recording in the other state was not sufficient, and that, since compliance with the local statute as to filing or recording was impossible owing to the nonresidence of the mortgagor, a change of possession was necessary in order to protect the mortgagee against subsequent bona fide purchasers and creditors without notice.

Thus, in McFadden v. Blocker it was held that a chattel mortgage executed and recorded in Texas upon property at the time in Indian territory was not valid as against a subsequent attachment of the property while in possession of the mortgagor in Indian territory, notwithstanding that the statute in force in Indian territory required the mortgages to be recorded at the mortgagor's place of residence, and did not provide for the case where the property was situated within the state, but the mortgagor resided out of the state.

Arkansas City Bank v. Cassidy, 71 Mo. App. 186 held that the Missouri statute, providing that a chattel mortgage shall not be valid as against third persons, unless possession of the property is taken and retained by the mortgagee, or unless the mortgage is recorded in the county in which the mortgagor resides, applies to a chattel mortgage on property situated within the state, executed by a nonresident in another state; and, since it is impossible to comply with the requirement as to recording, it is necessary to take possession of the property in such a case in order to protect the mortgagee as against third persons.

So, Golden v. Cockrill, 1 Kan. 259, 81 Am. Dec. 510, held that the registration in Missouri, pursuant to its laws, of a chattel mortgage executed between residents of that state upon property at the time in Kansas, did not obviate the necessity of a change of possession, as required by the law of Kansas, in order to protect the mortgagee against a subsequent attachment by a creditor of the mortgagor, there being at the time the mortgage was executed no provision in the Kansas statute for registration of mortgages in lieu of a change of possession. The statute subsequently enacted upon the subject, and which was in force at the time of the decision, expressly provided that mortgages of property belonging to nonresidents should be recorded in the county where the property was.

In Smead v. Chandler (Ark.) 76 S. W. 1066, the rule stated at the beginning of the subdivision was applied to a mortgage covering an indebtedness due from a resident of Arkansas, the court holding that the situs of the debt, for the purposes of the statute with reference to the filing of mortgages, was in the state where the debtor resided and did business, and where he might be sued.

In Green v. Van Buskirk and Keller v. Paine, the rule was applied, notwithstanding that the attaching creditor who attacked the mortgage was a resident of the state in which the mortgagor was domiciled and the mortgage was executed; and the other cases above cited do not refer to any distinction based on the residence of the party attacking the mortgage. Rhode Island Central Bank v. Danforth, 14 Gray, 123 fact that gifts of slaves were required in Tennessee to be evidenced by deed or writing could not divest or disturb that title which already vested. But the proof in that case did not show that the gift, being to a married woman, was to her sole and separate use, and the husband was entitled to the slave jure mariti, and, having sold her to an innocent purchaser with no notice of the separate estate, the court refused to execute any implied or secret trust in favor of the wife as against such purchaser. The case in no sense involved the effect of our registration laws.

In the case of Lally v. Holland there was a defective registration of a deed, and the court held that it would not be constructive notice, and, there being no actual notice, however, made such a distinction, holding that a mortgage of personal property then in Massachusetts, made in another state between two citizens of that state, and executed and recorded according to the laws thereof, was valid, without delivery of the property or recording of the mortgage in Massachusetts, as against a subsequent attachment in the latter state by a citizen of the state in which the mortgage was executed. The court intimated that the rule would be different if the attaching creditor were a resident of Massachusetts.

Lally v. Holland, 1 Swan, 309, upon the principle that personal property, subject to very few exceptions, is governed by the law of the owner's domicile, held that a chattel mortgage executed and recorded in Mississippi by a person domiciled in that state, upon property at the time in Tennessee, was valid as against a subsequent bona fide purchaser from the mortgagor in that state, though it had not been recorded in the latter state, and there had been no delivery of possession to the mortgagee. This decision, however, is against the great weight of authority, which, as already shown, holds that the lex rei sitæ prevails over the lex domicilii et loci contractus with respect to filing, or recording, or taking possession.

It should be remarked that Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109, supra, is, strictly speaking, obiter upon the point to which it is above cited. The actual decision in that case was that the courts of New York were bound, under the full faith and credit provision of the Federal Constitution, to hold the lien of a chattel mortgage, executed in New York by a person domiciled in that state upon property at the time in Illinois, inferior to the title acquired by another resident of New York under attachment proceedings instituted by him in Illinois. It appearing that, according to the decisions in the latter state, such title would be superior to the mortgage, the latter never having been filed in Illinois, though it had been in New York. The decision of the supreme court must, therefore, have been the same, even if it had been of the opinion that the position of the Illinois courts, as to the necessity of filing the mortgage in Illinois, was erroneous. The court, however, after discussing the jurisdictional and constitutional questions, said: "We do not propose to discuss the question how far the transfer of personal property lawfully in the owner's domicile will be respected in the courts of the a bona fide innocent purchaser would take the property free from any claim under an instrument with the defective registration. This is really an authority for the view laid down in the original opinion. In Bank of Louisville v. Hill, 99 Tenn. 42 et seq. 41 S. W. 349, cotton was covered by a trust deed made in Arkansas. It was shipped to Memphis, and sold to Hill, Fontaine, & Co. in payment of a pre-existing debt for advancements made upon an agreement to ship the cotton to Hill, Fontaine, & Co. The Arkansas deed of trust was not registered in Tennessee, and Hill, Fontaine, & Co. had no actual notice of it. It was held that a chattel mortgage good in a foreign state would be upheld and enforced in this state when the property was subsequently brought country where the property is located, and a different rule of transfer prevails. It is a vexed question on which learned courts have differed; but, after all, there is no absolute right to have such transfer respected, and it is only on a principle of comity that it is ever allowed. And this principle of comity always yields when the laws and policy of the state where the property is located has prescribed a different rule of transfer from that of the state where the owner lives."

Perhaps the court merely meant to assert the right of the courts of Illinois to extend the statute with reference to filing chattel mortgages to a mortgage executed out of the state by a non-resident of the state upon property at the time within the state, without expressing an independent opinion upon the question whether a statute which is general in its terms should be so applied.

2. Oath as to consideration.

The form of the oath with reference to the purpose for which a chattel mortgage is given, prescribed by the laws of the state where the property is situated, governs, although the mortgage is executed in another state. Sherman v. Estey Organ Co. 69 Vt. 355, 38 Atl. 70.

The provision of the Maryland Code, that no mortgage of personal property shall be valid, except as between parties thereto, unless the affidavit of the mortgagor be indorsed thereon that the consideration is true and bona fide, applies to a mortgage executed between parties in Delaware upon personal property in Maryland; and such mortgage, though recorded in Maryland as required by the Code, is not valid as against a subsequent attaching creditor, unless such an affidavit is indorsed. Pleasanton v. Johnson, 91 Md. 873, 47 Atl. 1025.

c. Necessity of complying with law of domicile, and of place where mortgage executed.

By the converse of the general rule established in 11. a, 1 and 2, supra, dispensing with the necessity of a change of possession or re-filing or rerecording after the removal of the property to another state, it would seem that the law of the state where the mortgagor was domiciled, the mortgage was executed, and the mortgaged property was then situated, with respect to the necessity of a change of possession or of filing or recording, must be complied with into this state, and the rights of such vendee or mortgagee will be protected against purchasers as well as attaching and execution creditors; citing quite a number of cases.

But this protection to purchasers and creditors will be given only when it is not contrary to some settled public policy declared by statute or otherwise, or, as stated on page 46, 99 Tenn., and page 350, 41 S. W.: "A party who obtains a good title to movable property absolute or qualified by the laws of another state, where it is then located, will be entitled 'to maintain and enforce' it . . . in the foreign forum against both creditors and purchasers acquiring rights subsequent to its removal, subject alone to the qualification or limitation that there is no statute or settled public policy contrary thereto." But it was held that Hill, Fontaine, & Co. could not hold the proceeds of the cotton sold by them, first, because they claimed to hold it for an antecedent debt; and, second, because they had sufficient information to put them on inquiry which would have disclosed to them the prior rights of the Arkansas parties. They could not, therefore, be classed as innocent purchasers, and entitled to protection as such.

The case of Hughes v. Abston, 105 Tenn. 70, 58 S. W. 296, simply approves and follows the removal of the property. Richardson v. Shelby, 3 Okla. 68, 41 Pac. 378.

But, in Gookin v. Graham, 5 Humph. 484, it was held that a deed of trust executed in Alabama upon personal property then situated in that state, by a resident of that state, was good without registration in Alabama, as against one who purchased the property from the owner after he had deceitfully, and without the consent of the trustee, removed it to Tennessee. The decision is upon the ground that the Alabama statute with reference to registration was designed to protect creditors and subsequent purchasers in that state, and not in the state of Tennessee. It was also held in this case that, as the property was taken into Tennessee by the deceitful and fraudulent misconduct of the grantor in the deed, without the knowledge or consent of the trustee, or any of the cestui que trust, the want of registration of the deed in that state could not avail the purchaser.

So, a deed of trust of personal property situated at the time in Virginia, executed in that state, by a person domiciled in Tennessee, being valid, both by the law of Virginia and Tennessee as between the parties, without registration, is valid, as against a subsequent purchaser or encumbrancer after the removal of the property to Tennessee, if it was duly registered in Tennessee, notwithstanding that it was never registered in Virginia, as would have been necessary to have upheld its validity as against subsequent creditors if the property had remained in that state. Galt v. Dibrell, 10 Yerg. 153.

And a statute of the state where a transfer of personal property between a husband and wife was made, which renders such a transfer void as to creditors and purchasers unless recorded, has no operation after the removal of the parties and property to Mississippi. Walker v. Marshall, 70 Miss. 283, 12 So. 211.

In Cronan v. Fox, 50 N. J. L. 417, 14 Atl. 119, a resident of Maryland entered into an arrangement in that state with a creditor, which was in effect a chattel mortgage of property then in that state. There was, however, no acknowledgment, or record, or change of possession while the property was in Maryland sufficient to protect the mortgagee, according to the laws of that state, against the mortgagor's creditors. The property was subsequently shipped to Pennsylvania in the name of the mortgagor, and was seized under attachment by one of his creditors after the mortgagee had taken possession thereof. It was held that the mortgage prevailed over the attachment. The court took the broad position that the liability of the property to be the removal of the property. Richardson v. Shelby, 3 Okla. 68, 41 Pac. 378.

But, in Gookin v. Graham, 5 Humph. 484, it was held that a deed of trust executed in Alabama upon personal property then situated in that state, by a resident of that state, was good without registration in Alabama, as against one who purchased the property from the owner after he had deceitfully, and without the consent of the trustee, removed it to Tennessee. The decision is upon the ground that the Alabama statute with reference to registration was designed to protect creditors and subsequent purchasers in that state, and not in the state of Tennessee. It was also held in this case that, as the property was taken into Tennessee by the deceitful and fraudulent misconduct of the grantor in the deed, without the knowledge or consent of the trustee, or any of the cestui que trust, the want of registration of the deed in that state could not avail the purchaser.

So, a deed of trust of personal property situated at the time in Virginia, executed in that state, by a person domiciled in Tennessee, being valid, both by the law of Virginia and Tennessee as between the parties, without registration, is valid, as against a subsequent purchaser or encumbrancer after the removal of the property to Tennessee, if it was duly registered in Tennessee, notwithstanding that it was never registered in Virginia, as would have been necessary to have upheld its validity as against subsequent creditors if the property had remained in that state. Galt v. Dibrell, 10 Yerg. 153.

And a statute of the state where a transfer of personal property between a husband and wife was made, which renders such a transfer void as to creditors and purchasers unless recorded, has no operation after the removal of the parties and property to Mississippi. Walker v. Marshall, 70 Miss. 283, 12 So. 211.

In Cronan v. Fox, 50 N. J. L. 417, 14 Atl. 119, a resident of Maryland entered into an arrangement in that state with a creditor, which was in effect a chattel mortgage of property then in that state. There was, however, no acknowledgment, or record, or change of possession while the property was in Maryland sufficient to protect the mortgagee, according to the laws of that state, against the mortgagor's creditors. The property was subsequently shipped to Pennsylvania in the name of the mortgagor, and was seized under attachment by one of his creditors after the mortgagee had taken possession thereof. It was held that the mortgage prevailed over the attachment. The court took the broad position that the liability of the property to be lows the case of Bank of Louisville v. Hill, and limits the rule, as is done in the latter case, to instances when the result would not be contrary to sound public policy, declared by statute or otherwise.

That was a case simply when a factor had sold cotton covered by a foreign mortgage, and it did not appear whether the factor still held the proceeds or had paid them over to the mortgagor. There were no rights of creditors or purchasers involved, but simply a question whether the proceeds should be held as those of the mortgagor.

While the language used in these cases is somewhat broad in defining the rights of purchasers and creditors, yet when limited to cases when sound public policy is contravened, and where no statutes are involved, they are in no way applied to the present view, which we consider the rule most in accord with sound public policy and the spirit and object of our registration laws.

Counsel has cited quite a number of cases holding a doctrine different to this, but, as before stated, we think this the better doctrine, and not contrary to our previous adjudications when properly applied and limited.

The petition to rehear is dismissed.

seized and sold under attachment must be determined by the law of the state where the property is found. In this connection, the court said: "The rule that the title to movable property is to be judged of, and determined by, the lex rei sitæ (which is not without exceptions), has prominent application and adoption where personal property is seized under process issued from the courts of the state where the property is. In such cases the liability of the property to be seized and sold under such a writ must be determined by the law of that state, notwithstanding the domicile of all the claimants be in another state." This language would seem to indicate that, in the view of the court, the liability of the property to attachment should have been determined by the law of Pennsylvania, even if it had still been in possession of the mortgagor. Upon that hypothesis, however, the property would, so far as anything to the contrary appears, have been liable to seizure, even according to the law of Pennsylvania; and it will be observed that, as a matter of fact, the property was in possession of the mortgagee at the time of the seizure, which fact, so far as anything to the contrary appears, would have cured the failure to file the mortgage, either according to the law of Maryland, where the mortgage was executed, or the law of Pennsylvania, where the property was seized, or the law of New Jersey, where the question arose.

In City Bank v. Easton Boot & Shoe Co. 187 Pa. 30, 40 Atl. 1026, it was held that the title to a quantity of leather purchased under an executory contract passed to the purchaser as soon as it was appropriated to the fulfillment of the contract and delivered to the carrier in New York consigned to the purchaser in Pennsylvania, and that the purchaser, therefore, took the property free from a chattel mortgage thereon, of which he had notice for the first time while the goods were in transit. There was no conflict of laws involved in this case, since the mortgage, which was not filed or recorded in New York, was not valid as against the purchaser, either under the law of New York or Pennsylvania, assuming that the title had passed before he received notice thereof.

By the converse of the rule established in II. b. 1, supra, which requires a delivery of possession or a filing or recording in, and pursuant to the laws of, the state where the property is situated when the mortgage is executed in one state by a person domiciled therein upon property at the time located in another state, it would seem that failure to comply with the law of the former state in this respect would not defeat the mortgage as against a subsequent purchaser or creditor in the latter if the law of the latter was complied with, and assuming that the mortgage by the law of the former was valid as between the parties. And this position has been expressly taken. Thus, in Aultman & T. Machinery Co. v. Kennedy, 114 Iowa, 444, 86 Am. St. Rep. 373, 87 N. W. 435, it was held that the failure to record the mortgage in the state where it was executed and the mortgagor was domiciled, as required by the laws of that state to protect it against attachment creditors, with or without actual notice, did not defeat the mortgage as against an attaching creditor with actual notice, where it did not have such effect according to the law of the place where the property was situated at the time the mortgage was executed and at the time of the attachment. This decision, however, was expressly upon the assumption that the failure to record did not, even by law of the state where the mortgage was executed, invalidate the same as between the parties thereto. In other words, the court held that the exception, with reference to the necessity and effect of filing or recording as against third persons, to the general principle that personal property is governed by the law of the owner's domicile, may operate, not merely to invalidate, as against third persons, a mortgage that would be valid as to them by the lex loci contractus et domicili, but not by the lex rei sitæ, but also to validate as against third persons, a mortgage that would be invalid as to them by the lex loci contractus et domicili, but not by the lex rei sitæ. That is undoubtedly the correct view to take of the exception, although it must be remembered, as pointed out in this case, that the effect of the mortgage, even as against a third person, may depend upon the validity of the mortgage as an instrument inter partes, and to that extent will be determined by the lex loci contractus,—at least unless the circumstances are such that, under the general principles applicable to personal contracts generally, the law of the place where the property is situated may be applied, not as the lex rei sitæ, but as the lex loci solutionis of the contract. The position taken in the above case is supported by Fishburne v. Kunhardt, 2 Speers L. 558, holding that it was unnecessary to file a mortgage in Alabama, where the same was executed, the property being at the time in South Carolina where the mortgagor was domiciled; and by Pyeatt v. Powell, 2 C. C. A. 367, 10 U. S. App.

200, 51 Fed. 551, holding that a chattel mortgage of property in the Indian territory, by a resident there, though executed in Kansas, is not affected by the Kansas laws requiring filing and registration. It will be observed that in the last two cases, however, the mortgagor was not domiciled in the state where the mortgage was executed, but in the state where the property was situated.

d. Judgment in attachment as res judicata against mortgagee.

See also Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109, II. b. 1, supra, and Greene v. Bentley, 52 C. C. A. 60, 114 Fed. 112, II. a, 2, supra.

In Hornthall v. Burwell, 109 N. C. 10, 18 L. R. A. 740, 26 Am. St. Rep. 556, 13 S. E. 721, the property was seized and sold under attachment after its removal to Virginia; and the purchasers at the attachment sale contended that they were protected by the judgment in the attachment suit; but it was held that that judgment, not being in rem in the sense that it bound persons, not parties, was not binding upon the mortgagee. The court distinguished the case from Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109, upon the ground that, by reason of the law of Illinois (the situs of the property involved in that case at the time the mortgage was executed), which subordinated the lien of the unfilled mortgage to the rights of subsequent bona fide purchaser or creditor, the attachment proceeding operated to defeat the lien of the mortgage, as against the title acquired under the attachment proceedings; whereas, in the case at bar the lien of the mortgage, even after the removal of the property to Virginia and the failure to file the mortgage there, remained superior to the rights of subsequent bona fide purchasers and creditors; and, hence, the attachment proceedings did not affect the mortgage.

III. As between lex loci contractus and lex domicilii.

In most of the cases cited in this note the mortgagor was domiciled in the state where the mortgage was executed so that there was no conflict between the lex domicilii and lex loci contractus. That seems to have been true of all the cases cited in subdivision I.; and while, in a few of the cases cited in II. a, 2 (see Langworthy v. Little, 12 Cush. 109, and Craig v. Williams, 90 Va. 500, 44 Am. St. Rep. 934, 18 S. E. 899), the mortgagor was domiciled in a state other than that in which the mortgage was executed and the property was then situated, there was no opportunity in those cases, or in the cases cited in II. b. 1, to decide between the lex domicilii and lex loci contractus, as such, since those cases, or at least the great majority of them, applied the lex rei sitæ to the matters in question, i. e., the law of the place where the property was situated at the time the mortgage was executed; and in this respect, and to this extent, they create an exception to the general principle that personal property has no situs of its own, but follows the person of the owner. The two cases last referred to, therefore, are to be regarded as applying the lex rei sitæ rather than the lex loci contractus, as opposed to the lex domicilii, although in these cases it happened that the locus of the contract and the situs of the property were the same. So, in the following case it will be observed that it was the lex rei sitæ, and not the lex loci contractus as such, that was applied, though they were the same in this case, and were both opposed to the lex domicilii.

A mortgage of personal property situated in New Hampshire, executed in that state and recorded, as required by its laws, was valid as against the creditors of the mortgagor without change of possession, notwithstanding that, according to the law of the mortgagor's domicile, a chattel mortgage is invalid as against creditors of the mortgagor if he retains possession of the property. Lathe v. Schoff, 60 N. H. 34.

But, notwithstanding the general statement, frequently repeated by the courts, that personal property has its situs at the domicile of the owner, the lex loci contractus will, in case of a conflict, doubtless prevail over the lex domicilii, in respect of those matters affecting chattel mortgages that are not governed by the lex rei sitæ as such. The lex domicilii governs with respect to the disposition of personal property by will, or by operation of law, as distinguished from the voluntary act of the parties, except so far as the property may be subject to the lex rei sitæ; but the lex loci contractus generally governs with respect to voluntary transfers inter vivos. Thus, in Alcock v. Smith [1892] 1 Ch. 238, 61 L. J. Ch. N. S. 461, 66 L. T. N. S. 126, it is expressly stated that the validity of a transfer of personal chattels—meaning a voluntary transfer inter vivos—depends, not upon the law of the domicile of the owner, but upon the law of the country in which the transfer takes place. To the same effect are Bulkeley v. Honold, 19 How. 390, 15 L. ed. 663; Emery v. Clough, 63 N. H. 552, 56 Am. Rep. 543, 4 Atl. 796; and other cases not dealing specifically with chattel mortgages. G. H. P.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

PEOPLE of the State of Illinois ex rel. M. T. MOLONEY, Appt.,
v.

PULLMAN'S PALACE CAR COMPANY.
(175 Ill. 125.)

1. Demurrer to a special traverse admits the truth of the statements made in the plea, and raises the question of the sufficiency of the matters stated in the inducements to the plea to constitute a valid defense.

2. Incidental or implied powers of a corporation exist only to enable it to carry out the express powers granted.—that is, to accomplish the purpose of its ex-

NOTE.—The more important cases which have been decided within the last few years upon the question of the implied powers of private or 64 L. R. A.

quasi public corporations have been reserved from publication with a view to their publication in connection with a note upon that subject.

istence,—and can in no case avail to enlarge the express powers and thereby warrant it to devote its efforts and capital to other purposes than such as its charter expressly authorizes, or to engage in collateral enterprises not directly, but only remotely, connected with its specific corporate purposes.

3. The ownership of an office building near the business center of a city, by a manufacturing corporation, does not exceed its incidental powers merely because the building is larger than its needs for present use, and a part of it is therefore rented, if it is probable that the whole building will be needed for its own business in the future.
4. The ownership, by a manufacturing corporation, of a town or city of more than 2,000 houses, with streets, alleys, sewer system, dwellings, tenement houses, churches, hotel, schools, theater, and business buildings, no one of which is occupied by any other than a tenant of the corporation, is contrary to public policy, and in excess of the implied powers of the corporation.
5. The ownership of a sewerage system, and of a sewerage farm on which vegetables are raised for sale, is not within the implied powers of a corporation because of the necessity of sewerage for a town owed by it, when the ownership of such town is in excess of its powers.
